is given for the woman's harsh treatment at the hands of the sentinels, and the verse is ambiguous regarding the severity of their attack. 5.9–6.3: The women of Jerusalem's questions and the woman's answers reveal that they are not taking the search too seriously. 9: They ask what is so special about him. 10–16: She answers by praising him, thereby evoking his presence. The images are intimate and erotically suggestive. 10: Radiant and ruddy, a sign of health, youthfulness, and beauty (Ps 104.15; 1 Sam 16.12; 17.42; Lam 4.7). 12: Doves in pellucid pools, as though bathed in milk, evoke the pupil and iris surrounded by the wet milky whiteness of the eye. 14–16: Her description of his statuesque body made of strong and precious materials expresses his value to her. 16: His speech (lit. "his palate"), better, "his mouth," since she is describing his physical attributes. My friend, her only use of a term of endearment he uses frequently of her (1.9,15; 2.2,10,13; 4.1,7; 5.2; 6.4, where NRSV translates, "my love"). 6.1: The playfulness of the dialogue is obvious, since they ask her where he has gone in order to help her find him. 2–3: She knows where he is. The garden represents both the woman and the setting for lovemaking. Grazing in the gardens and among the lilies are double entendres for erotic play (see 1.7n.).

already surrendered to her lover. 10: In the context of a city under siege (v. 9), to bring peace signifies surrender, and to find peace is to have the offer of surrender accepted (Deut 20.10–11; Josh 9.15; 11.19). 11–12: The man compares his vineyard (the woman; see 1.6n.) to Solomon's: it is more valuable and he alone will tend it. Baal-hamon, no such place is known; meanings of the name, "owner of wealth" or "husband of a multitude," suggest that it was chosen to emphasize Solomon's privileged status. 13–14: The poet does not bring the Song to a proper close, so that the love it celebrates can remain unending. 13: Let me hear it, the man's words send us back to the beginning of the Song, where we hear the woman's voice, speaking of her desire. 14: Make haste, the Hebrew word indicates movement away from the speaker. Mountains of spices, an erotic image for the woman herself; see 2.17; 4.6. As in 2.17, the woman appears to be sending her lover away and calling him to her at the same time. The effect is to leave love forever in progress, for only when the woman seems to send her lover away can the poem begin again with longing and the quest to gratify desire.

INTRODUCTION TO THE PROPHETIC BOOKS

CANONICAL PLACEMENT AND CONTENTS

In both the Jewish and the Christian canons the prophetic books form a distinct section of the Bible. The two traditions differ, however, with respect to the number, sequence, and placement of the prophetic books. Jewish tradition divides the canon into three parts: the Torah (i.e., Genesis–Deuteronomy), the Prophets, and the Writings. The term “Former Prophets” is used to designate the historical books Joshua–2 Kings (excluding Ruth), perhaps reflecting a tradition that these books were written by prophets, and the term “Latter Prophets” is used for those books that bear the name of a particular prophet (i.e., Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and the twelve Minor Prophets). In Christian Bibles the prophetic books form the last section of the Old Testament canon, following the Pentateuch, the Historical Books, and the Poetical Books. Christian tradition includes Daniel among the prophetic books, in contrast to Judaism, which groups Daniel with the Writings. Also, Christian Bibles place Lamentations, which is not a book of prophecy, immediately after the book of Jeremiah, reflecting the tradition of the Septuagint (the ancient Greek translation [LXX] of the Hebrew Bible) that Jeremiah was the author of Lamentations. Likewise, in some Christian canons, the Apocryphal/Deuterocanonical book of Baruch comes after Lamentations, because of the connection between the prophet Jeremiah and his scribe, Baruch.

THE NATURE AND COMPOSITION OF THE PROPHETIC BOOKS

The prophetic books are unusual and complex compositions. With the exception of Jonah, which is a story about a prophet, these books all contain extended sayings and speeches that purport to come from the prophet whose name the book bears. While the books undoubtedly do preserve authentic words of the prophets in question, one should not think of the prophetic books simply as transcriptions of the words of prophets. Although much remains unknown about the composition of the prophetic books, it is possible to reconstruct a general picture. Scholars generally agree that the poetic materials in the prophetic books originated as oral pronouncements by the prophet to a public audience. These oracles were subsequently written down, perhaps by the prophet or an associate. The circumstances that led to these original written collections were undoubtedly different. A reference in the book of Isaiah suggests that oracles might be written down as a form of authentication (Isa 30.8). The book of Jeremiah describes how Jeremiah, having been banned from speaking publicly in the Temple, had his assistant Baruch write down a selection of his prophetic words so that they could be taken into the Temple and read to the people (Jer 36.5–6). When King Jehoiakim destroyed the scroll, Jeremiah had Baruch write out another copy, to which they added additional material (Jer 36.27–32). This collection may have formed the nucleus of the book of Jeremiah. On the other hand, unlike most of the other prophetic books, Ezekiel may have been composed as a written document from the beginning. Elsewhere in the Bible there is further evidence of prophetic collections; see 1 Chr 29.29; 2 Chr 9.29.

Once small collections of prophetic oracles and pronouncements were made, they were subject to further editing, rearranging, annotating, and expansion. In some cases narratives about the prophet were added; these are both autobiographical (e.g., Isa 6; 8; Jer 1.4–19; 13.1–11; Hos 1–2; Am 7.1–7) and biographical (e.g., Isa 7; 36–39; Jer 26; 36–44; Hos 3; Am 7.10–17). The occasions for such editorial activity would have differed, but national crises may have prompted some of this process. Most likely, written collections of the oracles of the prophets Amos and Hosea, which were originally addressed to the Northern Kingdom of Israel, were brought to the Southern Kingdom of Judah after the fall of the Northern Kingdom in 722 BCE, and edited and circulated there. Isaiah of Jerusalem seems to have knowledge of Amos’s oracles, and Jeremiah is unquestionably influenced by Hosea. Many of the prophetic books originating before the fall of Judah to the Babylonians and the exile of most Judeans to Babylon in 586 BCE show evidence of editorial additions and reorganizations that reflect the circumstances of exilic and postexilic times, that is, from later in the sixth century BCE and beyond. The book of Amos, for example, now includes material that presupposes the fall of Judah (9.11–15). The most dramatic example of the expansion and reworking of prophetic materials is the book of Isaiah. Although it contains extensive material from the eighth-century prophet, chs 40–55 clearly reflect the situation of the Babylonian exile, and chs 56–66 the period of the restoration of the Judean community in the late sixth century BCE. Yet even though the book contains materials dating from several centuries, it is unified by a number of motifs, themes, and topics that recur throughout the work.

The complex activity of preserving and developing the prophetic oracle collections reflects a conviction that the prophet's words were not only significant for the circumstance in which they were originally pronounced but potentially relevant for later ones as well. At the same time, the freedom with which later generations could rework the prophetic oracles indicates that the prophets' words did not at first possess the kind of fixed authority that is later associated with the concept of "scripture." Although the processes by which the prophetic books came to assume a relatively final form and canonical status are difficult to trace, this probably occurred during the Persian and early Hellenistic periods (the fifth through the third centuries BCE). Most likely, during this time scribal editors added the superscriptions that introduce most of the books, indicating the identity of the prophet (name, father's name, and occasionally other information) and often the kings of Israel or Judah during whose reigns the prophets were active (e.g., Isa 1.1; Jer 1.1–3; Hos 1.1). In addition to editorial additions to the individual prophetic books, the smaller prophetic books (Hosea–Malachi) were arranged and edited to form a group known as "the Book of the Twelve," which was copied on a single scroll. By the beginning of the second century BCE Ben Sira refers to these prophets as "the twelve" (Sir 49.10). The number twelve is symbolic of the twelve sons of Jacob and the twelve tribes of Israel, and considerable editorial work was required to organize these prophetic materials into a grouping of twelve. In fact, the book of Zechariah consists of three separate collections (chs 1–8, 9–11, 12–14) grouped together editorially. Only the first of these comes from the prophet Zechariah, whereas the other two are anonymous. The final book in the collection, Malachi, is also an anonymous piece, since "Malachi" is not a personal name but a phrase meaning "my messenger," picked up from 3.1 to serve as the name of the prophet in the superscription.

THE PHENOMENON OF PROPHECY

The phenomenon of prophecy was widespread in the ancient Near East, and many important themes and genres familiar from biblical prophecy have parallels there. Moreover, many more prophets were active in ancient Israel and Judah than those whose work is represented in the prophetic books of the Bible, and their activities were more varied than these writings suggest. The books of Samuel and Kings provide important additional information. Since our sources are limited, it is difficult to reconstruct the history of prophecy. Some of the features are clear, however. The prophet was essentially an intermediary between God and the people, and one of the major functions was that of messenger. Often prophets introduced their communications with a version of the formula typically used by messengers, "Thus says the LORD." But prophets might also bring inquiries from the people to God or make intercession on behalf of the people. In contrast to priesthood, which was exclusively male, both women and men could be prophets. Women prophets included Deborah (Judg 4.4), Huldah (2 Kings 22.14), and Noadiah (Neh 6.10); see also Joel 2.28. Additional aspects of the prophetic role are suggested by the various terms used to identify them. In addition to "prophet" (Heb nabi), perhaps meaning "one who is called"), a prophet could be called a seer (Heb ro'eh, e.g. 1 Sam 9.9; and hozeh, e.g., Am 7.12), and a holy man (Heb 'ish ha'elohim, literally "man of God"; e.g., 2 Kings 1.9).

The history of prophecy in ancient Israel can be traced for more than a thousand years, from the premonarchical period to the turn of the era. As one would expect, over such a long time the nature and function of prophecy altered in response to changing historical, social, and religious circumstances. Four periods define the major epochs of prophecy: the early monarchical period (eleventh through ninth centuries), the Assyrian crisis (eighth century), the Babylonian crisis (late seventh through early sixth centuries), and the postexilic restoration (mid-sixth through mid-fifth centuries).

The extant evidence suggests that in the earliest period prophets may have been local or itinerant holy men and women who were revered for their special religious powers and who might be consulted for a variety of private inquiries, from locating lost property (1 Sam 9.1–10) to learning whether a sick child would live or die (1 Kings 14.1–18). Some lived in prophetic communities that cultivated ecstatic forms of religious experience (1 Sam 19.18–24; 2 Kings 6.1–7). Prophets also had the public function of declaring God's will concerning whether the people should go to war (Judg 4.4–10). The emergence of monarchy in ancient Israel may have changed aspects of the prophets' role. Prophets appear as king-makers and king-breakers, as they announce that God has designated an individual to become king or has rejected a reigning king (1 Sam 10.1; 15.23; 1 Kings 11.29–39; 14.1–18). Though prophets continued their role in advising about matters of war (1 Kings 22), they also served as critics of the king in religious and social affairs. The consolidation of royal power and the foreign religious practices introduced through royal marriages often threatened older tribal institutions and values. The conflict between Elijah, the prophet, and Ahab and Jezebel, the king and queen, illustrates these tensions between prophet and king (1 Kings 18–21).

Prophecy appears to have undergone a dramatic change during the eighth century, although this impression may be affected by the change in the nature of the sources of information. From the eighth century on, collections of prophetic oracles are preserved; yet, with the exceptions of Jeremiah and Ezekiel, few extended narratives about prophets exist. It does appear that in this period prophets began to function less as private counselors and critics of kings and more as public figures who influenced opinion through their pronouncements in the Temple courts and in other public places. Prophets of the eighth century (Amos, Hosea, Isaiah, Micah) interpreted international affairs, critiqued complacent religious practices, and condemned the abuses of social justice that accompanied the increasing urbanization and centralization of state power characteristic of the eighth century. The prophetic careers of Hosea, Micah, and Isaiah took place in the shadow of the expansionist Assyrian empire, which eventually put an end to the Northern Kingdom of Israel in 722 and subjected the Southern Kingdom of Judah to the status of a vassal. The prophets interpreted these events, however, in terms of the judgment of the LORD, not simply as the success of the powerful Assyrians. This perspective allowed Isaiah, for example, to anticipate the ultimate downfall of Assyria because of its overweening arrogance.

The third major period of prophecy occurred during the Babylonian crisis. The prophet Nahum celebrated the defeat of Assyria (612–609 BCE), but when Babylon succeeded Assyria as the dominant empire the excitement he expressed soon turned to confusion, as expressed in Hab 1–2. Jeremiah's prophetic career spanned the time from the decline of Assyria through the Babylonian overlordship of Judah, to the revolt and destruction of Judah in 586 and the exile of a significant portion of its population. Although it is difficult to correlate many of his poetic oracles with specific events in this period, the narratives about Jeremiah give a vivid picture of a nation and its leadership deeply conflicted about what political course to follow and the religious significance of the choices that were forced upon it. Even the prophetic community was bitterly divided and gave contradictory advice to the king concerning the will of the LORD (Jer 26–29; 36–44). Overlapping the career of Jeremiah, the prophet Ezekiel (active 593–ca. 571 BCE) was among the Judeans exiled to Babylon after the revolt of 597 BCE, a decade before the final revolt and the destruction of Jerusalem. Ezekiel's prophetic work was first to persuade the exiled Judeans of the inevitability of Jerusalem's destruction, and, following the fall of the city, to begin to articulate the theological grounds for conceiving a possible future, including a return of the exiles and a rebuilding of the destroyed Temple. In contrast to the prophets who preceded him, Ezekiel drew strongly on priestly traditions for his categories of thought, forms of speech, and evocative symbols.

The defeat of the Babylonian empire by the Persian king Cyrus altered political conditions dramatically. Although Judah did not regain its independence but became a part of the Persian empire, Cyrus and his successors authorized the rebuilding of the Temple and of Jerusalem, allowing members of the exiled community in Babylon who so desired to return to Judah. Thus the prophetic task during this period largely concerned issues of the restoration of the community and its institutions in a context significantly different from that which prevailed during the Israelite and Judean monarchies. The anonymous prophet whose work is found in Isa 40–55 (often called "Second Isaiah") addressed the Babylonian exiles just at the time that Cyrus was engaged in the conquest of Babylon. Second Isaiah's message to the exilic community was that unfolding events represented God's action in history. He thus interpreted the significance of Cyrus as God's "anointed" who would rebuild Jerusalem, and he encouraged the exiles to return to Jerusalem. The process of rebuilding the Temple (520–515 BCE) provides the context for the prophets Haggai and Zechariah. Zechariah in particular suggests this was a time of expectation that perhaps the monarchy might be restored, an event that did not occur. Issues concerning reorganization of the Judean community and tensions regarding economic justice, institutional corruption, and the boundaries of the community are variously reflected in Zechariah, Isa 56–66, and Malachi, prophets who were active in roughly the period 525–475 BCE.

Although prophets in all periods might speak of the dramatic intervention of God in historical events and the consequent transformation of the conditions of life, this type of language seems to have become more common and more vivid in the postexilic prophets (e.g., Isa 56–66, Zechariah, Malachi, Joel, and postexilic additions to earlier prophetic books, such as Isa 24–27). Some of the passages anticipate a war or other cataclysmic event of cosmic proportions that will precede a time of deliverance, peace, and virtual re-creation of the world. Such imagery and the expectations it expresses suggest to some scholars that apocalyptic literature, with its focus on the details of the end time as revealed by a heavenly messenger, was an outgrowth of the phenomenon of prophecy.

The book of Daniel, the only book in the Hebrew Bible that could be called an apocalypse, illustrates the complexity of the matter. Although Christian tradition groups Daniel with the prophetic books, Jewish tradition places it in the Writings (as noted earlier). The first part of the book consists of a cycle of narratives in which Daniel and his friends are portrayed as sages trained in the technical skills of Babylonian scribal wisdom. Like Joseph, Daniel is able to interpret dreams sent by God. He is not presented as a prophet. In the latter part of the book, however, Daniel is the recipient of visions that disclose the future. These vision reports do bear significant similarities to those found in Ezekiel and especially in Zechariah, though their almost allegorical style is quite different. Similarly, although general claims about God's foreknowledge of historical events can be found in Second Isaiah, Daniel's representation of history as predetermined both with respect to its epochal structure and its specific events is strikingly different from the representation of history by the prophets. A clue to the relationship of apocalyptic writing to prophecy may be found in Daniel 9, where Daniel is presented as studying the book of Jeremiah and receiving an angelic interpretation of its significance. As suggested by the presentation of Daniel as a technically trained sage, the authors of apocalyptic books were perhaps themselves learned scribes who studied and appropriated aspects of the prophetic tradition and combined them with other influences in their attempts to understand the nature of the cosmos and the course of history.

ISAIAH

NAME AND CANONICAL STATUS

The book of Isaiah (Heb “yeshā’yah(u),” “the LORD saves”) is named for the prophet Isaiah ben Amoz who lived during the latter half of the eighth century BCE at the time of the Assyrian invasions of Israel and Judah. Isaiah is included among the Latter Prophets in the Jewish Bible and among the Prophets of the Old Testament in the Christian Bible. Jewish manuscripts and traditions frequently place Isaiah first because he lived before Jeremiah and Ezekiel, although the book sometimes appears after Jeremiah and Ezekiel because of its concern with comfort or restoration (b. B. Bat. 14b). In Christian Bibles, Isaiah is usually first among the Prophets because he lived before Jeremiah and Ezekiel, although the Minor Prophets sometimes appear first in some manuscripts of the Greek Septuagint (LXX) versions, probably because the prophet Hosea was thought to have lived before Isaiah.

AUTHORSHIP, COMPOSITION, AND LITERARY HISTORY

Traditional interpreters in both Judaism and Christianity attribute the book of Isaiah to the prophet Isaiah, but interpreters as early as the Middle Ages observed that the second portion of the book, beginning in ch 40, presupposes the conclusion of the Babylonian exile and the rise of King Cyrus of Persia in 545–539 BCE (see 44.28; 45.1). Modern scholars generally attribute the book to three major stages of composition: (1) the works of Isaiah ben Amoz, which appear generally in chs 1–39; (2) the work of an anonymous prophet known as Second Isaiah from the conclusion of the Babylonian exile in chs 40–55; and (3) the work of Third Isaiah, a collection of materials from a number of prophetic hands who wrote during the early Persian-period restoration of Jerusalem (late sixth through fifth or early fourth centuries BCE) in chs 56–66. Some interpreters maintain that chs 56–66 should be included with Second Isaiah, and others maintain that chs 1–39 have been heavily edited in the seventh, sixth, and fifth centuries BCE as well. Altogether, the book appears to have gone through at least four stages of composition: first, during the lifetime of Isaiah ben Amoz, who witnessed the period of the Assyrian invasions of Israel and Judah in 742–701 BCE; second, during the late seventh-century BCE restoration of King Josiah of Judah (640–609 BCE), when Isaiah was edited to support the king’s reforms; third, during the late sixth-century BCE collapse of Babylon and the rise of King Cyrus of Persia (559–530 BCE), who authorized the return of exiled Jews to Jerusalem to rebuild the Temple; and fourth, during the late fifth and early fourth centuries BCE when Nehemiah and Ezra attempted to consolidate the Jerusalem Temple’s status as holy center of Judaism in keeping with their understandings of the Torah and the Isaian tradition. The writers of each stage of Isaiah’s composition edited and expanded the book in order to demonstrate that the prophet addressed events of their own times. Whereas Isaiah ben Amoz spoke about divine judgment and restoration in his own day, each of the subsequent editions of the book presupposes that Isaiah’s visions of restoration would be realized in their own time.

HISTORICAL CONTEXTS

Four pivotal moments in the history of the Israelite people form the background of the various parts of Isaiah.

1. The Syro-Ephraimite war and its aftermath. After a period of relative peace between Israel (the Northern Kingdom, often called “Ephraim” in Isaiah after its most important tribe) and Judah (the Southern Kingdom), international tensions rose when Tiglath-pileser III became king of the Assyrian empire in 745 BCE and began an effort to conquer the lands to the west of Assyria, including Syria, Israel, and Judah. Uzziah, the king of Judah whose reign began during the peaceful era, died in 733 (6.1), but because he was quarantined due to an illness, his son Jotham became king in 759, followed by Jotham’s son Ahaz in 743 or 735 (the chronology is disputed). Pekah, king of Israel, and Rezin, king of Syria (Damascus or Aram) tried, beginning in 735, to enlist Ahaz in an alliance against Assyria, and when that effort failed, they attacked Judah to replace Ahaz with a king more amenable to their policies (ch 7). This conflict is known as the Syro-Ephraimite war, since it was a war of Syria and Ephraim against Judah. Ahaz successfully turned to Assyria for help in fending off Israel and Syria. The price he paid was steep: Judah became a vassal of Assyria.

2. The Assyrian invasion. During the decades following the Syro-Ephraimite war, the Assyrians expanded their influence in the area, taking over Syria and then attacking the Northern Kingdom, which fell in 722. When the Assyrian ruler at the time, Sargon II, died in 705, Hezekiah, the king of Judah and son of Ahaz, rebelled against Assyria. Hezekiah had thought to take advantage of the confusion at the change of rulers, and in addition sought support from Egypt that was not forthcoming (36.6). The new Assyrian king, Sennacherib, retaliated and conquered the cities surrounding Jerusalem in 701. Hezekiah was able to avert the conquest of Jerusalem itself only by paying tribute.

3. The conquest of Jerusalem and the exile. During the century following these events, the Assyrian empire gradually weakened. In 612, the rising Babylonian empire conquered the Assyrian capital, Nineveh, and the international power struggle became one between Babylon and Egypt, with Judah caught between. In 605 the Babylonian king, Nebuchadnezzar, defeated the Egyptian pharaoh, Neco, at the battle of Carchemish, and Babylon became the leading empire of the day. Judah came under Babylon's control, and when the last king of Judah, Zedekiah, rebelled against Babylon, the result was an invasion by Nebuchadnezzar. In 586 he destroyed Jerusalem and its Temple and deported a good deal of the population to Babylon, an event referred to as the exile.

4. The return. During the sixth century BCE, the Babylonians were increasingly challenged by the rise of another great empire, the Persians. In 539 Cyrus, the Persian king, defeated the Babylonians at the battle of Opis. Cyrus allowed the Jews to return to Judah, and many (though not all) eventually did so. The returning exiles rebuilt Jerusalem and the Temple.

CONTENTS AND STRUCTURE

Although the book of Isaiah was composed in stages, the final form of Isaiah is designed to be read as a single work ascribed to the prophet Isaiah ben Amoz. Its different sections are unified partly by common themes, such as the Davidic/Zion tradition that presumes the ultimate rule of Jerusalem and the restored Israel by the house of David, under the sovereignty of the LORD. The various sections are also linked through common vocabulary, such as the divine title “the Holy One of Israel” (for example, 1.4; 29.19; 40.25; 60.9). The literary structure of Isaiah consists of two major parts, both of which are concerned with reading Isaiah as a witness to Jerusalem as the seat of the LORD’s sovereignty throughout all of creation. Chapters 1–33 address the period of punishment and anticipate the period of restoration through which the LORD’s sovereignty will be recognized throughout the world, and chs 34–66 presuppose that the time of restoration and the recognition of the LORD’s sovereignty are at hand. A more detailed outline of the formal literary structure of the book is as follows:

c. prophetic instruction concerning the process of Zion's restoration	63.1–66.24

INTERPRETATION

The book of Isaiah serves as a theological reflection upon Jerusalem's experience of threat, exile, and restoration. It takes up fundamental questions of divine involvement in human history. To what extent is the LORD sovereign over Israel and Judah on the one hand, and the nations and all creation on the other? To what extent does the LORD bring both judgment and restoration to Jerusalem, Israel, and the world at large? To what extent is the LORD hidden in times of suffering and to what extent will the LORD deliberately bring suffering on one generation to achieve divine purpose in another? To what extent does the LORD's promise of security to Jerusalem/Zion and the royal house of David hold true? To what extent should human beings respond to the LORD's intervention in the human world with faithfulness? Such questions have occupied the readers of the book of Isaiah from ancient through modern times. Jewish interpreters have looked to Isaiah to understand the time when the LORD would restore Jerusalem, and Christian interpreters have looked to Isaiah to understand when the LORD would reveal the Messiah. Indeed, two major copies of the book of Isaiah and a number of shorter Isaian texts were found among the Dead Sea Scrolls at Qumran. The command "in the wilderness prepare the way of the LORD" apparently motivated the Qumran sect to move to the wilderness of the Dead Sea to await the time that God would destroy the Romans and all others considered evil in the world. Citations from Isaiah play a major role in presenting the life and significance of Jesus in the New Testament, and readings from Isaiah play an especially important role in Jewish liturgy where Isaian texts are frequently read to complete and interpret the reading of the Torah.

1.1–33.24: The LORD's plans to reveal worldwide sovereignty at Zion. The first half of the book focuses especially on the punishment of Zion and its anticipation of future restoration in an effort to demonstrate the LORD's plans to reveal sovereignty over Israel, the nations, and creation at large. The second half of the book (chs 34–66) presupposes that the time of the restoration and the LORD's revelation are at hand.

1.1–31: Prologue to the book of Isaiah: Introductory oracles concerning divine plans to purge Jerusalem. The prologue in ch 1 is an introduction both to the entire book of Isaiah and to the first portion of the book in chs 1–33. It is designed to convince its audience that Jerusalem's suffering during the late eighth century BCE and beyond was due to the LORD's plans to purge Jerusalem in preparation for its role as the seat for the LORD's rule over all of creation. In keeping with his understanding of the David/Zion tradition, Isaiah presumes the LORD's sovereignty, righteousness, and power to defend the royal house of David and the city of Jerusalem. The prophet therefore contends that Jerusalem's suffering is due to human wrongdoing and that the city must be purged to enable it to serve as the LORD's capital for all of creation. Such a position is theologically problematic, presuming the guilt of those who suffer.

1.1: Superscription. The prophetic books typically begin with a superscription that provides the reader with essential information concerning the prophet (cf. Jer 1.1–3; Ezek 1.1–3; Hos 1.1; Joel 1.1; Am 1.1; Obad 1; Mic 1.1; Nah 1.1; Hab 1.1; Zeph 1.1). This superscription introduces both the entire book and 1.2–31. Subsequent superscriptions in 2.1; 13.1; 14.28; 15.1; 17.1; 19.1; 21.1,11,13; 22.1; 23.1; and 30.6 introduce smaller subunits. Isaiah's vision (both visual and auditory communication from the LORD) reveals divine plans concerning Judah and Jerusalem during the reigns of the Judean monarchs, Uzziah (783–742 BCE); Jotham (742–735 BCE); Ahaz (735–715 BCE); and Hezekiah (715–687 BCE). Although the superscription identifies the setting of the book in relation to the eighth-century BCE Assyrian invasions of the Northern Kingdom of Israel and the Southern Kingdom of Judah, the book as a whole takes up Jerusalem's experiences through the time of the Babylonian exile and the early Persian period restoration in the sixth century BCE.

1.2–20: The speech of the accuser. The prophet employs the language of the courtroom, beginning with the LORD's accusation speech that charges Israel with wrongdoing, to explain Jerusalem's suffering. 2–3: Appeal to all creation, namely, heaven and earth, to witness the divine complaints against Israel (cf. Deut 32.1; Mic 6.1–8). The passage metaphorically portrays Israel as the LORD's rebellious children who do not even have the understanding of animals. 4–9: Rhetorical questions designed to motivate the listeners to return to God. The suffering of the people is presented as the result of their own wrongdoing rather than any lapse on the LORD's part. The imagery shifts from personal illness and injury to the suffering of the entire land during the Assyrian invasions, when Jerusalem was left standing alone surrounded by the forces of the Assyrian king Sennacherib in 701 BCE (2 Kings 18–20; Isa 36–39). 4: The Holy One of Israel, a divine title that occurs throughout the book.

8: Jerusalem is frequently personified as daughter Zion in Isaiah (10.32; 16.1; 37.22; 52.2; 62.11) and elsewhere (e.g., Zeph 3.14–20; Lam 1.6; 2; 4.22). 9: Sodom and Gomorrah, the evil cities destroyed by the LORD (Gen 18–19). 10–17: The prophet continues to characterize the people as Sodom and Gomorrah in an effort to accuse them of insincere worship. Although many interpreters maintain that Isaiah opposes ritual and sacrificial worship in principle, the LORD's instructions call for moral action to accompany Temple worship (see 1 Sam 15.22; Ps 50.7–15). The LORD threatens to ignore the people's prayers, a disturbing claim in the face of foreign invasion and a frequent concern of both Isaiah (e.g., 8.17; 54.8; 59.2; 64.6) and the Psalms (e.g., 10.11; 13.2; 22.25; 27.9; 51.11; 104.29). 13: Sacrifices were offered at sabbath (weekly) and new moon (monthly) festivals. 18–20: The accusation speech employs legal language and sacrificial imagery to conclude with an appeal to return to the LORD.

1.21–31: The speech of the judge. The courtroom metaphor continues as the LORD now speaks as the judge who announces Zion's ultimate redemption and restoration. Jerusalem suffered greatly under the Assyrians and the Babylonians from the late eighth through the sixth centuries BCE, but the book of Isaiah understands these events in relation to Jerusalem's restoration in the early Persian period. 21–26: The prophet's announcement of Jerusalem's rehabilitation combines metaphorical charges that the city is a whore and that it must be purified much as metal is refined by the removal of impurities known as dross. The principal accusation is the corruption of the judicial process (cf. 5:23; 33:15; Am 5:10,12; Mic 3:9,11). 27–28: The prophet distinguishes the fate of the righteous from the wicked (see chs 65–66). 29–31: The metaphor of the tree portrays the restoration of Zion. Trees and gardens were frequently associated with Canaanite fertility rites and goddesses. The prophet maintains that the dead branches must be trimmed and the tree burned. Later oracles will stress the new growth of the tree (6:12–13; 11:1–9).

2.1–4.6: Prophetic announcement concerning the purging of Zion for its role as the center for the LORD's world rule. This unit begins with its own superscription (see 1.1n.). Ideal portrayals of Jerusalem as a center for the pilgrimage of the nations appear at the beginning (2.2–4) and as a holy center for the remnant of Israel at the end (4.2–6) of the unit. The material in 2.5–4.1 focuses in detail on the LORD's plans for purging Zion in preparation for its divine role.

2.1: Superscription. A shorter version of the superscription in 1.1, specifying the concern with Judah and Jerusalem.

2.2–4: Announcement concerning the establishment of Zion as the center for the LORD's worldwide sovereignty. This oracle portrays a future time when the nations will make pilgrimage to Zion, the site of the Jerusalem Temple. The ideal of the nations at peace in Zion is a primary tenet of Davidic/Zion theology, which maintains that the LORD protects Zion as the seat of divine sovereignty in creation (Pss 2; 46; 48; cf. Ps 47). A parallel version of this passage appears in Mic 4.1–5, and it is also cited in Joel 3:10 and Zech 8.20–23. 2: In days to come, past interpreters, including the Septuagint (LXX), have understood the Heb eschatologically as “in the latter days,” but it simply means “in the future.” The mountain of the LORD's house, throughout the ancient Near East, temples were described as the houses in which gods dwelt. In common with this ancient motif, Jerusalem is often represented as the cosmic mountain (10.12,32; 11.9; 16.1; 29.8; 30.29; 40.9; 57.13; 65.26; Ps 48.1–2; Ezek 20.40; 40.2). 3: Instruction, Heb “torah.” Although “torah” is frequently translated as “law,” the term means

“Come, let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, to the house of the God of Jacob;
that he may teach us his ways and that we may walk in his paths.”

For out of Zion shall go forth instruction, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem.

⁴He shall judge between the nations, and shall arbitrate for many peoples; they shall beat their swords into plowshares,
and their spears into pruning hooks;
nation shall not lift up sword against nation,
neither shall they learn war any more.

⁵O house of Jacob,
come, let us walk
in the light of the LORD!

⁶For you have forsaken the ways of^a your

O house of Jacob.

and there is no end to their treasures;
their land is filled with horses,
and there is no end to their chariots.

⁸Their land is filled with idols; they bow down to the work of their hands,

“teaching, instruction.”

2.5–4.6: The prophet’s address concerning the purging of Zion. The prophet outlines in three addresses how the ideal portrayal of the nations’ recognition of the LORD at Zion expressed in 2.2–4 is to be achieved. 2.5–9: The first oracular address begins with an invitation to the house of Jacob, a term frequently employed to characterize Israel (see Gen 32.28; Ex 19.3; Ps 114.1; Isa 46.3), to join the nations in their pilgrimage to Zion. The passage quickly turns to assertions that the LORD has forsaken the people because of their alleged wrongdoing in dealing with foreigners. The passage points to a source of tension: while it posits an ideal scenario of world peace and cooperation among the nations, it also points to the nations as a source of corruption and evil because of their associations with divinatory practices (cf. Deut 18.9–14); wealth in the form of silver, gold, horses, and chariots (cf. 1 Kings 10.26); and idols (cf. Isa 44.9–20). In the view of the prophet, such practices render the nations unholy and their association with Jacob renders Israel unholy as well. 10–21: In the second oracular address, the prophet announces the future Day of the LORD as a time when the LORD will appear to punish and bring down all who are arrogant, high, proud, and uplifted in the world so that the LORD alone will be recognized as the true sovereign. The Day of the LORD tradition is well known among the prophets (see Isa 13.6,9; Ezek 13.5; Joel 1.15; 2.11,31; 3.14; Am 5.18–20; Obad 15; Zeph 1.7,14; Mal 4.5). 13: Lebanon, the mountainous area north of Israel famous for its cedars; Bashan, the high plateau in northern Transjordan known for its timber (Ezek 27.6).

16: Tarshish, either in southern Turkey (later Tarsus) or in southern Spain. 2.22–4.6: The third oracular address focuses specifically on the purging of Jerusalem and Judah. 2.22: The introductory wisdom saying pleads with the audience to desist from human self-reliance. 3.1–11: The prophet elaborates the purging of Jerusalem and Judah by focusing on the punishment of the male leaders of the city and the nation. The Assyrians were well known for deporting the leading figures and skilled craftspeople of a conquered society in order to exploit their talents elsewhere in the empire and to destabilize the conquered society to prevent further revolt. The prophet once again characterizes the people as Sodom (see 1.10; Gen 18–19) in order to press home his point that the suffering of the people must be the result of their own wrongdoing. 3.12–4.1: The prophet portrays a courtroom scene in which the LORD charges the leaders of the nation with exploitation of the poor (by enclosure and confiscation of lands, indentured service, etc.), a frequent topic of eighth-century BCE prophetic polemic (Am 2.6–8; 3.9–11; 6.4–7; 8.4–6; Mic 2.1–3; 3.1–4, 9–12). He accuses the women of Jerusalem of arrogance and being more concerned with fashion than with the fate of their city and nation. When Jerusalem is conquered, the women will be stripped, humiliated, and desperate to find a husband in the devastation, even willing to forego the financial support mandated by law (Ex 21.10). 4.2–6: An idyllic portrayal of the restored Jerusalem following its period of purging begins with the formula, on that day. The passage combines the metaphor of the branch that will grow again after it is cut (cf. 6.12–13; 11.1–9) with the imagery of the daughters of Zion, washing and purifying themselves after their menstrual periods (see Lev 15.19–24). Cloud by day and flaming fire by night over the sacred site of Mount Zion recalls the LORD leading Israel at the time of the Exodus and Wilderness wandering (e.g., Ex 13.21–22; 14.19–20; 24.15–18; 40.34–38; Num 10.11–36; cf. 1 Kings 8.10–12). Such imagery also refers to the column of smoke and fire that rises from the Temple altar during sacrifice to signify the LORD’s presence. Here the smoke and fire forms a protective canopy for the restored city.

5.1–12.6: Prophetic instruction concerning Assyrian judgment against Israel and the restoration of the Davidic kingdom. Although chs 5–12 lack a superscription, the interest in both Israel and Judah is clear throughout the unit. The passage begins (5.3) with an announcement of divine judgment against Israel and Judah in 5.1–30, and a lengthy elaboration concerning the significance of that judgment and the restoration to follow

5 Let me sing for my beloved my love-song concerning his vineyard:
My beloved had a vineyard on a very fertile hill.

² He dug it and cleared it of stones, and planted it with choice vines;
he built a watchtower in the midst of it,
and hewed out a wine vat in it;
he expected it to yield grapes,
but it yielded wild grapes.

³ And now, inhabitants of Jerusalem and people of Judah, judge between me
and my vineyard.

⁴ What more was there to do for my vineyard
that I have not done in it?
When I expected it to yield grapes, why did it yield wild grapes?

⁵ And now I will tell you what I will do to my vineyard.
I will remove its hedge,
and it shall be devoured;
I will break down its wall,
and it shall be trampled down.

⁶ I will make it a waste;
it shall not be pruned or hoed, and it shall be overgrown with briars and thorns;

I will also command the clouds that they rain no rain upon it.

⁷ For the vineyard of the LORD of hosts is the house of Israel, and the people of Judah are his pleasant planting;
he expected justice,
but saw bloodshed;
righteousness,
but heard a cry!

⁸ Ah, you who join house to house,
who add field to field,
until there is room for no one but you, and you are left to live alone in the midst of the land!
⁹ The LORD of hosts has sworn in my hearing:
Surely many houses shall be desolate, large and beautiful houses, without inhabitant.

5.1–30: Announcement of judgment against Israel and Judah. This block of oracles combines the prophet's accusations of social wrongdoing in Israel with a vivid portrayal of the approach of the Assyrian army in an effort to argue that the LORD has brought the Assyrians to punish Israel. 1–7: Isaiah's song of the vineyard (see also 27.2–6) allegorically portrays the LORD as Isaiah's friend (beloved does not adequately convey the Hebrew here) who worked so hard to ensure a productive vineyard only to be disappointed when it yielded sour grapes. The allegory, which is explained only at the end, draws in the audience, as many in ancient Judah would have had extensive experience in vineyards. Its conclusion uses puns to make its point, viz., the LORD expects justice (Heb "mishpat"), but sees only bloodshed (Heb "mispah"), and hopes for righteousness (Heb "tsedaqah") only to hear a cry (Heb "tse aqah"). 8–24: A series of "woe" (NRSV "Ah") oracles (see also 28.1; 29.1,15; 30.1; 31.1; 33.1; Hab 2.6–19), each introduced by the Heb exclamation "hoy" ("woe!") warns the people of coming punishment due to the failure of the leadership of Israel to ensure justice as called for in Israel's law codes, particularly Ex 20–23. 8–10: The first oracle criticizes seizure of property, a frequent concern of eighth-century BCE prophets (see 3.12–4.1n.). A bath is a liquid measure of ca. 6 gal (23 liters), a poor yield for ten acres. A homer is ca. 6.5 bu (230 liters), and an ephah is only one-tenth of a homer. 11–17: The prophet charges Israel's leadership with drunken incompetence. 11: Drunkenness is frequently denounced in the prophets (Isa 28.7–8; Hos 4.11; 7.5; Am 4.1; Mic 2.11). 12: The deeds and work, or plan and agenda, of God is a central motif in Isaiah (5.19; 10.12; 14.24–27; 19.12,17; 23.9;

 them and struck them;

28.21; 30.1). 14: The threat of exile and death is personified as Sheol, the underworld abode of the dead, which opens its mouth to swallow up the leadership of the people, much as they swallowed wine and food at their feasts. Such abasement of the people highlights the LORD's power, holiness, and righteousness in the eyes of the prophet. 20–24: The prophet charges that the people can no longer distinguish between right and wrong, perverting the judicial system (1.23; Mic 3.11; cf. Ex 23.8; Deut 16.19) in their own narcissism and drunkenness. Returning to the vineyard allegory of 5.1–7, the prophet charges that the people will be utterly consumed by fire for neglecting divine instruction. 25–30: The final subunit shifts from the metaphor of a burning vineyard to a chilling portrayal of the approaching Assyrian army summoned by the LORD. The outstretched hand of the LORD appears throughout 9.7–10.5 as well, and builds upon the imagery of Moses' outstretched hand throughout the plagues of the Exodus narratives (see Ex 7–10), the crossing of the sea (Ex 14.26–29), the provision of water from the rock (Ex 17.1–7), and the defeat of Amalek in the wilderness (Ex 17.8–16). The signal (Heb "nes") raised to summon the nations likewise recalls the LORD's "banner" ("nes") in Ex 17.15–16. The roaring of the Assyrian army like lions recalls the lion as the symbol of the tribe of Judah and the house of David (Gen 49.9), now turned against the people. The darkening cloud over the land recalls the pillar of cloud and smoke, identified with the LORD's presence during the Exodus and in the Holy of Holies in the Temple (see 4.2–6n.), but now absent.

6.1–13: Isaiah's commission. Isaiah's lengthy explanation of divine judgment and restoration in 6.1–12.6 begins with a first-person visionary account of his commission as a prophet. Prophetic visions are common in the Bible (Ex 33; 1 Sam 3; 1 Kings 19; Jer 1.11–19; 24; Ezek 1–3; 8–11; 40–48; Am 7–9; Hab 2.2; Zech 1.7–6.15) and in the larger ancient Near Eastern world (cf. Balaam's visions in Num 22–24). Although they are commonly associated with temples, priests (e.g., Moses; Samuel; Jeremiah; Ezekiel; Zechariah) and non-priests (Elijah; Amos; Habakkuk) alike may experience visions. Although Isaiah is not a priest, his vision portrays the LORD enthroned in the Holy of Holies of the Jerusalem Temple. As a royal adviser, Isaiah would stand with the king by the column at the entrance of the Temple where he could see the interior of the Temple (2 Kings 11.14; 23.3). Such a vision of the LORD's royal court corresponds to the visions of Micaiah ben Imlah (1 Kings 22.19–23) and Ezekiel (Ezek 1). Given the emphasis on purging the people from sin, it is possible that the vision takes place on Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, when the priest beholds the LORD in the Holy of Holies to atone on behalf of the people (Lev 16; 23.26–32). 1–2: King Uzziah of Judah, also known as Azariah, died in 742 or 733 BCE (2 Kings 15.1–7.32); the chronology is uncertain for this period. The reigns of his son, Jotham, and grandson, Ahaz, saw the first attempts by the Syro-Ephraimite alliance, i.e., the Northern Kingdom of Israel and Aram, to invade Judah, thereby initiating Assyria's attempts to take control of the region (2 Kings 15.32–16.20; Isa 7.1–9.6). Because Isaiah is heavily influenced by the royal Davidic/Zion theology, he sees the LORD enthroned as a king in the Holy of Holies of the Temple. The ark of the covenant, which was housed in the Holy of Holies (1 Kings 8.6–9), was believed to serve as the footstool for the LORD's throne (see 1 Sam 4.4; 6.2; Isa 37.16; 66.1; Pss 80.2; 99.1). The seraphs are heavenly beings who serve as attendants to the divine king. The Hebrew word “serap” (lit. “fiery one”) also refers to fiery snakes in the wilderness (Num 21.6–9; Deut 8.15; cf. Isa 14.29; 30.6). Here, they are comparable to the cherubim, winged creatures of composite animal and human form, that are guardians of the ark (Ex 25.10–22). Isaiah's vision of the seraphs is apparently influenced by the imagery of the flickering lights of the lamp stands in the thick incense smoke that fills the Temple during worship. Feet, probably a euphemism for genitals. 3–4: The hymn of the seraphs, well known in both Jewish and Christian worship, recounts the LORD's holiness as sovereign of all creation, and points to the liturgical setting of Isaiah's vision. The shaking of the thresholds likely represents the movement of the Temple doors as they are opened. Smoke accompanies the divine presence (4.5; 30.27; Ex 19.18; Ps 18.8), in this case also from the fire on the altar (v. 6). 5: Isaiah recognizes that he is not sufficiently pure to stand before the LORD in the Temple (cf. Ex 33.18–20). 6–7: The cleansing of Isaiah's mouth with a hot coal from the altar presupposes the mouth purification rituals of oracular priests keep looking, but do not understand.’

¹⁰ Make the mind of this people dull, and stop their ears,
and shut their eyes,
so that they may not look with their eyes,

and turn and be healed.”

¹¹ Then I said, “How long, O Lord?” And he said:

in ancient Mesopotamia so that they could speak on behalf of their gods. 8: The LORD’s question and Isaiah’s response recalls the experience of Micaiah (1 Kings 22.20–21). Us, the plural refers to the entire divine assembly. 9–10: The LORD’s commission to Isaiah is one of the most disturbing elements of the book, insofar as Isaiah’s task is to ensure that the people will not see, hear, or understand so that they cannot repent and thereby avoid the punishment of the LORD (cf. the LORD’s hardening the heart of Pharaoh; Ex 7.3–5; 10.1). 11–13: Isaiah’s response How long? is often understood to be a sign of his resignation to the divine will and his empathy for his people, although other figures, such as Abraham (Gen 18), Moses (Ex 33; Num 14), Amos (Am 7.1–6), and Job were not afraid to challenge the LORD when they thought a divine act was questionable. The concluding images of judgment against the land culminate in a portrayal of a tree stump that must be burned after the tree is cut down. Despite the horrific imagery of a mere 10 percent survival rate, the account concludes with a hopeful image of new growth from the ravaged stump that will constitute the holy seed of restoration (see Ezra 9.2).

7.1–8.15: Narrative concerning the LORD’s judgment against Judah. The explanation of divine judgment shifts to a third-person narrative concerning Isaiah’s confrontation with King Ahaz of Judah (743/735–727/715 BCE) at the time of the Syro-Ephraimite invasion of Judah (see 1 Kings 16) in 7.1–25, followed by a return to Isaiah’s first-person narrative in 8.1–15 concerning the significance of the Maher-shalal-hash-baz sign (see textual note a on 8.1). The passage has a complex history of revision in response to changing circumstances. Thus many images are alternately used with positive and negative significance.

7.1–25: Dialogue between King Ahaz and Isaiah. The narrative begins with reference to the Syro-Ephraimite War of 735–732 BCE. In an attempt to oppose advances into western Asia by the Assyrian King Tiglath-pileser III (745–727), King Rezin of Damascus (Aram; ca. 750–732) and King Pekah of Israel (735–732) formed the Syro-Ephraimite alliance. Pekah came to the throne of Israel in a coup engineered by Aram that saw the assassination of his predecessor, Pekahiah (737–735), the son of the pro-Assyrian Menahem (747–737; 2 Kings 15.17–26). Rezin and Menahem attempted to assemble all of the smaller states in the region into a united force that would face the Assyrians. King Jotham of Judah (759–743), who likely knew all too well the animosity between Israel and Aram over the past century (King Ahab of Israel was killed at Ramoth-gilead while fighting the Arameans; see 1 Kings 22), refused to join such an unstable alliance. Jotham died of unknown causes before the combined forces of the northern kingdom of Israel and Aram arrived at Jerusalem, leaving his twenty-year-old son Ahaz to face the threat (1 Kings 16). The goal of the assault was to force Judah into the Syro-Ephraimite alliance by removing the Davidic king and replacing him with a presumably more pliable figure named “son of Tabeel” (v. 6). 2: Ephraim, the northern kingdom of Israel. 3–9: The end of the conduit of the upper pool on the highway to the ³Then the LORD said to Isaiah, Go out to meet Ahaz, you and your son Shear-jashub,³ at the end of the conduit of the upper pool on the highway to the Fuller's Field,⁴ and say to him, Take heed, be quiet, do not fear, and do not let your heart be faint because of these two smoldering stumps of firebrands, because of the fierce anger of Rezin and Aram and the son of Remaliah.⁵ Because Aram—with Ephraim and the son of Remaliah—has plotted evil against you, saying,⁶ Let us go up against Judah and cut off Jerusalem^b and conquer it for ourselves and make the son of Tabeel king in it;⁷ therefore thus says the Lord God:

It shall not stand,

⁸For the head of Aram is Damascus,

Fuller's Field. A fuller is a person who processes wool. The location refers to the Gihon spring, Jerusalem's water source, which was located beyond the fortified wall of the city in the Kidron Valley immediately east of the city of David. All ancient cities faced the problem of access to water in times of siege. Like several ancient Israelite cities, Jerusalem had a tunnel that would allow protected access to the Gihon from inside the walls of the city. Ahaz was inspecting Jerusalem's defenses when Isaiah arrived with his son, symbolically named Shear-jashub (“a remnant will return”). The symbolic name is both a reassurance that the LORD would defend Jerusalem in keeping with the Davidic/Zion tradition, and also an acknowledgment of Judah's losses. 4: Isaiah's advice to trust in the LORD makes some practical military sense, since the Israelite and Aramean armies would hardly have time to lay a protracted siege of Jerusalem, leaving their own borders open to Assyrian attack. 9: If you do not stand firm in faith (Heb “im lo' ta'aminu”), you shall not stand at all (“lo' te'amenu,” lit. “you will not be secure”), a wordplay between two forms of the Heb verb, “amen,” “to stand firm.” 10–25: The narrative suggests that Ahaz is skeptical, prompting the prophet to demand that the king ask a “sign” of the LORD. 11: Sheol, the underworld. Although Ahaz rejects Isaiah's advice, his response to the prophet is a model of piety insofar as he will not put the LORD to the test. 14: Isaiah's reply emphasizes the LORD's own sign, i.e., the birth of the child Immanuel (“God is with us”) to express the LORD's commitment to defend Jerusalem. The young woman is not identified; she may be either the wife of Isaiah (cf. 8.3) or of King Ahaz. Although 7.14 is cited in Mt 1.23 as a proof text for the virgin birth of Jesus, based on the LXX translation “parthenos” (virgin), the Heb word “almah” simply means young woman, not virgin. 15–17: Curds and honey, choice fare, difficult to obtain during a siege; by the time the child is weaned (two to three years) the northern allies will have been totally defeated and the land (of milk and honey) will return to the prosperity it enjoyed under David and Solomon. 18–19: A negative oracle describing the dire consequences, particularly the subjugation of Judah by the Assyrian empire, that will befall Jerusalem and Judah as a result of Ahaz's refusal to accept Isaiah's promises. The Isaiah narrative presumes Ahaz's decision to send for help to the Assyrian King Tiglath-pileser (2 Kings 16.7–18). Ahaz's appeal to Assyria put him and his nation in debt to the Assyrians. Had he followed Isaiah's advice to wait out the siege, Tiglath-pileser, needing no invitation to invade Aram and Israel, would have come anyway, and Ahaz would not have been so indebted.

¹⁸On that day the LORD will whistle for the fly that is at the sources of the streams of Egypt, and for the bee that is in the land of Assyria. ¹⁹And they will all come and settle in the steep ravines, and in the clefts of the rocks, and on all the thornbushes, and on all the pastures.

8 Then the LORD said to me, Take a large tablet and write on it in common characters, “Belonging to Maher-shalal-hash-baz,”^a ²and have it attested^b for me by reliable witnesses, the priest Uriah and Zechariah son of Jeberechiah. ³And I went to the prophetess, and she conceived and bore a son. Then the LORD said to me, Name him Maher-shalal-hash-baz; ⁴for before the child knows how to call “My father” or “My mother,” the wealth of Damascus and the spoil of Samaria will be carried away by the king of Assyria.

⁵The LORD spoke to me again: ⁶Because this people has refused the waters of Shiloah that flow gently, and melt in fear before^c Rezin and the son of Remaliah; ⁷therefore, the Lord is bringing up against it the mighty flood waters of the River, the king of Assyria and all his glory; it will rise above all its channels and overflow all its banks; ⁸it will sweep on into Judah as a flood, and, pouring over, it will reach up to the neck; and its outspread wings will fill the breadth of your land, O Immanuel.

The narrative abruptly shifts to Isaiah’s first-person account concerning the birth of his son, Maher-shalal-hash-baz, who serves as a sign concerning the impending judgment to be suffered by Judah when the Assyrian king takes control of Judah. 1–4: The prophet recounts how he secured witnesses concerning the future birth of his son, Maher-shalal-hash-baz, whose name means “the spoil speeds, the prey hastens,” symbolically conveying the speed with which the Assyrians will act against the Syro-Ephraimite coalition and establish their authority over Judah. 2: Uriah and Zechariah, the former may be the chief priest of the Jerusalem Temple (2 Kings 16.10–16) and the latter the father-in-law of Ahaz (2 Kings 18.2). 3: The prophetess, Isaiah’s wife, perhaps in the service of the Temple or court. 5–8: The prophet makes clear the LORD’s dissatisfaction with Ahaz’s refusal to accept the divine offer of protection. The waters of Shiloah, the stream fed by the Gihon spring that symbolizes the LORD’s sustenance of Jerusalem and the house of David (Neh 2.14; 3.15). The oracle plays on the imagery of the protective stream that now becomes a threatening force as it overflows its banks to flood the land. 7: The River, the Euphrates, in western Assyria. 8: Whereas Immanuel, “God is with us,” earlier signified God’s protection of Judah, the name now symbolizes the LORD’s punishment of the land. 9–10: A brief hymn expands on the Immanuel theme with ¹¹ For the LORD spoke thus to me while his hand was strong upon me, and warned me not to walk in the way of this people, saying: ¹² Do not call conspiracy all that this people calls conspiracy, and do not fear what it fears, or be in dread. ¹³ But the LORD of hosts, him you shall regard as holy; let him be your fear, and let him be your dread. ¹⁴ He will become a sanctuary, a stone one strikes against; for both houses of Israel he will become a rock one stumbles over—a trap and a snare for the inhabitants of Jerusalem. ¹⁵ And many among them shall stumble; they shall fall and be broken; they shall be snared and taken.

¹⁶ Bind up the testimony, seal the teaching among my disciples. ¹⁷ I will wait for the LORD, who is hiding his face from the house of Jacob, and I will hope in him. ¹⁸ See, I and the children whom the LORD has given me are signs and portents in Israel from the LORD of hosts, who dwells on Mount Zion. ¹⁹ Now if people say to you, “Consult the ghosts and the familiar spirits that chirp and mutter; should not a people consult their gods, the dead on behalf of the living, ²⁰ for teaching and for instruction?” surely, those who speak like this will have no dawn! ²¹ They will pass through the land,^a greatly distressed and hungry; when they are hungry, they will be enraged and will curse^b their king and their gods. They will turn their faces upward,²² or they will look to the earth, but will see only distress and darkness, the gloom of anguish; and they will be thrust into thick darkness.^c

9^d But there will be no gloom for those who were in anguish. In the former time he brought into contempt the land of Zebulun and the land of Naphtali, but in the latter time he will make glorious the way of the sea, the land beyond the Jordan, Galilee of the nations.

reference to the victorious Jerusalem of the future (anticipating 8.16–12.6). 11–15: The hand of the Lord signifies possession by the spirit of God, resulting in transformed prophetic consciousness (e.g., 1 Kings 18.46; 2 Kings 3.15; Ezek 1.3; 3.22; 8.1; 33.22). Isaiah's opposition to Ahaz and his circle has apparently led to accusations of conspiracy directed against him and his followers.

8.16–12.6: Announcement concerning the fall of Assyria and the restoration of the Davidic kingdom. Having laid out the scenario for Jerusalem's and Judah's judgment at the hands of Assyria in 7.1–8.15, the prophet's oracles then turn to a scenario of divine judgment against Assyria for its own arrogance (cf. 2.10–21) and the restoration of righteous Davidic rule over a reunited Israel and Judah.

8.16–9.7: Prophetic instruction concerning the LORD's signs to Israel and the house of David. Isaiah now expresses frustration as he decides to wait for the LORD to act. Isaiah maintains that the LORD is hiding from the nation, a disturbing proposition that is meant to overcome suggestions of divine impotence or maliciousness in the face of crisis, but nevertheless points to the LORD as an important cause of Judah's suffering. 8.16: The commands to bind up the testimony and seal the teaching (Heb “torah”) among my disciples is an ambiguous statement. Heb “limmuday,” translated here as “my disciples,” may also refer to “my teachings,” since “limmud” means “taught,” whether the content is the teaching or the person taught. The phrase may have played a role in motivating the expansion of the book of Isaiah in the exilic and postexilic periods as later interpreters reflected upon the meaning of the prophet's oracles in relation to their own times. 8.18–9.7: The prophet anticipates a period of gloom and darkness until a new Davidic monarch arises to replace Ahaz. 18: I and the children, Shear-jashub and Maher-shalal-hash-baz, are portents for the future; the name Isaiah (“The LORD saves”) connotes the hope of salvation. 19: Recourse to ghosts and the familiar spirits (i.e., necromancy) was a practice in ancient Israel and Judah, though often condemned (19.3; Lev 19.31; Deut 18.10–11). Here Isaiah threatens that it can only lead to greater distress and darkness. 9.1: Zebulun and Naphtali refer to the Assyrian annexation of Israelite tribal territories in Galilee following Tiglath-pileser's defeat of northern Israel in 732 BCE. The Assyrian provinces of Dur (Dor, the way of the sea), Gal'azu (Gilead, the land beyond the Jordan), and Magidu (Megiddo, Galilee of the nations), areas just south and west of Zebulun and Naphtali, were also carved out of Israel at this time. 2–7: The royal song of thanksgiving answers the hopes of those who wait for the LORD to act to restore righteous Davidic rule in Israel. 4–5: Military oppression is symbolized by the yoke (10.27; 14.25), the bar (10.24), the rod (10.24; 14.5; Gen 49.10), and the trampling boot. 4: The day of Midian refers to Gideon’s defeat of Midian and deliverance of Israel in Judg 7.15–25. 6–7: The birth of a new king, perhaps Hezekiah, the son and successor of Ahaz, signals a new period of peace, justice, and righteousness in which Davidic rule will be reestablished in Israel. See also Ps 2.7. For us, see 6.8n.

9.8–10.4: Prophetic warning of judgment to Israel’s leaders. The prophet returns to a focus on northern Israel. The oracles in this passage all conclude with the formulaic statement, “for all this, his (the LORD’s) anger has not turned away; his hand is stretched out still” (9.12b, 17b, 21b; 10.4b). The occurrence of this formula in 5.25 indicates that 5.1–30 and 9.8–10.4 form a literary envelope around 6.1–9.7. The oracles presuppose Israel’s experience in the Syro-Ephraimite alliance, and point to Israel’s leadership as the cause of its problems. 9.8–12: This oracle presupposes Aram’s (and Philistia’s) aggression against Israel in the ninth century BCE when King Ahab was killed in battle (1 Kings 22). Later Israelite kings and their Judean vassals were conquered by the Aramean push into Philistia (2 Kings 10.32; 12.17–18; 13.7). 8: Jacob is the eponymous ancestor of Israel (Gen 32.22–32; 35.9–15) and is especially associated with northern Israelite locations. 9: Ephraim is the dominant tribe of northern Israel, and Samaria is the capital of the Northern Kingdom (1 Kings 16.24). 13–17: Isaiah decries Israel’s failure to recognize that the LORD was the party responsible for striking against Israel’s leaders. Although the Jehu dynasty eventually achieved security for Israel during the reigns of Jehoash (800–784) and Jeroboam II (788–747; 2 Kings 13.24–25; 14.23–29), ancient Near Eastern sources indicate that Jehu (842–814) and Jehoash did so by forming an alliance with Assyria to contain Aram. the house of Jehu, was ultimately assassinated by pro-Aramean elements in Israel (2 Kings 8–12). 18–21: The last years of the kingdom of Israel were marked by a series of royal assassinations as pro-Assyrian and pro-Aramean elements struggled for control of the nation. King Pekah (see 7:1–25n.), who joined Israel with Aram to form the Syro-Ephraimite alliance, gained his throne by assassinating Pekahiah, the son of the pro-Assyrian King Menahem (2 Kings 15:17–26; cf. 2 Kings 15:25). 21: Ephraim and Manasseh were the two largest tribes in the Northern Kingdom of Israel. 10:1–4: The last oracle of the sequence begins with “woe” (Ah) to signal the prophet’s judgment against Israel’s leadership for its oppression of the poor and manipulation of the judicial system (see 5:20–24n.). Ultimately the Assyrian King Tiglath-pileser (745–727) stripped away much of Israel’s outlying territory, which prompted Hoshea (732–722) to assassinate Pekah and submit to Assyria (2 Kings 15:29–30).

10:5–12:6: Prophetic announcement of Assyrian downfall and Davidic restoration. The final oracular sequence in chs 5–12 takes up divine judgment against the Assyrian monarch for his arrogance and the coming restoration of righteous Davidic rule over a reunified Israel and Judah. 10:5–11: The sequence begins with a “woe” (Ah) oracle directed against the Assyrian king. Although the LORD sent the Assyrians to punish Israel, the Assyrian king arrogantly sees himself and not the LORD as the true power in the world. The Assyrian monarch portrayed here is Sargon II (721–705 BCE). 9: The cities named are all Aramean cities conquered by Tiglath-pileser (745–727) or Sargon. Calno (Calneh) in 740 and 738; Carchemish in 717; Hamath in 738 and again in 720; Arpad

¹² When the Lord has finished all his work on Mount Zion and on Jerusalem, he^a will punish the arrogant boasting of the king of Assyria and his haughty pride. ¹³ For he says:

"By the strength of my hand I have done it,
and by my wisdom, for I have understanding;
I have removed the boundaries of peoples,
and have plundered their treasures;
like a bull I have brought down those who sat on thrones.

¹⁴ My hand has found, like a nest,
the wealth of the peoples;
and as one gathers eggs that have been so I have gathered all the earth;

¹⁶ Therefore the Sovereign, the LORD of hosts,
will send wasting sickness among his stout warriors,

and under his glory a burning will be kindled,
like the burning of fire.

¹⁷ The light of Israel will become a fire, and his Holy One a flame;
and it will burn and devour his thorns and briers in one day.

¹⁸ The glory of his forest and his fruitful land
the LORD will destroy, both soul and body,
and it will be as when an invalid wastes return. Destruction is decreed, overflowing with righteousness. ²³ For the Lord GOD of hosts will make a full end, as decreed, in all in 740; and Damascus in 732. 10–11: To the Assyrian king, Samaria and Jerusalem are ruled by idols and will fall to him just like the others. 12–19: Once the LORD completes the punishment of Jerusalem, divine attention will turn to the punishment of the Assyrian king for his arrogant and self-aggrandizing boasting. 15: The imagery of ax and saw presupposes the Assyrian practice of cutting down trees in the land of their enemies to provide wood for siege engines and to destroy the agricultural base of the economy (cf. Deut 20.19–20). The LORD will become a raging fire that will burn Assyria, symbolically portrayed as felled trees. 20–27a: The prophet returns to the theme of the remnant that will survive the Syro-Aramean and Assyrian onslaughts (cf. 1.9; 4.2–6; 6.12–13; 7.1–15) to see the final overthrow of the Assyrians. 24: Assyria has become an oppressor of Israel much like the pharaoh of Egypt at the time of the Exodus. The oracle plays on the image of Assyria's rod (cf. 10.5), first to be used to punish Israel, then as an instrument of oppression, and finally used against Assyria, much as the rods of Moses and Aaron were used against Egypt during the plagues and at the parting of the sea (Ex 6–11; 13–15). 26: A reference to Gideon's defeat of Midian at the rock of Oreb (Judg 7.25). 10.27b–11.9: The advance of the Assyrian king against Jerusalem generally follows the route from northern Israel through Benjamin south into Jerusalem. The Assyrian king who threatens Jerusalem is likely Sargon II, who passed through Jerusalem in 720 BCE and put on a show of force to intimidate the city on his way to confront the Egyptians and Philistines at Raphia.

you as the Egyptians did. ²⁵For in a very little while my indignation will come to an end, and my anger will be directed to their destruction. ²⁶The LORD of hosts will wield a whip against them, as when he struck Midian at the rock of Oreb; his staff will be over the sea, and he will lift it as he did in Egypt. ²⁷On that day his burden will be removed from your shoulder, and his yoke will be destroyed from your neck.

Israelites were exiled to Assyria and others had fled to Egypt during the course of the Assyrian invasions in the late eighth century. 11: Pathros, in southern Egypt; Ethiopia (Heb “Cush”), south of Egypt; Elam, in southern Iran, east of Babylonia; Shinar, the plain of Babylon; Hamath, in north central Aram (Syria); the coastlands of the sea, the Phoenician littoral on the eastern Mediterranean coast, or the islands of the eastern Aegean. 12–14: With the exiles recovered, Israel and Judah will reunite under the rule of the Davidic king as in the days of David and Solomon, to conquer Philistia and Transjordan (Edom, Moab, and the Ammonites), regions that had once been part of the kingdom of David and Solomon (2 Sam 8). 15: The LORD’s defeat of the sea of Egypt recalls the parting of the sea at the time of the Exodus (Ex 14–15). The scorching wind is a dry sirocco or east wind that plays a role in the parting of the sea and other acts of the LORD (Ex 10.13; 14.21). The River, the Euphrates. Seven channels evokes mythological traditions about the dragon Leviathan (cf. 27.1), who has seven heads in Canaanite mythology. The highway from Assyria is compared to the King’s Highway, a trade route through Transjordan, that Israel followed on its way through Moab to the promised land (Num 20.17; 21.22; Deut 2.17). 12.1–6: The concluding song of thanksgiving quotes from the Song of the Sea in Ex 15 (see esp. Ex 15.1–3) and various Psalms (e.g., 105.1; 118.14, 21). The drawing of water suggests a setting in the celebration of Sukkot (Tabernacles; Lev 23.33–44), when water libations were poured at the Temple to celebrate the end of the fruit harvest and the onset of the rainy season as well as Israel’s journey through the wilderness.

13 The oracle concerning Babylon that Isaiah son of Amoz saw.

^a Or O inhabitant of 13.1–27.13: Prophetic announcement concerning the preparation of the nations for the LORD’s world rule. The oracles concerning the nations in chs 13–23 together with prophecies of restoration for Zion and Israel in chs 24–27 constitute a major unit that anticipates the LORD’s actions and sovereignty from throughout the entire world. The superscription in 13.1 that introduces this section is styled much like that in 2.1. Major blocks of oracles concerning the nations are a common feature of prophetic books (see Jer 46–51; Ezek 25–32; Am 1–2; Ob; Nah; Zeph 2.4–15). Isaiah’s oracles are each marked with a superscription that identifies it as an oracle or pronouncement (Heb “massa”) concerning the nation in question. The prophet’s pronouncements include nations that were ultimately conquered by the Persian empire, beginning with the Persian King Cyrus’s conquest of Babylon in 539 BCE, which prompted his decree to end the Babylonian exile and allow Jews to return to their own land (2 Chr 36.22–23; Ezra 1.1–4). Insofar as the latter portions of Isaiah designate Cyrus as the LORD’s “messiah” and “temple builder” (44.28; 45.1), the final form of the book of Isaiah views Cyrus and the Persian empire as the means by which the LORD exercises worldwide sovereignty.

13.1–14.32: Isaiah’s pronouncement concerning Babylon. The prophet’s oracle concerning Babylon includes a summation in 14.24–27 that applies the oracles concerning Assyria to Babylon, and an appendix in 14.28–32 that takes up Philistia. 13.1: The superscription both introduces the oracle concerning Babylon and the oracles concerning the nations throughout Isaiah 13–23. 13.2–14.27: The lengthy oracle concerning Babylon is unexpected immediately following the earlier concerns with Assyria and its threat to Israel and Judah in the eighth century. Nevertheless, the book as a whole also addresses the Babylonian exile and the Persian-period restoration in the sixth century BCE. It therefore portrays Babylon as the natural successor to Assyria as the LORD’s agent of punishment who must in turn be brought down to realize Jerusalem’s restoration. 13.2–5: The sum-

mons to war presupposes Israel's holy war traditions (cf. Deut 20; Josh 1–11) in which the LORD fights on behalf of Israel and employs a heavenly army (see Ex 23.20–33; Josh 5.13–15; 2 Kings 6.15–19; 7.3–8). 6–8: The day of the LORD, see 2.10–21n. The imagery of wailing together with pangs and agony evokes the imagery of childbirth. Such imagery builds on the role that the birth of Isaiah's own symbolically named sons play in communicating his oracles (7.1–9; 8.1–15,18). 9–16: Because the LORD is the sovereign of all creation, elements of creation such as the stars, moon, and sun, all play roles in the assault against the arrogant and evil on the Day of the LORD. 12: Ophir, in Arabia, was known for its gold (1 Kings 9.26–28). 17–22: The Medes are a nation northwest of Persia, which allied with the Babylonians in 627–609 BCE to bring down the Assyrian empire. Later, under the rule of Cyrus, they united with Persia to form the Persian empire, which in turn conquered Babylonia in 539 BCE. 19: Chaldeans, the Babylonians. Sodom and Gomorrah, see 1.9n. 20–22: The reversion of cities to a primitive condition is a common theme in Isaiah; see 14.22; 17.23; 18.6; 25.2; 27.10–11; 32.13–14; 34.8–15. defeated the Babylonian army in the field, Babylon surrendered to him peacefully and was not destroyed. 21: Goat-demons, satyrs and demons, including Lilith (34.14), are at home in the wilderness. 14.1–2: With the defeat and destruction of Babylon, the LORD turns to the restoration of Israel to its own land. 3–23: The LORD instructs Isaiah to sing a taunt song at the downfall of the king of Babylon. 7–8: Both Assyrian and Babylonian kings were known for cutting down the cypresses and cedars of Lebanon (2.13n), as the wood was prized for building luxurious palaces (see 37.24). The trees therefore rejoice at the king's death. 9–11: Sheol, the underworld, prepares to welcome the dead king. Despite his arrogance (cf. 10.5–32), the king must recognize that no one, not even kings, escapes death and its consequences. 12–14: The names Day Star and son of Dawn draw on divine names known from Canaanite mythology. The name was translated as Lucifer in Latin, and the passage was later understood to refer to Satan's fall from heaven. The taunt song apparently reflects mythological references to failed attempts by gods to challenge the rule of the chief god (see also Ezek 28; Ps 82). 15: The king's descent to Sheol (also called the Pit) draws on mythic patterns such as the Mesopotamian “Descent of Ishtar/Inanna to the Underworld,” in which a goddess descends to the netherworld in an attempt to recover her dead consort. Zaphon (“north”) is the mythological northern mountain of Baal in Canaanite mythology; it is identified with

The similarities with 10.5–34 suggest that the two passages may once have formed a unit in an earlier edition of Isaiah’s oracles. Babylon succeeds Assyria as the major enemy in chs 40–55. tine revolt in 713 BCE.

15.1–16.14: Isaiah's pronouncement concerning Moab. The superscription introduces a lamentation concerning the downfall of Moab, a nation east of the Dead Sea that was often on unfriendly terms with Israel and Judah (cf. Gen 19.30–37). The poem employs the poetic meter typical of dirges in ancient Hebrew poetry (cf. Lam 1–2). Elements of the oracle also appear in Jer 48.29–38, which employs the Isaian oracle to comment on Moab's fate at the hands of Babylon in Jeremiah's time. Although the setting of this oracle is disputed, a likely setting is Tiglath-pileser's invasion of Israel during the Syro-Ephraimite War of 735–732 BCE. Moabite territory north of the Arnon had once been the tribal territory of Reuben and perhaps Gad (see Num 32). In the Moabite Stone (Mesha Stele, ninth century BCE), the Moabite King Mesha boasts of having defeated Israel—and the men of Gad in particular—and taking their land. The Assyrians would have considered this territory to be Israelite and therefore fair game for their own plans for taking control of the region. Moab's appeal for assistance to Jerusalem makes sense in the Syro-Ephraimite War, because Ahaz summons the Assyrians for assistance and maintains his loyalty as an Assyrian vassal (see 7.1–25) 15.1–9: The Moabite towns mentioned in the oracle indicate an invasion that targeted Moabite territory north of the Wadi Arnon, the Wadi el-Mujib that flows into the Dead Sea. 1–4: The cities of Ar, Kir (-hareth), Nebo, Medeba, Heshbon, and Elealeh, are all located in the north and subject to attack. Dibon and Jahaz, on the old border of Moab just north of the Arnon, only serve as witnesses. Baldness . . . sackcloth, signs of mourning. 5–8: The southern cities and locations, none of which can be conclusively identified,

³“Give counsel,
grant justice;
make your shade like night at the height of noon;
hide the outcasts,
do not betray the fugitive; ⁴let the outcasts of Moab settle among you;
be a refuge to them
from the destroyer.”

When the oppressor is no more,
and destruction has ceased, and marauders have vanished from the
land, ⁵then a throne shall be established in steadfast love
in the tent of David, and on it shall sit in faithfulness a ruler who seeks justice and is swift to do what is right.

⁶We have heard of the pride of Moab
—how proud he is!—
of his arrogance, his pride, and his insolence;
his boasts are false.

⁷Therefore let Moab wail, let everyone wail for Moab.
Mourn, utterly stricken,
for the raisin cakes of Kir-hareseth.

⁸For the fields of Heshbon languish, and the vines of Sibmah, whose clusters once made drunk
the lords of the nations, reached to Jazer
and strayed to the desert; their shoots once spread abroad and crossed over the sea.

⁹Therefore I weep with the weeping of Jazer for the vines of Sibmah;

I drench you with my tears,
O Heshbon and Elealeh;
for the shout over your fruit harvest and your grain harvest has ceased.
¹⁰Joy and gladness are taken away from the fruitful field;
and in the vineyards no songs are sung,
no shouts are raised;
no treader treads out wine in the presses;
the vintage-shout is hushed.^a Moab,

multitude; and those who survive will be very

17.1–18.7: Isaiah's pronouncement concerning Damascus. The superscription identifies this unit as the prophet's pronouncement concerning Damascus, but the contents of the oracle include material concerning Israel and the LORD's recognition by Cush (i.e., Ethiopia). This suggests that the oracle is concerned with the Syro-Ephraimite coalition of Aram-Damascus and Israel, and Israel's efforts to convince Cush to join in opposition to Assyria. 17.1b–6: The initial segment of the oracle targets both Damascus, the capital of Aram, and Ephraim, the tribal name identified with the Northern Kingdom of Israel. Isaiah's favored images of harvest and gleanings then portray the decimation of Israel at the hands of the Assyrians. The Valley of Rephaim (lit. the Valley

In Isaiah's understanding of the Davidic/Zion tradition, the LORD alone defends Jerusalem (cf. Ps 2). 18.1–7: The appended "woe" (Ah) oracle focuses on Cush (Ethiopia) to whom Israel sent messengers in 724 BCE during the reign of King Hoshea in an effort to gain support for its revolt against Assyria (2 Kings 17.4). Isaiah is consistently opposed to such alliances, and looks to the natural world to illustrate his view. When grapes are cut and harvested, the vines are left to the mercy of birds and animals. 19.1–20.6: Isaiah's pronouncement concerning Egypt. Isaiah's pronouncement concerning Egypt includes both the oracle against Egypt in 19.1b–25 and a narrative concerning Isaiah's symbolic actions at the time of the fall of Ashdod that legitimizes the oracle concerning Egypt. 19.1–25: Egypt played an important role in attempting to foment revolt against the Assyrians by Israel, Judah, and the other small states in the Syro-Israelite region. Such moves would help to defend them from Assyrian invasion through the Sinai and enable them to extend their own influence into western Asia. 1a: The superscription follows the standard form for Isaiah's pronouncements (13.1a; 15.1a; 17.1a; 23.1a). 1b–10: The LORD is portrayed as riding on a cloud (cf. Pss 18.10; 68.33), which is also how the Canaanite god Baal and the Assyrian god Assur were sometimes portrayed. The conflict among the Egyptians presupposes the internal struggle that took place in Egypt during the late eighth century, resulting finally in the emergence of the Twenty-fifth Ethiopian Dynasty, ca. 715 BCE. The site is associated with the Exodus tradition (Ps 78.12,43; cf. The five “on that day” statements posit that Egypt will ultimately recognize the LORD together with Israel and the Assyrians. Such a sentiment builds on images of the nations’ recognition of the LORD in 2.2–4; 60.10–12; 61.5–10; 66.18–24. 18: The City of the Sun, the Egyptian city Heliopolis (Jer 43.13). The language of Canaan, Hebrew. The passage may refer to the Judean diaspora in Egypt. Five cities in which Judeans were settled are mentioned in Jer 2.16; 43.7; 44.1. 20.1–6: King Sargon II of Assyria (722–705) put down a revolt by the Philistine city of Ashdod in 711 BCE. The revolt was instigated by Egypt. In order to illustrate his view that alliance with the Egyptians and Ethiopians is useless, Isaiah walks about Jerusalem naked for three years to symbolize the fate of the Egyptians and Ethiopians taken and took it—² at that time the LORD had spoken to Isaiah son of Amoz, saying, “Go, and loose the sackcloth from your loins and take your sandals off your feet,” and he had done so, walking naked and barefoot.³ Then the LORD said, “Just as my servant Isaiah has walked naked and barefoot for three years as a sign and a portent against Egypt and Ethiopia,^a ⁴ so shall the king of Assyria lead away the Egyptians as captives and the Ethiopians^b as exiles, both the young and the old, naked and barefoot, with buttocks uncovered, to the shame of Egypt.⁵ And they shall be dismayed and confounded because of Ethiopia^a their hope and of Egypt their boast.⁶ In that day the inhabitants of this coastland will say, ‘See, this is what has happened to those in whom we hoped and to whom we fled for help and deliverance from the king of Assyria! And we, how shall we escape?’”

21 The oracle concerning the wilderness of the sea.

As whirlwinds in the Negeb sweep on,
it comes from the desert,
from a terrible land.

² A stern vision is told to me;
the betrayer betrays,
and the destroyer destroys.

Go up, O Elam,
lay siege, O Media;
all the sighing she has caused
I bring to an end.

³ Therefore my loins are filled with anguish;
pangs have seized me,
like the pangs of a woman in labor;

I am bowed down so that I cannot hear,
I am dismayed so that I cannot see.
⁴ My mind reels, horror has appalled me;
the twilight I longed for has been turned for me into trembling.

⁵ They prepare the table, they spread the rugs,
they eat, they drink.
Rise up, commanders,
oil the shield!

⁶ For thus the LORD said to me:
“Go, post a lookout,
let him announce what he sees.

⁷ When he sees riders, horsemen in pairs, riders on donkeys, riders on camels, let him listen diligently,
very diligently.”

⁸ Then the watcher^c called out: “Upon a watchtower I stand, O Lord, continually by day,
and at my post I am stationed throughout the night.

⁹ Look, there they come, riders, horsemen in pairs!”

Then he responded, “Fallen, fallen is Babylon;
and all the images of her gods lie shattered on the ground.”

¹⁰ O my threshed and winnowed one, what I have heard from the LORD of
hosts,
the God of Israel, I announce to you.

prisoner by the Assyrians. Prophets frequently engaged in symbolic actions that were meant to symbolize and realize their prophetic messages (see Jer 27–28; Ezek 5; Hos 1–3).

21.1–10: Isaiah’s pronouncement concerning the wilderness of the sea. The reference to Babylon’s fall in v. 9 indicates that the wilderness of the sea refers to Babylon. The oracle expresses Isaiah’s view that Babylon would be defeated by Assyria. The term likely refers to the marshlands of southern Babylonia where the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers join and flow into the Persian Gulf. The Babylonian prince Merodach-baladan, who allied with Hezekiah to revolt against Assyria in 705–701 BCE (cf. ch 39), hid from Sennacherib in this region through 689 BCE. The watchman waits for word concerning Babylon only to learn of its defeat. The references to Elam and Media in v. 2 suggest the possibility of a later setting. Media, northeast of Babylon, allied with it to defeat Assyria in 627–609 BCE. Elam, directly east of Babylon, had been conquered by the Assyrians in the mid-seventh century, but was allied with Merodach-baladan in the late eighth century. Perhaps they later joined with Media against Assyria. Elam and Media formed part of the Persian empire that defeated Babylon in 539 BCE. Isaiah’s original oracle was either updated or later read to account for that event. 1: Negeb, the desert region south of Judah.

¹¹The oracle concerning Dumah.

One is calling to me from Seir, “Sentinel, what of the night?
 Sentinel, what of the night?”

¹²The sentinel says:

“Morning comes, and also the night.
 If you will inquire, inquire;
 come back again.”

¹³The oracle concerning the desert plain.

In the scrub of the desert plain you will lodge,
 O caravans of Dedanites.

¹⁴Bring water to the thirsty, meet the fugitive with bread,
 O inhabitants of the land of Tema.

¹⁵For they have fled from the swords,
 from the drawn sword,
 from the bent bow,
 and from the stress of battle.

¹⁶For thus the Lord said to me: Within a year, according to the years of a hired worker, all the glory of Kedar will come to an end;

¹⁷and the remaining bows of Kedar’s warriors will be few; for the LORD, the God of Israel, has spoken.

What do you mean that you have gone up,
 all of you, to the housetops, ²you that are full of shoutings, tumultuous city, exultant town?

Your slain are not slain by the sword, nor are they dead in battle.

³Your rulers have all fled together; they were captured without the use of a bow.^a

All of you who were found were captured, though they had fled far away.^b

⁴Therefore I said:

Look away from me,
 let me weep bitter tears;
 do not try to comfort me for the destruction of my beloved people.

⁵For the Lord GOD of hosts has a day of tumult and trampling and confusion in the valley of vision, a battering down of walls and a cry for help to the mountains.

^a Or without their bows

^b Gk Syr Vg: Heb fled from far away

^c Meaning of Heb uncertain

21.11–12: Isaiah’s pronouncement concerning Dumah. Dumah, a major oasis in the Arabian Desert conquered by the Assyrian King Sennacherib in 689 BCE. Seir is a name for Edom, located southeast of the Dead Sea.

21.13–17: Isaiah’s pronouncement concerning Arabia. Although the NRSV refers to the desert plain, the Hebrew text refers to Arabia, including the Arabian Desert situated to the east of Transjordan, to the west of Babylon, and south into the Arabian peninsula. The Assyrians conducted a number of campaigns in this region from the late eighth through the seventh centuries BCE. The most likely scenario is Sennacherib’s defeat of Kedar in the northern Arabian desert in 689 BCE. The cities of Dedan and Tema were located in the northwestern Arabian peninsula south of Edom or Seir.

22.1–22: Isaiah’s pronouncement concerning the valley of vision. The contents of this oracle indicate that the valley of vision refers to Jerusalem. No such name is known. The term is meant as a pun on the name of the Kidron Valley that defines the eastern boundary of biblical Jerusalem. Kidron means “darkness” or “gloom,” and Isaiah’s use of the term valley of vision to refer to the site is a play that reverses the meaning of the valley’s name to designate it as a site of vision or revelation concerning the LORD’s intentions for the city of Jerusalem. 1b–14: The oracle begins with Isaiah’s observations concerning the rejoicing of the city at the deliverance of the city of Jerusalem from an enemy, most likely the lifting of Sennacherib’s siege of Jerusalem in 701 BCE. Although Isaiah 36–37 indicates that Sennacherib withdrew following the LORD’s defeat of his army, Assyrian records indicate that no such defeat took place and that Sennacherib withdrew after accepting Hezekiah’s surrender. Isaiah points out the cost of the siege: although Jerusalem was spared, the land of Judah was devastated by the Assyrians. The prophet Micah from Moresheth-gath along Judah’s border with Philistia was forced to flee for his life

⁸ He has taken away the covering of Judah.

On that day you looked to the weapons of the House of the Forest,⁹ and you saw that there were many breaches in the city of David, and you collected the waters of the lower pool.¹⁰ You counted the houses of Jerusalem, and you broke down the houses to fortify the wall.¹¹ You made a reservoir between the two walls for the water of the old pool. But you did not look to him who did it, or have regard for him who planned it long ago.

¹² In that day the Lord God of hosts called to weeping and mourning, to baldness and putting on sackcloth;¹³ but instead there was joy and festivity, killing oxen and slaughtering sheep, eating meat and drinking wine.

¹⁴ The LORD of hosts has revealed himself in my ears:
Surely this iniquity will not be forgiven you until you die, says the Lord God of hosts.

rock?¹⁷ The LORD is about to hurl you away violently, my fellow. He will seize firm hold on you,¹⁸ whirl you round and round, and throw you like a ball into a wide land; there you shall die, and there your splendid chariots shall lie, O you disgrace to your master's house!¹⁹ I will thrust you from your office, and you will be pulled down from your post.

²⁰ On that day I will call my servant Eliakim son of Hilkiah,²¹ and will clothe him with your robe and bind your sash on him. I will commit your authority to his hand, and he shall be a father to the inhabitants of Jerusalem and to the house of Judah.²² I will place on his shoulder the key of the house of David; he shall open, and no one shall shut; he shall shut, and no one shall open.²³ I will fasten him like a peg in a secure place, and he will become a throne of honor to his ancestral house.²⁴ And they will hang on him the whole weight of his ancestral house, the offspring and issue, every small vessel, from the cups to all the flagons.²⁵ On that day, says the LORD of hosts, the peg that was fastened in a secure place will give way; it will be cut down and fall, and the load that was on it will perish, for the LORD has spoken.

to Jerusalem to escape the Assyrian attack (Mic 1–2; see also 36.1; 37.8). 6: Elam and Kir refer to elements of the Assyrian army. Elam was located in southern Iran and allied with Merodach-baladan against Assyria, although Assyria was known for incorporating military units of its vassals into its own army. Kir was an Aramean city subjugated by Assyria. 8b–11: Prose expansion describing preparations for the siege. The waters of the lower pool, the prophet refers to King Hezekiah's attempts to fortify the city, including his digging of the Siloam Tunnel under the city of David to channel the waters of the Gihon Spring into Jerusalem where they would form the Siloam pool protected by Jerusalem's walls at the southern tip of the city. Such a move eliminated the problem that Ahaz faced: protecting the water source (7.1–9). The famed Siloam Inscription commemorates the digging of the tunnel. 12–14: Bitter, fatalistic rejoicing in a time of disaster. 15–25: Isaiah condemns the steward Shebna, a major administrative official in charge of the royal palace (household); his tomb has been found in the Kidron Valley east of Jerusalem. The prophet condemns Shebna for building his tomb when the LORD plans to remove him from office and replace him with Eliakim son of Hilkiah. In 36.2 Eliakim ben Hilkiah is called the officer “in charge of the palace” and Shebna the “secretary” or “recorder.” The secretary may have worked under the supervision of the officer “over the house.” In Isaiah's view, Eliakim will ultimately lose his job as well.

23.1–18: Isaiah's pronouncement concerning Tyre. Tyre was the dominant Phoenician city located along the sea coast north of Akko and south of Sidon. It was the major sea power of the day with a large navy that de-

When they came in from Cyprus they learned of it.
² Be still, O inhabitants of the coast, O merchants of Sidon,
 your messengers crossed over the sea^a ³ and were on the mighty waters;
 your revenue was the grain of Shihor,
 the harvest of the Nile;
 you were the merchant of the nations.
⁴ Be ashamed, O Sidon, for the sea has spoken,
 the fortress of the sea, saying:
 “I have neither labored nor given birth,
 I have neither reared young men nor brought up young women.”
⁵ When the report comes to Egypt, they will be in anguish over the report about Tyre.
⁶ Cross over to Tarshish—wail, O inhabitants of the coast!
⁷ Is this your exultant city whose origin is from days of old, whose feet carried her
 to settle far away?
⁸ Who has planned this against Tyre, the bestower of crowns, whose merchants were princes, whose traders were the honored of the earth?
⁹ The LORD of hosts has planned it—to defile the pride of all glory, to shame all the honored of the earth.
¹⁰ Cross over to your own land, O ships of^b Tarshish;
 this is a harbor^c no more.
¹¹ He has stretched out his hand over the sea,
 he has shaken the kingdoms;
 the LORD has given command concerning Canaan
 to destroy its fortresses.

¹² He said:
 You will exult no longer,
 O oppressed virgin daughter Sidon; rise, cross over to Cyprus—
 even there you will have no rest.

¹³ Look at the land of the Chaldeans!
 This is the people; it was not Assyria. They destined Tyre for wild animals. They erected their siege towers, they tore down her palaces, they made her a ruin.^d

¹⁴ Wail, O ships of Tarshish, for your fortress is destroyed.

¹⁵ From that day Tyre will be forgotten for seventy years, the lifetime of one king. At the end of seventy years, it will happen to Tyre as in the song about the prostitute:

¹⁶ Take a harp,
 go about the city,
 you forgotten prostitute!
 Make sweet melody,
 sing many songs,
 that you may be remembered.

¹⁷ At the end of seventy years, the LORD will visit Tyre, and she will return to her trade, and will prostitute herself with all the kingdoms of the world on the face of the earth.

¹⁸ Her merchandise and her wages will be dedicated to the LORD; her profits^e will not be stored or hoarded, but her merchandise will supply abundant food and fine clothing for those who live in the presence of the LORD.

fended the island city from attack and engaged in trade throughout the Mediterranean (see Ezek 27). Tyre was allied with Hezekiah in the revolt against Assyria in 705–701 BCE, but Sennacherib’s assault against Phoenicia in 701 quickly forced Tyre and its Phoenician dependents to submit. With Tyre out of the picture, Hezekiah’s allies in western Asia quickly capitulated, leaving him to face Assyria alone. 1: Tarshish, see 2.16n. 3: Shihor, Lower (northern) Egypt. 13–18: The oracle has been updated by a reference to the Chaldeans, the Neo-Babylonian empire founded by Nabo-polassar in 625 BCE. His son Nebuchadnezzar (605–562 BCE) conquered Tyre—but did not destroy it—following a thirteen year siege that ended in 572 BCE (cf. Ezek 26–28). The seventy-year period of Tyre’s decline corresponds to Jeremiah’s claims of a seventy-year period for Jerusalem’s exile (Jer 25.11–12; 29.10). Because Tyre trades with many nations, she is disparaged as a prostitute, but ultimately her merchandise will be dedicated to the LORD (cf. 19.16–25).

24 Now the LORD is about to lay waste the earth and make it desolate, and he will twist its surface and scatter its inhabitants.

² And it shall be, as with the people, so with the priest;
as with the slave, so with his master;
as with the maid, so with her mistress;
as with the buyer, so with the seller;
as with the lender, so with the borrower;
as with the creditor, so with the debtor.

³ The earth shall be utterly laid waste and utterly despoiled;
for the LORD has spoken this word.

⁴ The earth dries up and withers, the world languishes and withers;
the heavens languish together with the
earth.

⁵ The earth lies polluted
under its inhabitants;
for they have transgressed laws,
violated the statutes,
broken the everlasting covenant.

⁶ Therefore a curse devours the earth, and its inhabitants suffer for their guilt;

therefore the inhabitants of the earth dwindled,
and few people are left.

⁷ The wine dries up,
the vine languishes,
all the merry-hearted sigh.

⁸ The mirth of the timbrels is stilled,
the noise of the jubilate has ceased,
the mirth of the lyre is stilled.

⁹ No longer do they drink wine with singing; strong drink is bitter to those who drink it.

¹⁰ The city of chaos is broken down, every house is shut up so that no one can enter.

¹¹ There is an outcry in the streets for lack of wine;
all joy has reached its eventide;
the gladness of the earth is banished.

¹² Desolation is left in the city,
the gates are battered into ruins.

¹³ For thus it shall be on the earth and among the nations,
as when an olive tree is beaten,
as at the gleaning when the grape harvest is ended.

24.1–27.13: Prophetic announcement of the LORD’s new world order based in Zion. Chapters 24–27 form a distinct block of material at the conclusion of Isaiah’s oracles concerning the nations. This material posits the future withering of creation (24.1–13), the downfall of an unnamed exalted city (24.10,12; 25.2,3; 26.5), the recognition of the LORD by the nations at Zion (25.6–8), and the ultimate restoration of Zion itself as the seat of the LORD’s sovereignty throughout the world of both creation and the nations. Although these chapters are sometimes called “the Isaiah apocalypse,” the themes of cosmic chaos and restoration, the resurrection of the dead (26.14,19), and the view that the future constitutes the end of time need not indicate that these chapters are an apocalyptic work; the formula “in that day” may serve as a simple reference to the future. Similarly, mythological perspectives can be used to identify divine action in the world. Rather than pointing to the end of time, chs 24–27 point to the restoration of Jerusalem in chs 25–27 following the portrayal of its period of punishment in ch 24. The frequent citation of earlier prophetic literature indicates that this material was composed at a later time, probably in the sixth century BCE when the Babylonian exile was coming to an end and Jerusalem’s restoration was at hand.

24.1–23: Prophetic announcement of the LORD’s punishment of the earth. The depiction of a devastated land appears frequently in ancient Near Eastern treaty curses, the covenant curses of the biblical law codes (e.g., Lev 26; Deut 28–29), and the judgment scenarios of the prophets (e.g., Isa 34.11–17; Jer 5.6; 19.7–9; Hos 4; 13.7–8; Zeph 2.9). The background of such scenarios is the withdrawal or death of fertility gods such as the Canaanite Baal or the Mesopotamian Tammuz. Likewise, biblical literature, particularly Deuteronomy and many of the prophets, maintains that the LORD also ensures the fertility of the land in conjunction with human behavior. 5: The everlasting covenant is the foundation for all creation, including Israel (Gen 9.16; 17.7; Ex 31.16; Lev 24.8; Isa 55.3; 61.8; Jer 32.40; Ezek 37.26). 10: The city of chaos is not named, although the context suggests that it represents the enemy of the LORD, such as the Assyrian capital Nineveh, Babylon, or the capital of any empire that might threaten Israel or the LORD. Chaos (Heb “tohu”) describes the state of the earth before creation commenced (Gen 1.2). The defeat of human enemies is frequently portrayed in cosmic terms (e.g., Ex 15). 13: The beating of the olive tree

¹⁴They lift up their voices, they sing for joy;
they shout from the west over the majesty of the LORD.

¹⁵Therefore in the east give glory to the LORD;
in the coastlands of the sea glorify the name of the LORD, the God of Israel.

¹⁶From the ends of the earth we hear songs of praise, of glory to the Righteous One.

But I say, I pine away,
I pine away. Woe is me!
For the treacherous deal treacherously,
the treacherous deal very treacherously.

¹⁷Terror, and the pit, and the snare are upon you, O inhabitant of the earth!

¹⁸Whoever flees at the sound of the terror shall fall into the pit; and whoever climbs out of the pit shall be caught in the snare.

For the windows of heaven are opened,
and the foundations of the earth tremble.

¹⁹The earth is utterly broken, the earth is torn asunder,
the earth is violently shaken.

²⁰The earth staggers like a drunkard,
it sways like a hut;
its transgression lies heavy upon it, and it falls, and will not rise again.

²¹On that day the LORD will punish the host of heaven in heaven, and on earth the kings of the earth.

²²They will be gathered together like prisoners in a pit;
they will be shut up in a prison,

and after many days they will be punished.

²³Then the moon will be abashed, and the sun ashamed;
for the LORD of hosts will reign on Mount Zion and in Jerusalem, and before his elders he will manifest his glory.

25 O LORD, you are my God;
I will exalt you, I will praise your name;
for you have done wonderful things,
plans formed of old, faithful and sure.

²For you have made the city a heap,
the fortified city a ruin;
the palace of aliens is a city no more,
it will never be rebuilt.

³Therefore strong peoples will glorify you;
cities of ruthless nations will fear you.

⁴For you have been a refuge to the poor,
a refuge to the needy in their distress,
a shelter from the rainstorm and a shade from the heat.

When the blast of the ruthless was like a winter rainstorm, ⁵the noise of aliens like heat in a dry place, you subdued the heat with the shade of clouds;

the song of the ruthless was stilled.

⁶On this mountain the LORD of hosts will make for all peoples a feast of rich food, a feast of well-aged wines, of rich food filled with marrow, of well-aged wines strained clear.

⁷And he will destroy on this mountain the shroud that is cast over all peoples, alludes to 17.6 (cf. 10.33–34). 14–16: The downfall of the city of chaos prompts the recognition of the LORD from throughout the world. The coastlands of the sea, the Aegean island, i.e., the far west. The treachery of the treacherous is a citation of 21.2 (cf. 33.1), which portrays the downfall of Babylon. 17–20: There was no escape when the windows of heaven opened at the time of the flood (Gen 7:1), and there is no escape from the LORD's judgment now. 21–23: The host of heaven . . . kings of the earth, the gods and rulers of the nations.

25.1–12: The LORD's blessing of the earth at Zion. With the downfall of the enemy city, the time of restoration may begin. 1–5: A communal psalm of thanksgiving greets the LORD following the downfall of the oppressive city, much like the hymn of praise sung by Moses, Miriam, and the people at the Sea in Ex 15. 4–5: Citation of language from 4.5b–6 and 32.1–2. 6–12: A banquet for all the nations is held on Mount Zion in the aftermath of the LORD's victory over the city of chaos. Such a banquet symbolizes worship at the Jerusalem Temple, particularly since the sacrifice of offering at the Temple altar was conceived as a meal or banquet shared by the

the sheet that is spread over all nations; ⁸ he will swallow up death forever.
 Then the Lord GOD will wipe away the tears from all faces, and the disgrace of his people he will take away from all the earth,
 for the LORD has spoken.
⁹ It will be said on that day, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, so that he might save us.
 This is the LORD for whom we have waited;
 let us be glad and rejoice in his salvation.
¹⁰ For the hand of the LORD will rest on this laid low, cast to the ground, even to the

As sovereign of creation, the LORD now brings life to creation. 8b–12: Wipe away the tears, cf. Rev 7:1; 21:4. The demise of Moab refers to the defeat of Moab by Babylon in the sixth century BCE, and cites 2.9–17 to portray the downfall of the arrogant.

26.1–21: Judah's petition to the LORD for deliverance. The liturgical setting of the thanksgiving hymn and the banquet in ch 25 prompts the liturgical hymns in ch 26 that praise the LORD and call for deliverance from the wicked. 1b–6: The initial song of praise celebrates the victory of the LORD over the oppressive city of chaos mentioned in 24.10. 4: Trust in the LORD, a common feature of complaint psalms that petition the LORD for deliverance in a time of threat or need (e.g., Pss 6; 7). 5a: The inhabitants of the height, cf. 2.6–21 concerning the LORD's capacity to bring down the arrogant. 7–10: Confidence in the LORD.  the earth will disclose the blood shed on it, and will no longer cover its slain.

27 On that day the LORD with his cruel and great and strong sword will punish Leviathan the fleeing serpent, Leviathan the twisting serpent, and he will kill the dragon that is in the sea.

² On that day:
 A pleasant vineyard, sing about it!
³ I, the LORD, am its keeper;
 every moment I water it.
 I guard it night and day
 so that no one can harm it; ⁴ I have no wrath.
 If it gives me thorns and briers,
 I will march to battle against it.
 I will burn it up.
⁵ Or else let it cling to me for protection,
 let it make peace with me,
 let it make peace with me.
⁶ In days to come^d Jacob shall take root, Israel shall blossom and put forth shoots,
 and fill the whole world with fruit.

13: Other lords, perhaps an allusion to the oppressor city of chaos (24.10), whose downfall will come in response to the people's petition. 14: The dead do not live, a common theme in the psalms; only the living can praise God (Pss 6.5; 30.9; 49.10–20); see 39.18–19. 17–18: Childbirth is a common image for an immanent event (see 13.8; 66.7–9). 19: Your dead shall live, the response to v. 14, expressing an intuition of a meaningful survival of death; cf. Ezek 37.1–14; Dan 12.2. 20–21: Exhortation to wait for the LORD (cf. 2.10,19,21).

27:1: The LORD's defeat of Leviathan. Leviathan, the seven-headed serpent known from Ugaritic and biblical tradition as a chaos monster whose defeat by the LORD aids in bringing about order in creation (Ps 74.13–14; cf. Isa 11.15–16).

shall take root, cf. 11.1–9. 7–13: A justification of the LORD. The suffering of the people constitutes the LORD's efforts to purge the nation of sins and idolatry. 10: The fortified city, referring to the unnamed city of 24.10; 25.2; 26.5. 11: Without understanding, cf. 1.2–3. 12–13: With the downfall of the oppressor, the time to gather the exiles from Assyria and Egypt has now arrived (cf. 11.15–16).

28.1–33.24: Prophetic instruction concerning the LORD's plans for the new king in Jerusalem. This block of material is defined by its introductory "Woe" (NRSV "Ah," "Ha," "Oh," "Alas,") oracle forms (28.1; 29.1,15; 30.1; 31.1; 33.1); its overall concern for the deliverance of Jerusalem from Assyria; and its culminating concern for the establishment of a righteous king in Jerusalem.

28.1–29: Prophetic instruction concerning the LORD's purpose in bringing Assyrian rule. This oracle condemns both Israelite and Judean leadership as an explanation for Assyrian rule of Israel and Judah. 1–4: The introductory "woe" ("Ah") oracle condemns the leadership of northern Israel (Ephraim was the dominant tribe of northern Israel) for self-indulgence in food and wine (cf. 5.8–24). Proud garland and glorious beauty designate the royal crown. 5–6: The LORD's promise to support a future monarch who rules in justice and defends the na-the battle at the gate.

they err in vision,
they stumble in giving judgment.

⁸All tables are covered with filthy vomit;
no place is clean.

⁹“Whom will he teach knowledge, and to whom will he explain the message?

Those who are weaned from milk,
those taken from the breast?

¹⁰For it is precept upon precept, precept upon precept,
line upon line, line upon line,
here a little, there a little.”^a ¹¹Truly, with stammering lip and with alien tongue

he will speak to this people,

¹²to whom he has said,
“This is rest;
give rest to the weary;
and this is repose”;
yet they would not hear.

¹³Therefore the word of the LORD will be to them, “Precept upon precept, precept upon precept,
line upon line, line upon line,
here a little, there a little;”^a in order that they may go, and fall backward,
and be broken, and snared, and taken.

¹⁴Therefore hear the word of the LORD, you scoffers

who rule this people in Jerusalem.

¹⁵Because you have said, “We have made a covenant with death,
and with Sheol we have an agreement;
when the overwhelming scourge passes through
it will not come to us;
for we have made lies our refuge, and in falsehood we have taken shelter”;

¹⁶therefore thus says the Lord GOD, See, I am laying in Zion a foundation stone,
a tested stone,
a precious cornerstone, a sure foundation:
“One who trusts will not panic.”

¹⁷And I will make justice the line, and righteousness the plummet; hail will sweep away the refuge of lies,
and waters will overwhelm the shelter.

¹⁸Then your covenant with death will be annulled,
and your agreement with Sheol will not stand;
when the overwhelming scourge passes
through
you will be beaten down by it.

¹⁹As often as it passes through, it will take

by day and by night;
and it will be sheer terror to understand the message.

tion (cf. 9.1–7; 11.1–9). 7–13: The oracle presupposes the Canaanite “marzeah” ritual, associated with funerary rites that called for all-night drinking and feasting. This ritual has also been associated with the conclusion of treaties. 14–22: An indictment of Jerusalem’s leadership. The covenant with Sheol, the abode of the dead, plays upon the previously noted “marzeah” ritual. It may also refer to an alliance with Egypt. 16: The foundation stone in Jerusalem symbolizes both the foundation for a major building, such as the Jerusalem Temple, and the Davidic/Zion tradition of the LORD’s promise of security for Jerusalem and the house of David. 21: Perazim refers to the LORD’s victory over the Philistines at Baal-perazim (2 Sam 5.17–21) and Gibeon to the victory over the Canaanites

Do they continually open and harrow nor is a cart wheel rolled over cummin;

but dill is beaten out with a stick,
and cummin with a rod.

²⁸ Grain is crushed for bread, but one does not thresh it forever;
one drives the cart wheel and horses

(Josh 10.10). But now, the LORD will punish Jerusalem's leaders. 23–29: The concluding allegory illustrates the duration of the punishment. Just as a farmer must plow the ground and then thresh, beat, and crush the crops to prepare them for human use, so the LORD will plow and thresh the people in preparation for their restoration.

29.1–24: Prophetic instruction concerning the LORD's purpose in assaulting Ariel/Zion. 1–4: The first portion of this "woe" ("Ah") oracle begins with a portrayal of an assault against the city of Jerusalem, apparently presupposing or anticipating an Assyrian attack. Just as David once conquered Jerusalem (2 Sam 5.6–9), the LORD will do the same with a foreign army. 1: The Heb term Ariel means "lion of God," recalling the lion as the symbol for Judah (Gen 49.8–11). It is related to a Heb word that designates the hearth of the altar (Ezek 43.15–16). 6–7: God will appear with all the elements of a theophany as a divine warrior to fight against those attacking and wakes up faint, still thirsty, so shall the multitude of all the nations be that fight against Mount Zion.

⁹ Stupefy yourselves and be in a stupor, blind yourselves and be blind!

Be drunk, but not from wine;
stagger, but not from strong drink!

¹⁰ For the LORD has poured out upon you a spirit of deep sleep;
he has closed your eyes, you prophets,
and covered your heads, you seers.

¹¹ The vision of all this has become for you like the words of a sealed document. If it is given to those who can read, with the command, “Read this,” they say, “We cannot, for it is sealed.” ¹² And if it is given to those who cannot read, saying, “Read this,” they say, “We cannot read.”

¹³ The Lord said: Because these people draw near with their mouths

and honor me with their lips, while their hearts are far from me, and their worship of me is a human commandment learned by rote;

¹⁴ so I will again do amazing things with this people, shocking and amazing.

The wisdom of their wise shall perish, and the discernment of the discerning shall be hidden.

¹⁵ Ha! You who hide a plan too deep for the LORD,
whose deeds are in the dark, and who say, “Who sees us? Who knows us?”

¹⁶ You turn things upside down!

Shall the potter be regarded as the clay?
Shall the thing made say of its maker,
“He did not make me”;
or the thing formed say of the one who formed it,
“He has no understanding”?

¹⁷ Shall not Lebanon in a very little while become a fruitful field, and the fruitful field be regarded as a forest?

¹⁸ On that day the deaf shall hear the words of a scroll, and out of their gloom and darkness
the eyes of the blind shall see.

¹⁹ The meek shall obtain fresh joy in the LORD,
and the neediest people shall exult in the Holy One of Israel.

²⁰ For the tyrant shall be no more,
and the scoffer shall cease to be;
all those alert to do evil shall be cut off—

²¹ those who cause a person to lose a lawsuit,
who set a trap for the arbiter in the gate, and without grounds deny justice to the one in the right.

²² Therefore thus says the LORD, who redeemed Abraham, concerning the house of Jacob:

No longer shall Jacob be ashamed, no longer shall his face grow pale.

²³ For when he sees his children,
the work of my hands, in his midst,
they will sanctify my name;
they will sanctify the Holy One of Jacob, and will stand in awe of the God of Israel.

Jerusalem. 9–10: Stupefy . . . blind yourselves recalls the prophet’s commission in 6.9–10 to render the people blind, deaf, and ignorant so that they will not repent and be saved. The deep sleep poured on the people is like that of the first human when the woman was created (Gen 2.21) and of Abraham when he had a vision of Israel’s deliverance from Egypt at the Exodus (Gen 15.12–16). 11–12: The sealed document, cf. 8.16–17. Ultimately, the significance of Isaiah’s prophecies will be understood only when later generations read them, perhaps in the time of the Babylonian exile (chs 40–55) or the Persian-period restoration (chs 56–66). 13–14: Cf. 1.10–17. 15–24: The second portion of this “woe” (Ha!) oracle focuses on the future realization of the LORD’s purposes for Zion. The LORD is the potter and not the clay; cf. 45.9; Jer 18.1–6. 17: Lebanon, 2.13n; see also 10.34. The deaf and the blind (cf. 6.9–10) will understand when they read the scroll of Isaiah’s prophecies (cf. 8.16–23). 22: Abraham, cf. 41.8; 51.2. Abraham, redeemed by God’s call to journey into the promised land, becomes the model for those who returned to Judah in the post-disaster period.

²⁴And those who err in spirit will come to understanding, and those who grumble will accept instruction.

30 Oh, rebellious children, says the LORD, who carry out a plan, but not mine;
who make an alliance, but against my will,
adding sin to sin;
²who set out to go down to Egypt without asking for my counsel, to take refuge in the protection of Pharaoh,
and to seek shelter in the shadow of Egypt; ³Therefore the protection of Pharaoh shall become your shame,
and the shelter in the shadow of Egypt your humiliation.
⁴For though his officials are at Zoan and his envoys reach Hanes, ⁵everyone comes to shame through a people that cannot profit
them,
that brings neither help nor profit,
but shame and disgrace.

⁶An oracle concerning the animals of the Negeb.
Through a land of trouble and distress,
of lioness and roaring^a lion,
of viper and flying serpent,
they carry their riches on the backs of donkeys,
and their treasures on the humps of camels,
to a people that cannot profit them.
⁷For Egypt's help is worthless and empty, therefore I have called her,
"Rahab who sits still."^b

⁸Go now, write it before them on a tablet, and inscribe it in a book,
so that it may be for the time to come as a witness forever.
⁹For they are a rebellious people, faithless children,
children who will not hear the instruction of the LORD; ¹⁰who say to the seers, "Do not see";
and to the prophets, "Do not prophesy to us what is right;
speak to us smooth things,
prophesy illusions, ¹¹leave the way, turn aside from the path, let us hear no more about the Holy One of Israel."
¹²Therefore thus says the Holy One of Israel:
Because you reject this word, and put your trust in oppression and deceit,
and rely on them;
¹³therefore this iniquity shall become for
you
like a break in a high wall, bulging out, and about to collapse,
whose crash comes suddenly, in an instant;
¹⁴its breaking is like that of a potter's vessel
that is smashed so ruthlessly that among its fragments not a sherd is found
for taking fire from the hearth, or dipping water out of the cistern.
¹⁵For thus said the Lord God, the Holy One
of Israel:

^a Cn: Heb from them

^b Meaning of Heb uncertain

30.1–33: Prophetic instruction concerning the LORD's delay in delivering the people from Assyria. This lengthy "woe" oracle-complex expresses Isaiah's dissatisfaction with Hezekiah's embassies to Egypt in order to enlist support for his revolt against Assyria in 701 BCE. 1–11: Isaiah opposes attempts to ally with other nations for Jerusalem's protection because his understanding of Davidic/Zion theology holds that the LORD alone will protect Jerusalem and the house of David. 4: Zoan, see 19.11–15n. Hanes is south of Memphis. 6–7: The oracle condemns Judah for sending a caravan of goods to Egypt to enlist Egyptian aid. Negeb, see 20.1n. Rahab is a mythological sea dragon that sometimes symbolizes Egypt (51.9–11; Ps 89.9; Job 9.13). 8–11: The prophet records his oracle because the people are not ready to hear him but only want to hear smooth or comforting things. The significance of the LORD's actions will only be understood at a later time (cf. 8.16–23; 29.11–12). 12–17: The prophet argues that the LORD will delay deliverance from Assyria because the people do not trust the prophet's

In returning and rest you shall be saved; in quietness and in trust shall be your strength.

But you refused ¹⁶ and said, “No! We will flee upon horses”— therefore you shall flee!

and, “We will ride upon swift steeds”— therefore your pursuers shall be swift!

¹⁷ A thousand shall flee at the threat of one,
at the threat of five you shall flee, until you are left
like a flagstaff on the top of a mountain, like a signal on a hill.

¹⁸ Therefore the LORD waits to be gracious
to you;
therefore he will rise up to show mercy
to you.

For the LORD is a God of justice;
blessed are all those who wait for him.

¹⁹ Truly, O people in Zion, inhabitants of Jerusalem, you shall weep no more. He will surely be gracious to you at the sound of your cry; when he hears it, he will answer you.

²⁰ Though the Lord may give you the bread of adversity and the water of affliction, yet your Teacher will not hide himself any more, but your eyes shall see your Teacher. ²¹ And when you turn to the right or when you turn to the left, your ears shall hear a word behind you, saying, “This is the way; walk in it.” ²² Then you will defile your silver-covered idols and your gold-plated images. You will scatter them like filthy rags; you will say to them, “Away with you!”

²³ He will give rain for the seed with which you sow the ground, and grain, the produce of the ground, which will be rich and plenteous. On that day your cattle will graze in broad pastures; ²⁴ and the oxen and donkeys that till the ground will eat silage, which has been winnowed with shovel and fork. ²⁵ On every lofty mountain and every high hill there will be brooks running with water—on a day of the great slaughter, when the towers fall. ²⁶ Moreover the light of the moon will be like the light of the sun, and the light of the sun will be sevenfold, like the light of seven days, on the day when the LORD binds up the injuries of his people, and heals the wounds inflicted by his blow.

²⁷ See, the name of the LORD comes from far away,
burning with his anger, and in thick rising smoke;^a
his lips are full of indignation, and his tongue is like a devouring fire; ²⁸ his breath is like an overflowing stream that reaches up to the neck—to sift the nations with the sieve of destruction,
and to place on the jaws of the peoples a bridle that leads them astray.

²⁹ You shall have a song as in the night when a holy festival is kept; and gladness of heart, as when one sets out to the sound of the flute to go to the mountain of the LORD, to the Rock of Israel. ³⁰ And the LORD will cause his majestic voice to be heard and the descending blow of his arm to be seen, in furious anger and a flame of devouring fire, with a cloudburst and tempest and hailstones. ³¹ The Assyrian will be terror-stricken at the voice of the LORD, when he strikes with his rod. ³² And every stroke of the staff of punishment that the LORD lays upon him will be to the sound of timbrels and lyres; battling with brandished arm he will fight with him.
³³ For his burning place^b has long been prepared; truly it is made ready for the king,^c its pyre made deep and wide, with fire and wood in abundance; the breath of the LORD, like a stream of sulfur, kindles it.

message. 17: A thousand shall flee, see Lev 26.36–37; Deut 32.30. 18–26: The LORD will ultimately show mercy to Jerusalem. A Teacher, perhaps someone who would interpret the prophecies that were bound up. Such a statement might motivate the writings of later prophets in chs 40–66. 27–33: Ultimately, the LORD will strike down the Assyrian oppressor (cf. 10.5–33; 14.24–27). The oracle invokes the imagery of a Temple festival when the LORD is revealed in the smoke and flame of the incense burners and lamp stands of the Jerusalem Temple, perhaps at Rosh ha-Shanah (New Year) or Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement), when the LORD judges the wicked.

31 Alas for those who go down to Egypt for help
and who rely on horses, who trust in chariots because they are many
and in horsemen because they are very strong,
but do not look to the Holy One of Israel or consult the LORD!
² Yet he too is wise and brings disaster;
he does not call back his words, but will rise against the house of the
evildoers,
and against the helpers of those who work iniquity.
³ The Egyptians are human, and not God;
their horses are flesh, and not spirit.
When the LORD stretches out his hand, the helper will stumble, and the one helped will fall,
and they will all perish together.

⁴ For thus the LORD said to me, As a lion or a young lion growls over its prey,
and—when a band of shepherds is called out against it—is not terrified by their shouting or daunted at their noise, so the LORD of hosts will come down to fight upon Mount Zion and upon its hill.

⁵ Like birds hovering overhead, so the LORD of hosts
will protect Jerusalem;
he will protect and deliver it,
he will spare and rescue it.

⁶ Turn back to him whom you^a have deeply betrayed, O people of Israel. ⁷ For on that day all of you shall throw away your idols of silver and idols of gold, which your hands have sin-fully made for you.

⁸ “Then the Assyrian shall fall by a sword, not of mortals;

and a sword, not of humans, shall devour him;
he shall flee from the sword, and his young men shall be put to forced labor.

⁹ His rock shall pass away in terror, and his officers desert the standard in panic,” says the LORD, whose fire is in Zion, and whose furnace is in Jerusalem.

32 See, a king will reign in
righteousness,
and princes will rule with justice.

² Each will be like a hiding place from the wind,
a covert from the tempest,
like streams of water in a dry place, like the shade of a great rock in a weary
land.

³ Then the eyes of those who have sight will not be closed,
and the ears of those who have hearing will listen.

⁴ The minds of the rash will have good judgment,
and the tongues of stammerers will speak readily and distinctly.

⁵ A fool will no longer be called noble, nor a villain said to be honorable.

⁶ For fools speak folly, and their minds plot iniquity:
to practice ungodliness,
to utter error concerning the LORD, to leave the craving of the hungry unsatisfied,
and to deprive the thirsty of drink.

⁷ The villainies of villains are evil;
they devise wicked devices to ruin the poor with lying words, even when the plea of the needy is right.

34.1–66.24: Concerning the realization of the LORD's plans for revealing worldwide sovereignty from Zion. Whereas chs 1–33 anticipate the revelation of the LORD's worldwide sovereignty at Zion, the second half of the book in chs 34–66 presupposes that the time is at hand.

34.1–35.10: Prophetic instruction concerning the LORD's power to return the redeemed exiles to Zion. Chs 34–35 introduce the second half of the book of Zion with an emphasis on the judgment of the nations, represented by Edom, and the return of the exiles to Zion.

34.1–17: Prophetic instruction concerning the LORD's power over the nations. Chapter 34 emphasizes the LORD's power over the nations by focusing especially on the fate of Edom, Israel's neighbor to the southeast (cf. 63.1–6). Edom, which is condemned in biblical literature for its role in the destruction of Jerusalem (Jer 49.7–22; Ezek 25.12–17; Ob; Ps 137.7; Lam 4.21–22), began to decline in the sixth century BCE as Arab tribes began to encroach upon Edomite territory. This decline provides a counterpart for the judgment leveled against Israel and Jerusalem in ch 1. Links between chs 34 and 1 include parallel calls to attention (34.1; 1.2); the LORD's vengeance (34.8; 1.24); unquenchable burning (34.10; 1.24); the mouth of the LORD that has spoken (34.16; 1.20); the sword of punishment (34.5, 6; 1.20); the sacrificial blood and fat of cattle (34.6–7; 1.11–15); Sodom and Gomorrah (34.9–10; 1.7–9, 10); and wilting leaves (34.4; 1.30). 1–15: The address to the nations calls their attention to Edom's punishment. The portrayal of destruction employs the images of sacrifice. 6: Bozrah: a major city in Edom. 8: The passage takes up the "Day of the LORD" theme (cf. 2.10–21; 13.6–16). 9–10: The fate of Edom will resemble that of Sodom and Gomorrah (Gen 19.24–28), located at the southern end of the Dead Sea by Edom. 11: Confusion (Heb "tohu") and chaos (Heb "bohu") are terms employed to describe primeval chaos prior to

¹⁶Seek and read from the book of the LORD:
 Not one of these shall be missing; none shall be without its mate. For the mouth of the LORD has commanded, and his spirit has gathered them.

35.1–10: Prophetic oracle of salvation concerning the return of the redeemed to Zion. The return of the exiles to Zion is portrayed here as a second Exodus in which the people return to Zion through the wilderness. 1–2: The announcement of the return emphasizes the rejoicing and blooming of the wilderness as the LORD is sovereign of all creation. Lebanon is the mountain range north of Israel, Carmel is the fertile mountain range running south of Akko/Acre, and Sharon is the coastal plain to the west of Carmel; contrast 33.9. 4: Do not fear is the reassurance formula addressed by the prophet to King Ahaz in 7.4 and to Hezekiah in 37.6. 5–6: A reversal of 6.9–10. The open eyes of the blind and the unstopped ears of the deaf indicate that the LORD's commands that Isaiah render the people blind and deaf so that they cannot repent and be saved are now at an end (cf. 29.18; 32.3; 42.16,18–19; 43.8; 44.18). 8–10: The highway through the wilderness is a motif of both the Exodus/Wilderness tradition (Num 20.17; 21.22; Deut 2.8) and the second exodus of the book of Isaiah (40.3; 42.16; 43.19). 36 In the fourteenth year of King Hezekiah, King Sennacherib of Assyria came up against all the fortified cities of Judah and captured them. ²The king of Assyria sent the Rabshakeh from Lachish to King Hezekiah at Jerusalem, with a great army. He stood by the conduit of the upper pool on the highway to the Fuller's Field. ³And there came out to him Eliakim son of Hilkiyah, who was in charge of the palace, and Shebna the secretary, and Joah son of Asaph, the recorder.

36.1–39.8: Historical narratives concerning Hezekiah. These narratives also appear in 2 Kings 18–20. Because the prophet Isaiah makes his last appearance here in the book of Isaiah, many interpreters consider chs 36–39 to be drawn from 2 Kings 18–20 in order to form a historical appendix to First Isaiah (chs 1–39). Although chs 36–39 may originally have been intended as an appendix in an early edition of the book, the reference to the exile of Hezekiah's sons to Babylon in 39:1–8 indicates that they now are transitional chapters that prepare the reader for the downfall of Babylon and the return of the exiles to Zion beginning in ch 40. The figure of Hezekiah is contrasted with that of Ahaz in 7:1–9.6 to demonstrate that Hezekiah's return to the LORD results in the deliverance of his people whereas Ahaz's refusal to turn to the LORD resulted in the subjugation of his people to Assyria. Such a portrayal also facilitates Second Isaiah's call to turn to the LORD in chs 40–55 at the time of the restoration. Although chs 36–39 are largely parallel to 2 Kings 18–20, subtle differences in the text indicate an effort to whitewash Hezekiah's character in Isa 36–39 in order to present him as a pure figure who places his trust entirely in the LORD.

36.1–37.38: Confrontation story concerning the LORD's defeat of Sennacherib at Jerusalem. This narrative presents an account of the siege of Jerusalem by the Assyrian King Sennacherib in 701 BCE. King Hezekiah allied with Babylon and assembled a coalition to revolt against Assyria following the death of Sargon II in 705 BCE. Sargon's successor, Sennacherib, attacked western Judah in 701 BCE. As Hezekiah's allies quickly submitted to Assyria, Hezekiah found himself alone against the Assyrians. Sennacherib's records indicate that he concentrated his attack in southwestern Judah along the border with Philistia, that he devastated the land of Judah, that he besieged Jerusalem, and that he ultimately forced Hezekiah to submit, taking away captives, a great deal of booty, and even Hezekiah's own daughters. Hezekiah nevertheless retained his throne. Sennacherib was assassinated by his own sons in 681 BCE. Most interpreters maintain that chs 36–37 are an idealized account of the siege designed to celebrate the LORD's victory over Sennacherib as the Assyrian empire began to decline in the seventh century BCE. 36.1: The fourteenth year, 701 BCE, the year Sennacherib invaded western Asia. The narrative of Hezekiah's initial capitulation to Sennacherib in 2 Kings 18.14–16 does not appear here. 2–22: The Assyrian Rabshakeh, "Cup-bearer" or "Chief Steward" of the Assyrian king, presents the terms of surrender to Hezekiah and the besieged defenders of Jerusalem. 2: Lachish, the major royal city in southwestern Judah. Excavations indicate that it was conquered by the Assyrians, who forced Jewish prisoners of war to build a ramp up the side of the city's fortifications. A pit with 1,500 human skeletons on the site indicates the extent of the Judean casualties. Wall reliefs at Sennacherib's palace in Nineveh portray the defeat of Lachish in order to impress visitors with his power. Conduit of the upper pool, the same location where Isaiah confronted Ahaz (see 7.3–9n.). 3: The Judean officers negotiate with the Rabshakeh on behalf of Hezekiah. Shebna, here described as the secretary, appears as the King's chief administrator "over the house" in 22.15–25. Shebna has now been replaced by Eliakim. 4–10: The Rabshakeh's speech is meant to intimidate the Judean defenders and weaken their morale. At this point, the Egyptians, with whom Hezekiah had allied, had already been turned back by the king of Assyria: On what do you base this confidence of yours? ⁵ Do you think that mere words are strategy and power for war? On whom do you now rely, that you have rebelled against me? ⁶ See, you are relying on Egypt, that broken reed of a staff, which will pierce the hand of anyone who leans on it. Such is Pharaoh king of Egypt to all who rely on him. ⁷ But if you say to me, ‘We rely on the LORD our God,’ is it not he whose high places and altars Hezekiah has removed, saying to Judah and to Jerusalem, ‘You shall worship before this altar’? ⁸ Come now, make a wager with my master the king of Assyria: I will give you two thousand horses, if you are able on your part to set riders on them. ⁹ How then can you repulse a single captain among the least of my master’s servants, when you rely on Egypt for chariots and for horsemen? ¹⁰ Moreover, is it without the LORD that I have come up against this land to destroy it? The LORD said to me, Go up against this land, and destroy it.”

¹¹ Then Eliakim, Shebna, and Joah said to the Rabshakeh, “Please speak to your servants in Aramaic, for we understand it; do not speak to us in the language of Judah within the hearing of the people who are on the wall.” ¹² But the Rabshakeh said, “Has my master sent me to speak these words to your master and to you, and not to the people sitting on the wall, who are doomed with you to eat their own dung and drink their own urine?”

to deliver you. ¹⁵ Do not let Hezekiah make you rely on the LORD by saying, The LORD will surely deliver us; this city will not be given into the hand of the king of Assyria.’ ¹⁶ Do not listen to Hezekiah; for thus says the king of Assyria: ‘Make your peace with me and come out to me; then every one of you will eat from your own vine and your own fig tree and drink water from your own cistern, ¹⁷ until I come and take you away to a land like your own land, a land of grain and wine, a land of bread and vineyards. ¹⁸ Do not let Hezekiah mislead you by saying, The LORD will save us. Has any of the gods of the nations saved their land out of the hand of the king of Assyria? ¹⁹ Where are the gods of Hamath and Arpad? Where are the gods of Sepharvaim? Have they delivered Samaria out of my hand? ²⁰ Who among all the gods of these countries have saved their countries out of my hand, that the LORD should save Jerusalem out of my hand?’”

²¹ But they were silent and answered him not a word, for the king’s command was, “Do not answer him.” ²² Then Eliakim son of Hilkiah, who was in charge of the palace, and Shebna the secretary, and Joah son of Asaph, the recorder, came to Hezekiah with their clothes torn, and told him the words of the Rabshakeh.

37 When King Hezekiah heard it, he tore his clothes, covered himself with sackcloth, and went into the house of the LORD. ² And he sent Eliakim, who was in charge of the palace, and Shebna the secretary, and the senior priests, covered with sackcloth, to the prophet Isaiah son of Amoz. ³ They said to him, “Thus says Hezekiah, This day is a day of distress, of rebuke, and

Assyrians. The Rabshakeh’s boastful speech may have represented Assyrian views but has drawn on 10.8–11,13–14. 6: Cf. the sayings on the Egyptian alliance (18.1–19.15; 30.1–7; 31.1–3). 7: On Hezekiah’s removal of the high places, see 2 Kings 18.3–6. 10: Appeal to the anger of the national deity reflects Isaiah’s sayings about Assyria as the LORD’s agent for the punishment of Israel. 11: Aramaic is the language of diplomacy from the late Neo-Assyrian period onward. The language of Judah is Hebrew. 12–20: The Rabshakeh speaks in Hebrew in order to address the Judean troops directly and appeal for their surrender. His description of their circumstances reveals the desperate conditions in a besieged city (cf. 2 Kings 6.24–32). Deportation of soldiers and skilled persons from subjugated lands was a standard Assyrian practice. 19: Hamath and Arpad were cities conquered by the Assyrians (see 10.9n.). Samaria, the capital of northern Israel conquered by the Assyrians in 722 BCE (2 Kings 17). Sepharvaim, located in Aram between Hamath and Damascus, was a city under Assyrian control to which northern Israelites were deported (2 Kings 17.24,31). 37.1–7: The delegation to Isaiah recalls the consultation of prophets by earlier and later kings (1 Kings 22.5–28; 2 Kings 1.9–17; 3.11–17; 22.11–14; Jer 21.1–4). The prophet’s

⁵ When the servants of King Hezekiah came to Isaiah, ⁶ Isaiah said to them, “Say to your master, ‘Thus says the LORD: Do not be afraid because of the words that you have heard, with which the servants of the king of Assyria have reviled me. ⁷ I myself will put a spirit in him, so that he shall hear a rumor, and return to his own land; I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land.’”

⁸ The Rabshakeh returned, and found the king of Assyria fighting against Libnah; for he had heard that the king had left Lachish. ⁹ Now the king^a heard concerning King Tirhakah of Ethiopia,^b “He has set out to fight against you.” When he heard it, he sent messengers to Hezekiah, saying, ¹⁰ “Thus shall you speak to King Hezekiah of Judah: Do not let your God on whom you rely deceive you by promising that Jerusalem will not be given into the hand of the king of Assyria. ¹¹ See, you have heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands, destroying them utterly. Shall you be delivered? ¹² Have the gods of the nations delivered them, the nations that my predecessors destroyed, Gozan, Haran, Rezep, and the people of Eden who were in Telassar? ¹³ Where is the king of Hamath, the king of Arpad, the king of the city of Sepharvaim, the king of Hena, or the king of Ivvah?”

¹⁴ Hezekiah received the letter from the hand of the messengers and read it; then Hezekiah went up to the house of the LORD and spread it before the LORD. ¹⁵ And Hezekiah prayed to the LORD, saying: ¹⁶ “O LORD of hosts, God of Israel, who are enthroned above the cherubim, you are God, you alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth; you have made heaven and earth. ¹⁷ Incline your ear, O LORD, and hear; open your eyes, O LORD, and see; hear all the words of Sennacherib, which he has sent to mock the living God. ¹⁸ Truly, O LORD, the kings of Assyria have laid waste all the nations and their lands, ¹⁹ and have hurled their gods into the fire, though they were no gods, but the work of human hands—wood and stone—and so they were destroyed. ²⁰ So now, O LORD our God, save us from his hand, so that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that you alone are the LORD.”

²¹ Then Isaiah son of Amoz sent to Hezekiah, saying: “Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: Because you have prayed to me concerning King Sennacherib of Assyria, ²² this is the word that the LORD has spoken concerning him:

She despises you, she scorns you—

The LORD repeats claims of greatness made by Sennacherib to illustrate his arrogance (cf. 2.10–21). Mesopotamian the second year what springs from that;

then in the third year sow, reap, plant vineyards, and eat their fruit. ³¹ The surviving remnant of the house of Judah shall again take root downward, and bear fruit upward; ³² for from Jerusalem a remnant shall go out, and from Mount Zion a band of survivors. The zeal of the LORD of hosts will do this.

same he shall return; he shall not come into this city, says the LORD. ³⁵ For I will defend this city to save it, for my own sake and for the sake of my servant David.”

and struck down one hundred eighty-five thousand in the camp of the Assyrians;
when morning dawned, they were all dead bodies. ³⁷ Then King Sennacherib of Assyria

he was worshiping in the house of his god killed him with the sword, and they escaped into the land of Ararat. His son Esar-haddon succeeded him.

38 In those days Hezekiah became sick and was at the point of death. The prophet Isaiah son of Amoz came to him, and said to him, “Thus says the LORD: Set your house in order, for you shall die; you shall not recover.” ² Then Hezekiah turned his face to the wall, and prayed to the LORD:

Sennacherib was assassinated by his own sons in 681 BCE as part of a coup. The coup was put down, and another son, Esarhaddon, succeeded his father. 38: The name Nisroch is elsewhere unattested. Ararat is Armenia.

The LORD’s promise to deliver Hezekiah and his city out of the hand of the king of Assyria indicates that this account is meant to be read with chs 36–37. 4–8: The miraculous reversal of ten steps on the sundial of Ahaz both confirms the LORD’s oracle and reminds the reader of Hezekiah’s contrasting portrayal with that of Ahaz in 7:1–9:6. 5: Fifteen years, calculated on the basis of 2 Kings 18.2,13. 9–22: A song of thanksgiving attributed to Hezekiah (cf. ²¹Now Isaiah had said, “Let them take a lump of figs, and apply it to the boil, so that he may recover.” ²²Hezekiah also had said, “What is the sign that I shall go up to the house of the LORD?”

39 At that time King Merodach-baladan son of Baladan of Babylon sent envoys with letters and a present to Hezekiah, for he heard that he had been sick and had recovered. ²Hezekiah welcomed them; he showed them his treasure house, the silver, the gold, the spices, the precious oil, his whole armory, all that was found in his storehouses. There was nothing in his house or in all his realm that Hezekiah did not show them. ³Then the prophet Isaiah came to King Hezekiah and said to him, “What did these men say? From where did they come to you?” Hezekiah answered, “They have come to me from a far country, from Babylon.” ⁴He said, “What have they seen in your house?” Hezekiah answered, “They have seen all that is in my house; there is nothing in my storehouses that I did not show them.”

⁵Then Isaiah said to Hezekiah, “Hear the word of the LORD of hosts: ⁶Days are coming when all that is in your house, and that which your ancestors have stored up until this day, shall be carried to Babylon; nothing shall be left, says the LORD. ⁷Some of your own sons who are born to you shall be taken away; they shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon.” ⁸Then Hezekiah said to Isaiah, “The word of the LORD that you have spoken is good.” For he thought, “There will be peace and security in my days.”

40 Comfort, O comfort my people, says your God.

²Speak tenderly to Jerusalem, and cry to her that she has served her term, that her penalty is paid, that she has received from the LORD’s hand double for all her sins.

health. 17–20: Thanksgiving for restoration to health. The Pit, a poetic synonym for Sheol. 21–22: Isaiah acts as a healer in prescribing a compress for Hezekiah’s boil; cf. 2 Kings 20.8.

39.1–8: Narrative concerning Isaiah’s condemnation of Hezekiah for allying with Merodach-baladan of Babylon. Hezekiah entered into an alliance with Prince Merodach-baladan (Marduk-apal-iddina) of Babylon to mount a revolt against Assyria in 705–701 BCE. Babylon was also an Assyrian vassal at this time. The strategy was to hit Assyria simultaneously from both east and west, and thereby force Sennacherib to divide his forces, but it failed when Hezekiah was forced to capitulate in 701 BCE. Merodach-baladan was never caught, although Sennacherib was still hunting him as late as 689 BCE. A parallel narrative appears in 2 Kings 20.12–19. 1–2: The phrase at that time coordinates the narrative with both chs 36–37 and 38. The display of wealth and provisions demonstrates to Merodach-baladan’s envoys that Hezekiah is prepared for revolt. 3–8: Isaiah, based on his adherence to Davidic/Zion theology, objects to the alliance on the grounds that the LORD will protect Jerusalem and the king. Isaiah’s statements that Hezekiah’s wealth and sons will be carried off to Babylon corresponds to Sennacherib’s account of the siege. In the context of the book of Isaiah, it foreshadows the Babylonian exile presupposed from ch 40 on. Hezekiah’s concluding question reemphasizes his piety. In 2 Kings 20.19, the formulation of the question highlights his self-interest.

40.1–54.17: Prophetic instruction that the LORD maintains covenant and restores Zion. Chapter 40 begins the portion of the book (chs 40–55) attributed to an anonymous prophet of the latter years of the Babylonian exile when King Cyrus of Persia conquered Babylonia and decreed that Jews could return to their homeland (ca. 545–539 BCE). Although these chapters are clearly written long after the time of the eighth-century prophet Isaiah, they nevertheless share his basic theological perspective rooted in the Zion/Davidic tradition, i.e., that the LORD protects Zion, although the Davidic covenant is now applied to the people rather than to the Davidic king (55.3). These chapters therefore function within the book to describe the realization of the LORD’s plans to restore Zion as articulated throughout chs 1–33.

40.1–11: Renewed prophetic commission to announce the LORD’s restoration of Zion. This segment renews the prophet’s commission to speak (cf. ch 6) and announces that the time of the restoration is at hand. 1–2: A message of comfort to Jerusalem. Double restitution of stolen property is the penalty in the case of theft (Ex 22.7). 3–5: The voices are those of the attendants in the heavenly court of the LORD (cf. 1 Kings 22.19–23; Isa 6; Ps 82). The passage evokes the tradition of the journey through the wilderness in which the people traveled along the King's Highway in Transjordan on their way to the land of Israel (Num 20.17; 21.22; Deut 2.8). The glory of the LORD refers to the divine presence, often symbolized by a cloud of smoke and flickering flame, such as was seen at Sinai, upon the wilderness Tabernacle, and in the Holy of Holies of the Temple (see Ex 19.16; 40.34–38; 1 Kings 8.10–13). 6–8: The prophet's message emphasizes the permanence of God's word. Just as Isaiah said that the LORD would restore Jerusalem (e.g., 2.1–4; 31.4–5; 33.20), now it comes to pass (cf. 55.10–11). 9–11: Zion or Jerusalem functions as the herald of the LORD to announce the news of God's return and Zion's restoration. Using the typical image of Mesopotamian and Judean kings, the LORD appears as a shepherd who cares for the flock (cf. 1 Sam 16.11,19; 17.1,20,34–37).

40.12–31: The LORD is the master of creation. This is the first of a series of sections (40.12–31; 41.1–42.13; 42.14–44.23) that are designed to demonstrate that the LORD is indeed acting to restore Zion. The first focuses on the LORD's role as the creator. 12–14: The argumentative style of the passage employs rhetorical questions to make its basic points. 15–17: Lebanon's fuel (see 2.13n) refers to its tall trees that, like the animals of its forests, are insufficient to provide a suitable sacrifice before the LORD. 18–20: The beginning of this prophet's polemic

The mention of Abraham recalls the origins of Israel's covenant with the LORD (Gen 15). In exilic texts the people of Israel are often referred to as Jacob, whose story of exile and return (Gen 28–32) is similar to that of the exiles in Babylon. Based on the perspective of the Zion/Davidic covenant tradition, the LORD has chosen Israel and will uphold the covenant to protect the nation. 10: The reassurance formula do not fear supports the assertions of the LORD. 11–17: The LORD reiterates the reassurance theme in an effort to convince the audience of the LORD's absolute fidelity to the divine promise. 14: The LORD as Redeemer (43.14; 44.6; 47.4; see Ex 6.6; 15.13) is the first of many echoes of the Exodus tradition in these chapters. 15–16: A threshing sledge was employed to crush grain stalks so that the chaff could be removed from the grain. 17–20: As creator, the LORD is able to provide for the needs of the poor as in the time of the wilderness wandering (Ex 17.1–7; Num 20.2–13; Pss 78.15–16; 105.41). 21–29: The passage returns to the courtroom imagery (cf. vv. 1–5) in which the LORD demands counterarguments from the gods of the nations. The LORD presumes that they cannot explain the past or the future and therefore do not have the capacity to act like the LORD, much less to challenge the LORD's power to act in the human world. 25: One from the north and from the east, the LORD once again claims to have brought a deliverer, i.e., Cyrus (41.2; 44.28; 45.1), which demonstrates once again the LORD's capacity to act in human affairs. Having claimed to have announced these events long ago, the LORD observes that there is no one to answer. 42.1–4: The first of the four so-called "servant songs" of Isaiah (see 49.1–6; 50.4–11; 52.13–53.12). That the former things have come to pass, i.e., those things foretold earlier in the book of Isaiah, serves as an argument that the things now declared will also happen. 10–13: A hymn of praise for the LORD closes the section devoted to demonstrating the LORD’s mastery of human events. Now creation itself rejoices like worshipers in the Temple (cf. Pss 96; 98). Kedar is located in the Arabian desert (see 21.16), and Sela is located in Edom.

42.14–44.23: The LORD is the redeemer of Israel. The third contention in the series is that the LORD redeems Israel. Insofar as Israel had suffered punishment and exile at the hands of the Assyrians and the Babylonians, acting as agents of the LORD, such a contention is designed to answer claims that the LORD is an enemy to Israel or that the LORD is powerless to redeem Israel. 42.14–17: The LORD’s silence and inaction during the period of Israel’s punishment has come to an end. The image of a woman in childbirth (cf. 13.8; 26.1–18) indicates that the time for action has come. The passage evokes the wilderness tradition (see 40.3–5n.) to portray the LORD’s guidance of Israel. The blind are now given light (cf. 6.9–10; 8.23). 18–25: The passage addresses Israel as the blind and the deaf, a recurrent image (6.9–10; 29.9,18; 32.3; 35.5; 42.16; 43.8) denoting spiritual imperception and obtuseness. In fact, however, the LORD has controlled the fate of the nation all along. Now the time has come for Israel to recognize the LORD as their redeemer. Although the LORD had revealed divine “torah” (“teaching,” v. 21) to the people, they were punished for having failed to observe the LORD’s instruction, improperly translated observe them;

his ears are open, but he does not hear.
²¹ The LORD was pleased, for the sake of his
righteousness,
to magnify his teaching and make it glorious.

²² But this is a people robbed and plundered,
all of them are trapped in holes and hidden in prisons;
they have become a prey with no one to rescue,
a spoil with no one to say, “Restore!”

²³ Who among you will give heed to this,
who will attend and listen for the time to come?

²⁴ Who gave up Jacob to the spoiler, and Israel to the robbers?

Was it not the LORD, against whom we have sinned,
in whose ways they would not walk,
and whose law they would not obey?

²⁵ So he poured upon him the heat of his anger
and the fury of war;
it set him on fire all around, but he did not understand;
it burned him, but he did not take it to heart.

43 But now thus says the LORD,
he who created you, O Jacob,
he who formed you, O Israel:
Do not fear, for I have redeemed you;
I have called you by name, you are mine.

² When you pass through the waters, I will be with you;

and through the rivers, they shall not overwhelm you;
when you walk through fire you shall not be burned,
and the flame shall not consume you.

³ For I am the LORD your God, the Holy One of Israel, your Savior.
I give Egypt as your ransom, Ethiopia^b and Seba in exchange for
you.

⁴ Because you are precious in my sight,
and honored, and I love you,
I give people in return for you, nations in exchange for your life.

⁵ Do not fear, for I am with you;
I will bring your offspring from the east,

and from the west I will gather you;
⁶ I will say to the north, “Give them up,” and to the south, “Do not withhold;
bring my sons from far away and my daughters from the end of the earth—

⁷ everyone who is called by my name, whom I created for my glory, whom I formed and made.”

⁸ Bring forth the people who are blind, yet have eyes,
who are deaf, yet have ears!

⁹ Let all the nations gather together, and let the peoples assemble.
Who among them declared this,
and foretold to us the former things?
Let them bring their witnesses to justify
them,
and let them hear and say, “It is true.”

power. 14–15: Redeemer and Holy One are frequent designations for the LORD in this section of Isaiah (41.14; 47.4; 48.17; 49.7; 54.5). Chaldea, a term for the Neo-Babylonian empire of Nebuchadnezzar. 16–21: The LORD is identified as the one who led Israel through the sea at the time of the Exodus (Ex 14–15), the former things of v. 18 which provide the foundation for understanding the new thing, i.e., the exodus from Babylon. Once again, the LORD provides a highway in the wilderness for the people to return home (11.15–16; 27.12–13; 35.1–10; 40.3–5). Water in the wilderness recalls the wilderness tradition (Ex 15.22–27; 17.17; Num 20.2–13). 22–28: The LORD justifies past punishment of Israel, charging that the people did not honor the LORD appropriately with sacrifices, but sinned instead. Nevertheless, the LORD will not remember those sins now that the punishment is over. 27: First ancestor, Jacob (cf. Hos 12.2–4). Interpreters transgressed, translation and meaning are uncertain; perhaps it is a denunciation of optimistic prophets during the time of the monarchy who led the people astray.

44 But now hear, O Jacob my servant,
Israel whom I have chosen!

² Thus says the LORD who made you, who formed you in the womb and will help you:

Do not fear, O Jacob my servant,
Jeshurun whom I have chosen.

³ For I will pour water on the thirsty land, and streams on the dry ground;
I will pour my spirit upon your descendants,
and my blessing on your offspring.

⁴ They shall spring up like a green tamarisk, like willows by flowing streams.

⁵ This one will say, "I am the LORD's," another will be called by the name of Jacob,
yet another will write on the hand, "The LORD's,"
and adopt the name of Israel.

⁶ Thus says the LORD, the King of Israel, and his Redeemer, the LORD of hosts:
I am the first and I am the last;
besides me there is no god.

⁷ Who is like me? Let them proclaim it, let them declare and set it forth before
me.

Who has announced from of old the things to come?^a

Let them tell us^b what is yet to be.

⁸ Do not fear, or be afraid; have I not told you from of old and declared it?

You are my witnesses!
Is there any god besides me?
There is no other rock; I know not one.

⁹ All who make idols are nothing, and the things they delight in do not profit; their witnesses neither see nor know. And so they will be put to shame. ¹⁰ Who would fashion a god or cast an image that can do no good?

¹¹ Look, all its devotees shall be put to shame;

the artisans too are merely human. Let them all assemble, let them stand up; they shall be terrified, they shall all be put to shame.

¹² The ironsmith fashions it^c and works it over the coals, shaping it with hammers, and forging it with his strong arm; he becomes hungry and his strength fails, he drinks no water and is faint. ¹³ The carpenter stretches a line, marks it out with a stylus, fashions it with planes, and marks it with a compass; he makes it in human form, with human beauty, to be set up in a shrine. ¹⁴ He cuts down cedars or chooses a holm tree or an oak and lets it grow strong among the trees of the forest. He plants a cedar and the rain nourishes it. ¹⁵ Then it can be used as fuel. Part of it he takes and warms himself; he kindles a fire and bakes bread. Then he makes a god and worships it, makes it a carved image and bows down before it. ¹⁶ Half of it he burns in the fire; over this half he roasts meat, eats it and is satisfied. He also warms himself and says, "Ah, I am warm, I can feel the fire!"
¹⁷ The rest of it he makes into a god, his idol, bows down to it and worships it; he prays to it and says, "Save me, for you are my god!"

¹⁸ They do not know, nor do they comprehend; for their eyes are shut, so that they cannot see, and their minds as well, so that they cannot understand. ¹⁹ No one considers, nor is there knowledge or discernment to say, "Half of it I burned in the fire; I also baked bread on its coals, I roasted meat and have eaten. Now shall I make the rest of it an abomination?
Shall I fall down before a block of wood?"

²⁰ He feeds on ashes; a deluded mind has led him astray, and he cannot save himself or say,
"Is not this thing in my right hand a fraud?"

42.18–20). 21–22: Conclusion of the oracle in vv. 6–8. 23: Hymnic conclusion in which all creation celebrates the redemption of Israel.

44.24–48.22: The LORD will use Cyrus for the restoration of Zion. This lengthy unit constitutes the fourth contention in the series. The claim that the LORD uses Cyrus to restore Zion is particularly controversial because the Persian king is a foreign monarch who displaces the role traditionally assigned to the Davidic king as anointed one and Temple builder. Nevertheless, Cyrus’s conquest of Babylon in 539 BCE opened the way for his declaration that exiled Jews could return to their homeland to rebuild the Temple (2 Chr 36.22–23; Ezra 1.1–4). Since Cyrus does not restore Davidic kingship, the prophet determines that the LORD has declared Cyrus to be the righteous king of Isaian tradition (9.1–7; 11.1–16; 32.1–8).

44.24–48.5: The LORD’s announcement concerning Cyrus. The LORD announces the plan to use Cyrus as the redeemer of Zion. 44.24–28: Reiterations of the divine qualities and roles previously articulated. 25: Omens . . . diviners, Babylonian religion was renowned for its use of techniques for determining the future. 28: Shepherd, a common metaphor for ruler (56.11; Jer 23.4). Cyrus II (558–530 BCE), founder of the Persian Empire, is identified with the LORD’s long established plans, including the rebuilding of Jerusalem and the Temple, a role formerly accomplished by David and Solomon. 45.1–7: Cyrus is commissioned to act as the LORD’s agent for restoration, and is identified as the LORD’s messiah or anointed one to signify that the Persian king now occupies the role once held by the Davidic kings. The imagery presupposes elements of the Babylonian Akitu or New Year Festival in which the Babylonian king’s right to rule is renewed for the coming year. The king grasps the hand of Marduk, the god of Babylon, and is granted the tablets of destiny as part of his authorization to rule. Cyrus was authorized to serve as king of Babylon when he participated in the Akitu festival in 539 BCE. The LORD here takes the God of Israel, who call you by your name.

⁴For the sake of my servant Jacob, and Israel my chosen, I call you by your name, I surname you, though you do not know me.
⁵I am the LORD, and there is no other; besides me there is no god. I arm you, though you do not know me, ⁶so that they may know, from the rising of the sun and from the west, that there is no one besides me; I am the LORD, and there is no other.
⁷I form light and create darkness, I make weal and create woe; I the LORD do all these things.
⁸Shower, O heavens, from above, and let the skies rain down righteousness; let the earth open, that salvation may spring up,^a and let it cause righteousness to sprout up also; I the LORD have created it.
⁹Woe to you who strive with your Maker, earthen vessels with the potter!^b Does the clay say to the one who fashions it, “What are you making?” or “Your work has no handles?”
¹⁰Woe to anyone who says to a father, “What are you begetting?” or to a woman, “With what are you in labor?”
¹¹Thus says the LORD, the Holy One of Israel, and its Maker: Will you question me^c about my children, or command me concerning the work of my hands?
¹²I made the earth,

and created humankind upon it; it was my hands that stretched out the heavens, and I commanded all their host.
¹³I have aroused Cyrus^d in righteousness, and I will make all his paths straight; he shall build my city and set my exiles free, not for price or reward, says the LORD of hosts.
¹⁴Thus says the LORD: The wealth of Egypt and the merchandise of Ethiopia,^e and the Sabceans, tall of stature, shall come over to you and be yours, they shall follow you; they shall come over in chains and bow down to you. They will make supplication to you, saying, “God is with you alone, and there is no other; there is no god besides him.”
¹⁵Truly, you are a God who hides himself, O God of Israel, the Savior.
¹⁶All of them are put to shame and confounded, the makers of idols go in confusion together.
¹⁷But Israel is saved by the LORD with everlasting salvation; you shall not be put to shame or confounded to all eternity.

on the role of Marduk, is declared to be the only God, and authorizes Cyrus to rule. 8: The heavens celebrate Cyrus’s role with showers and a hymn of praise.

45.9–48.19: Trial scene concerning the LORD’s use of Cyrus as redeemer. The contention that the LORD had chosen Cyrus as king was no doubt controversial. Once again, the LORD appears in court to support such claims. 45.9–19: An introductory court speech disputes any challenge to the LORD’s decision. For the metaphor of the potter and the clay see 29.16; Jer 18.1–6. 14: Egypt, Ethiopia, and Seba. In contrast to 43.3 where these nations are given to Cyrus as a ransom, here their wealth will come to Israel when they are conquered by Cyrus. 20–25:

46.1–47.15: Presentation of evidence concerning the LORD’s power. Two major sections (46.1–13 and 47.1–15) demonstrate the powerlessness of Babylon’s gods before the LORD. 46.1–4: This section draws on the imagery of the Babylonian Akitu or New Year festival, when the gods are paraded through the streets of Babylon in procession to the temple of Marduk, city god of Babylon, at the center of the city. Bel and Nebo appear as burdens to those who carry them through the streets rather than as powerful gods who can act on behalf of their people. Bel, meaning “lord,” is a title of Marduk, and Nebo is the city god of Borsippa and son of Marduk. In contrast to their weakness, the LORD asserts the capacity to carry Israel as well as to redeem. 5–7: A satirical

My glory I will not give to another.
- ¹² Listen to me, O Jacob, and Israel, whom I called:
I am He; I am the first,
and I am the last.
- ¹³ My hand laid the foundation of the
earth,
and my right hand spread out the heavens;
when I summon them,
they stand at attention.
- ¹⁴ Assemble, all of you, and hear!
Who among them has declared these things?
The LORD loves him;
he shall perform his purpose on Babylon,
and his arm shall be against the Chaldeans.
- ¹⁵ I, even I, have spoken and called him,
I have brought him, and he will prosper in his way.
- ¹⁶ Draw near to me, hear this!
From the beginning I have not spoken in secret,
from the time it came to be I have been there.
And now the Lord GOD has sent me and his spirit.
- ¹⁷ Thus says the LORD,
your Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel: I am the LORD your God, who teaches you for your own good,
who leads you in the way you should go.
- ¹⁸ O that you had paid attention to my commandments!
Then your prosperity would have been
like a river,
and your success like the waves of the
sea;
¹⁹ your offspring would have been like the sand,
and your descendants like its grains;
their name would never be cut off or destroyed from before me.
- ²⁰ Go out from Babylon, flee from Chaldea, declare this with a shout of joy,
proclaim it,
send it forth to the end of the earth;
say, "The LORD has redeemed his servant Jacob!"
- ²¹ They did not thirst when he led them through the deserts;
he made water flow for them from the rock;
he split open the rock and the water gushed out.
- ²² "There is no peace," says the LORD, "for the wicked."
- 49 Listen to me, O coastlands,

(e.g., 36.11,21–23). The imagery of refined silver is drawn from 1.24–25. 12–16: First and last; see also 41.4; 43.10; 44.6. 14: Chaldeans, the Neo-Babylonian kingdom. 17–19: The LORD reiterates the terms of the ancestral covenant with Abraham (Gen 15.5; 17.1–8; 22.16–18) and with Jacob (Gen 28.13–14; 35.9–15) to emphasize the cost to Israel of its failure to observe the LORD's commandments. 20–22: The concluding hymn calls upon the exiles to flee from Babylon and Chaldea and to journey through the wilderness as they make their way home. The theme of water in the wilderness (Ex 17.1–7; Num 20.2–13) demonstrates the LORD's sustenance on this new exodus from Babylon. 22: See also 57.21.

49.1–54.17: The LORD is restoring Zion. The fifth and concluding contention in the series is the prophet's announcement that the LORD is restoring Zion. This lengthy unit focuses especially on the role of the servant figure, earlier identified as Israel, in the divine plan.

49.1–13: Announcement concerning the role of the servant. The servant is defined both in relation to the restoration of Israel and as a light to the nations. 1–6: The second of the "servant songs" (see 42.1n.) presents the servant as an individual figure who is also identified as Israel. He is called from the womb much like Jeremiah he made me a polished arrow, in his quiver he hid me away.

³ And he said to me, “You are my servant, Israel, in whom I will be glorified.”
⁴ But I said, “I have labored in vain, I have spent my strength for nothing and vanity;
 yet surely my cause is with the LORD, and my reward with my God.”
⁵ And now the LORD says, who formed me in the womb to be his servant,
 to bring Jacob back to him, and that Israel might be gathered to
 him,
 for I am honored in the sight of the LORD, and my God has become my strength—⁶ he says,
 “It is too light a thing that you should be my servant
 to raise up the tribes of Jacob and to restore the survivors of Israel; I will give you as a light to the nations, that my salvation may reach to the end of the earth.”
⁷ Thus says the LORD,
 the Redeemer of Israel and his Holy
 One,
 to one deeply despised, abhorred by the
 nations,
 the slave of rulers, “Kings shall see and stand up, princes, and they shall prostrate themselves,
 because of the LORD, who is faithful, the Holy One of Israel, who has chosen
 you.”

⁸ Thus says the LORD:

(Jer 1.5). 3: The servant is here specifically identified as Israel, although his task in v. 5 is to bring Israel/Jacob to the LORD. 6: A light to the nations, see 42.5–9n. 7–12: An oracle of restoration. 7: The servant’s restoration demonstrates the sovereignty of the LORD in the world; cf. 52.13–15. 8–12: Covenant to the people, here the role of the servant in relation to the people Israel who will be released from prison to return through the wilderness to their homeland in a second exodus (see also 40.3–5; 41.17–20; 43.19; 48.20–22). 12: Syene, Aswan in Upper (southern) Egypt at the first cataract of the Nile, where a Jewish settlement existed prior to the Persian conquest of Egypt in 525 BCE. 13: The concluding hymn portrays the celebration of all creation at the restoration of Israel (cf. 44.23; 45.8).

49.14–52.12: The LORD’s announcement of the restoration of Zion. The LORD attempts to convince Israel that despite her experience of exile the LORD will now return the nation to Zion. 49.14–18: Many Jews in Babylonian and your devastated land—surely now you will be too crowded for your inhabitants,

and those who swallowed you up will be far away.

²⁰ The children born in the time of your bereavement
will yet say in your hearing:

“The place is too crowded for me;
make room for me to settle.”

²¹ Then you will say in your heart, “Who has borne me these?”

I was bereaved and barren, exiled and put away—
so who has reared these?

I was left all alone—
where then have these come from?”

²² Thus says the Lord GOD:
I will soon lift up my hand to the
nations,
and raise my signal to the peoples;

and they shall bring your sons in their

and your daughters shall be carried on their shoulders.

²³ Kings shall be your foster fathers, and their queens your nursing mothers.

With their faces to the ground they shall bow down to you,
and lick the dust of your feet.

Then you will know that I am the LORD;
those who wait for me shall not be put to shame.

²⁴ Can the prey be taken from the mighty,
or the captives of a tyrant^b be rescued?

²⁵ But thus says the LORD:
Even the captives of the mighty shall be taken,
and the prey of the tyrant be rescued;
for I will contend with those who contend
with you,
and I will save your children.

and they shall be drunk with their own blood as with wine.

Then all flesh shall know that I am the LORD your Savior, exile would have questioned the power of the LORD to protect the nation. In this section Zion is personified as a woman (49.14; 50.1; 51.17–52.2; 54.1–14; see 1.8n.). The LORD similarly is compared to a mother with her child and claims not to have forgotten or abandoned the people (cf. 66.13). 18: This verse is echoed and developed in Bar 5.5–9. 22–23: The raised hand of the LORD reverses the hand of judgment extended against Israel (9.7–10.4) and recalls the banner that signals restoration (11.1–16). 24–26: The rhetorical questions function here as assertions of divine power insofar as the LORD can make these things happen. 50.1–11: The language of the courtroom appears once again as the LORD explains the divine role in Israel's experience. 1–3: Rhetorical questions are used to make the LORD's case. Zion is portrayed as a mother, who was neither divorced nor sold to creditors to pay the LORD's bill. Instead, the LORD contends that she was sold for the sins of the nation. Nevertheless, the LORD and for your transgressions your asserts divine power as creator of the universe to redeem. 4–9: The third servant song (see 42.1n.) appears in vv. 4–11, although vv. 10–11 presuppose a different speaker. 4: The servant links himself with Isaiah's disciples (see 8.16n.). 6: Obedience to God entailed suffering (cf. 6.9–10, which calls for the suffering of the people as part of the divine plan). The persecution of the servant recalls that of Jeremiah (Jer 11.9; 20.1–2; 26.7–24). 10–11: The LORD maintains that those who refuse to fear the LORD and honor the servant kindle the fire of their own suffering (cf. 1.29–31). 51.1–52.12: Proof for the restoration for Zion. 51.1–8: The LORD addresses the righteous who seek the LORD. The argument proceeds from the basis of the LORD's promises to make Abraham and Sarah into a great nation by which all nations will be blessed (Gen 12.2–3; cf. Gen 15.1–6, 17–21; 17.15–22; 22.15–18). To fulfill the ancestral promise, the LORD will comfort and restore Zion. Israel will then emerge as a basis for sending the LORD's teaching (Heb "torah") and justice to the entire world (cf. 2.2–4). Even if the world changes, the promises of the LORD never change. 9–11: The prophet calls upon the arm of the LORD to act (cf. Ps 44.23) and recounts past actions. Rahab is a mythological sea monster who is defeated by God before creation (Ps 89.10; Job 26.12; cf. Ps 74.12–17; Isa 27.1). Again, the Exodus from Egypt and the crossing of the sea illustrate the power of the LORD to redeem Israel (Ex 14–15; cf. Isa 11.15–16; 27.12–13). 12–16: Israel should not fear human opponents when the LORD, creator of heaven and earth, acts on their behalf. 14: The Pit, Sheol, the underworld (cf. 14.9–11). 17–23: The prophet addresses Jerusalem, here portrayed as a woman who has suffered at the hands of the LORD. The metaphorical cup of divine wrath appears elsewhere (e.g., Jer 25.15–29; Hab 2.15–16). As a result of the devastation, Jerusalem’s children lie dead leaving no one to help her. suffering and declares that the cup of divine wrath will now be drunk by her oppressors. 52.1–6: The imagery of restoration reverses many of the miseries described in Lamentations (cf. Lam 1.9–10, 14, 17; 2.10). The prophet addresses Jerusalem as a woman once again (see 1.8n.; 37.22), and calls upon her to awake and to put on her beautiful clothing because her suffering is over. Foreign enemies will no longer enter or rape her and subject her to captivity. 3–6: The LORD explains how Israel was oppressed both by Egypt (Ex 1–15) during the Exodus and Assyria in more recent times. The LORD will therefore act to redeem the people and to put an end to the derision of the divine name among Israel’s oppressors. When the LORD acts, the people will know their God. 7–10: As in 40.9, the prophet once again describes the messenger who brings good news that the LORD is returning to Zion (cf. Isa 40.9; Nah 1.15 [Heb 2.1]). 11–12: In response to the LORD’s return to Zion, the exiles are called upon to leave Babylon and to form a holy procession bearing the Temple vessels (see Ezra 1.7–11) as they return to their homeland. Not . . . in haste, the exodus from Babylon will be different from the first Exodus; cf. Ex 12.11; 13.21–22.

52.13–53.12: Announcement of the exaltation of the servant of the LORD. The fourth and final servant song (see 42.1n.) portrays the suffering of the servant and his ultimate exaltation. Talmudic tradition identifies the servant with Moses, who suffered throughout the wilderness journey (b. Sotah 14a), and early Christian tradition identifies the servant with Jesus (Acts 8.32–35). Second Isaiah identifies the servant with Israel (49.3), although the servant's mission is to restore Israel and Jacob to the LORD (49.5). Other figures identified with the servant include the prophet Jeremiah, who was persecuted throughout his life; King Josiah, who was killed by Pharaoh Neco at Megiddo (2 Kings 23.29–30); and King Jehoiachin, who was exiled to Babylon (2 Kings 24.10–16). 52.13–15: The disfigurement and suffering of the servant, but also his exaltation elicit astonishment from foreign nations and rulers (cf. 49.7). 53.1–12: The intense suffering of the servant is defined vicariously; just as the LORD calls for Israel to be blind and deaf so that they will suffer punishment (6.9–10), so the servant now exemplifies that role. His suffering serves as a means to atone for the sins of the nation, much like a lamb

54.1–17: Restoration of the covenant between the LORD and Zion. Like other major sections of Second Isaiah, 49.1–54.17 closes with a hymn (cf. 42.13; 44.23; 48.20–22). 1–3: Zion is addressed once again as a woman (cf. 49.14; 50.1; 51.17–52.2). Much like Sarah (Gen 16.1), she is described as a barren woman. In keeping with the promises to Abraham and Sarah, Zion will soon have so many children that her home will not be able to contain them (Gen 12.2–3; cf. Gen 15.1–6, 17–21; 17.15–22; 22.15–18). 4–10: The reassurance formula (cf. 7.4; 37.6) informs Zion that her time as an abandoned woman is at an end. The passage metaphorically identifies the LORD as Zion's husband in keeping with Israelite tradition that posited a marriage relationship between the LORD and Israël (cf. Jer 2; Ezek 16; Hos 1–3; Zeph 3.14–20). 8: Hid my face, cf. 8.16–17. 9: Days of Noah, an allusion to the eternal covenant made with Noah never again to destroy the earth by flood (Gen 9.8–17), invoked to illustrate the permanence and validity of this new divine promise. 10: The covenant of peace signifies God’s lasting commitment to be present with steadfast love (Heb “hesed”); cf. 55.3; Num 25.10–13; Ezek 34.25. 11–17: The LORD addresses Jerusalem as a bride about to be decked out in jewels before her wedding. 11–13a: The new Jerusalem is adorned with precious stones and gems by builders supernaturally instructed; cf. Ezek 28.13–19. Christian apocalyptic literature draws on this imagery to describe the new Jerusalem (Rev 21.18–21). 17b: The future Jerusalem will be given to the servants of the LORD. The mention of this faithful segment of the people serves as a point of transition to the last section of the book (cf. 56.6; 63.17; 65.8–9,13–16; 66.14). Scholars are divided as to whether the second part of the book (Second Isaiah) ends with ch 54 or ch 55.

55.1–66.24: Prophetic exhortation to adhere to the LORD’s covenant. The final block of the book of Isaiah calls upon the audience of the book to adhere to the LORD as the period of restoration is at hand. Although most of this material is attributed to Third Isaiah, generally recognized as a collective designation for anonymous prophets of the early Persian period, the block is introduced by the final chapter of Second Isaiah in ch 55.

55.1–13: Exhortation to adhere to the LORD. 1–5: The prophet employs the metaphors of thirst and hunger to invite the audience of the book to partake of what the LORD has to offer. The invitation is formulated in the language of wisdom literature, which often employs the metaphor of food to portray the pursuit of wisdom (cf. Prov 9.1–6). 3–5: The prophet reiterates the Davidic covenant tradition with its promise of eternal kingship for listen, so that you may live.

 I will make with you an everlasting covenant,
 my steadfast, sure love for David.
⁴ See, I made him a witness to the peoples, a leader and commander for the peoples.
⁵ See, you shall call nations that you do not know,
 and nations that do not know you shall
 run to you,
 because of the LORD your God, the Holy
 One of Israel,
 for he has glorified you.

⁶ Seek the LORD while he may be found, call upon him while he is near;
⁷ let the wicked forsake their way, and the unrighteous their thoughts; let them return to the LORD, that he may have mercy on them,
 and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.
⁸ For my thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways my ways, says the
 LORD.
⁹ For as the heavens are higher than the
 earth,
 so are my ways higher than your ways
 and my thoughts than your thoughts.

¹⁰ For as the rain and the snow come down from heaven,
 and do not return there until they have watered the earth,
 making it bring forth and sprout, giving seed to the sower and bread to the eater,
¹¹ so shall my word be that goes out from my mouth;
 it shall not return to me empty, but it shall accomplish that which I purpose, and succeed in the thing for which I sent it.

¹² For you shall go out in joy,
 and be led back in peace;
 the mountains and the hills before you shall burst into song,
 and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands.
¹³ Instead of the thorn shall come up the cypress;
 instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle;
 and it shall be to the LORD for a memorial,
 for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off.

56 Thus says the LORD:
 Maintain justice, and do what is right,

the house of David (2 Sam 7). Because no Davidic king would ascend the throne under Persian rule, however, the prophet applies the Davidic covenant to the people of Israel at large. Just as David established an empire over surrounding nations (2 Sam 8), Israel will now serve as a means to call nations to recognize the LORD (cf. 2.2–4). 6–13: The exhortation to follow the LORD addresses the audience directly (cf. 1.17; Am 5.6,14). The distinction between the righteous and the wicked in this passage is a rhetorical device to persuade the audience to choose to be included among the righteous rather than to suffer punishment with the wicked. 8–9: The distinction between the ways and thoughts of the LORD and those of the audience builds the case that the LORD planned for punishment to culminate in restoration. 10–11: The passage reiterates the permanence of the LORD's word (cf. 40.8), and that it will accomplish the divine purpose (cf. 14.27). 12–13: In contrast to the thorns and thistles produced by Israel in the vineyard song (5.1–7), Israel will grow into cypress and myrtle as an everlasting sign of its relationship with the LORD (cf. 11.1–16). The imagery also recapitulates the theme of glorious return in 40.3–5 and 48.20–22, the beginning and end of chs 40–48. It therefore indicates a point of closure at a stage in the formation of the book. 13: Memorial, lit. "name."

56.1–66.24: Portrayal of the restored covenant community. The collection of writings in chs 56–66 is generally ascribed to Third Isaiah, a name for various anonymous prophets from the time of the early Persian period restoration in the late sixth through the fifth centuries BCE.

56.1–59.21: Instruction concerning proper observance of the covenant. The various subunits of this section of Isaiah offer instruction concerning the observance of the covenant with the LORD as the restoration comes to fruition. 56.1–8: The passage begins with a general statement of principles concerning the LORD's for soon my salvation will come, and my deliverance be revealed.

²Happy is the mortal who does this,
the one who holds it fast,
who keeps the sabbath, not profaning it,
and refrains from doing any evil.

³Do not let the foreigner joined to the

“The LORD will surely separate me from his people”;
and do not let the eunuch say,
“I am just a dry tree.”

⁴For thus says the LORD: To the eunuchs who keep my sabbaths, who choose the things that please me
and hold fast my covenant,

⁵I will give, in my house and within my walls, a monument and a name
better than sons and daughters;
I will give them an everlasting name that shall not be cut off.

⁶And the foreigners who join themselves to the LORD,
to minister to him, to love the name of
the LORD,
and to be his servants,
all who keep the sabbath, and do not profane it,
and hold fast my covenant—

and make them joyful in my house of their burnt offerings and their sacrifices will be accepted on my altar; for my house shall be called a house of expectations. Justice and righteousness are the basis of biblical law and subsequent Jewish tradition. 2: The sabbath is the foundational observance of Jewish tradition, having been founded as the LORD’s day of rest from the time of creation (Gen 2.1–3; cf. Ex 20.8–11; 31.12–17; 20.8–11; Lev 19.30; 23.3; Deut 5.12–15). 3–8: Foreigners joined to the LORD refers to those who have converted to Judaism, much as Jethro (Ex 18) and Ruth (Ruth 1) were viewed. Although Ezra and Nehemiah expelled foreign women from Jerusalem, those expelled maintained their native languages and religious traditions without having converted (Neh 13.23–30; Ezra 9–10; cf. Deut 7.1–6). Deut 21.10–14 defines the procedure for marriage to a foreign woman captured in war, and biblical laws constantly stress that foreigners may join Israel if they observe the LORD’s instructions (cf. Ex 12.48–49; Lev 24.22; Num 9.14; 15.27–31). Eunuch, castrated, e.g., for service in a foreign court or harem. Deut 23.1–8 bans eunuchs, Ammonites and Moabites, and those born of an illicit marriage from membership in the community, but the present passage makes provision for eunuchs and foreigners if they observe the sabbath as the foundation of the covenant with the LORD.

56.9–57.21: The LORD’s willingness to forgive those who repent and return to the LORD. 56.9–12: The prophet metaphorically compares Israel’s sentinels or leaders to wild animals and silent dogs, who lack understanding and serve only their own immediate interests (cf. 1.2–3; cf. Jer 12.8–9; Ezek 39.17). Alternatively, they are drunks (see 5.11–12; 28.1,7–13). Such characterization is designed to motivate the audience to accept the proph-

Ps 12:1; Mic 7:2. Placed here as a contrast with the polemic that follows. The righteous die in peace, but their fate is ignored. 3–10: The prophet portrays non-Israelite fertility worship, often associated with sexual rites in the Bible (e.g., Num 25; Lev 18.24–39). The language in these verses has much sexual innuendo. 6: Streams would be an appropriate place to pour out libations to the gods. 7: High mountains or hills are often sanctuary sites because they symbolize the majesty of the gods and more practically because grain is more readily threshed in the winds that blow across hilltops. 9: Molech is a Canaanite god to whom children were apparently sacrificed (Lev 18.21; 20.2–5; 2 Kings 3.27; 23.10; Jer 7.31; 32.35); the spelling of his name is uncertain because the vowels employed in it are taken from Heb "boshet" ("shame"). Sheol is the underworld. 11–12: The LORD's rhetorical questions assert that the people feared their idols. through the period of Israel's oppression and exile, but now the LORD has returned. 14–21: The prophet now turns to themes of restoration and a concluding diatribe. 14–15: The motif of the highway that leads the exiles home, as in the Exodus tradition (cf. 11.15–16; 27.12–13; 35.1–10; 40.3–5) is now applied metaphorically. The LORD emphasizes that the time of judgment is now past and that the time of healing and peace has begun. 18: The fruit of the lips, praise and joyful prayer in the place of mourning, as an accompaniment or substitute for sacrifice (cf. Hos 14.2). 21: A concluding diatribe condemns the wicked who will have no peace (cf. 48.22).

58.1–14: A call to repentance and promise of restoration. The LORD calls upon the people to repent and defines the criteria by which they may observe the covenant. 1–2: The celebratory tone evokes festival observance in the Temple, but the LORD's first demand is for righteous moral action to accompany holy ritual action. 3–5: The questions of the people presuppose a time of distress that would have continued throughout the Babylonian exile as the people waited for a divine response that was long in coming. Fasting was a means to humble oneself before the LORD in such a time of distress (cf. Zech 7.1–14; 8.18–19; Joel 1.14; 2.15). 6–14: A definition of genuine fasting. The LORD then spells out the means by which one should practice righteousness before the LORD.  I will appoint Peace as your overseer and Righteousness as your taskmaster.

¹⁸ Violence shall no more be heard in your
 land,
 devastation or destruction within your borders;

you shall call your walls Salvation, and your gates Praise.

¹⁹ The sun shall no longer be your light by day,
 nor for brightness shall the moon give light to you by night;^a but the LORD will be your everlasting light,
 and your God will be your glory.

²⁰ Your sun shall no more go down, or your moon withdraw itself;
 for the LORD will be your everlasting light, and your days of mourning shall be ended.

²¹ Your people shall all be righteous;
 they shall possess the land forever.
 They are the shoot that I planted, the work of my hands,
 so that I might be glorified.

²² The least of them shall become a clan, and the smallest one a mighty nation;
 I am the LORD;
 in its time I will accomplish it quickly.

61 The spirit of the Lord God is upon me, because the LORD has anointed me;
 he has sent me to bring good news to the oppressed,
 to bind up the brokenhearted,
 to proclaim liberty to the captives,
 and release to the prisoners;
² to proclaim the year of the LORD's favor,
 and the day of vengeance of our God;
 to comfort all who mourn;

³ to provide for those who mourn in Zion—
 to give them a garland instead of ashes,
 the oil of gladness instead of mourning, the mantle of praise instead of a faint spirit.

They will be called oaks of righteousness, the planting of the LORD, to display his glory.

⁴ They shall build up the ancient ruins, they shall raise up the former devastations;
 they shall repair the ruined cities,
 the devastations of many generations.

⁵ Strangers shall stand and feed your flocks,
 foreigners shall till your land and dress
 your vines;

⁶ but you shall be called priests of the LORD,
 you shall be named ministers of our God;
 you shall enjoy the wealth of the
 nations,
 and in their riches you shall glory.

⁷ Because their^b shame was double, and dishonor was proclaimed as their lot,
 therefore they shall possess a double portion;
 everlasting joy shall be theirs.

⁸ For I the LORD love justice,
 I hate robbery and wrongdoing;^c
 I will faithfully give them their recompense,
 and I will make an everlasting covenant
 with them.

metaphor for the nations' sustenance of Zion. 21: The shoot that I planted, cf. 6.12–13; 11.1–16. 22: The concluding statements recall the promise of both land and a numerous posterity to the ancestors (Gen 12.1–3; 15.5–6, 17–21; 17.1–8; 28.10–15; 35.9–15). 61.1–7: This passage presupposes the persona of the servant from Second Isaiah (cf. 42.1–4; 49.1–6; 50.4–11; 52.13–53.12). 1–2: The imagery evokes the priestly proclamation of a year of jubilee or release from debt (Lev 25.8–17). The year of jubilee was observed every fiftieth year as a means to forgive debt and to return land and property to its ancestral owners. It is applied here to the return of Zion to its exiled people. 3b: Oaks of righteousness, the planting of the LORD, see 6.12–13; 11.1–9; cf. 5.1–7; 27.2–6. 6: The people of Israel will serve as priests to the nations (cf. Ex 19.6). Their double portion recalls Zion's double punishment (40.2). 8–9:

⁹Their descendants shall be known among
the nations,
and their offspring among the peoples;
all who see them shall acknowledge that they are a people whom the LORD has blessed.

¹⁰I will greatly rejoice in the LORD,
my whole being shall exult in my God;
for he has clothed me with the garments of
salvation,

he has covered me with the robe of
righteousness,
as a bridegroom decks himself with a garland,
and as a bride adorns herself with her jewels.

¹¹For as the earth brings forth its shoots, and as a garden causes what is sown in
it to spring up,
so the Lord God will cause righteousness and praise
to spring up before all the nations.

62 For Zion's sake I will not keep silent, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest, until her vindication shines out like the dawn,

and her salvation like a burning torch.
²The nations shall see your vindication, and all the kings your glory;
and you shall be called by a new name that the mouth of the LORD will give.

³You shall be a crown of beauty in the hand of the LORD,
and a royal diadem in the hand of your God.

⁴You shall no more be termed Forsaken,^a and your land shall no more be termed Desolate;^b

but you shall be called My Delight Is in Her,^c and your land Married;^d for the LORD delights in you, and your land shall be married.

⁵For as a young man marries a young woman,
so shall your builder^e marry you,
and as the bridegroom rejoices over the bride,
so shall your God rejoice over you.

⁶Upon your walls, O Jerusalem,
I have posted sentinels;
all day and all night
they shall never be silent.
You who remind the LORD,
take no rest,

⁷and give him no rest until he establishes Jerusalem and makes it renowned throughout the earth.

⁸The LORD has sworn by his right hand and by his mighty arm:

I will not again give your grain to be food for your enemies, and foreigners shall not drink the wine
for which you have labored;

⁹but those who garner it shall eat it and praise the LORD,
and those who gather it shall drink it in my holy courts.

An everlasting covenant with the restored people of Zion (cf. 54.9–10). 61.10–62.12: Joy at the LORD's restoration of Zion (61.10–11). Just as Zion is dressed as a bride (52.12; 54.11–14) and the LORD is dressed in the armor of righteousness to redeem Zion (59.16–21), so the prophet now dresses for the wedding that will celebrate the reunion of the LORD and Zion. The imagery of growing shoots symbolizes the restoration (cf. 6.12–13; 11.1–9). 62.1–12: The bridal imagery confirms Zion's restored status. Whereas the nations were appalled at the sight of the servant (52.13–53.12), now they will witness the emergence of a beautiful Zion. 3: The crown of beauty also symbolizes the restored walls of the city (4.2; 28.5–6). 4: No more be termed Forsaken . . . Desolate, cf. 54.1,6. 5: The builder is now the LORD in contrast to 44.28 where it was Cyrus acting on behalf of the LORD. 6–9: The task of the sentinels or watchers is to ensure that the LORD keeps the divine promise to restore Zion. The image is based in part on the armed guards of a city, but it also presupposes the role of the priestly gatekeepers who ensured the sanctity of the Temple and its holy courts (1 Chr 9.17–27; 26.1–19; cf. 2 Kings 11.4–8). 10–12: Once again lift up an ensign over the peoples.

¹¹The LORD has proclaimed to the end of the earth:

Say to daughter Zion, “See, your salvation comes;
his reward is with him, and his recompense before him.”

¹²They shall be called, “The Holy People,
The Redeemed of the LORD”;
and you shall be called, “Sought Out, A City Not Forsaken.”

63 “Who is this that comes from Edom, from Bozrah in garments stained crimson?

Who is this so splendidly robed, marching in his great might?”

“It is I, announcing vindication, mighty to save.”

²“Why are your robes red, and your garments like theirs who tread the wine press?”

³“I have trodden the wine press alone, and from the peoples no one was with
me;

I trod them in my anger
and trampled them in my wrath;
their juice spattered on my garments,
and stained all my robes.

⁴For the day of vengeance was in my heart, and the year for my redeeming work had come.

⁵I looked, but there was no helper;
I stared, but there was no one to sustain
me;

so my own arm brought me victory,
and my wrath sustained me.

⁶I trampled down peoples in my anger,
I crushed them in my wrath, and I poured out their lifeblood on the earth.”

⁷I will recount the gracious deeds of the LORD,

the praiseworthy acts of the LORD, because of all that the LORD has done for us,
and the great favor to the house of Israel

that he has shown them according to his

according to the abundance of his

and he became their savior

the prophet calls for the people to go out (48.20–22), to prepare the highway (11.15; 27.12–13; 35.1–10; 40.3–5), and to raise the ensign (Heb “nes”; cf. 11.10; 49.22) to proclaim Zion’s restoration.

63.1–66.24: The prophet’s instruction concerning the process of Zion’s restoration. The final unit of Third Isaiah and the book as a whole focuses on the means by which the LORD will judge the wicked before the ideal restoration can be achieved. Such a view attempts to explain why the ideals of the book have not yet been achieved (e.g., 2.2–4; 9.1–7; 11.1–16) by charging that some among the people are wicked rather than by raising questions about the LORD’s ability to bring about the restoration.

63.1–6: Vengeance on Edom. During the sixth through the fourth centuries BCE, Edom disintegrated as it was displaced by Arabian tribal groups that formed the Nabatean kingdom. The Isaian oracle explains the Edomite decline as a deliberate act of the LORD (cf. ch 34). 1: Edom is located southeast of the Dead Sea and the Negeb regions of Judah. Bozrah, a key city in Edom. 2–3: The prophet employs the imagery of treading wine to depict the LORD’s blood-splattered clothing. Now that the vineyard has been restored (27.2–6), the harvest metaphorically begins. 4–6: The LORD’s day of vengeance builds upon the Day of the LORD tradition in Isaiah when evil is defeated (2.10–21; 13.6–22; 34.8–17; 61.2).

63.7–64.12: A psalm of communal lamentation. 7–9: Recollection of Israel’s deliverance from Egypt. See Ex 23.20, which asserts that an angel would lead Israel through the wilderness. In Ex 13.17–21, however, the LORD,

¹⁰ But they rebelled and grieved his holy spirit;
therefore he became their enemy;
he himself fought against them.
¹¹ Then they^a remembered the days of old,

Where is the one who brought them up with the shepherds of his flock?

Where is the one who put within them his holy spirit,
¹² who caused his glorious arm to march at the right hand of Moses, who divided the waters before them to make for himself an everlasting name, ¹³ who led them through the depths?
Like a horse in the desert,
they did not stumble.
¹⁴ Like cattle that go down into the valley,
the spirit of the LORD gave them rest.
Thus you led your people,
to make for yourself a glorious name.
¹⁵ Look down from heaven and see,
from your holy and glorious habitation.
Where are your zeal and your might?
The yearning of your heart and your compassion?
They are withheld from me.
¹⁶ For you are our father, though Abraham does not know us and Israel does not acknowledge us;
you, O LORD, are our father;
our Redeemer from of old is your name.
¹⁷ Why, O LORD, do you make us stray from your ways
and harden our heart, so that we do not fear you?
Turn back for the sake of your servants, for the sake of the tribes that are your heritage.
¹⁸ Your holy people took possession for a did not expect,

you came down, the mountains quaked
at your presence.

Isa 6.9–10) to demand that the LORD cease afflicting Israel. 18: The trampling of the sanctuary would refer to the Babylonian destruction of the Jerusalem Temple. 64.1–3: A direct appeal to God, characteristic of the lament psalms, to intervene, to appear in power as in the days of old (cf. Ex 19.16–18; Judg 5.4–5; Ps 68.7–8; Hab 3.3–15). 5b–7: The prophet reiterates the LORD's anger and hidden face from the people (cf. 8.16–17). Having been ravaged, the nation has now become

⁸ Yet, O LORD, you are our Father;
we are the clay, and you are our potter;
we are all the work of your hand.

⁹ Do not be exceedingly angry, O LORD, and do not remember iniquity forever.
Now consider, we are all your people.

¹⁰ Your holy cities have become a

Zion has become a wilderness, Jerusalem a desolation.

¹¹ Our holy and beautiful house, where our ancestors praised you,
has been burned by fire,
and all our pleasant places have become

¹² After all this, will you restrain yourself, O LORD?
Will you keep silent, and punish us so severely?

65 I was ready to be sought out by those who did not ask,
to be found by those who did not seek
me.

I said, “Here I am, here I am,” to a nation that did not call on my name.

² I held out my hands all day long to a rebellious people, who walk in a way that is not good,
following their own devices;

³ a people who provoke me
to my face continually, sacrificing in gardens

and offering incense on bricks; ⁴ who sit inside tombs,
and spend the night in secret places;
who eat swine’s flesh,

with broth of abominable things in their vessels;

⁵ who say, “Keep to yourself, do not come near me, for I am too holy for you.”

These are a smoke in my nostrils, a fire that burns all day long.

⁶ See, it is written before me:

I will not keep silent, but I will repay;
I will indeed repay into their laps ⁷ their^b iniquities and their^b ancestors’ iniquities together,

says the LORD;

because they offered incense on the

and reviled me on the hills, I will measure into their laps and they say, “Do not destroy it, for there is a blessing in it,”

so I will do for my servants’ sake, and not destroy them all.

⁹ I will bring forth descendants^c from my chosen shall inherit it, and my servants shall settle there.

impure. No one calls upon the LORD because the LORD is the source of Israel’s punishment. 8–12: A final appeal for the LORD to cease the divine silence and the punishment of the nation. Now that the Temple is destroyed, the LORD’s relationship with the nation is in jeopardy. 8: Clay . . . potter, cf. 29.16; 45.9.

65.1–66.24: The LORD’s answer. The passage attempts to explain the failure of the nation to attain the ideals stated in the book by charging that evil still exists among the people. 1–7: The people rejected the LORD despite the LORD’s readiness to be sought. 3–4: Sacrificing in gardens, non-Israelite fertility rituals practiced in gardens (cf. 1.28–31; 66.17). A list of abominations follows, such as tomb rituals to worship or consult the dead (Deut 18.11–12) and the eating of swine’s flesh (66.17; Deut 14.8). 8–25: The seed of Jacob will be restored in the new creation on Zion, but the wicked will be destroyed. 9: The descendants of both Jacob (northern Israel) and Judah will be restored in keeping with the LORD’s covenant. 10: Sharon, but you did what was evil in my sight, and chose what I did not delight in.

¹³ Therefore thus says the Lord GOD:

My servants shall eat,
but you shall be hungry;

my servants shall drink,
but you shall be thirsty;

my servants shall rejoice,
but you shall be put to shame;

¹⁴ my servants shall sing for gladness of
heart,

but you shall cry out for pain of heart,
and shall wail for anguish of spirit.

¹⁵ You shall leave your name to my chosen to use as a curse,

but to his servants he will give a

¹⁶ Then whoever invokes a blessing in the

and are hidden from my sight.

¹⁷ For I am about to create new heavens and a new earth;
the former things shall not be remembered for I am about to create Jerusalem as a joy, and its people as a delight.

¹⁹ I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and delight in my people;
no more shall the sound of weeping be heard in it,
or the cry of distress.

²⁰ No more shall there be in it or an old person who does not live out a lifetime;

for one who dies at a hundred years will be considered a youth,
and one who falls short of a hundred will be considered accursed.

them;
they shall plant vineyards and eat their fruit.

²² They shall not build and another they shall not plant and another eat; for like the days of a tree shall the days of

The border regions of Israel will be secure. 11–12: Fortune and Destiny, Heb “Gad” and “Meni,” deities of fate and good luck venerated among Syrians, Arabs, and Nabateans. 13–16: The contrasting fates of the wicked and the LORD’s servants, i.e., those who are righteous. 15–16: The names of the reprobate will serve as a curse, like the names of the prophets Ahab and Zedekiah executed by the Babylonians (Jer 29.22). The giving of a new name signifies a new status (43.1,7; 44.1–5; 62.2). 17–25: The new heavens and earth essentially constitutes a new creation. Insofar as the Temple was the holy center of creation, its destruction and rebuilding entailed a new creation. Life in the restored land will be idyllic. 17b: Former things, 43.18. 20: The prediction of vastly increased life expectancy connotes a return to the original creation (cf. Gen 5). 21–23: The future Israel will witness the reversal of familiar curses attached to treaties and covenants; see 62.8–9; Deut 28.30. 22: Days of a tree, cf. 6.12–13; Job 14.7–9. 23: The imagery of successful childbirth reverses that employed to describe the lion shall eat straw like the ox;

but the serpent—its food shall be dust!
They shall not hurt or destroy on all my holy mountain,

says the LORD.

66 Thus says the LORD:
Heaven is my throne
and the earth is my footstool;
what is the house that you would build for me,
and what is my resting place?

²All these things my hand has made, and so all these things are mine,^a
says the LORD.

But this is the one to whom I will look,
to the humble and contrite in spirit,
who trembles at my word.

³Whoever slaughters an ox is like one who kills a human being;
whoever sacrifices a lamb, like one who breaks a dog's neck;
whoever presents a grain offering, like one who offers swine's blood;^b whoever makes a memorial offering of frankincense, like one who blesses an idol.

These have chosen their own ways, and in their abominations they take delight;

⁴I also will choose to mock^c them,
and bring upon them what they fear;
because, when I called, no one answered,
when I spoke, they did not listen;
but they did what was evil in my sight,
and chose what did not please me.

⁵Hear the word of the LORD,
you who tremble at his word:
Your own people who hate you and reject you for my name's sake have said, "Let the LORD be glorified, so that we may see your joy";

but it is they who shall be put to shame.

⁶Listen, an uproar from the city!
A voice from the temple!
The voice of the LORD,
dealing retribution to his enemies!

⁷Before she was in labor
she gave birth;
before her pain came upon her she delivered a son.

⁸Who has heard of such a thing?
Who has seen such things?
Shall a land be born in one day?
Shall a nation be delivered in one moment?

Yet as soon as Zion was in labor
she delivered her children.

⁹Shall I open the womb and not deliver?
says the LORD;
shall I, the one who delivers, shut the shall see my glory,¹⁹ and I will set a sign among them. From them I will send survivors to the nations, to Tarshish, Put,^d and Lud—which draw the bow—to Tubal and Javan, to the coastlands far away that have not heard of my fame or seen my glory; and they shall declare my glory among the nations.²⁰ They shall bring all your kindred from all the nations as an offering to the LORD, on horses, and in chariots, and in litters, and on mules, and on dromedaries, to my holy mountain Jerusalem, says the LORD, just as the Israelites bring a grain offering in a clean vessel to the house of the LORD.²¹ And I will also take some of them as priests and as Levites, says the LORD.

²²For as the new heavens and the new
earth,
which I will make,
shall remain before me, says the LORD;
so shall your descendants and your name remain.

²³From new moon to new moon,
and from sabbath to sabbath,
all flesh shall come to worship before me,
says the LORD.

²⁴And they shall go out and look at the dead bodies of the people who have rebelled against me; for their worm shall not die, their fire shall not be quenched, and they shall be an abhorrence to all flesh.

JEREMIAH

NAME AND CANONICAL STATUS

The book of Jeremiah, the second scroll among the major prophets alongside Isaiah and Ezekiel, is a compilation of prophetic oracles edited by members of the Deuteronomistic school and attributed to the prophet by that name. For the different placement of the prophets in Hebrew and Christian Bibles see the essay on “The Canons of the Bible.”

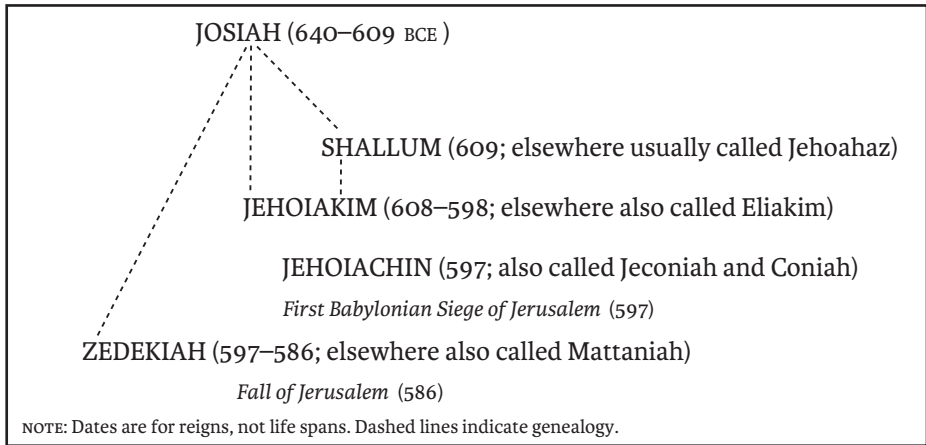

HISTORICAL CONTEXT

Jeremiah lived during the critical years spanning the “golden age” of the Judean king Josiah (640–609 BCE) and the subsequent fall and destruction of Jerusalem and the deportations of the Judean population into captivity (597–586 BCE), all at the hand of Nebuchadnezzar II of Babylon. Some scholars think that Jeremiah was born in 627 BCE and began his prophetic ministry only in 609 BCE following the death of King Josiah. The traditional assumption, however, suggested by the text itself and followed here, is that he began his ministry in 627 BCE (Jer 25.3) and prophesied until well after the deportation of 586 BCE and the subsequent murder of Gedaliah and flight of a major group of Judeans to Egypt. Jeremiah, along with his friend and scribal colleague Baruch, was forcibly taken by this group as a hostage to Egypt, where he is last heard speaking judgment oracles against the community in the years following 586 BCE.

Jeremiah was born during the final years of the reign of King Manasseh (ca. 645 BCE) and began his ministry during the initial period of Josiah's reform movement. At this time the youthful King Josiah was rejecting the “accommodationist” pro-Assyrian policies of his early advisers and beginning to flex his ambitious nationalistic policies directed against his Assyrian overlords and toward the reunification of Israel and Judah (2 Chr 34.1–7). As a part of these ambitious political goals, Josiah's thoroughgoing religious reform movement attempted to remove the syncretistic elements of the accommodationist rituals, purge worship of non-Yahwistic practices and elements, and reunify the country around the central power-base of Jerusalem, similar to the goals of the reform movement of his great-grandfather, Hezekiah (2 Kings 18.1–8). Jeremiah, deeply steeped in the Deuteronomistic tradition of many of the prophets, was likely an early advocate of Josiah's reform, and Jeremiah held Josiah in esteem as an exemplar of the righteous king (Jer 22.15–16), a view shared with the Deuteronomistic Historians (2 Kings 22.2; 23.25).

Josiah was killed in an adventurous and risky military move against Egypt in 609 BCE (see 22.10n.), and the reform almost certainly collapsed. By 605 Babylon was clearly in control of Palestine and the last kings of Judah—Jehoiakim, Jehoiachin, and Zedekiah—were unable to avoid the awful results of Babylonian expansionism. Jehoiakim joined in a revolt against the Babylonians in 601 BCE, which led to a Babylonian invasion and the first deportation of 597 BCE. His uncle, Zedekiah, tried to walk a narrow line between the various political factions demanding attention at the Jerusalem court, but he too eventually joined a revolt, leading to the final destruction of Jerusalem at the hand of the Babylonians in 586 and the second deportation of its population.

Jeremiah was from the town of Anathoth in Benjamin. He may therefore have belonged to the disaffected priestly clan of Abiathar, which had lost its Temple privileges centuries earlier when King Solomon consolidated his power and had his potential adversaries—who had supported his brother Adonijah's claims to the throne—either eliminated or exiled (1 Kings 1.5–2.46). As part of this consolidation, Solomon promoted the priestly family of Zadok, who supported him in the succession. With the Temple firmly in Zadokite priestly hands, the descendants of Abiathar languished in rural sites, which themselves were eventually shut down during the reforms of Hezekiah and Josiah. As one of those descendants, Jeremiah may have been heir to sentiments that ran deeply in favor of the old tribal traditions and values and in opposition to the “Jerusalemite” policies predominant since the reign of Solomon.

The last kings of Judah in the book of Jeremiah.

STRUCTURE AND CONTENTS OF THE BOOK

The book of Jeremiah was edited into three major cycles of oracles and traditions. Each cycle is more-or-less chronologically ordered, and each is concluded by a reference to the creation of the scroll of 605 BCE, written at the dictation of Jeremiah by his scribal colleague, Baruch. References to this scroll are found in chs 25, 36, and 45, and these references divide the book into its constitutive cycles. It is often assumed that the scroll produced at this time (the second scroll, Jer 36.32) formed the core of oracles now found in the first cycle, chs 1–24. The book concludes with a compilation of “oracles against the nations” in chs 46–51. The book of Jeremiah is unique in many regards, but especially because the Greek tradition differs from the Hebrew tradition in this book more than in any other. A major difference is that the Greek tradition (the Septuagint) locates the “oracles against the nations” not at the end of the book but rather immediately following an appropriate reference to “this book” at 25.13. This and other differences between the Hebrew and Greek traditions has convinced many scholars that the Greek tradition preserves earlier and better traditions concerning the oracles, the language of the text, and the character of Jeremiah. Both of these textual traditions are attested among the Hebrew biblical texts found at Qumran (the Dead Sea Scrolls), indicating that the book of Jeremiah had a fluid editorial history.

INTERPRETATION

Jeremiah’s message was closely related to the core values of the Deuteronomic tradition. A virulent antipathy toward “foreign gods,” especially the Canaanite Baal, is combined with a fierce devotion to the ethics and mores of Deuteronomy’s humanitarian program. Jeremiah shares the basic commitments and outlook of the Deuteronomistic History, even though the prophet is never mentioned in that history. Central to this outlook is the conviction that the disastrous political events leading to the destruction of Jerusalem and the exile of its population were a direct result of divine anger at Israel’s continued apostasy. The figure of Jeremiah became the subject of fascination in later history, as represented already in the Chronicler’s history (2 Chr 35.25; 36.12,21–22) as well as in the books of Daniel (9.2) and in deuterocanonical traditions (2 Macc 2.1–7; 15.14–15).

GUIDE TO READING

The reader should take care to read each of the three cycles as an independent unit with its own chronological ordering. When beginning a new cycle, be prepared for a chronological displacement that carries the reader back in time. Read the relevant sections of the Deuteronomistic History, especially 2 Kings 21–25, as is appropriate for understanding the political backdrop to the oracles and narratives.

1 The words of Jeremiah son of Hilkiah, of the priests who were in Anathoth in the land of Benjamin, ² to whom the word of the LORD came in the days of King Josiah son of Amon of Judah, in the thirteenth year of his reign. ³ It came also in the days of King Jehoiakim son of Josiah of Judah, and until the end of the eleventh year of King Zedekiah son of Josiah of Judah, until the captivity of Jerusalem in the fifth month.

⁴ Now the word of the LORD came to me saying,

⁵ “Before I formed you in the womb I knew you, and before you were born I consecrated you;
I appointed you a prophet to the nations.”

⁶ Then I said, “Ah, Lord God! Truly I do not know how to speak, for I am only a boy.” ⁷ But the LORD said to me,

“Do not say, ‘I am only a boy’;
for you shall go to all to whom I send you, and you shall speak whatever I command
you.

⁸ Do not be afraid of them,
for I am with you to deliver you,
says the LORD.”

⁹ Then the LORD put out his hand and touched my mouth; and the LORD said to me, “Now I have put my words in your mouth.

¹⁰ See, today I appoint you over nations and over kingdoms,
to pluck up and to pull down,
to destroy and to overthrow,
to build and to plant.”

¹¹ The word of the LORD came to me, saying, “Jeremiah, what do you see?” And I said, “I see a branch of an almond tree.”^a ¹² Then the LORD said to me, “You have seen well, for I am watching^b over my word to perform it.”

¹³ The word of the LORD came to me a second time, saying, “What do you see?” And I said, “I see a boiling pot, tilted away from the north.”

¹⁴ Then the LORD said to me: Out of the north disaster shall break out on all the inhabitants of the land. ¹⁵ For now I am calling all the tribes of the kingdoms of the north, says the LORD; and they shall come and all of them shall set their thrones at the

1.1–3: Editor’s superscription. The superscription conforms to those of several of the prophetic books (Hos 1.1; Am 1.1; Mic 1.1; Zeph 1.1) and probably represents a stage in the gathering and editing of the books of the prophets as a whole. 1: Priests . . . in Anathoth, see the introduction. The land of Benjamin lay immediately north of Judah, and Anathoth was located about 3 mi (5 km) north of Jerusalem. 2: Thirteenth year. 627 BCE (see 25.3), taken by most to be the year when Jeremiah began his public ministry, one year after the reform movement of King Josiah of Judah began (2 Chr 34.3). 3: Eleventh year of King Zedekiah, 587 BCE. In the fifth month recalls the burning of the Temple and the razing of Jerusalem by the invading Babylonians (2 Kings 25.8–12; Zech 7.3–5).

1.4–19: Jeremiah’s call as a “prophet to the nations” and his initial visions. 1:4–10: The call. The narrative of Jeremiah’s call follows a typical pattern (see Ex 3–6; Judg 6.11–18; Isa 6) involving God’s identification of a task and commission of the called one to be God’s agent (v. 5), the excuses of the commissioned one (v. 6), God’s promise to be with the commissioned one (vv. 7–8), and God’s giving a sign (vv. 9–10). 4: Word of the LORD, the prophets’ primary area of responsibility was conveying the “word,” often gained by visionary experience (see 18.18; Ezek 7.26). 5: I formed you, as a potter creates from clay (cf. Gen 2.7). To the nations, the call narrative introduces and presumes the entire book of Jeremiah, including the oracles against the nations. It portrays Jeremiah’s ministry as a critical moment in world history (cf. Jer 25). 6: A boy, indicating apprentice or assistant status (see 2 Kings 4.12). Jeremiah protests his lack of experience. 9: Touched my mouth, the verb implying that this divine action involved an object, such as Isaiah’s coal (Isa 6.7). Perhaps God’s word was the object (15:16). 10: To pluck up . . . to plant, Jeremiah’s twofold task of judgment and restoration, a common theme throughout the book. Compare 18.7–9; 24.6; 31.28.

1.11–19: Two visions of pending judgment. 11: Almond tree, a very early blooming tree, thus one that “wakes early and watches” for spring. See textual notes a and b for a play on these words in Heb. On God as “watching,” see 31.28 and 44.27. 13–14: Out of the north, the mythological location of the mountain of the gods (Isa 14.13; Job 37.22) and of the ideal Zion (Ps 48.2); but also the direction from which Israel’s mythical and historical enemies attacked (Isa 41.25; Zeph 2.13). The pot was boiling over as first Assyria and then Babylon exercised expansionist imperial policies against Judah and its neighbors. 15: Set their thrones at the entrance of the gates, at the place entrance of the gates of Jerusalem, against all its surrounding walls and against all the cities of Judah. ¹⁶ And I will utter my judgments against them, for all their wickedness in forsaking me; they have made offerings to other gods, and worshiped the works of their own hands. ¹⁷ But you, gird up your loins; stand up and tell them everything that I command you. Do not break down before them, or I will break you before them. ¹⁸ And I for my part have made you today a fortified city, an iron pillar, and a bronze wall, against the whole land—against the kings of Judah, its princes, its priests, and the people of the land. ¹⁹ They will fight against you; but they shall not prevail against you, for I am with you, says the LORD, to deliver you.

2 The word of the LORD came to me, saying: ² Go and proclaim in the hearing of Jerusalem, Thus says the LORD:

I remember the devotion of your youth,
your love as a bride,
how you followed me in the wilderness,
in a land not sown.

³ Israel was holy to the LORD,
the first fruits of his harvest.

All who ate of it were held guilty;
disaster came upon them,

says the LORD.

⁴ Hear the word of the LORD, O house of Jacob, and all the families of the house of Israel. ⁵ Thus says the LORD:

What wrong did your ancestors find in me that they went far from me, and went after worthless things, and became worthless themselves?

⁶ They did not say, “Where is the LORD who brought us up from the land of Egypt,

who led us in the wilderness,
in a land of deserts and pits,
in a land of drought and deep darkness,
in a land that no one passes through,
where no one lives?”

⁷ I brought you into a plentiful land to eat its fruits and its good things.

But when you entered you defiled my land,
and made my heritage an abomination.

⁸ The priests did not say, “Where is the LORD?”

Those who handle the law did not know
me;

the rulers^a transgressed against me;
the prophets prophesied by Baal,
and went after things that do not profit.

⁹ Therefore once more I accuse you,
says the LORD,

of judgment and justice; a sign of military conquest (39.3; 43.10). 16: Worshiped, indicating bowing down in prostration. The works of their own hands are the images and idols of other gods fashioned by artisans (10.9). 17: Gird up your loins, as if binding up a garment for hard travel on an assignment (2 Kings 4.29; 9.1) or strapping on battle gear (Job 38.3; Nah 2.1). 18: The whole land, if the target is Judah. But Heb “‘erets” also means “earth,” and expresses the universal commission of Jeremiah against nations and kingdoms.

2.1–3.5: Israel’s apostasy. Early oracles critical of Israel’s fickle devotion to God and Baal. 1–3: Recalls the wilderness period immediately after the Exodus in idealized terms as a period of fidelity to God (compare Hos 2.14–15). In a land not sown (v. 2) there was no temptation to worship the fertility gods of Canaan. 3: Israel was holy to the LORD, recalling that some sacrifices were “most holy” and therefore reserved strictly for priestly consumption. Those who encroached upon them were guilty (Lev 5.15–16; 6.25–29), just as are the nations who have devoured Israel, God’s own holy portion.

2.4–8: Israel defiles the land. 5: Worthless things, or “vaporous puffs of wind” (Heb “hebel”), that which is mere “vanity” (Eccl 1.2). 6–7: Israel is not only incapable of recalling its history, but is incapable of engaging in lament, of complaining “Where is the LORD?”! The loss of lament indicates the loss of relationship. 8: The priests did not say reminds the priests that they were to lead the community in such complaint, and had failed to do so. If the community cannot complain to God, it cannot trust in God. Those who handle the law, that is, the priests, whose task it was to instruct the community with God’s instruction or law (Heb “torah”). Prophesied by Baal, the Canaanite god, one of the common accusations against the prophets; cf. Hos 2.8–17. Things that do not profit (Heb “ya’al”), a play on the name Baal (“ba’al”), i.e., they worshiped Baal to no avail.

 But you said, “It is hopeless, nature of Israel's apostasy. 25: As in v. 22, what is strange or foreign is the apostasy that defiles (v. 23). 2.26–28: Judah's confused apostasy. 26: A thief is shamed, the use of “shame” (Heb “boshet”) hints at Baal, since the word “shame” was often used in place of the name of Baal (see 2 Sam 3.8 textual note c). 27: The tree or wood pole (Heb “asherah”) symbolized the goddess Asherah, and the standing stone symbolized the god Baal. But Israel even confuses its apostate iconography and cannot tell father from mother.

2.29–37: God's legal suit against Israel. 29: Complain against, formal language of legal complaint. 30: Devoured your prophets, that Israel neglected the prophets is a refrain of the Deuteronomistic editor of Jeremiah (7.25; 25.4; 26.5; 29.19; 35.15; 44.4); on killing prophets, see 1 Kings 19.10; Neh 9.26. 31: The rhetorical questions beg the answer “Of course not.” We are free, or “We have wandered aimlessly,” as though in a trackless wilderness or in the darkness of night. Israel cannot find its way to God. 32: Continues the theme of vv. 10–11: Israel's behavior defies all logic, common sense and natural instinct (see also 8.4–5,7; 18.14–15). 33–37 are again addressed to the young woman. 34: You did not catch them breaking in, if caught in the act of burglary, such violence directed against the thief might be excusable (Ex 22.2–3). 36: Recalls the invasion of Judah and siege for the LORD has rejected those in whom you trust,

and you will not prosper through them.

This is how you have spoken, but you have done all the evil that you could.

3 If^a a man divorces his wife and she goes from him
and becomes another man's wife, will he return to her?
Would not such a land be greatly polluted?
You have played the whore with many lovers;
and would you return to me?

says the LORD.

² Look up to the bare heights,^b and see!
Where have you not been lain with?
By the waysides you have sat waiting for lovers,
like a nomad in the wilderness.
You have polluted the land with your whoring and wickedness.

³ Therefore the showers have been withheld,
and the spring rain has not come;
yet you have the forehead of a whore,
you refuse to be ashamed.

⁴ Have you not just now called to me,
"My Father, you are the friend of my youth—

⁵ will he be angry forever, will he be indignant to the end?"

⁶ The LORD said to me in the days of King Josiah: Have you seen what she did, that faithless one, Israel, how she went up on every high hill and under every green tree, and played the whore there? ⁷ And I thought,
"After she has done all this she will return to me"; but she did not return, and her false sister Judah saw it. ⁸ She^c saw that for all the adulteries of that faithless one, Israel, I had sent her away with a decree of divorce; yet her false sister Judah did not fear, but she too went and played the whore. ⁹ Because she took her whoredom so lightly, she polluted the land, committing adultery with stone and tree. ¹⁰ Yet for all this her false sister Judah did not return to me with her whole heart, but only in pretense, says the LORD.

¹¹ Then the LORD said to me: Faithless
Israel has shown herself less guilty than false Judah. ¹² Go, and proclaim these words toward the north, and say:

Return, faithless Israel,

says the LORD.

of Jerusalem by the Assyrians in 701 BCE (2 Kings 18.13–19.28). 37: Your hands on your head, a sign of deep mourning (2 Sam 13.19).

3.1–5: No return is possible. 1: Will he return? The rhetorical question demands a negative answer; Deut 4.1–4 prohibits second marriages to the same person. Would you return to me? Although the analogy would exclude the possibility of repentance and reconciliation between people and God, later passages in the chapter envision such restoration of the covenant relationship. In both Hebrew and Greek this is a statement rather than a question, suggesting inappropriate and bizarre behavior. 2: Lain with, the MT contains alternate readings of the verb. One is "ravished" (Heb "shagal"), which implies that Israel was a victim rather than complicit. Ancient editors of the MT preferred to read "shakab" ("lain with") instead, pointing to Israel's complicity; cf. Zech 14.2 for the same distinction. Like a nomad (Heb "'arabi"): Greek suggests reading "like a raven" (= Heb "'oreb"); see Isa 34.11; Zeph 2.14. 3: Israel's behavior pollutes the environment and disrupts nature; see Hag 1.5–11. Forehead, that is, stubbornness (cf. Isa 48.4). 4: The friend of my youth, Heb "'allup" implies God's cozy intimacy.

3.6–4.4: Call for faithless Israel and Judah to return. This section continues the theme of return (3.1). 3.6–13: Judah is worse than her sister Israel; cf. Ezek 16.45–52; 23.1–21. 6: Days of King Josiah, 640–609 BCE. High hill . . . green tree, high places were sites for illicit worship, and the wood pole/tree represented the goddess Asherah (see 2.27n.). 8: Decree of divorce, see Deut 24.1–4. 9: Stone and tree, symbols of religious apostasy; see 2.27n. 10: In pretense, lit. "in the lie" (Heb "sheqer"), code language for the Canaanite god Baal. 12: Toward the north, the kingdom of Israel lay to the north of Judah, and had earlier been carried away by the Assyrians into captivity by her own northern enemies. What follows is directed to the Northern Kingdom.

I will not look on you in anger,
for I am merciful,
says the LORD;

I will not be angry forever.
¹³ Only acknowledge your guilt, that you have rebelled against the LORD your God,
and scattered your favors among strangers
under every green tree,
and have not obeyed my voice,
says the LORD.

¹⁴ Return, O faithless children,
says the LORD,
for I am your master;
I will take you, one from a city and two from a family,
and I will bring you to Zion.

¹⁵ I will give you shepherds after my own heart, who will feed you with knowledge and understanding. ¹⁶ And when you have multiplied and increased in the land, in those days, says the LORD, they shall no longer say, “The ark of the covenant of the LORD.” It shall not come to mind, or be remembered, or missed; nor shall another one be made. ¹⁷ At that time Jerusalem shall be called the throne of the LORD, and all nations shall gather to it, to the presence of the LORD in Jerusalem, and they shall no longer stubbornly follow their own evil will. ¹⁸ In those days the house of Judah shall join the house of Israel, and together they shall come from the land of the north to the land that I gave your ancestors for a heritage.

¹⁹ I thought how I would set you among my children,
and give you a pleasant land,
the most beautiful heritage of all the
nations.
And I thought you would call me, My Father,
and would not turn from following me.
²⁰ Instead, as a faithless wife leaves her husband,
so you have been faithless to me,
O house of Israel,
says the LORD.

²¹ A voice on the bare heights^a is heard, the plaintive weeping of Israel’s
children,
because they have perverted their way,
they have forgotten the LORD their God:

Merciful, also implying faithful and loyal. 13. Strangers, implying a dangerous and defiling foreignness. See 2.25n. 3.14–18: Israel’s restoration. These words are now directed toward a masc. plural subject, a syntactical shift indicating that this oracle is independent of the previous one. 14: I am your master (Heb “ba’alti bakem”), the Hebrew word “ba’al” also means husband; see 2.23n. 15: Shepherds, that is, kings and leaders. The term feed you comes from the same Hebrew root (lit., “shepherd you”). 16: Ark of the covenant, Judah’s central religious symbol had likely been removed in military attack and was no longer present in the Temple by Jeremiah’s time. Later tradition ascribed to Jeremiah the securing of the final secret resting place for the Ark of the Covenant, where he hid it following the destruction of the Temple (2 Macc 2.4–5) on Mount Nebo, the same mountain near which Moses’ secret burial site was located (Deut 34.1,6). On the removal of such important icons from religious memory, cf. the reference to the memory of the Exodus event (16.14; 23.7). 17: Jerusalem . . . the throne, as part of the divine throne, the ark was God’s footstool (1 Chr 28.2; Ps 132.7–8). Now Jerusalem itself will become God’s throne. 18: Land of the north, both Assyria and Babylon were symbolically located in the north; see 1.14n.

3.19–22a: Mixed oracles pleading for Israel to return. 19: Addressed to the young woman, whom God would honor by setting her among God’s sons (NRSV “children”) for an inheritance. Normally women did not inherit property, as illustrated by the case of the daughters of Zelophehad (Num 26.33; 27.1–7; 36.2–9; cf. also Job 42.15). 21: Bare heights, hot, dry, desolate, barren land, scene of Israel’s misery (see 14.6).

3.22b–25: Israel’s confession. 23. A delusion (Heb “sheqer”), as in 3.10 a play on code language for the Canaanite god Baal. Orgies is a strong translation; Heb “hamon” implies only the tumultuous noise of a crowd out of control. 24: Shameful thing, a reference to Baal; see 2.26n. Devoured, on Baal’s voracious appetite see “Here we come to you;

for you are the LORD our God.

²³ Truly the hills are^a a delusion, the orgies on the mountains.

Truly in the LORD our God is the salvation of Israel.

²⁴ “But from our youth the shameful thing has devoured all for which our ancestors had labored, their flocks and their herds, their sons and their daughters. ²⁵ Let us lie down in our shame, and let our dishonor cover us;
for we have sinned against the LORD our God, we and our ancestors, from our youth even to this day; and we have not obeyed the voice of the LORD our God.”

4 If you return, O Israel,
says the LORD,
if you return to me,
if you remove your abominations from my presence,
and do not waver,
² and if you swear, “As the LORD lives!” in truth, in justice, and in uprightness,
then nations shall be blessed^b by him,
and by him they shall boast.

³ For thus says the LORD to the people of Judah and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem:
Break up your fallow ground,
and do not sow among thorns.

⁴ Circumcise yourselves to the LORD, remove the foreskin of your hearts,
O people of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem,

or else my wrath will go forth like fire,
and burn with no one to quench it, because of the evil of your doings.

⁵ Declare in Judah, and proclaim in Jerusalem, and say:

Blow the trumpet through the land;
shout aloud^c and say, “Gather together, and let us go into the fortified cities!”

⁶ Raise a standard toward Zion, flee for safety, do not delay,
for I am bringing evil from the north,
and a great destruction.

⁷ A lion has gone up from its thicket,
a destroyer of nations has set out;
he has gone out from his place
to make your land a waste;
your cities will be ruins without inhabitant.

⁸ Because of this put on sackcloth, lament and wail:
“The fierce anger of the LORD has not turned away from us.”

⁹ On that day, says the LORD, courage shall fail the king and the officials; the priests shall be appalled and the prophets astounded. ¹⁰ Then

^a Gk Syr Vg: Heb Truly from the hills is

^b Or shall bless themselves

^c Or shout, take your weapons: Heb shout, fill (your hand)

51.33–44; cf. Bel 1.1–28. 25: Lie down in our shame. As Israel “lay” with Baal (3.2), so now they will “lie” in their “shame” as the consequence mirrors the offense.

4.1–4: God’s appeal for Israel’s return, continuing the theme. 2: As the LORD lives, a call for sincere oath-taking in God’s name in judicial cases. Nations shall be blessed, Israel’s restoration would yield a blessing for the nations; cf. Gen 12.2–3; 18.18. 3: The people are to live their lives as seed planted in freshly tilled soil; see Hos 10.12. 4: Circumcise . . . your hearts, outward display must be matched by inward conversion; see Deut 10.16; 30.6.

4.5–6.26: The siege of Jerusalem by the enemy from the north. A lengthy section warning about the coming invasion and siege of Jerusalem.

4.5–10: The sentinels and leaders are commanded to signal the attack of the foe from the north (see 1.14n.). 5: The trumpet was used for signaling, especially in battle (4.19; Judg 3.27; 6.34). But here the signal is for taking refuge inside the walled city. 6: A standard, any visible marker, such as a pole or signal fire, that could be seen from a distance. The letters from Lachish, contemporary to this period, refer to the signal fire from Azekah as no longer visible, a signal that the end had come; see 34.7n. 7: A lion has gone up, a reference to Nebuchadrezzar II of Babylon (605–562 BCE). But it is a mixed metaphor, since God, too, can be described as a lion on the prowl (25.36–38; 49.19; 50.44), or as one watching the people as a predator watches its prey (1.12; 5.6; 44.27).

I said, “Ah, Lord God, how utterly you have deceived this people and Jerusalem, saying, ‘It shall be well with you,’ even while the sword is at the throat!”

¹¹ At that time it will be said to this people and to Jerusalem: A hot wind comes from me out of the bare heights^a in the desert toward my poor people, not to winnow or cleanse—¹² a wind too strong for that. Now it is I who speak in judgment against them.

¹³ Look! He comes up like clouds, his chariots like the whirlwind;

his horses are swifter than eagles—woe to us, for we are ruined!

¹⁴ O Jerusalem, wash your heart clean of wickedness
so that you may be saved.

How long shall your evil schemes lodge within you?

¹⁵ For a voice declares from Dan and proclaims disaster from Mount Ephraim.

¹⁶ Tell the nations, “Here they are!”
Proclaim against Jerusalem, “Besiegers come from a distant land;
they shout against the cities of Judah.

¹⁷ They have closed in around her like watchers of a field,
because she has rebelled against me,
says the LORD.

¹⁸ Your ways and your doings have brought this upon you.

This is your doom; how bitter it is!
It has reached your very heart.”

¹⁹ My anguish, my anguish! I writhe in pain!

Oh, the walls of my heart!
My heart is beating wildly;
I cannot keep silent;
for I^b hear the sound of the trumpet,
the alarm of war.

²⁰ Disaster overtakes disaster,
the whole land is laid waste.
Suddenly my tents are destroyed,
my curtains in a moment.

²¹ How long must I see the standard, and hear the sound of the trumpet?

²² “For my people are foolish, they do not know me;
they are stupid children,
they have no understanding.
They are skilled in doing evil,
but do not know how to do good.”

²³ I looked on the earth, and lo, it was waste and void;
and to the heavens, and they had no
light.

²⁴ I looked on the mountains, and lo, they were quaking,
and all the hills moved to and fro.

²⁵ I looked, and lo, there was no one at all,
and all the birds of the air had fled.

^a Or the trails

^b Another reading is for you, O my soul,

10. Jeremiah charges God with deceiving the people by convincing them that everything will be “peace” (Heb “shalom”). Normally attributed to the “lying” prophets (6.14; 8.11), this may reflect promises that God would be with the people (e.g., Deut 20.1; Isa 7.14). On the theme of God deceiving the prophets, see 1 Kings 22.18–23.

4.11–18: The siege is near. 11: From me is lacking in the Hebrew, though clearly God stands behind this invasion (v. 6). My poor people, lit. “the daughter of my people.” There is no sympathy suggested. This wind is too strong to winnow, as it would blow both chaff and grain away. Cf. 51.1–2. 15: The enemy sweeps over Dan in the far north and through Ephraim in the center of Israel hurrying toward Jerusalem. 17: Like watchers, the term “besiegers” (v. 16) connotes those who “watch” or “guard” against anyone escaping from the city under siege; here a synonym is used of “watching” or “guarding” a field, perhaps indicating the ease of so doing.

4.19–28: The anguished voice of the prophet. Some scholars think that Jerusalem may be speaking in vv. 19–21, as in v. 31; cf. 6.24; 10.19–21. 19: For I hear, lit. “for you have heard, O my soul.” The sound of the trumpet penetrates to the prophet’s very core; see textual note b. 20: Tents . . . curtains, though often used of the sanctuary (see 10.20n.), here the terms likely refer to Israel as God’s dwelling (see 49.29; Isa 54.2; Hab 3.7). 22: Skilled (lit. “wise”) in doing evil, in fact they are fools, the opposite of wise. 23: Waste and void, echoing Gen 1.2, these verses envision the reduction of creation to primordial chaos. No light, even the first act of God’s creation was undone. 25: No one, lit. “no ‘adam,’” no first human being.

²⁶ I looked, and lo, the fruitful land was a desert, and all its cities were laid in ruins before the LORD, before his fierce anger.

²⁷ For thus says the LORD: The whole land shall be a desolation; yet I will not make a full end.

²⁸ Because of this the earth shall mourn, and the heavens above grow black;
for I have spoken, I have purposed;
I have not relented nor will I turn back.

²⁹ At the noise of horseman and archer every town takes to flight; they enter thickets; they climb among rocks;
all the towns are forsaken,
and no one lives in them.

³⁰ And you, O desolate one,
what do you mean that you dress in crimson, that you deck yourself with ornaments of gold,

that you enlarge your eyes with paint?
In vain you beautify yourself.
Your lovers despise you;
they seek your life.

³¹ For I heard a cry as of a woman in labor, anguish as of one bringing forth her first child,
the cry of daughter Zion gasping for breath,
stretching out her hands,
“Woe is me! I am fainting before killers!”

5 Run to and fro through the streets of Jerusalem,
look around and take note!
Search its squares and see if you can find one person who acts justly
and seeks truth—
so that I may pardon Jerusalem.^a

² Although they say, “As the LORD lives,” yet they swear falsely.

³ O LORD, do your eyes not look for truth?

You have struck them,
but they felt no anguish;
you have consumed them,
but they refused to take correction.
They have made their faces harder than
rock;
they have refused to turn back.

⁴ Then I said, “These are only the poor, they have no sense;
for they do not know the way of the LORD,
the law of their God.

⁵ Let me go to the rich^b and speak to them;
surely they know the way of the LORD,
the law of their God.”
But they all alike had broken the yoke,
they had burst the bonds.

⁶ Therefore a lion from the forest shall kill
them,
a wolf from the desert shall destroy
them.
A leopard is watching against their cities;
everyone who goes out of them shall be torn in pieces—
because their transgressions are many,
their apostasies are great.

⁷ How can I pardon you?
Your children have forsaken me,
and have sworn by those who are no gods.

When I fed them to the full,
they committed adultery and trooped to the houses of prostitutes.

⁸ They were well-fed lusty stallions, each neighing for his neighbor’s wife.

²²Do you not fear me? says the LORD;
Do you not tremble before me?
I placed the sand as a boundary for the a perpetual barrier that it cannot pass; over it.

²³But this people has a stubborn and able. 21: Cf. Isa 6.9–10. 22: Sand as a boundary for the sea, like the waxing and waning of the tides of the ocean, God has set a limit for the primeval chaos surrounding creation, beyond which it cannot pass; see Gen 1.2–8; Job 38.8–11; Ps 104.9. 23: Stubborn and rebellious recalls the sort of perverse behavior by a child that has deadly consequences (Deut 21.18–21). Unlike such natural elements as the sea that honor their limits, Israel refuses that which is natural. 24: The weeks appointed refers to the seven-week period between the first cutting and the festival of weeks or Pentecost (Deut 16.9–10). 26: They take over the goods of others, or perhaps “They lurk like hunters crouching.” Given what follows (v. 27), the image here is that of hunting birds and stuffing them into baskets. 28: As if trapping birds, the wicked trap the orphan and the needy, the most vulnerable members of society; cf. Isa 1.17; Am 2.6–7; Mic 3.1–3; Zech 7.10; Ex 22.21–24; Deut 24.17–18. 29: See 5.9n. 31: The prophets prophesy the lie (Heb “sheqer”), referring alternatively either to false confidence in God or else to devotion to the Canaanite god Baal, two aspects of the same offense. The priests rule as the prophets direct, lit. “the priests rule over their hands.” Either the priests make decisions on the basis of false prophecy, or the priests dominate the prophets and censor their message (see 20.1–2; 29.26–27).

6.1–9: The attack surrounds Jerusalem. 1: The tribal territory of Benjamin was directly north of Jerusalem and Tekoa, hometown of the prophet Amos (Am 1.1), was ca. 11 mi (18km) to its south. Again the trumpet and signal (lit. “an upraising”) warn of attack. The verb “blow (trumpet)” (Heb “tiq’u”) plays on the name “Tekoa” (“teqoa”); see 4.5–6n. Beth-haccherem (“vineyard house”) is mentioned otherwise only in Neh 3.14, where it is a district in Judah. Some scholars identify it here as Ramat-rahel, ca. 3 mi (5 km) south of Jerusalem. 3: Shepherds,

They shall pitch their tents around her;
 they shall pasture, all in their places.
 4 “Prepare war against her;
 up, and let us attack at noon!” “Woe to us, for the day declines, the shadows of evening lengthen!” 5 “Up, and let us attack by night, and destroy her palaces!”
 6 For thus says the LORD of hosts:
 Cut down her trees;
 cast up a siege ramp against Jerusalem.
 This is the city that must be punished;^a there is nothing but oppression within her.
 7 As a well keeps its water fresh,
 so she keeps fresh her wickedness;
 violence and destruction are heard within
 her;
 sickness and wounds are ever before
 me.
 8 Take warning, O Jerusalem, or I shall turn from you in disgust,
 and make you a desolation,
 an uninhabited land.
 9 Thus says the LORD of hosts:
 Glean^b thoroughly as a vine
 the remnant of Israel;
 like a grape-gatherer, pass your hand again over its branches.
 10 To whom shall I speak and give warning, that they may hear?
 See, their ears are closed,^c
 they cannot listen.
 The word of the LORD is to them an object of scorn;
 they take no pleasure in it.
 11 But I am full of the wrath of the LORD;
 I am weary of holding it in.

Pour it out on the children in the street, and on the gatherings of young men as well;
 both husband and wife shall be taken,
 the old folk and the very aged.
 12 Their houses shall be turned over to others,
 their fields and wives together;
 for I will stretch out my hand against the inhabitants of the land,
 says the LORD.
 13 For from the least to the greatest of
 them,
 everyone is greedy for unjust gain;
 and from prophet to priest,
 everyone deals falsely.
 14 They have treated the wound of my people carelessly, saying, “Peace, peace,”
 when there is no peace.
 15 They acted shamefully, they committed abomination;
 yet they were not ashamed,
 they did not know how to blush.
 Therefore they shall fall among those who fall;
 at the time that I punish them, they shall be overthrown,
 says the LORD.

enemy kings and their armies will surround Jerusalem. The verb used of “pitching” a tent is the same used of “blowing” a trumpet in v. 1. 4–5: Alternating quotations of the enemy and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. Prepare, lit. “sanctify,” since war involved blood and required a state of ritual purity (see 2 Sam 11.11; Jer 51.27; Joel 3.9). 6: Cut down her trees, permitted for building siege ramps to storm defensive walls (see Deut 20.19–20). 8: Turn from you in disgust, the verb used here (Heb “teqa”) again plays on the name Tekoa (see vv. 1n., 3n.) and indicates a dislocation of something, as in the dislocation of Jacob’s hip (Gen 32.26). 9: Glean, Israel will be stripped clean by its enemies. Gleaning was the practice of allowing the poor to come into a field to pick what remained after the regular harvest (Deut 24.21).

6.10–21: Israel refuses to heed the sentinel’s warning. Vv. 12–15 are a near doublet of 8.10–12. 11: The prophet’s personal agony; see 20.9. Taken, that is, captured by the enemy. 14: Prophetic promises of peace and well-

But they said, “We will not walk in it.”

¹⁷ Also I raised up sentinels for you:
“Give heed to the sound of the

But they said, “We will not give heed.”

¹⁸ Therefore hear, O nations, and know, O congregation, what will happen to them.

¹⁹ Hear, O earth; I am going to bring

²⁰ Of what use to me is frankincense that being are delusional; cf. Ezek 13.10. ¹⁷: Israel repeatedly refuses to heed the sentinel's warnings. On the prophet as a sentinel, cf. Ezek 3.17–21. ²⁰: Sheba, located in Arabia and valued for its spice trade (Isa 60.6; Ezek 27.22). All these items, including sweet cane, were offered to God in smoke (burnt offerings) as a pleasing odor in Israel's Temple worship (see Gen 8.20–21; Lev 1.9; Isa 43.24), but God rejects them if they are not accompanied by acts of justice and mercy (Am 5.21–24; 1 Sam 15.22).

6.22–26: Refusing the warning, the enemy comes and Israel is called to ritual mourning. ²²: On the enemy from the north, see 1.14n. ²³: Ride on horses, that is, ride on horse-drawn chariots, which were the major battle-field war machines, rather than riding horseback. ²⁴: Now Israel hears the warning, but it is too late. A woman in labor is a common metaphor for being in agony and distress. See 4.31; 13.21; 22.23. ²⁵: Terror is on every side, a refrain in Jeremiah (20.3–4, 10; 46.5; 49.29). ²⁶: My poor people, lit. “daughter of my people” (see 4.11). Sackcloth . . . ashes, ritual actions associated with mourning and entreaty for divine favor in crisis situations (see Jon 3.6; Isa 58.5; Dan 9.3).

6.27–30: Conclusion to the oracles from the time of King Josiah: Israel's final rejection. God appoints Jeremiah to refine Israel's metal (cf. Isa 48.10; Zech 13.9; Mal 3.2–4), but it is in vain. Jeremiah may be fortified with bronze and iron (1.18), but Israel has proved to be a match, as they too are bronze and iron (v. 28). Israel's dross cannot be removed by any process of refinement, no matter how hot the fire. The section concludes with final words of divine rejection, bringing this first section of the book to an ominous close.

in vain the refining goes on,
for the wicked are not removed.
³⁰They are called “rejected silver,”
for the LORD has rejected them.

7 The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD: ²Stand in the gate of the LORD’s house, and proclaim there this word, and say, Hear the word of the LORD, all you people of Judah, you that enter these gates to worship the LORD. ³Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Amend your ways and your doings, and let me dwell with you^a in this place. ⁴Do not trust in these deceptive words: “This is^b the temple of the LORD, the temple of the LORD, the temple of the LORD.”

⁵For if you truly amend your ways and your doings, if you truly act justly one with another, ⁶if you do not oppress the alien, the orphan, and the widow, or shed innocent blood in this place, and if you do not go after other gods to your own hurt, ⁷then I will dwell with you in this place, in the land that I gave of old to your ancestors forever and ever.

⁸Here you are, trusting in deceptive words to no avail. ⁹Will you steal, murder, commit adultery, swear falsely, make offerings to Baal, and go after other gods that you have not known, ¹⁰and then come and stand before me in this house, which is called by my name, and say, “We are safe!”—only to go on doing all these abominations? ¹¹Has this house, which is called by my name, become a den of robbers in your sight? You know, I too am watching, says the LORD. ¹²Go now to my place that was in Shiloh, where I made my name dwell at first, and see what I did to it for the wickedness of my people Israel. ¹³And now, because you have done all these things, says the LORD, and when I spoke to you persistently, you did not listen, and when I called you, you did not answer, ¹⁴therefore I will do to the house that is called by my name, in which you trust, and to the place that I gave to you and to your ancestors, just what I did to Shiloh. ¹⁵And I will cast you out of my sight, just as I cast out all your kinsfolk, all the offspring of Ephraim.

¹⁶As for you, do not pray for this people, do not raise a cry or prayer on their behalf, and do not intercede with me, for I will not hear you. ¹⁷Do you not see what they are doing in the towns of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem? ¹⁸The children gather wood, the fathers kindle fire, and the women

^b Heb They are

7:1–15: The Temple sermon opens the unit 7:1–10:25, which depicts the sickness, death, and funeral of Judah along with Judah’s acceptance of its fate. The Temple sermon is generally associated with the events of ch 26 and Jeremiah’s first arrest in 609 BCE, given the thematic connections of chs 7 and 26. 3: Let me dwell, this is not a request by God, but rather a promise expressing God’s strong intentionality that God will indeed dwell with the people (or will indeed establish their dwelling, following both the MT and the Gk) under changed conditions. 4: The Temple was regarded as a place of sanctuary where one might seek refuge from reprisal (1 Kings 1:50; 2:28; see 17:1n.). The people believe that their mere presence in the Temple renders them safe (v. 10). Although liturgical tradition expressed God’s protection of Jerusalem and the Temple (e.g., Pss 46; 48; 76; see also Isa 31:4; 37:35), it is deceptive (lit. a “lie,” Heb “sheqer”) to think that this necessarily assures God’s protection. The threefold repetition implies that the phrase had become a cliché. 5–7: The requirements for true sincerity are consistent with the values expressed in Deuteronomy (5:7; 10:18–19; 24:17–22; 27:19) and in other prophets (Isa 10:2; 59:7; Hos 3:1). 9: Five of the Ten Commandments (Ex 20:1–17; Deut 5:6–21). 11: Den of robbers, they imagine the Temple to be a bandit cave or hideout. 12: At first, or “formerly.” On Eli and the fate of Shiloh, destroyed during the early Philistine wars, see 1 Sam 4–6; Ps 78:60. The memory of Shiloh was important for Jeremiah’s own family, descended from the priests of Shiloh through Abiathar, David’s priest who was exiled to Anathoth by Solomon. 14: Called by my name, characteristic of Deuteronomistic theology, which speaks of God choosing a place “to put his name there” (Deut 12:5; 14:23). 15: Ephraim, the tribe whose ancestor was the son of Joseph, and the most important within the northern tribal group, here as elsewhere symbolizing the entirety of the Northern Kingdom, which had been defeated and deported by the Assyrians more than a century earlier.

7:16–20: Jeremiah prohibited from intercession, a critical function of prophetic identity (Am 7:2,5); cf. 11:14; 14:11. 18: Cakes for the queen of heaven, a ritual custom honoring the goddess Astarte (Babylonian Ishtar), goddess of fecundity and fertility; see also 44:17–19 and cf. Judg 2:13; 10:6; 1 Sam 7:3–4; 2 Kings 23:13. Though the knead dough, to make cakes for the queen of heaven; and they pour out drink offerings to other gods, to provoke me to anger. ¹⁹ Is it I whom they provoke? says the LORD. Is it not themselves, to their own hurt? ²⁰ Therefore thus says the Lord God: My anger and my wrath shall be poured out on this place, on human beings and animals, on the trees of the field and the fruit of the ground; it will burn and not be quenched.

²¹ Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Add your burnt offerings to your sacrifices, and eat the flesh. ²² For in the day that I brought your ancestors out of the land of Egypt, I did not speak to them or command them concerning burnt offerings and sacrifices. ²³ But this command I gave them, “Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and you shall be my people; and walk only in the way that I command you, so that it may be well with you.” ²⁴ Yet they did not obey or incline their ear, but, in the stubbornness of their evil will, they walked in their own counsels, and looked backward rather than forward. ²⁵ From the day that your ancestors came out of the land of Egypt until this day, I have persistently sent all my servants the prophets to them, day after day; ²⁶ yet they did not listen to me, or pay attention, but they stiffened their necks. They did worse than their ancestors did.

²⁷ So you shall speak all these words to them, but they will not listen to you. You shall call to them, but they will not answer you. ²⁸ You shall say to them: This is the nation that did not obey the voice of the LORD their God, and did not accept discipline; truth has perished; it is cut off from their lips.

worship of the queen of heaven was practiced chiefly by women (so 44.15,19), the texts here indicate that the entire family was actively involved; see also 44.17n. 19: To their own hurt, or “to the shame (Heb “boshet”) of their own face.” The term “boshet” is code language for the Canaanite god Baal and for religious apostasy in general. See 2.26n.; 3.24.

7.21–26: Sacrifice and obedience. While part of the “sacrifice” was eaten by the one offering it, the “burnt offering” was offered up whole to God in smoke. The eating of both typifies the ritual abuses of Israel. 22: I did not speak . . . concerning . . . sacrifices, the Exodus preceded the giving of the sacrificial laws at Sinai; see also Amos 5.25. The custom of sacrifice is but one illustration of the commitment one is to show toward God, and ritual actions are no substitute or replacement for moral integrity (Isa 1.11–17). 25: That God has persistently sent all my servants the prophets is a principle of Deuteronomistic theology explicit in Jeremiah; see 25.4; 26.5; 29.19; 35.15; 44.4; 2 Kings 17.13,23; 21.10; 24.2.

7.27–8.3: Israel’s death announced. Israel’s lack of obedience leads to its death, consistent with the language of Deuteronomy (e.g., Deut 30.19). 27: Like Isaiah (6.9–11), Jeremiah will preach to an audience unwilling or unable to hear. 29: Cut off your hair . . . raise a lamentation, both were funeral rituals (see 16.6n.). 31: High place, see 3.6n. Topheth . . . in the valley of the son of Hinnom, the valley skirting Jerusalem to the south and west was likely the site of many fire-pits for garbage, but also the site for sacrificing children in fire for divine favor. The custom was practiced even by Israel’s kings (Deut 18.10; 2 Kings 16.3; 21.6) but was proscribed in the reform of King Josiah (2 Kings 23.10); see 19.2–5; 32.35. “Topheth” is also a “burning place” in Isa 30.33 (see textual note b there). The name Valley of Hinnom (Heb “ge’ hinnom”) lies behind the later name Gehenna, used for the netherworld as a fire-pit. 33: No one will frighten them away, exposure of a dead corpse was an act of desecration and

8 At that time, says the LORD, the bones of the kings of Judah, the bones of its officials, the bones of the priests, the bones of the prophets, and the bones of the inhabitants of Jerusalem shall be brought out of their tombs;² and they shall be spread before the sun and the moon and all the host of heaven, which they have loved and served, which they have followed, and which they have inquired of and worshiped; and they shall not be gathered or buried; they shall be like dung on the surface of the ground.³ Death shall be preferred to life by all the remnant that remains of this evil family in all the places where I have driven them, says the LORD of hosts.

If they go astray, do they not turn back?

⁵Why then has this people^a turned away in perpetual backsliding?

They have held fast to deceit, they have refused to return.

⁹The wise shall be put to shame, they shall be dismayed and taken; since they have rejected the word of the LORD, what wisdom is in them?

¹⁰Therefore I will give their wives to others and their fields to conquerors, because from the least to the greatest everyone is greedy for unjust gain; from prophet to priest everyone deals falsely.

¹¹They have treated the wound of my people carelessly, saying, "Peace, peace," when there is no peace.

On the importance of keeping birds and animals away from a corpse, see 2 Sam 21.1–10. 34: On this formulaic language see 16.9; 25.10; 33.11. 8.1–3: On exhuming the remains as a way of shaming the deceased, see 16.4; 1 Kings 13.2; 2 Kings 23.14,16. Though human behavior is conditioned by nature (v. 4) and though nature is infused with wisdom (8.7, birds migrate with seasons), Israel's claim to wisdom is a sham (8.8–9), both because of its moral failure (v. 10) and for promoting false optimism in a time of national crisis (v. 11). 8: False pen of the scribes, normally it is the priest who is responsible for guarding and dispensing law or instruction (Heb "torah"). of the text” of the Torah (Ezra 7.11). 10–12: Cf. the near doublet at 6.12–15. 13–14: Gather, a term associated with “ingathering” of fruit at the fall harvest. There is no produce to be gathered, so the people seek to “gather themselves” for death. 16: Horses, the horse was the chief animal of warfare (see 6.23n.), signaling that the enemy armies are pressing in from Dan, in the far north of the country; cf. 4.15. 17: The adder represents those snakes known to be nonresponsive to being “charmed” by whispering; see Ps 58.4–5; Eccl 10.11.

8.18–9.3: Israel is sick unto death, and God grieves. 8.19: My poor people, lit. “daughter (of) my people.” See 4.11; 6.26. Of course the king (God) is in Zion, and it is thus an offense that they have not removed the images and idols from God’s presence. 20–21: The harvest is past, see 8.13–14n. Death and mourning rituals are near at hand. 22: Balm in Gilead, the region of Gilead, in the north of Israel’s territory in Transjordan, was known for its medicinal herbs (46.11; Gen 37.25). The question begs a positive response, thereby setting up an intolerable incongruity between what ought to be and what is in fact the case. With plenty of medicine at hand, Jerusalem is dying. 9.1: Spring of water, the people have drunk “poison water” (Heb “me-ro’sh,” 8.14), but an entire “head of waters” (Heb “ro’shi mayim”) cannot provide tears enough to mourn Israel’s death. 3: Bend their tongues like

They refuse to know me, says the LORD.

⁷ Therefore thus says the LORD of hosts:
I will now refine and test them,
for what else can I do with my sinful

⁸ Their tongue is a deadly arrow;
it speaks deceit through the mouth.
They all speak friendly words to their neighbors,
but inwardly are planning to lay an ambush.

⁹ Shall I not punish them for these things?
says the LORD;
and shall I not bring retribution on a nation such as this?

¹⁰ Take up^f weeping and wailing for the ¹² Who is wise enough to understand this?

To whom has the mouth of the LORD spoken, so that they may declare it? Why is the land ruined and laid waste like a wilderness, so that no one passes through? ¹³ And the LORD says: Because they have forsaken my law that I set before them, and have not obeyed my voice, or walked in accordance with it, ¹⁴ but have stubbornly followed their own hearts and have gone after the Baals, as their ancestors taught them. ¹⁵ Therefore thus says the

this people with wormwood, and giving them poisonous water to drink. ¹⁶ I will scatter them among nations that neither they nor their ancestors have known; and I will send

them.

9.4–9: The LORD’s warnings: Supplanters (Heb “‘aqob ya’qob”), Israel is characterized by its name, Jacob (“ya’aqob”), and is full of oppression and deceit. On Jacob’s twofold “supplanting” of his brother, see Gen 27.36; cf. 9.10–26: Only the professional singers of the funeral dirge are truly wise. 10: Lamentation (Heb “qinah”) is the technical term for the funeral dirge. The displacement of domestic animals by wild animals is a conventional way of representing the destruction of a city or a land (Isa 13.20–22; 34.10–15). 12: The central question is posed: “Who is wise enough?” 14: Baals, see 2.23n. 15: Wormwood, an extremely bitter and poisonous herbal extract; cf. 23.15; Deut 29.17; Am 6.12. Poisonous water, cf. 8.14. Israel is experiencing death by poisoning. 17:

19 For a sound of wailing is heard from Zion:

“How we are ruined!

We are utterly shamed,
 because we have left the land, because they have cast down our dwellings.”

20 Hear, O women, the word of the LORD, and let your ears receive the word of his mouth;

teach to your daughters a dirge,
 and each to her neighbor a lament.

21 “Death has come up into our windows,
 it has entered our palaces,
 to cut off the children from the streets and the young men from the squares.”

22 Speak! Thus says the LORD: “Human corpses shall fall like dung upon the open field, like sheaves behind the reaper,
 and no one shall gather them.”

23 Thus says the LORD: Do not let the wise boast in their wisdom, do not let the mighty boast in their might, do not let the wealthy boast in their wealth; 24 but let those who boast boast in this, that they understand and know me, that I am the LORD; I act with steadfast love, justice, and righteousness in the earth, for in these things I delight, says the LORD.

25 The days are surely coming, says the LORD, when I will attend to all those who are circumcised only in the foreskin: 26 Egypt, Judah, Edom, the Ammonites, Moab, and all those with shaven temples who live in the desert. For all these nations are uncircumcised, and all the house of Israel is uncircumcised in heart.

10 Hear the word that the LORD speaks to you, O house of Israel. 2 Thus says the
 LORD:

Do not learn the way of the nations, or be dismayed at the signs of the
 heavens;

for the nations are dismayed at them.

3 For the customs of the peoples are false:
 a tree from the forest is cut down, and worked with an ax by the hands of an artisan;

4 people deck it with silver and gold;
 they fasten it with hammer and nails
 so that it cannot move.

5 Their idols^a are like scarecrows in a cucumber field,
 and they cannot speak;
 they have to be carried,
 for they cannot walk.

Do not be afraid of them,
 for they cannot do evil,
 nor is it in them to do good.

^a Heb They

Skilled women, lit. “the wise women.” Only these professional dirge singers (cf. 2 Chr 35.25) are truly “wise,” because they recognize death as a reality. 21: Death sneaking in through the window echoes a theme from Canaanite mythology regarding Baal’s own palace. 22: No one shall gather them, echoing the failure of the harvest (8.13–14). 25: Circumcised only in the foreskin, other nations shared the custom of circumcision with Israel, and shared Israel’s guilt, in that physical circumcision is no substitute for circumcision of the heart; see 4.4n. 26: Shaven temples, lit. “cutting the corners,” a practice of desert inhabitants (25.23; 49.32) but proscribed for Israelites (Lev 19.27; 21.5).

10.1–18: Israel’s judgment doxology. Custom dictated that persons condemned “give glory to God” as a means of accepting any “bloodguilt” for a pending judgment upon them (13.16; Josh 7.19). 1–10: A characteristic satire of human-made idols, similar to Isa 44.9–20. 2: Dismayed at the signs of the heavens, i.e., obsessed by astrological phenomena, characteristic of Israel’s neighbors. The gods were associated with stars and planets. 4: Deck it, that is “adorn it, beautify it” (cf. Isa 40.18–20; 41.6–7). So that it cannot move, or “so that it will not teeter”; see Isa 28.7. 5: Like scarecrows in a cucumber field, obscure reference, meaning they are either as stiff as a post or totally lifeless, although made to look human (or divine); cf. Isa 1.8; Let Jer 1.70. They have to be carried, whereas God “carried” Israel, such idols have to be carried themselves (Isa 46.3–7). That such gods can do

The invading Babylonians destroyed Judah’s infrastructure in 586 BCE and carried the leaders (shepherds) and wealthy into captivity (52.1–30). 22: As elsewhere, this invasion comes from . . . the north (1.13–15; 4.6; 6.22; 25.9). 23–25: A prayer. The one who prays cites Prov 20.24 (v. 23) and Ps 79.6–7 (v. 25) to direct God’s attention away from Judah and to neighboring nations instead. 24: It was acceptable for Israel to plead for tempered justice (cf. 46.28; Ps 141.5). 25: Biblical piety often allows the one experiencing divine judgment also to call for divine action against the enemies of God who “devour” God’s portion; see 2.3; Ps 7.6,9.

11.1–17: The broken covenant. The disobedience of Israel’s ancestors and their punishment has not prompted Israel to any greater faithfulness. They, like their ancestors, have also broken the covenant and are so cut off from divine favor that even intercession is of no assistance. Much of the language echoes the book of Deuteronomy (v. 3, Deut 27.26; v. 4, Deut 4.20; v. 5, oath . . . ancestors, Deut 7.8,12–13; a land flowing with milk and honey, Deut 6.3; 11.9; as at this day, Deut 6.24; 10.15). 1–5: Recalls the curses and blessings that typically conclude a treaty or covenant agreement. 4: Your ancestors, that is, those led by Moses from Egypt in the Exodus. In this tradition, the covenant was made with Moses at Sinai. 5: The oath that I swore to your ancestors, here the reference is to the ancestors of those mentioned in v. 4—that is, to the generations of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. In this tradition, these ancestors did not receive a “covenant” but rather an “oath” or “promissory note.” This promissory note was for the land of Canaan, flowing with milk and honey (see Ex 13.5; Deut 6.3; 11.9; 26.15). So be it, LORD, Jeremiah’s response (Heb “amen”), is the technical response accepting the consequences of a self-imprecation when swearing an oath; see Deut 27.15–26. 6–8: Given the failure of their ancestors, the people are subject to the treaty curses. 7: Your ancestors, that

⁹ And the LORD said to me: Conspiracy exists among the people of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. ¹⁰ They have turned back to the iniquities of their ancestors of old, who refused to heed my words; they have gone after other gods to serve them; the house of Israel and the house of Judah have broken the covenant that I made with their ancestors. ¹¹ Therefore, thus says the LORD, assuredly I am going to bring disaster upon them that they cannot escape; though they cry out to me, I will not listen to them. ¹² Then the cities of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem will go and cry out to the gods to whom they make offerings, but they will never save them in the time of their trouble. ¹³ For your gods have become as many as your towns, O Judah; and as many as the streets of Jerusalem are the altars to shame you have set up, altars to make offerings to Baal.

¹⁴ As for you, do not pray for this people, or lift up a cry or prayer on their behalf, for I will not listen when they call to me in the time of their trouble. ¹⁵ What right has my beloved in my house, when she has done vile deeds? Can vows^a and sacrificial flesh avert your doom? Can you then exult? ¹⁶ The LORD once called you, “A green olive tree, fair with goodly fruit”; but with the roar of a great tempest he will set fire to it, and its branches will be consumed. ¹⁷ The LORD of hosts, who planted you, has pronounced evil against you, because of the evil that the house of Israel and the house of Judah have done, provoking me to anger by making offerings to Baal.

¹⁸ It was the LORD who made it known to me, and I knew;

then you showed me their evil deeds.

¹⁹ But I was like a gentle lamb led to the slaughter.

And I did not know it was against me that they devised schemes, saying,

“Let us destroy the tree with its fruit, let us cut him off from the land of the living, so that his name will no longer be remembered!”

²⁰ But you, O LORD of hosts, who judge righteously, who try the heart and the mind, let me see your retribution upon them, for to you I have committed my cause.

²¹ Therefore thus says the LORD concerning the people of Anathoth, who seek your life, and say, “You shall not prophesy in the name of the LORD, or you will die by our hand”— is, the generation of Moses. 8: All the words of this covenant. The curse of v. 3, but more generally of Deut 28.15–44. 9–13: Israel’s present disobedience (going after other gods, v. 10) is a return to the ways of the ancestors, that is, to the generation of Moses. 9: Conspiracy, used specifically of plots of rebellion against the king. See 2 Sam 15.12; 2 Kings 11.14. 13: Shame (Heb “boshet”) is a metaphor for the Canaanite god Baal (see 2.26n.; 3.24; 7.19). 14–17: God’s refusal to listen to Israel’s cry (v. 11) has as its corollary God’s refusal to allow Jeremiah to intercede on their behalf (see 7.16). 16: Green olive tree, on the high status of this tree, see Judg 9.8–9; Hos 14.6; Ps 52.8.

11.18–12.17: Jeremiah’s complaints and divine response. The first of Jeremiah’s complaints, these words were shaped by the editor utilizing typical psalm language and attributed to Jeremiah in order to enhance the persona of the suffering prophet. See also 15.20–21; 17.14–18; 18.18–23; 20.7–13; 20.14–18. 11.18–23: If Jeremiah cannot pray on behalf of the people (see v. 14), he will pray (lament) on his own behalf. 19: Lamb led to the slaughter, cf. Isa 53.7. 20: Who try the heart and the mind, the psalmist often appeals to God’s testing as a basis for God to act for the sake of divine justice and mercy, convinced that God will find the heart free from sin and deceit. See Pss 17.3; 26.2. 139.23. 21: The people of Anathoth, that is, from Jeremiah’s own hometown, suggesting that Jeremiah was threatened with death if he continued to prophesy such things. On Anathoth, see 1.1n. and 7.12n. 22: Famine, that is, a shortage of food prompted by the Babylonian siege; cf. 19.9 and 2 Kings 6.24–29.

12.1–17: The complaints of Jeremiah and God merge in their grief over Israel. Such accusation against God

12 You will be in the right, O LORD, when I lay charges against you;
 but let me put my case to you.
 Why does the way of the guilty prosper?
 Why do all who are treacherous thrive?
² You plant them, and they take root;
 they grow and bring forth fruit;
 you are near in their mouths yet far from their hearts.
³ But you, O LORD, know me;
 You see me and test me—my heart is
 with you.
 Pull them out like sheep for the slaughter, and set them apart for the day of slaughter.
⁴ How long will the land mourn,
 and the grass of every field wither?
 For the wickedness of those who live in it the animals and the birds are swept away,
 and because people said, “He is blind to our ways.”^a ⁵ If you have raced with foot-runners and they have wearied you,
 how will you compete with horses?
 And if in a safe land you fall down, how will you fare in the thickets of the Jordan?
⁶ For even your kinsfolk and your own family,
 even they have dealt treacherously with
 you;
 they are in full cry after you;
 do not believe them,

though they speak friendly words to
 you.

⁷ I have forsaken my house,
 I have abandoned my heritage;
 I have given the beloved of my heart into the hands of her enemies.
⁸ My heritage has become to me like a lion in the forest;
 she has lifted up her voice against me—
 therefore I hate her.
⁹ Is the hyena greedy^b for my heritage at my command?
 Are the birds of prey all around her?
 Go, assemble all the wild animals;
 bring them to devour her.
¹⁰ Many shepherds have destroyed my
 vineyard,
 they have trampled down my
 portion,
 they have made my pleasant portion a desolate wilderness.
¹¹ They have made it a desolation;
 desolate, it mourns to me.
 The whole land is made desolate,
 but no one lays it to heart.
¹² Upon all the bare heights^c in the desert spoilers have come;
 for the sword of the LORD devours from one end of the land to the other;
 no one shall be safe.

and, at the same time, against one's enemies is characteristic of Israelite piety. Just as Jeremiah is alienated from his own family (v. 6), so God is alienated from God's own house (v. 7). 1: Lay charges, technical term for lodging a formal legal appeal. Like Job (Job 9.3; 23.1–17), Jeremiah wishes to sue God in court but knows that he cannot win. Conventional wisdom and the sentiments of Deuteronomic theology suggest that sin is punished and righteousness rewarded. Jeremiah frames his complaint in terms of general human suffering; cf. Hab 1.1–17. 3: Know me . . . test me, typical sentiments of the Psalms, where God's testing is invited to prove one's merit and righteousness (Pss 11.5; 17.3; 139.23–24). Like sheep for the slaughter, cf. 11.19.

12.5–6: God's response to Jeremiah. 5: Foot-runners, or more likely foot soldiers (Judg 20.2; 1 Sam 4.10; 15.4), as opposed to horse-drawn chariots. Thickets of the Jordan, the “pride” or lush river banks of the Jordan River was the abode of wild lions (49.19; Zech 11.3). 6: Even your kinsfolk, the people of Anathoth; see 11.21.

12.7–13: God's lament over Israel for abandoning her to her enemies. 8: I hate her, the term also has the technical sense in treaty contexts of becoming an enemy to another nation. God has become Israel's covenanted enemy. 9: The questions beg a negative answer, so the scavengers must be assembled to feed on the carcass of the victim. 10: Many shepherds, referring to Israel's kings; see 23.1–4. 11: The whole land, the Heb term “erets” can mean “land” (of Israel) or “earth.” The term here used of Israel introduces a cosmic element that is developed in what follows as all the nations are swept up in divine judgment.

¹³They have sown wheat and have reaped thorns, they have tired themselves out but profit nothing.
They shall be ashamed of their^a harvests
because of the fierce anger of the LORD.

¹⁴Thus says the LORD concerning all my evil neighbors who touch the heritage that I have given my people Israel to inherit: I am about to pluck them up from their land, and I will pluck up the house of Judah from among them. ¹⁵And after I have plucked them up, I will again have compassion on them, and I will bring them again to their heritage and to their land, every one of them. ¹⁶And then, if they will diligently learn the ways of my people, to swear by my name, “As the LORD lives,” as they taught my people to swear by Baal, then they shall be built up in the midst of my people. ¹⁷But if any nation will not listen, then I will completely uproot it and destroy it, says the LORD.

13 Thus said the LORD to me, “Go and buy yourself a linen loincloth, and put it on your loins, but do not dip it in water.”
²So I bought a loincloth according to the word of the LORD, and put it on my loins.
³And the word of the LORD came to me a second time, saying, ⁴“Take the loincloth that you bought and are wearing, and go now to the Euphrates,^b and hide it there in a cleft of the rock.” ⁵So I went, and hid it by the Euphrates,^c as the LORD commanded me.
⁶And after many days the LORD said to me,

“Go now to the Euphrates,^b and take from there the loincloth that I commanded you to hide there.” ⁷Then I went to the Euphrates,^b and dug, and I took the loincloth from the place where I had hidden it. But now the loincloth was ruined; it was good for nothing.

⁸Then the word of the LORD came to me:
⁹Thus says the LORD: Just so I will ruin the pride of Judah and the great pride of Jerusalem. ¹⁰This evil people, who refuse to hear my words, who stubbornly follow their own will and have gone after other gods to serve them and worship them, shall be like this loincloth, which is good for nothing. ¹¹For as the loincloth clings to one’s loins, so I made the whole house of Israel and the whole house of Judah cling to me, says the LORD, in order that they might be for me a people, a name, a praise, and a glory. But they would not listen.

¹²You shall speak to them this word: Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: Every wine-jar should be filled with wine. And they will say to you, “Do you think we do not know that every wine-jar should be filled with wine?” ¹³Then you shall say to them: Thus says the LORD: I am about to fill all the inhabitants of this land—the kings who sit on David’s throne, the priests, the prophets, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem—with drunkenness. ¹⁴And I will dash them one against 12.14–17: An addition to the divine lament, reshaping it to promise Judah’s restoration in the midst of universal restoration. 14: Pluck them up, a thematic term in Jeremiah, used of judgment (1.10). Here Judah’s fate is placed in universal context as all the nations are uprooted, Judah among them. 15: Everyone of them refers not simply to Judah but to all nations, who will live figuratively in Judah’s midst (vv. 16–17). 16: Baal, the Canaanite deity. 17: Uproot . . . destroy, 1.10.

13.1–27: The sign of the loincloth. A series of oracles held together by word associations. The series is introduced with the symbolic story of Jeremiah’s loincloth, representing God’s intimacy with Israel and Israel’s “clinging” to God (v. 11); it also represents the “ruined” nature of the relationship that was now “good for nothing” (v. 10). 1–11: Sign-acts are a common feature of prophetic behavior (cf. chs 16; 18; 19; 32; Ezek 4.1–5.17). 4: Euphrates, some doubt there were two trips to the Euphrates (Heb “perat”); instead they suggest that the town of Parah (textual note b), mentioned only in Josh 18.23, is meant. This sign is more likely a literary device. See also the prophetic sign associated with the Euphrates in 51.60–64. 9: Pride of Jerusalem, majesty belongs to God, and national pride, whether that of Israel and Jerusalem (Hos 5.5; Am 6.8) or other nations (48.29; Isa 13.11,19; Ezek 16.49), is offensive to God. 12–14: Taking up the term “ruin” from the earlier sign (v. 14, “destroy”), the image shifts to the nations being filled with wine, often a symbol of either drunkenness or even of poisoning

¹⁵ Hear and give ear; do not be haughty, for the LORD has spoken.

¹⁶ Give glory to the LORD your God before he brings darkness, and before your feet stumble on the mountains at twilight; while you look for light, he turns it into gloom and makes it deep darkness.

¹⁷ But if you will not listen, my soul will weep in secret for your pride; my eyes will weep bitterly and run down with tears, because the LORD's flock has been taken captive.

¹⁸ Say to the king and the queen mother: "Take a lowly seat, for your beautiful crown has come down from your head."^a ²⁰ Lift up your eyes and see those who come from the north. Where is the flock that was given you, your beautiful flock?

²¹ What will you say when they set as head over you those whom you have trained to be your allies? Will not pangs take hold of you, like those of a woman in labor?

²² And if you say in your heart, "Why have these things come upon me?"

it is for the greatness of your iniquity that your skirts are lifted up, and you are violated.

²³ Can Ethiopians^b change their skin or leopards their spots? Then also you can do good who are accustomed to do evil.

²⁶ I myself will lift up your skirts over your face, and your shame will be seen.

²⁷ I have seen your abominations, your adulteries and neighings, your shameless prostitutions on the hills of the countryside.

Woe to you, O Jerusalem! How long will it be before you are made clean?

 they pant for air like jackals;
 their eyes fail
 because there is no herbage.

⁷ Although our iniquities testify against us, act, O LORD, for your name's sake;
 our apostasies indeed are many,
 and we have sinned against you.

⁸ O hope of Israel,
 its savior in time of trouble, why should you be like a stranger in the
 land,
 like a traveler turning aside for the night?

⁹ Why should you be like someone confused,
 like a mighty warrior who cannot give help?

Yet you, O LORD, are in the midst of us, and we are called by your name;
 do not forsake us!

¹⁰ Thus says the LORD concerning this
 people:

Truly they have loved to wander,
 they have not restrained their feet;

therefore the LORD does not accept them, now he will remember their iniquity and punish their sins.

¹¹ The LORD said to me: Do not pray for the welfare of this people. ¹² Although they fast, I do not hear their cry, and although they offer burnt offering and grain offering, I do not accept them; but by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence I consume them.

¹³ Then I said: "Ah, Lord GOD! Here are the prophets saying to them, 'You shall not see the sword, nor shall you have famine, but I will give you true peace in this place.'"

¹⁴ And the LORD said to me: The prophets are prophesying lies in my name; I did not send them, nor did I command them or speak to them. They are prophesying to you a lying vision, worthless divination, and the deceit of their own minds. ¹⁵ Therefore thus says the LORD concerning the prophets who prophesy in my name though I did not send them, and who say, "Sword and famine shall not come on this land": By sword and famine those prophets shall be consumed.

¹⁶ And the people to whom they prophesy shall be thrown out into the streets of Jerusalem, victims of famine and sword. There shall be no one to bury them—their wives, their sons, and their daughters.
 For I will pour out their wickedness upon
 them.

Num 14.13–16; Ezek 20.1–26; Pss 25.11; 79.9. 8: Stranger, or "sojourner," a foreign resident and not a citizen with full rights and obligations, but nevertheless enjoying some social protections. 9: Called by your name, indicates possession. The appeal here is to God's responsibility as "owner" of Israel. 10: In spite of their appropriate and well-fashioned lament, God rejects their prayer using the technical language of worship. 11–16: Immediately following this lament and rejection, Jeremiah is again instructed not to perform the prophetic task of intercession (cf. 7.16; 11.14; 14.11), and God restates the rejection, again using the technical language of worship. 14: They are prophesying, using a form of the verb suggesting the ecstatic nature of prophetic utterance. Lies, a term used in Jeremiah to refer either to Baal worship or, as here, to the false confidence in God that "peace" (v. 13) is the order of the day (cf. 7.4). 17–18: The theme of "sword and famine" from the previous verses shapes this lament. 17. Virgin those destined for famine, to famine, and those destined for captivity, to captivity.

³ And I will appoint over them four kinds of the dogs to drag away, and the birds of the air and the wild animals of the earth to devour

the kingdoms of the earth because of what King Manasseh son of Hezekiah of Judah did in Jerusalem.

or who will bemoan you?
Who will turn aside

you are going backward;
so I have stretched out my hand against you and destroyed you—
I am weary of relenting.

Joel 2.13). 7: Bereaved them, that is, made them childless. 9: Bearing seven children or sons was considered a sign of blessing and good fortune (Gen 46.25; Ruth 4.15; 1 Sam 2.5; Job 42.13), just as the loss of seven was considered absolute bereavement (2 Sam 21.5–14; 2 Macc 7.20).

15.10–21: Jeremiah's second complaint and God's response. See 11.18–12.17n. 10: Borrowing and lending represents Jeremiah's claim to overall and basic innocence. Israel had strict limits to borrowing and lending; see Ex 22.25; Deut 24.10–11; Neh 5.10–11; and cf. 1 Sam 12.3. 11: The LORD said, or perhaps, with LXX, Jeremiah continues, "So be it LORD," with more claims of his innocence. See textual note a. 12: The question, though obscure, requires a negative response and must refer to the onslaught of the enemy from the north (see 1.14n.). Even Israel, armored with bronze and iron (6.28), cannot withstand the enemy from the north. 13: This must represent God's response. Israel is about to be plundered as punishment for its sins; cf. 17.3–4. 14: The notion of God's wrath burning forever is not in the Hebrew. 15: In your forbearance, God's "slowness to anger" is normally prized (Ex 34.6; Num 14.18), but here it becomes a scandalous problem for the one hoping for speedy divine intervention against the enemy. On your account, the psalmist can protest that he is suffering precisely because of devotion to God; see Ps 69.7. 16: Your words were found, may refer either to 1.9 or to the finding of the book of the law in the Temple (2 Kings 22.8); cf. Ezek 3.3. 17: Merrymakers, those who experience and celebrate the normal joys of life. Jeremiah complains of being bereft of joy. 18: Deceitful brook, cf. they will fight against you, for I am with you

 to save you and deliver you,
 says the LORD.

²¹I will deliver you out of the hand of the wicked,
 and redeem you from the grasp of the

16 The word of the LORD came to me:
²You shall not take a wife, nor shall you have sons or daughters in this place. ³For thus says the LORD concerning the sons and daughters who are born in this place, and concerning the mothers who bear them and the fathers who beget them in this land: ⁴They shall die of deadly diseases. They shall not be lamented, nor shall they be buried; they shall become like dung on the surface of the ground. They shall perish by the sword and by famine, and their dead bodies shall become food for the birds of the air and for the wild animals of the earth.

⁵For thus says the LORD: Do not enter the house of mourning, or go to lament, or bemoan them; for I have taken away my peace from this people, says the LORD, my steadfast love and mercy. ⁶Both great and small shall die in this land; they shall not be buried, and no one shall lament for them; there shall be no gashing, no shaving of the head for them.
⁷No one shall break bread^a for the mourner, to offer comfort for the dead; nor shall anyone give them the cup of consolation to drink for their fathers or their mothers. ⁸You shall not go into the house of feasting to sit with them, to eat and drink. ⁹For thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I am going to banish from this place, in your days and before your eyes, the voice of mirth and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride.

¹⁰And when you tell this people all these words, and they say to you, “Why has the LORD pronounced all this great evil against us? What is our iniquity? What is the sin that we have committed against the LORD our God?” ¹¹then you shall say to them: It is because your ancestors have forsaken me, says the LORD, and have gone after other gods and have served and worshiped them, and have forsaken me and have not kept my law; ¹²and because you have behaved worse than your ancestors, for here you are, every one of you, following your stubborn evil will, refusing to listen to me. ¹³Therefore
 I will hurl you out of this land into a land that neither you nor your ancestors have known, and there you shall serve other gods day and night, for I will show you no favor.

¹⁴Therefore, the days are surely coming,
 says the LORD, when it shall no longer be said, of Israel up out of the land of Egypt,” ¹⁵but bronze, God challenges Jeremiah to remain steadfast to his call and to the divine promise of being armored for battle against his adversaries (1:18; 15:12) in the face of popular assault.

16.1–21: Further prohibitions for Jeremiah as sign-acts of coming judgment. Like the prohibition of intercession, now Jeremiah is prohibited from the normal patterns of family life and mourning rituals as signs of the coming judgment. 1–4: Jeremiah is prohibited from marrying and having children, taken by some scholars to suggest a late date for his ministry, which could not then have begun until 609 BCE, when he was fairly young (see Introduction). Most argue that this is a literary or symbolic device and downplay its biographical accuracy. 4: Common themes in Jeremiah relating to the desecration of corpses; cf. 7:33; 8:2; 9:21; 19:7; 22:18; 25:33. 5–13: Jeremiah is prohibited from performing mourning customs. The image of dead bodies conjures up the next image of the “house of mourning.” 5: House of mourning (Heb “bet marzeah”), an uncommon word also found in nonbiblical sources, likely referring to a banquet held in honor of the dead, thus involving feasting; see Am 6:7. 6: Gashing and shaving of the head, ritual actions of mourning; cf. 7:29; Lev 19:28; Deut 14:1; Hos 7:14. 8: The house of mourning, with its food rituals, is connected with the house of feasting, lit. “house of drinking” with emphasis upon the consumption of wine. 9: See 7:34n. 10–12: Cf. Deut 4:25–28; 29:24–29. 12: The people’s sin is more grievous even than that of their ancestors; cf. 11:6–10. 13: The punishment will perfectly fit the crime: Israel will be forced to worship other gods in the land of their exile. 14–15: A brief interpolation from 23:7–8 promising restoration. The Exodus will be forgotten in the face of God’s new salvific event; cf. 3:16; 31:29; Isa 43:18. 16–18:

¹⁶I am now sending for many fishermen, says the LORD, and they shall catch them; and afterward I will send for many hunters, and they shall hunt them from every mountain and every hill, and out of the clefts of the rocks. ¹⁷For my eyes are on all their ways; they are not hidden from my presence, nor is their iniquity concealed from my sight. ¹⁸And^a I will doubly repay their iniquity and their sin, because they have polluted my land with the carcasses of their detestable idols, and have filled my inheritance with their abominations.

¹⁹O LORD, my strength and my stronghold, my refuge in the day of trouble, to you shall the nations come from the ends of the earth and say: Our ancestors have inherited nothing but lies, worthless things in which there is no profit.

²⁰Can mortals make for themselves gods? Such are no gods!

Your wealth and all your treasures I will give for spoil as the price of your sin^c throughout all your territory. ⁴By your own act you shall lose the heritage that I gave you, and I will make you serve your enemies in a land that you do not know, for in my anger a fire is kindled^d that shall burn forever.

Fishing and hunting as metaphors for divine judgment. 18: Doubly repay as fullness of compensation; see Gen 43.15; Isa 40.2. Double punishment is warranted for the offense. Since dead carcasses pollute, as do things that are “detestable” (Lev 11.10–12), the dead carcasses of detestable things (idols) would be particularly defiling. 19–21: A brief concluding hymn of praise and divine oath regarding the conversion of the nations. 19. Worthless things, a term used of idols of false gods (Deut 22.31; Ps 31.6). No profit, an allusion to the Canaanite god Baal; see 2.8n. On the theme of the conversion of the nations, see Isa 2.2; 60.3; 66.18; Mic. 4.2; Zech 8.22; 14.16; Ps 86.9. 20: See 10.5,8,14–15.

17.1–18: Various oracles gathered under the theme of the drought. Fragments brought together under the theme established in 14.1, these oracles present a collage of coming judgment. 1–4: Israel’s intransigence is likened to an engraver writing on rock; cf. Job 19.24. 1: Diamond point, the term usually refers to sharp thorns, but can be used also of sharp hard stone, probably flint; cf. But now it is their sinfulness that is so engraved. The human heart represented the center of resolve and will. Its hardening was a common metaphor for human stubbornness. Horns of their altars, protrusions at each of the four corners of a cut-stone altar, symbolizing divine strength and functioning to hold in place the wood and animal parts. Sanctuary could be gained by seizing the horns; see 7.4n. 2: Sacred poles, Heb “asherim” (the “asherah” represented the goddess Asherah), which were used even in the Temple itself (2 Kings 21.7; 23.4). Green tree, a symbol of high places, at which religious rituals were conducted in violation of the prohibitions in Deuteronomy; see 3.6,13; 1 Kings 14.23; 2 Kings 16.4. 3–4: See 15.13. 4: A fire is kindled, cf. 15.4, linking to the theme of drought. 5–8: A curse and accompanying blessing, linked to the theme of drought in vv. 6 and 8. Cf. Ps 1 and the distinction between the righteous and the wicked, using similar imagery. 5: Flesh symbolizes human weakness as opposed to divine strength. 9–10: God tests the human heart. See Pss 11.5; 44.21. 9: Devious (Heb “aqob”), a play on the name “Jacob” (Heb “ya’aqob”); see 9.4n. 10: The question posed in v. 9 is immediately answered: God tests the heart (mind) and examines the kidneys (heart). See 11.20. On the use of “kidneys” as the seat of strong emotion and feeling, see Pss 7.9; 26.2; 73.21; Prov 23.16. 11: A wisdom saying like those in the book of Proverbs. 12–13: A hymnic warning. 13: Hope of Israel as a title for Israel’s God, cf. 14.8. Recorded in the underworld, lit. “written in the earth.” The disobedient are doomed to die. The Heb word “erets” means “earth,” “land,” or “country,” (1.18; 12.11) but is also used for the netherworld (e.g., Pss 22.29; 44.26; 63.10). See Ps 69.28 for the concept of names being registered in a “book of life.” Fountain of living water, cf. 2.13.

17.14–18: Jeremiah’s third complaint (see 11.18–12.6n.). 15: Word of the LORD, the prophetic oracle of judgment. They taunt Jeremiah regarding his oracles of coming disaster. 18: Double destruction, see 16.18n. These sentiments wishing for divine judgment upon one’s adversaries are typical of pleas of intercession.

²⁴ But if you listen to me, says the LORD, and bring in no burden by the gates of this city on the sabbath day, but keep the sabbath day holy and do no work on it, ²⁵ then there shall enter by the gates of this city kings^a who sit on the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, they and their officials, the people of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and this city shall be inhabited forever. ²⁶ And people shall come from the towns of Judah and the places around Jerusalem, from the land of Benjamin, from the Shephelah, from the hill country, and from the Negeb, bringing burnt offerings and sacrifices, grain offerings and frankincense, and bringing thank offerings to the house of the LORD. ²⁷ But if you do not listen to me, to keep the sabbath day holy, and to carry in no burden through the gates of Jerusalem on the sabbath day, then I will kindle a fire in its gates; it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem and shall not be quenched.

18 The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD: ² “Come, go down to the potter’s house, and there I will let you hear my words.” ³ So I went down to the potter’s house, and there he was working at his wheel. ⁴ The vessel he was making of clay was spoiled in the potter’s hand, and he reworked it into another vessel, as seemed good to him.

⁵ Then the word of the LORD came to me:

⁶ Can I not do with you, O house of Israel, just as this potter has done? says the LORD. Just like the clay in the potter’s hand, so are you in my hand, O house of Israel. ⁷ At one moment I may declare concerning a nation or a kingdom, that I will pluck up and break down and destroy it, ⁸ but if that nation, concerning which I have spoken, turns from its evil, I will change my mind about the disaster that I intended to bring on it. ⁹ And at another moment I may declare concerning a nation or a kingdom that I will build and plant it, ¹⁰ but if it does evil in my sight, not listening to my voice, then I will change my mind about the good that I had intended to do to it. ¹¹ Now, therefore, say to the people of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem: Thus says the LORD: Look, I am a potter shaping evil against you and devising a plan against you. Turn now, all of you from your evil way, and amend your ways and your doings.

¹² But they say, “It is no use! We will follow our own plans, and each of us will act according to the stubbornness of our evil will.”

¹³ Therefore thus says the LORD: Ask among the nations:

Who has heard the like of this? The virgin Israel has done a most horrible thing.

18.1–23: The potter’s house and pottery as signs of judgment. The beginning of a lengthy section (chs 18–20) focused on pottery and pottery-making as symbols of divine judgment. 1–17: A sign-act. See 13.1–11n. At the potter’s house, Jeremiah observes the potter at work as a sign of God’s power to reshape Israel’s future. 3: At his wheel, lit. “upon the stones,” referring to the stones used for turning pots. 8: I will change my mind about the disaster, see 15.6n. Like the potter, God can rework the pot that is flawed. But the potter has control also to ruin his creation (v. 10); cf. Isa 45.9. The relationship between potter and clay is a metaphor of God’s relationship to creation also in Isa 64.8; Sir 33.13. 10: God can “repent” both of “disaster” and, as here, of “the good” that is planned. God can exercise total freedom to change the divine mind. 11: The metaphor shifts from that of God’s freedom to change course to that of God “plotting evil.” That God “devises a plan” (or “plots a plot”) against the people is taken up in the next verse. 12: Although God may have a “plan,” the people can only follow their own. The people express their fatalistic sense of doom, their inability to be “reworked.” 14: Israel acts contrary to the laws of nature by forgetting God, a common theme in the book; see 2.32n. Lebanon, the mountain range north of Israel that parallels the coast of the Mediterranean Sea. The name “Lebanon” is related to the word

Do the mountain^a waters run dry,^b

Deut 3.9; Ps 29.6). Mountain waters is also a conjecture (see textual note a). 16: Hissing and shaking the head are gestures of abhorrence and shaming. See 19.8; 1 Kings 9.8; Mic 6.16; 2 Chr 29.8;. 17: Show them my back, lit “neck” or “back of the neck.” This is a sign of stubbornness or neglect. Just as Israel can be “stiff-necked” (Ex 32.9), so can God; cf. 2.27; 7.26.

18.18–23: Jeremiah’s fourth complaint, concerning his enemies (see 11.18–12.6n.). The sentiments are bitter, but not unusual for the piety of the Psalms. 18: Make plots, this is a catchword in the section; cf. 18.8,11,12. Priests, the wise, and prophets were each associated with a primary form of divine revelation: instruction (Heb “torah”), counsel, and word; cf. Ezek 7.26. Jeremiah’s adversaries claim these traditional forms of authority over Jeremiah’s claim to an alternative word. 20: A surprising claim, given prohibitions against Jeremiah interceding (7.16; 11.14). 23: While you are angry, an appeal that God’s mercy not be extended to the prophet’s adversaries; see 15.15n.

19.1–20.18: The potter’s flask and Jeremiah at Topheth. This section continues the theme of pottery as a symbol of divine judgment, concluding with Jeremiah’s fifth complaint. No time reference is given, but by 605 BCE Jeremiah had been barred from the Temple (36.5), perhaps as a result of his confinement by the priest Pashhur, the chief officer of the Temple personnel (20.1–2). This section is the last of the oracles in the first cycle dated prior to the reign of Zedekiah.

Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I am going to bring such disaster upon this place that the ears of everyone who hears of it will tingle.⁴ Because the people have forsaken me, and have profaned this place by making offerings in it to other gods whom neither they nor their ancestors nor the kings of Judah have known, and because they have filled this place with the blood of the innocent,⁵ and gone on building the high places of Baal to burn their children in the fire as burnt offerings to Baal, which I did not command or decree, nor did it enter my mind;⁶ therefore the days are surely coming, says the LORD, when this place shall no more be called Topheth, or the valley of the son of Hinnom, but the valley of Slaughter.⁷ And in this place I will make void the plans of Judah and Jerusalem, and will make them fall by the sword before their enemies, and by the hand of those who seek their life. I will give their dead bodies for food to the birds of the air and to the wild animals of the earth.⁸ And I will make this city a horror, a thing to be hissed at; everyone who passes by it will be horrified and will hiss because of all its disasters.⁹ And I will make them eat the flesh of their sons and the flesh of their daughters, and all shall eat the flesh of their neighbors in the siege, and in the distress with which their enemies and those who seek their life afflict them.

¹⁰ Then you shall break the jug in the sight of those who go with you,¹¹ and shall say to them: Thus says the LORD of hosts: So will I break this people and this city, as one breaks a potter's vessel, so that it can never be mended. In Topheth they shall bury until there is no more room to bury.¹² Thus will I do to this place, says the LORD, and to its inhabitants, making this city like Topheth.¹³ And the houses of Jerusalem and the houses of the kings of Judah shall be defiled like the place of Topheth—all the houses upon whose roofs offerings have been made to the whole host of heaven, and libations have been poured out to other gods.

¹⁴ When Jeremiah came from Topheth, where the LORD had sent him to prophesy, he stood in the court of the LORD's house and said to all the people:¹⁵ Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I am now bringing upon this city and upon all its towns all the disaster that I have pronounced against it, because they have stiffened their necks, refusing to hear my words.

20 Now the priest Pashhur son of Immer, who was chief officer in the house of the LORD, heard Jeremiah prophesying these things.² Then Pashhur struck the prophet Jeremiah, and put him in the stocks that were in the upper Benjamin Gate of the house of the LORD.³ The next morning when Pashhur released Jeremiah from the stocks, Jeremiah said to him, The LORD has named you not Pashhur but "Terror-all-around."⁴ For thus says the LORD: I am making you a terror to yourself and to all your friends; and they shall fall by the sword of their enemies while you look on. And I will give all Judah into the hand of the king of Babylon; he shall carry them captive to Babylon, and shall kill them with the sword.⁵ I will give all the wealth of this city, all its gains, all its prized belongings, and all the treasures of the kings of Judah into the hand of their enemies, who shall plunder them, and seize them, and carry them to Babylon.⁶ And you, Pashhur, and all who live in your house, shall go into captivity, and to

Such an office was customary throughout the ancient Near East. 2: Stocks, cf. 29.26 and 2 Chr 16.10, where they are similarly used to confine prophets. The Hebrew word suggests being subjected to a contorting position or Babylon you shall go; there you shall die, and there you shall be buried, you and all your friends, to whom you have prophesied falsely.

⁷ O LORD, you have enticed me, and I was enticed; you have overpowered me, and you have prevailed. I have become a laughingstock all day long; everyone mocks me.

⁸ For whenever I speak, I must cry out, I must shout, "Violence and destruction!"

For the word of the LORD has become for me a reproach and derision all day long.

⁹ If I say, "I will not mention him, or speak any more in his name," then within me there is something like a burning fire shut up in my bones;

I am weary with holding it in, and I cannot.

¹⁰ For I hear many whispering: "Terror is all around! Denounce him! Let us denounce him!" All my close friends are watching for me to stumble.

"Perhaps he can be enticed, and we can prevail against him, and take our revenge on him."

¹¹ But the LORD is with me like a dread warrior; therefore my persecutors will stumble, and they will not prevail.

They will be greatly shamed, for they will not succeed. Their eternal dishonor will never be forgotten.

¹² O LORD of hosts, you test the righteous, you see the heart and the mind; let me see your retribution upon them, for to you I have committed my cause.

¹³ Sing to the LORD; praise the LORD! For he has delivered the life of the needy from the hands of evildoers.

¹⁴ Cursed be the day on which I was born! The day when my mother bore me, let it not be blessed!

¹⁵ Cursed be the man who brought the news to my father, saying,

"A child is born to you, a son," making him very glad.

¹⁶ Let that man be like the cities that the LORD overthrew without pity; let him hear a cry in the morning and an alarm at noon, ¹⁷ because he did not kill me in the womb; so my mother would have been my grave, and her womb forever great.

¹⁸ Why did I come forth from the womb to see toil and sorrow, and spend my days in shame?

turned upside down. 3: Terror-all-around, see 17.17n. 6: You have prophesied, spoken of Pashhur the priest. Priests could function as prophets (so Jeremiah himself as well as Ezekiel), or perhaps it was because of his office (see v. 1) that he is attributed prophetic status.

20.7–18: Jeremiah's final complaint (see 11.18–12.6n.). Using strong language that has sexual overtones, Jeremiah complains of having been tricked or seduced by God. Jeremiah's own words are played upon by his enemies, who seek his ruin. A brief word of trust and praise (v. 11–13) gives way to a final self-imprecation as Jeremiah curses his own life. 7: Enticed, though the term can be used positively (Hos 2.14), it can also be used of seduction (Ex 22.16; Judg 14.15) and deception (2 Sam 3.25; Ps 78.36); see 1 Kings 22.20–21 for its use in a prophetic context. 10: Terror is all around, cf. v. 3; 6.25n. Enticed . . . prevail, key words in this section, cf. v. 7. 11: The expression of confidence is a common element in laments (e.g., Pss 6.8–10; 12.6–7). 12: Typical sentiments of complaint psalms in which the psalmist invites divine scrutiny and pleads for vengeance against adversaries. 13: A call to praise is typical of psalms of complaint, where deliverance is anticipated and a vow is made to lead the community in praise when deliverance is experienced (e.g., Pss 22.22–31; 31.19–24). 14–18: Raw words of bitterness concerning the human condition. Such sentiments regarding wished-for abortion or stillbirth are shocking, but not without parallels; see Job 3; Jon 4.3,8. 16: The cities that the LORD overthrew, Sodom and Gomorrah (Gen 19.21,25,29; Deut 29.23; Isa 13.19; Am 4.11). 17: Forever great, that is, "pregnant." or who can enter our places of refuge?” ¹⁴I will punish you according to the fruit of your doings,

 says the LORD;
 I will kindle a fire in its forest,
 and it shall devour all that is around it.

22 Thus says the LORD: Go down to the house of the king of Judah, and speak there this word, ² and say: Hear the word of the LORD, O King of Judah sitting on the throne of David—you, and your servants, and your people who enter these gates. ³ Thus says the LORD: Act with justice and righteousness, and deliver from the hand of the oppressor anyone who has been robbed. And do no wrong or violence to the alien, the orphan, and the widow, or shed innocent blood in this place. ⁴ For if you will indeed obey this word, then through the gates of this house shall enter kings who sit on the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, they, and their servants, and their people. ⁵ But if you will not heed these words, I swear by myself, says the LORD, that this house shall become a desolation. ⁶ For thus says the LORD concerning the house of the king of Judah:

You are like Gilead to me, like the summit of Lebanon;
 but I swear that I will make you a desert,
 an uninhabited city.^a

⁷ I will prepare destroyers against you,
 all with their weapons;
 they shall cut down your choicest cedars and cast them into the fire.

⁸ And many nations will pass by this city, and all of them will say one to another, “Why has the LORD dealt in this way with that great city?” ⁹ And they will answer, “Because they abandoned the covenant of the LORD their God, and worshiped other gods and served
 them.”

¹⁰ Do not weep for him who is dead, nor bemoan him;
 weep rather for him who goes away,
 for he shall return no more to see his native land.

¹¹ For thus says the LORD concerning Shallum son of King Josiah of Judah, who succeeded his father Josiah, and who went away from this place: He shall return here no more, ¹² but in the place where they have carried him captive he shall die, and he shall never see this land again.

¹³ Woe to him who builds his house by unrighteousness,
 and his upper rooms by injustice;
 who makes his neighbors work for
 nothing,

22.1–9: Oracles directed to the king. Here the “house” refers to the palace; cf. 21.11–12, where it refers to the royal family and the dynasty. The king, as benefactor and symbol of justice, is instructed to perform the standard duties of kingship to insure the continued existence of the Davidic dynasty. The criteria of justice recall Deuteronomy (Deut 16.11,14; 24.19–21); cf. Jer 7.5–7. 3: The language repeats that of 21.12, tying these sections together thematically. 4: Cf. 17.25. 6: Like Gilead, well known for its rich cattle industry (Num 32.1; Song 4.1; 6.5) and trade in medicinal herbs (see 8.22n.; cf. 46.11). Lebanon, see 18.14n. 7: Prepare, that is, “sanctify,” indicating warfare; see 6.4n.; 51.27–28; Joel 4.9. 8–9: A later comment (5.19; Deut 29.23–28; 1 Kings 9.8–9) referring to Jerusalem, not the palace.

22.10–30: A chronological survey of Israel’s kings from Josiah to Zedekiah (see chart on p. 1058). 10–11: Him who is dead, Josiah was killed at Megiddo in 609 BCE in a battle with Pharaoh Neco. Neco was leading the Egyptian army northward to come to the aid of the Assyrian army, which was under critical pressure from the Babylonians. Josiah’s political program was governed by his revolt against Assyria, so he did not want Neco’s campaign to relieve Assyria to succeed. Him who goes away, Josiah’s son Jehoahaz (Shallum) reigned briefly but was taken captive by Pharaoh Neco II of Egypt (ruled 610–595 BCE), who placed his brother Jehoiakim (608–598 BCE) on the throne (2 Kings 23.31–34; 2 Chr 36:1–4; Ezek 19.4). 13–23: An oracle against Jehoiakim, who is judged to be the antithesis of his father, Josiah (vv. 15–17). 13: Work for nothing, the royal building projects were carried out by use of conscripted laborers, one of the realities of dynastic kingship as suggested by Samuel’s warning (1 Sam 8.10–18). 23 Woe to the shepherds who destroy and scatter the sheep of my pasture! says the LORD. ²Therefore thus says the LORD, the God of Israel, concerning the shepherds who shepherd my people: It is you who have scattered my flock, and have driven them away, and you have not attended to them. So I will attend to you for your evil doings, says the LORD. ³Then I myself will gather the remnant of my flock out of all the lands where I have driven them, and I will bring them back to their fold, and they shall be fruitful and multiply. ⁴I will raise up shepherds over them who will shepherd them, and they shall not fear any longer, or be dismayed, nor shall any be missing, says
 the LORD.

⁵The days are surely coming, says the LORD, when I will raise up for David a righteous Branch, and he shall reign as king and deal wisely, and shall execute justice and righteousness in the land. ⁶In his days Judah will be saved and Israel will live in safety. And this is the name by which he will be called:
 “The LORD is our righteousness.”

⁷Therefore, the days are surely coming,
 says the LORD, when it shall no longer be said,

“As the LORD lives who brought the people of Israel up out of the land of Egypt,” ⁸but “As the LORD lives who brought out and led the offspring of the house of Israel out of the land of the north and out of all the lands where he⁹ had driven them.” Then they shall live in their own land.

⁹Concerning the prophets:
 My heart is crushed within me,
 all my bones shake;
 I have become like a drunkard,
 like one overcome by wine, because of the LORD
 and because of his holy words.

¹⁰For the land is full of adulterers; because of the curse the land mourns,
 and the pastures of the wilderness are dried up.

Their course has been evil,
 and their might is not right.

¹¹Both prophet and priest are ungodly; even in my house I have found their
 wickedness,
 says the LORD.

¹²Therefore their way shall be to them like slippery paths in the darkness, into which they shall be driven and fall;
 for I will bring disaster upon them in the year of their punishment,

the Persians as governor of Judah (1 Esd 2.12).

23.1–8: Conclusion. The chronological survey of Judah’s kings concludes with a general oracle against the “shepherds” (a common metaphor for kings; cf. 22.22; Ezek 34) and a veiled reference to Zedekiah (vv. 5–6). 2: The shepherds have driven the flock away, but under divine purpose (vv. 3,8). Not attended . . . attend to you, an ambiguous term connoting both attentive care (Ex 3.16; 4.31) and especially scrutinizing punishment (Am 3.14; Zech 10.3). Both meanings are implied here. See also v. 4. 4: Be missing, a third meaning of the term “attend.” The basic meaning of the word is to “muster” or “count off.” In counting and arranging in order some may be discovered to be missing. 5: Righteous Branch, cf. 33.15; Isa 11.1; Zech 3.8; 6.12. The possession of wisdom and the execution of justice and righteousness were the hallmarks of the just king throughout the ancient Near East. 6: This king’s name is “yahweh-tsidqenu,” “the LORD is our righteousness,” a play on the name of Zedekiah (“tsidqi-yahu”), the last king of Judah (597–586 BCE) appointed to the throne by Nebuchadnezzar (2 Kings 24.17). The reversal of the two elements of the name suggests that he will be the antithesis of Zedekiah. Here the stress is upon the person of the future ruler; cf. 33.16, where the hope is placed not in the person of the king but in the city Jerusalem. 7–8: See 16.14–15n. Future deliverance will surpass the past in significance, even the Exodus (cf. Isa 51.9–11; 52.11–12).

23.9–40: Oracles directed to the prophets as royal agents, who function alongside the priests in the Temple (v. 11) and who preach soothing words of well-being at a time of crisis. This oracle emphasizes words such as

¹³In the prophets of Samaria
I saw a disgusting thing:
they prophesied by Baal
and led my people Israel astray.

¹⁴But in the prophets of Jerusalem
I have seen a more shocking thing:
they commit adultery and walk in lies;
they strengthen the hands of evildoers,
so that no one turns from wickedness;
all of them have become like Sodom to me,
and its inhabitants like Gomorrah.

¹⁵Therefore thus says the LORD of hosts concerning the prophets:
“I am going to make them eat wormwood, and give them poisoned water to drink;
for from the prophets of Jerusalem ungodliness has spread throughout the land.”

¹⁶Thus says the LORD of hosts: Do not listen to the words of the prophets who prophesy to you; they are deluding you. They speak visions of their own minds, not from the mouth of the LORD. ¹⁷They keep saying to those who despise the word of the LORD, “It shall be well with you”; and to all who stubbornly follow their own stubborn hearts, they say, “No calamity shall come upon you.”

¹⁸For who has stood in the council of the LORD
so as to see and to hear his word?
Who has given heed to his word so as to proclaim it?

¹⁹Look, the storm of the LORD!
Wrath has gone forth,
a whirling tempest;
it will burst upon the head of the
wicked.

²⁰The anger of the LORD will not turn back until he has executed and accomplished
the intents of his mind.

In the latter days you will understand it clearly.

²¹I did not send the prophets, yet they ran;
I did not speak to them,
yet they prophesied.

²²But if they had stood in my council, then they would have proclaimed my words to my people,
and they would have turned them from their evil way,
and from the evil of their doings.

²³Am I a God near by, says the LORD, and not a God far off? ²⁴Who can hide in secret places so that I cannot see them? says the LORD. Do I not fill heaven and earth? says the LORD. ²⁵I have heard what the prophets have said who prophesy lies in my name, saying, “I have dreamed, I have dreamed!” ²⁶How long? Will the hearts of the prophets ever turn back—those who prophesy lies, and who prophesy the deceit of their own heart? ²⁷They plan to make my people forget my name by their dreams that they tell one another, just as their ancestors forgot my name for Baal. ²⁸Let the prophet who has a dream tell the dream, but let the one who has my word speak my word faithfully. What has straw in common with wheat? says the LORD.
²⁹Is not my word like fire, says the LORD, and like a hammer that breaks a rock in pieces?
³⁰See, therefore, I am against the prophets, says the LORD, who steal my words from one another. ³¹See, I am against the prophets, says

“driven” and “punishment” (v. 12; cf. vv. 2,3,4). 13: Samaria, the capital of the Northern Kingdom of Israel. For prophets of the Canaanite God Baal there, see 1 Kings 18.20–24. 14: Jerusalem outdoes Samaria with its offenses; cf. Ezek 16.46–55; 23.2–11. Sodom . . . Gomorrah, see 20.16n. 15: Wormwood, see 9.15n. 18: Council of the LORD, the abode of God was conceived of as a royal court with many divine beings present (1 Kings 22.19–23; Isa 6.1–7; Pss 82.1; 89.7). 19–20: See 30.23–24. Storm imagery is frequently used to represent the coming of the LORD as a warrior. 21: They ran, using the metaphor of a runner bringing a message (2 Sam 18.19–26; cf. Isa 52.7). 23: Am I a God near by? a question supposing a negative response. God is not near by, but rather is far off, filling the heavens and seeing all things even in secret places; see 1 Kings 8.27. Jeremiah protests the assumptions of divine immanence and coziness. 28: Dream . . . word, a contrast between common wishful thinking and powerful visionary experience producing God’s fiery word. Num 12.6 and Joel 2.28, however, suggest that both dreams and visionary experiences were legitimate means of receiving oracles from God, so this is not likely a disparaging of the one for the sake of the other (“but” is not in the MT). The divine word surpasses any medium of its

the LORD, who use their own tongues and say, “Says the LORD.”³² See, I am against those who prophesy lying dreams, says the LORD, and who tell them, and who lead my people astray by their lies and their recklessness, when I did not send them or appoint them; so they do not profit this people at all, says the LORD.

³³ When this people, or a prophet, or a priest asks you, “What is the burden of the LORD?” you shall say to them, “You are the burden,^a and I will cast you off, says the LORD.”³⁴ And as for the prophet, priest, or the people who say, “The burden of the LORD,” I will punish them and their households.

³⁵ Thus shall you say to one another, among yourselves, “What has the LORD answered?” or “What has the LORD spoken?”³⁶ But “the burden of the LORD” you shall mention no more, for the burden is everyone’s own word, and so you pervert the words of the living God, the LORD of hosts, our God.³⁷ Thus you shall ask the prophet, “What has the LORD answered you?” or “What has the LORD spoken?”³⁸ But if you say, “the burden of the LORD,” thus says the LORD: Because you have said these words, “the burden of the LORD,” when I sent to you, saying, You shall not say, “the burden of the LORD,”³⁹ therefore, I will surely lift you up^b and cast you away from my presence, you and the city that I gave to you and your ancestors.⁴⁰ And I will bring upon you everlasting disgrace and perpetual shame, which shall not be forgotten.

zar of Babylon had taken into exile from Jerusalem King Jeconiah son of Jehoiakim of Judah, together with the officials of Judah, the artisans, and the smiths, and had brought them to Babylon.² One basket had very good figs, like first-ripe figs, but the other basket had very bad figs, so bad that they could not be eaten.³ And the LORD said to me, “What do you see, Jeremiah?” I said, “Figs, the good figs very good, and the bad figs very bad, so bad that they cannot be eaten.”

⁴ Then the word of the LORD came to me:⁵ Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: Like these good figs, so I will regard as good the exiles from Judah, whom I have sent away from this place to the land of the Chaldeans.⁶ I will set my eyes upon them for good, and I will bring them back to this land. I will build them up, and not tear them down; I will plant them, and not pluck them up.⁷ I will give them a heart to know that I am the LORD; and they shall be my people and I will be their God, for they shall return to me with their whole heart.

⁸ But thus says the LORD: Like the bad figs that are so bad they cannot be eaten, so will I treat King Zedekiah of Judah, his officials, the remnant of Jerusalem who remain in this land, and those who live in the land of Egypt.⁹ I will make them a horror, an evil thing, to all the kingdoms of the earth—a disgrace, a byword, a taunt, and a curse in all the places where I shall drive them.¹⁰ And I will send sword, famine, and pestilence upon them, conveyance, and is powerful (v. 29). 31: Says the LORD, these prophets are not prophesying in the name of Baal (v. 27), but rather in the very name of God. They are, however, simply mimicking one another and plagiarizing each other’s messages (v. 30). 33: Burden of the LORD, a term also used for an “oracle” (see Nah 1.1; Zech 9.1; 12.1; Mal 1.1). A sarcastic play on words: the people seek an oracle from Jeremiah but they are declared to be a burden to God; cf. 17.21. 39: I will surely lift you up, a further play on the term “burden,” from the Heb verb “nasa,” which means “to carry or lift.”

24.1–10: Conclusion to this group of oracles from the time of Zedekiah. The exiled Jeconiah (Jehoiachin) was held in high esteem by those exiled with him in Babylon and by the supporters of Jeremiah’s program. Those left in Judah who supported Zedekiah were regarded as rotten and inedible figs; see further 22.27; 29.17; 2 Kings 24.10–17. In this perspective, the future hope lay with those in exile. This language was a polemical support for the community which eventually returned from exile and reestablished control in the postexilic reconstruction under Zerubbabel, Ezra, and Nehemiah. 5: Land of the Chaldeans, Babylon (see 21.4n.). 6: See 1.10. 8: In the land of Egypt, many Judeans fled to Egypt, an ally of Judah’s in its struggle against the Babylonians; cf. 42.13–14.

until they are utterly destroyed from the land that I gave to them and their ancestors.

25 The word that came to Jeremiah concerning all the people of Judah, in the fourth year of King Jehoiakim son of Josiah of Judah (that was the first year of King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon),² which the prophet Jeremiah spoke to all the people of Judah and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem:³ For twenty-three years, from the thirteenth year of King Josiah son of Amon of Judah, to this day, the word of the LORD has come to me, and I have spoken persistently to you, but you have not listened.⁴ And though the LORD persistently sent you all his servants the prophets, you have neither listened nor inclined your ears to hear⁵ when they said, “Turn now, every one of you, from your evil way and wicked doings, and you will remain upon the land that the LORD has given to you and your ancestors from of old and forever;⁶ do not go after other gods to serve and worship them, and do not provoke me to anger with the work of your hands. Then I will do you no harm.”⁷ Yet you did not listen to me, says the LORD, and so you have provoked me to anger with the work of your hands to your own harm.

⁸ Therefore thus says the LORD of hosts: Because you have not obeyed my words,⁹ I am going to send for all the tribes of the north, says the LORD, even for King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon, my servant, and I will bring them against this land and its inhabitants, and against all these nations around; I will utterly destroy them, and make them an object of horror and of hissing, and an everlasting disgrace.^a ¹⁰ And I will banish from them the sound of mirth and the sound of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride, the sound of the millstones and the light of the lamp.¹¹ This whole land shall become a ruin and a waste, and these nations shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years.¹² Then after seventy years are completed, I will punish the king of Babylon and that nation, the land of the Chaldeans, for their iniquity, says the LORD, making the land an everlasting waste.¹³ I will bring upon that land all the words that I have uttered against it, everything written in this book, which Jeremiah prophesied against all the nations.¹⁴ For many nations and great kings shall make slaves of them also; and I will repay them according to their deeds and the work of their hands.

¹⁵ For thus the LORD, the God of Israel, said to me: Take from my hand this cup of the wine of wrath, and make all the nations to whom I send you drink it.¹⁶ They shall drink and stagger and go out of their minds because of the sword that I am sending among them.

¹⁷ So I took the cup from the LORD’s hand, and made all the nations to whom the LORD sent me drink it:¹⁸ Jerusalem and the towns of Judah, its kings and officials, to make them a desolation and a waste, an object of hissing and of cursing, as they are today;¹⁹ Pharaoh king of Egypt, his servants, his officials, and all his people;²⁰ all the mixed people,^b all the kings of the land of Uz; all the kings of

25.1–38: Judah among all the nations. The conclusion of the first cycle of oracles with its reference to the scroll of 605 BCE (see 36.1–32). With Nebuchadrezzar’s victory over the Egyptians at Carchemish in 605, Judah’s fate became a part of unfolding world events. Its destruction here is placed in cosmic perspective as God’s wrath is directed against all the nations, and finally against Babylon itself. The LXX places the oracles against the nations (chs 46–51) here, following v. 13. 1: Fourth year, 605 BCE. 3: Twenty-three years, suggesting that Jeremiah’s ministry began in 627 BCE. See 1.2 and the introduction. 4: This role of the prophets is characteristic of Jeremiah; see 7.25n. 9: All the tribes of the north, the direction of coming disaster; see 1.14. All these nations around, Judah’s neighbors. 10: See 7.34n. 11: Seventy years, an expected lifetime; see Ps 90.10; Isa 23.15. No one alive will experience repatriation to their land. 13: This book, that is, material in chs 1–25 or the scroll of 605 BCE. By placing the oracles against the nations at this point, however, the Septuagint takes “this book” to refer to chs 46–51. 15: Cup of the wine of wrath, see 13.12–14n. 18: As they are today, presumes an exilic perspective (after 586 BCE) rather than that of 605 BCE as indicated in 25.1. 19–25: The nations are listed in their proximity to Judah from nearest to farthest. 20: Mixed people, a term associated with desert dwellers in v. 24. Uz is in Edom, the

the land of the Philistines—Ashkelon, Gaza, Ekron, and the remnant of Ashdod;²¹ Edom, Moab, and the Ammonites;²² all the kings of Tyre, all the kings of Sidon, and the kings of the coastland across the sea;²³ Dedan, Tema, Buz, and all who have shaven temples;²⁴ all the kings of Arabia and all the kings of the mixed peoples^a that live in the desert;²⁵ all the kings of Zimri, all the kings of Elam, and all the kings of Media;²⁶ all the kings of the north, far and near, one after another, and all the kingdoms of the world that are on the face of the earth. And after them the king of Sheshach^b shall drink.

²⁷ Then you shall say to them, Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Drink, get drunk and vomit, fall and rise no more, because of the sword that I am sending among you.

²⁸ And if they refuse to accept the cup from your hand to drink, then you shall say to them: Thus says the LORD of hosts: You must drink!²⁹ See, I am beginning to bring disaster on the city that is called by my name, and how can you possibly avoid punishment? You shall not go unpunished, for I am summoning a sword against all the inhabitants of the earth, says the LORD of hosts.

³⁰ You, therefore, shall prophesy against them all these words, and say to them:

The LORD will roar from on high, and from his holy habitation utter his voice;

he will roar mightily against his fold,
and shout, like those who tread grapes, against all the inhabitants of the earth.

³¹ The clamor will resound to the ends of the earth,
for the LORD has an indictment against
the nations;

he is entering into judgment with all flesh,
and the guilty he will put to the sword,
says the LORD.

³² Thus says the LORD of hosts:
See, disaster is spreading from nation to nation,
and a great tempest is stirring from the farthest parts of the earth!

³³ Those slain by the LORD on that day shall extend from one end of the earth to the other. They shall not be lamented, or gathered, or buried; they shall become dung on the surface of the ground.

³⁴ Wail, you shepherds, and cry out;
roll in ashes, you lords of the flock, for the days of your slaughter have come—and your dispersions,^a and you shall fall like a choice vessel.

³⁵ Flight shall fail the shepherds, and there shall be no escape for the lords of the flock.

³⁶ Hark! the cry of the shepherds,
and the wail of the lords of the flock!
For the LORD is despoiling their pasture, ³⁷ and the peaceful folds are devastated,
because of the fierce anger of the LORD.

³⁸ Like a lion he has left his covert;
for their land has become a waste because of the cruel sword, and because of his fierce anger.

26 At the beginning of the reign of King Jehoiakim son of Josiah of Judah, this word came from the LORD: ² Thus says the LORD: Stand in the court of the LORD's house,

26.1–29.32: Jeremiah in conflict. These narratives begin the second cycle of prophetic oracles, and detail several episodes where Jeremiah was in conflict with Temple and royal officials and other prophets. This cycle includes chs 26–35, and concludes with ch 36. It again spans the time from Jehoiakim's reign (609 BCE) down to the reign of Zedekiah and the final siege of Jerusalem (586 BCE). Some attribute this narrative material in chs and speak to all the cities of Judah that come to worship in the house of the LORD; speak to them all the words that I command you; do not hold back a word. ³ It may be that they will listen, all of them, and will turn from their evil way, that I may change my mind about the disaster that I intend to bring on them because of their evil doings. ⁴ You shall say to them: Thus says the LORD: If you will not listen to me, to walk in my law that I have set before you, ⁵ and to heed the words of my servants the prophets whom I send to you urgently—though you have not heeded—⁶ then I will make this house like Shiloh, and I will make this city a curse for all the nations of the earth.

⁷ The priests and the prophets and all the people heard Jeremiah speaking these words in the house of the LORD. ⁸ And when Jeremiah had finished speaking all that the LORD had commanded him to speak to all the people, then the priests and the prophets and all the people laid hold of him, saying, “You shall die!” ⁹ Why have you prophesied in the name of the LORD, saying, “This house shall be like Shiloh, and this city shall be desolate, without inhabitant?” And all the people gathered around Jeremiah in the house of the LORD.

¹⁰ When the officials of Judah heard these things, they came up from the king’s house to the house of the LORD and took their seat in the entry of the New Gate of the house of the LORD. ¹¹ Then the priests and the prophets said to the officials and to all the people,

¹² Then Jeremiah spoke to all the officials and all the people, saying, “It is the LORD who sent me to prophesy against this house and this city all the words you have heard. ¹³ Now therefore amend your ways and your doings, and obey the voice of the LORD your God, and the LORD will change his mind about the disaster that he has pronounced against you. ¹⁴ But as for me, here I am in your hands. Do with me as seems good and right to you. ¹⁵ Only know for certain that if you put me to death, you will be bringing innocent blood upon yourselves and upon this city and its inhabitants, for in truth the LORD sent me to you to speak all these words in your ears.”

¹⁶ Then the officials and all the people said to the priests and the prophets, “This man does not deserve the sentence of death, for he has spoken to us in the name of the LORD our God.” ¹⁷ And some of the elders of the land arose and said to all the assembled people, ¹⁸ “Micah of Moresheth, who prophesied during the days of King Hezekiah of Judah, said to all the people of Judah: ‘Thus says the LORD of hosts,

Zion shall be plowed as a field;
Jerusalem shall become a heap of ruins, and the mountain of the house a wooded height.’

¹⁹ Did King Hezekiah of Judah and all Judah actually put him to death? Did he not fear the LORD and entreat the favor of the LORD,

26.1–24: Jeremiah’s Temple Sermon. Generally associated with ch 7 because of its location in the Temple and its reference to Shiloh (see 7.1,12–15). Attention is given here to the aftermath of the event and Jeremiah’s near arrest and execution. 1: The beginning of the reign, 609 BCE. 3: That I may change my mind, see 18.8,10n., and the freedom God has to alter divine plans. 5: See 7.25n. 6: Shiloh, see 7.12n. 9: To prophesy threats against the royal sanctuary was tantamount to treason. Compare Amos’s reception at Bethel (Am 7.10–13). 10: Seat in the entry of the New Gate, indicates that this is a formal judicial hearing, with justice being administered “in the gate” (Isa 29.21; Am 5.15). 12: It is the LORD who sent me, as elsewhere in the ancient Near East, prophets were granted some degree of protection by virtue of the fact that they were constrained to bring their message by the gods (cf. v. 15). But such immunity had limits. 15: Innocent blood, the killing of an innocent person was a horrific crime that had disastrous consequences, especially in the perspective of Deuteronomy (see Deut 19.10–13; 21.8–9; 27.25). 16–19: The charge is mitigated for two reasons. First, they recognize the prophet’s claim to immunity on the basis of being constrained by God to deliver a message (v. 16). Second, the precedent of Micah is invoked, with a rare quotation of an earlier book (Mic 3.12). Micah’s prediction of disaster did not come to pass because, it is argued, he successfully prompted Hezekiah to plead for divine favor. There is no mention of this event in the historical books, where only Isaiah is mentioned in connection with Hezekiah and the Assyrian and did not the LORD change his mind about the disaster that he had pronounced against them? But we are about to bring great disaster on ourselves!”

²⁰ There was another man prophesying in the name of the LORD, Uriah son of Shemaiah from Kiriath-jearim. He prophesied against this city and against this land in words exactly like those of Jeremiah. ²¹ And when King Jehoiakim, with all his warriors and all the officials, heard his words, the king sought to put him to death; but when Uriah heard of it, he was afraid and fled and escaped to Egypt. ²² Then King Jehoiakim sent^a Elnathan son of Achbor and men with him to Egypt, ²³ and they took Uriah from Egypt and brought him to King Jehoiakim, who struck him down with the sword and threw his dead body into the burial place of the common people.

²⁴ But the hand of Ahikam son of Shaphan was with Jeremiah so that he was not given over into the hands of the people to be put to death.

27 In the beginning of the reign of King Zedekiah^b son of Josiah of Judah, this word came to Jeremiah from the LORD. ² Thus the LORD said to me: Make yourself a yoke of straps and bars, and put them on your neck. ³ Send word^c to the king of Edom, the king of Moab, the king of the Ammonites, the king of Tyre, and the king of Sidon by the hand of the envoys who have come to Jerusalem to King Zedekiah of Judah. ⁴ Give them this charge for their masters: Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: This is what you shall say to your masters: ⁵ It is I who by my great power and my outstretched arm have made the earth, with the people and animals that are on the earth, and I give it to whomever I please. ⁶ Now I have given all these lands into the hand of King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon, my servant, and I have given him even the wild animals of the field to serve him. ⁷ All the nations shall serve him and his son and his grandson, until the time of his own land comes; then many nations and great kings shall make him their slave.

⁸ But if any nation or kingdom will not serve this king, Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon, and put its neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, then I will punish that nation with crisis (2 Kings 18.13–20.19). 20–23: The precedent of Uriah, however, indicated the danger facing Jeremiah. For exactly the same charge (v. 20) Uriah was hunted down by Jehoiakim and executed. 22: Elnathan, see 36.12, 25. 24: Ahikam son of Shaphan, as Josiah’s secretary, Shaphan had been instrumental in the reform movement of Josiah (2 Kings 22.3–13), of which Jeremiah was likely an enthusiastic supporter. This particular family, comprised of Shaphan’s sons Ahikam and Gemariah and Ahikam’s son Gedaliah, along with others, was one of Jeremiah’s chief advocates within the royal ranks of the princes; see 36.11–19. That Ahikam had to rescue Jeremiah indicates that, in spite of the sentiments of the officials and people, Jeremiah was still in grave danger, as indicated by the precedent of Uriah.

27.1–28.17: Jeremiah’s ox yoke and his confrontation with Hananiah. These conflict narratives are linked together syntactically and thematically. The date of Jeremiah’s confrontation with Hananiah, according to 28.1, is August, 594 BCE (contrast 27.1, which has a scribal error, dating the event to the beginning of Jehoiakim’s reign, under the influence of 26.1). In early 594 BCE a revolt in the Babylonian army prompted a conspiracy among the western states, including Judah, to revolt against Nebuchadnezzar. The meeting of these foreign emissaries in Jerusalem to consider the details for such a revolt is the occasion for the recorded prophetic sign in ch 27. Zedekiah did not join the conspiracy at this time, however, and Judah was spared the retaliatory strike by Babylon later that year.

27.1–11: Jeremiah’s word to the foreign emissaries. 2: A yoke of, the phrase is lacking in the text. Jeremiah is simply told to make “straps” and “bars.” But a yoke was comprised of straps and bars; see Lev 26.13; Ezek 34.27. 3: Send word, the text (“Send them”) suggests that it was the yoke itself that was sent via the emissaries. See textual note c. 6: Nebuchadnezzar, this form of the name, used in chs 27–29, shows the influence of the Deuteronomistic editor. Elsewhere in Jeremiah the form is more correctly rendered as Nebuchadrezzar. My servant, a striking designation for a foreign ruler (cf. Isa 44.28–45.1). He is God’s servant because he is the instrument of punishment against Judah and her neighbors. 7: Cf. 25.11–14. 8–14: Jeremiah offers a choice and limited hope:

the sword, with famine, and with pestilence, says the LORD, until I have completed its^a destruction by his hand. ⁹ You, therefore, must not listen to your prophets, your diviners, your dreamers,^b your soothsayers, or your sorcerers, who are saying to you, “You shall not serve the king of Babylon.” ¹⁰ For they are prophesying a lie to you, with the result that you will be removed far from your land; I will drive you out, and you will perish. ¹¹ But any nation that will bring its neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon and serve him, I will leave on its own land, says the LORD, to till it and live there.

¹² I spoke to King Zedekiah of Judah in the same way: Bring your necks under the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve him and his people, and live. ¹³ Why should you and your people die by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence, as the LORD has spoken concerning any nation that will not serve the king of Babylon? ¹⁴ Do not listen to the words of the prophets who are telling you not to serve the king of Babylon, for they are prophesying a lie to you. ¹⁵ I have not sent them, says the LORD, but they are prophesying falsely in my name, with the result that I will drive you out and you will perish, you and the prophets who are prophesying to you.

¹⁶ Then I spoke to the priests and to all this people, saying, Thus says the LORD: Do not listen to the words of your prophets who are prophesying to you, saying, “The vessels of the LORD’s house will soon be brought back from Babylon,” for they are prophesying a lie to you. ¹⁷ Do not listen to them; serve the king of Babylon and live. Why should this city become a desolation? ¹⁸ If indeed they are prophets, and if the word of the LORD is with them, then let them intercede with the LORD of hosts, that the vessels left in the house of the LORD, in the house of the king of Judah, and in Jerusalem may not go to Babylon. ¹⁹ For thus says the LORD of hosts concerning the pillars, the sea, the stands, and the rest of the vessels that are left in this city, ²⁰ which King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon did not take away when he took into exile from Jerusalem to Babylon King Jeconiah son of Jehoiakim of Judah, and all the nobles of Judah and Jerusalem— ²¹ thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, concerning the vessels left in the house of the LORD, in the house of the king of Judah, and in Jerusalem: ²² They shall be carried to Babylon, and there they shall stay, until the day when I give attention to them, says the LORD. Then I will bring them up and restore them to this place.

28 In that same year, at the beginning of the reign of King Zedekiah of Judah, in the fifth month of the fourth year, the prophet Hananiah son of Azzur, from Gibeon, spoke to me in the house of the LORD, in the presence of the priests and all the people, saying, ² “Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I have broken the yoke of the king of Babylon. ³ Within two years I will bring back to this place all the vessels of the LORD’s house, which King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon took away from this place and carried to Babylon. ⁴ I will also bring back to this place King Jeconiah son of Jehoiakim of Judah, and all the exiles from Judah who went willing submission to vassalage or destruction. 9: Diviners . . . dreamers . . . soothsayers . . . sorcerers, though these intermediaries were banned by Deuteronomic tradition (Deut 18.10,14), the prophets inveigh against these customs, suggesting they were practiced also in Israel.

27.12–22: Jeremiah speaks similar words to Zedekiah and the people of Jerusalem. 16: The vessels, ritual paraphernalia used in the Temple; see 28.3; 2 Kings 24.13; Ezra 5.14–15. 19: The pillars Jachin and Boaz (1 Kings 7.15–22), the large basin known as the sea (1 Kings 7.23–26), and the stands and vessels (1 Kings 7.27–39) were furnishings of the Temple taken to Babylon in 586 BCE (2 Kings 25.13–17). The vessels, which were not broken up, were later returned by Cyrus in 538 BCE (Ezra 1.7–11).

28.1–17: Jeremiah’s confrontation with the prophet Hananiah. Hananiah represented the message of “peace” being proclaimed by the “lying prophets,” encouraging resistance to Babylon and false hopes of a quick end to the political crisis, a restoration not only of the Temple vessels but of King Jehoiachin to the throne. Jeremiah cites prophetic tradition in support of his message of disaster. The contest is resolved by the death of Hananiah two months later. 1: On the contradictory dates see 27.1–28.17n. 4: Jeconiah, Jehoiachin to Babylon, says the LORD, for I will break the yoke of the king of Babylon.”

⁵Then the prophet Jeremiah spoke to the prophet Hananiah in the presence of the priests and all the people who were standing in the house of the LORD; ⁶and the prophet Jeremiah said, “Amen! May the LORD do so; may the LORD fulfill the words that you have prophesied, and bring back to this place from Babylon the vessels of the house of the LORD, and all the exiles. ⁷But listen now to this word that I speak in your hearing and in the hearing of all the people. ⁸The prophets who preceded you and me from ancient times prophesied war, famine, and pestilence against many countries and great kingdoms. ⁹As for the prophet who prophesies peace, when the word of that prophet comes true, then it will be known that the LORD has truly sent the prophet.”

¹²Sometime after the prophet Hananiah had broken the yoke from the neck of the prophet Jeremiah, the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: ¹³Go, tell Hananiah, Thus says the LORD: You have broken wooden bars only to forge iron bars in place of them! ¹⁴For thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel:

I have put an iron yoke on the neck of all these nations so that they may serve King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon, and they shall indeed serve him; I have even given him the wild animals. ¹⁵And the prophet Jeremiah said to the prophet Hananiah, “Listen, Hananiah, the LORD has not sent you, and you made this people trust in a lie. ¹⁶Therefore thus says the LORD: I am going to send you off the face of the earth. Within this year you will be dead, because you have spoken rebellion against the LORD.”

¹⁷In that same year, in the seventh month, the prophet Hananiah died.

29 These are the words of the letter that the prophet Jeremiah sent from Jerusalem to the remaining elders among the exiles, and to the priests, the prophets, and all the people, whom Nebuchadnezzar had taken into exile from Jerusalem to Babylon. ²This was after King Jeconiah, and the queen mother, the court officials, the leaders of Judah and Jerusalem, the artisans, and the smiths had departed from Jerusalem. ³The letter was sent by the hand of Elasah son of Shaphan and Gemariah son of Hilkiah, whom King Zedekiah of Judah sent to Babylon to King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon. It said: ⁴Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, to all the exiles whom I have sent into exile from Jerusalem to Babylon: ⁵Build houses and live in them; plant gardens and eat what they produce. ⁶Take wives and have sons and daughters; take wives for your sons, and give your daughters in marriage, that

(2 Kings 24.8–12). 5: The first-person perspective of a Jeremiah memoir (27.2,12,16; 28.1) suddenly shifts to a third-person account. This illustrates the composite nature of this material. 6: There is considerable debate as to whether Jeremiah is sincere in his wish or is speaking with bitter irony. Because the story, under Deuteronomistic editing, is committed to the theme of prophetic fulfillment (see v. 9), the reader cannot doubt Jeremiah's word. 8: Commonly prophets issued oracles against foreign nations; see Am 1–2; Isa 13–24; Ezek 25–32. This is especially true of early forms of “war prophecy”; see Jer 46.1. 9: On the criterion of prophetic fulfillment, see Deut 18.21–22. This Deuteronomistic perspective controls the narrative here, as indicated by 28.16–17. 16. Send you off, a play on the fact that Hananiah has not been sent by God (v. 15).

29.1–32: Jeremiah in conflict with prophets among the exile community. Correspondence with leaders among the exiles in Babylon indicates their opposition to Jeremiah's message. Jeremiah's letter encouraging the exiles to prepare for a lengthy stay in captivity (vv. 4–14) is met with a letter of rebuke by Shemaiah (v. 25) instructing Zephaniah, the Temple overseer in Jerusalem, to clamp down on Jeremiah and control his oracles (vv. 25–28). This prompts another letter from Jeremiah to Shemaiah (v. 24) and a warning to all the exiles concerning Shemaiah's fate (vv. 31–32). 2: Jeconiah, Jehoiachin (2 Kings 24.8–12). The court officials, or “eunuchs”; see 34.19n. 3: Elasah (perhaps the brother of Ahikam; 26.24) and Gemariah (36.10), apparently supporters of Jeremiah's program and sensitive to Babylonian interests. Hilkiah, see 2 Kings 22–23. 5: Build . . . plant, characteristic language they may bear sons and daughters; multiply there, and do not decrease.⁷ But seek the welfare of the city where I have sent you into exile, and pray to the LORD on its behalf, for in its welfare you will find your welfare.⁸ For thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Do not let the prophets and the diviners who are among you deceive you, and do not listen to the dreams that they dream,^a ⁹ for it is a lie that they are prophesying to you in my name; I did not send them, says the LORD.

¹⁰ For thus says the LORD: Only when Babylon's seventy years are completed will I visit you, and I will fulfill to you my promise and bring you back to this place. ¹¹ For surely I know the plans I have for you, says the LORD, plans for your welfare and not for harm, to give you a future with hope. ¹² Then when you call upon me and come and pray to me, I will hear you. ¹³ When you search for me, you will find me; if you seek me with all your heart, ¹⁴ I will let you find me, says the LORD, and I will restore your fortunes and gather you from all the nations and all the places where I have driven you, says the LORD, and I will bring you back to the place from which I sent you into exile.

¹⁶ Thus says the LORD concerning the king who sits on the throne of David, and concerning all the people who live in this city, your kinsfolk who did not go out with you into exile: ¹⁷ Thus says the LORD of hosts, I am going to let loose on them sword, famine, and pestilence, and I will make them like rotten figs that are so bad they cannot be eaten. ¹⁸ I will pursue them with the sword, with famine, and with pestilence, and will make them a horror to all the kingdoms of the earth, to be an object of cursing, and horror, and hissing, and a derision among all the nations where I have driven them, ¹⁹ because they did not heed my words, says the LORD, when I persistently sent to you my servants the prophets, but they^b would not listen, says the LORD. ²⁰ But now, all you exiles whom I sent away from Jerusalem to Babylon, hear the word of the LORD: ²¹ Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, concerning Ahab son of Kolaiah and Zedekiah son of Maaseiah, who are prophesying a lie to you in my name: I am going to deliver them into the hand of King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon, and he shall kill them before your eyes. ²² And on account of them this curse shall be used by all the exiles from Judah in Babylon: "The LORD make you like Zedekiah and Ahab, whom the king of Babylon roasted in the fire," ²³ because they have perpetrated outrage in Israel and have committed adultery with their neighbors' wives, and have spoken in my name lying words that I did not command them; I am the one who knows and bears witness, says the LORD.

²⁴ To Shemaiah of Nehelam you shall say: ²⁵ Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: In your own name you sent a letter to all the people who are in Jerusalem, and to the priest Zephaniah son of Maaseiah, and to all the priests, saying, ²⁶ The LORD himself has made you priest instead of the priest Jehoiada, so that there may be officers in the house of the LORD to control any madman who plays the prophet, to put him in the stocks and the collar. ²⁷ So now why have you not rebuked Jeremiah of Anathoth who plays the prophet for you? ²⁸ For he has actually sent to us in Babylon, saying, "It will be a long time; build houses and live in them, and plant gardens and eat what they produce."

the LORD concerning Shemaiah of Nehelam: Because Shemaiah has prophesied to you, though I did not send him, and has led you to trust in a lie, ³² therefore thus says the LORD: I am going to punish Shemaiah of Nehelam and his descendants; he shall not have anyone living among this people to see^a the good that I am going to do to my people, says the LORD, for he has spoken rebellion against the LORD.

30 The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD: ² Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: Write in a book all the words that I have spoken to you. ³ For the days are surely coming, says the LORD, when I will restore the fortunes of my people, Israel and Judah, says the LORD, and I will bring them back to the land that I gave to their ancestors and they shall take possession of it.

⁴ These are the words that the LORD spoke concerning Israel and Judah:

⁵ Thus says the LORD:

We have heard a cry of panic,
of terror, and no peace.

⁶ Ask now, and see,
can a man bear a child?

Why then do I see every man with his hands on his loins like a woman in labor?

Why has every face turned pale?

⁷ Alas! that day is so great
there is none like it;

it is a time of distress for Jacob;
yet he shall be rescued from it.

⁸ On that day, says the LORD of hosts, I will break the yoke from off his^b neck, and I will burst his^b bonds, and strangers shall no more make a servant of him. ⁹ But they shall serve the LORD their God and David their king, whom I will raise up for them.

¹⁰ But as for you, have no fear, my servant

Jacob, says the LORD,

and do not be dismayed, O Israel;

for I am going to save you from far away, and your offspring from the land of their captivity.

Jacob shall return and have quiet and ease,
and no one shall make him afraid.

¹¹ For I am with you, says the LORD, to save you;

I will make an end of all the nations among which I scattered you, but of you I will not make an end.

I will chastise you in just measure, and I will by no means leave you unpunished.

¹² For thus says the LORD:

Your hurt is incurable,
your wound is grievous.

¹³ There is no one to uphold your cause, no medicine for your wound,
no healing for you.

¹⁴ All your lovers have forgotten you;
they care nothing for you;
for I have dealt you the blow of an enemy,
the punishment of a merciless foe,

30.1–31.40: The book of consolation, a cluster of oracles looking forward to God's restoration of Judah and Jerusalem, prompted by the reference to "the good" in 29.32. These oracles are said to be in a book or document (30.2,4) centering on the theme of "restoring the fortunes" of Israel/Judah. Since Israel (Ephraim) and Judah often appear as two separate political entities in this material, and because there is a frequent northern orientation (compare 30.4; 31.5,6,15), some of the oracles may be early, envisioning the desire of Josiah to reunify Judah with the former territory of Israel. Jer 31.26 ("Thereupon I awoke") indicates that an original dream vision underlay some of this material, which has been reworked and expanded in its present form to address the hopes for the restoration of Judah following the Babylonian exile. 30.1–4: Introduction. The expressions "for the days are surely coming" and "restore the fortunes" sound the theme of this material. 3: Fortunes, or perhaps the spoils and persons lost in warfare, captivity or in crisis. 5–11: Using the imagery of breaking the yoke of captivity (v. 8), taken up from chs 27–28, God's salvation is promised. The language is akin to that of Second Isaiah, especially in vv. 10–11 (cf. Isa 35.4; 43.1). 6: The rhetorical question requires a negative response. The pain of pregnancy and labor in childbirth is a common metaphor for distress in the midst of crisis. See Jer 4.31; 6.24; 13.21. 11: Not make an end, see 4.27; 5.10,18. Israel will have to suffer the just consequence of its transgressions. 12–17: Shift to female subject. Lady Zion seems incurably wounded (cf. 14.17; 15.8,18) having suffered because your guilt is great,

because your sins are so numerous.

¹⁵ Why do you cry out over your hurt?
Your pain is incurable.

Because your guilt is great,
because your sins are so numerous,
I have done these things to you.

¹⁶ Therefore all who devour you shall be devoured,
and all your foes, every one of them,
shall go into captivity;
those who plunder you shall be
plundered,
and all who prey on you I will make a prey.

¹⁷ For I will restore health to you, and your wounds I will heal,
says the LORD,
because they have called you an outcast:
“It is Zion; no one cares for her!”

¹⁸ Thus says the LORD:
I am going to restore the fortunes of the tents of Jacob,
and have compassion on his
dwellings;

the city shall be rebuilt upon its mound,
and the citadel set on its rightful site.

¹⁹ Out of them shall come thanksgiving, and the sound of merrymakers.
I will make them many, and they shall not be few;
I will make them honored, and they shall not be disdained.

²⁰ Their children shall be as of old, their congregation shall be established before me;
and I will punish all who oppress them.

²¹ Their prince shall be one of their own, their ruler shall come from their midst;

I will bring him near, and he shall
approach me,
for who would otherwise dare to approach me?

says the LORD.

²² And you shall be my people, and I will be your God.

²³ Look, the storm of the LORD!
Wrath has gone forth,
a whirling^a tempest;
it will burst upon the head of the
wicked.

²⁴ The fierce anger of the LORD will not turn back
until he has executed and accomplished
the intents of his mind.

In the latter days you will understand this.

31 At that time, says the LORD, I will be the God of all the families of Israel, and they shall be my people.

² Thus says the LORD:
The people who survived the sword found grace in the wilderness;
when Israel sought for rest, ³ the LORD appeared to him^b from far away.^c

I have loved you with an everlasting love; therefore I have continued my faithfulness to you.

⁴ Again I will build you, and you shall be built,
O virgin Israel!
Again you shall take^d your tambourines,
and go forth in the dance of the merrymakers.

God's punishment, but the time of healing and restoration is at hand. 14. Lovers, that is, political allies. To be in alliance with a suzerain power, however, meant paying appropriate homage to its deities. This custom lay behind the connection of religious apostasy and the charge of committing adultery and fornication. 30.18–31.1: Shift to male subject. The city and its ruler will be restored. 30.18: Its mound, that is, its “tell.” Cities were built on occupation mounds and, when destroyed, the mound was cleared, filled in, built higher and refortified. 21: Prince . . . ruler, avoiding the term for “king,” perhaps reflecting a more subdued expectation than that expressed in v. 9. 23–24 duplicates 23.19–20, and was likely a fragment appended to this section. 31.2–6: Shift to female subject. “Virgin Israel” will dance and celebrate her vineyards. 2: Grace in the wilderness, an Exodus theme (Ex 33.12–17) appropriated as a metaphor for return from exile (see Isa 40.3; 41.18–19; 43.19). 3: From far away, see 23.23,

⁵ Again you shall plant vineyards on the mountains of Samaria;
the planters shall plant,
and shall enjoy the fruit.
⁶ For there shall be a day when sentinels will call
in the hill country of Ephraim: “Come, let us go up to Zion, to the LORD our God.”

⁷ For thus says the LORD:
Sing aloud with gladness for Jacob, and raise shouts for the chief of the
nations;
proclaim, give praise, and say, “Save, O LORD, your people,
the remnant of Israel.”

⁸ See, I am going to bring them from the land of the north,
and gather them from the farthest parts
of the earth,
among them the blind and the lame,
those with child and those in labor,
together;
a great company, they shall return here.

⁹ With weeping they shall come, and with consolations^a I will lead them back,
I will let them walk by brooks of water, in a straight path in which they shall not stumble;
for I have become a father to Israel,
and Ephraim is my firstborn.

¹⁰ Hear the word of the LORD, O nations, and declare it in the coastlands far
away;
say, “He who scattered Israel will gather him, and will keep him as a shepherd a flock.”

¹¹ For the LORD has ransomed Jacob, and has redeemed him from hands too strong for him.

¹² They shall come and sing aloud on the height of Zion,
and they shall be radiant over the goodness of the LORD,
over the grain, the wine, and the oil, and over the young of the flock and the herd;
their life shall become like a watered garden,
and they shall never languish again.

¹³ Then shall the young women rejoice in the dance,
and the young men and the old shall be merry.
I will turn their mourning into joy,
I will comfort them, and give them gladness for sorrow.

¹⁴ I will give the priests their fill of fatness, and my people shall be satisfied with my bounty,
says the LORD.

¹⁵ Thus says the LORD:
A voice is heard in Ramah, lamentation and bitter weeping.
Rachel is weeping for her children;
she refuses to be comforted for her
children,
because they are no more.

¹⁶ Thus says the LORD:
Keep your voice from weeping, where God's nature is to be far away rather than close at hand. 31.7–9: Shift to male subject. The repatriation of the remnant of Israel. 7: Save, O LORD, a festival cry lying behind the term “Hosanna”; see Ps 118.25. 8: Blind . . . lame, those most pitiful and often discriminated against; cf. Lev 21.18; 2 Sam 5.8. 9: Ephraim was one of the Joseph tribes, the central power base of Israel (the north). Because of its significant political power base and its ancient associations with the Joseph traditions at Shechem, it was considered the firstborn; see Gen 48.8–20. 10–14: God's announcement to the nations. Using standard imagery, Israel's deliverance is declared. 10: Cf. 23.2–3. 12: Grain . . . wine . . . oil, images of agricultural bounty; see Deut 11.14; Hos 2.8; Joel 2.19,24. 13: Typical images of joy and celebration; cf. Ps 30.11; Isa 35.10. 14: Fatness, the fat of sacrifices was not to be eaten (Lev 3.17; 7.23–25), as it was reserved for God and was burned to ashes. This fatty ash residue was removed by the priests following sacrificial rites (Lev 6.3–4), and was a symbol of divine bounty (Ps 36.9). 15–20: Rachel comforted and her children restored. Rachel's sons were the ancestors of the Joseph tribes (Ephraim and Manasseh) and the tribe of Benjamin. Her death in childbirth was an occasion of mourning (see Gen 35.16–21). Ramah was in Benjaminite territory (Josh 18.21–25), and it was during Benjamin's birth that Rachel died. The Joseph tribes were

and your eyes from tears;
for there is a reward for your work,
says the LORD:
they shall come back from the land of the enemy;

¹⁷ there is hope for your future,
says the LORD:
your children shall come back to their own country.

¹⁸ Indeed I heard Ephraim pleading: “You disciplined me, and I took the discipline;

I was like a calf untrained.
Bring me back, let me come back, for you are the LORD my God.

¹⁹ For after I had turned away I repented; and after I was discovered, I struck my thigh;

I was ashamed, and I was dismayed because I bore the disgrace of my youth.”

²⁰ Is Ephraim my dear son?

Is he the child I delight in?
As often as I speak against him,
I still remember him.

Therefore I am deeply moved for him;
I will surely have mercy on him,

says the LORD.

²¹ Set up road markers for yourself, make yourself signposts;
consider well the highway,
the road by which you went.

Return, O virgin Israel, return to these your cities.

²² How long will you waver,
O faithless daughter?
For the LORD has created a new thing on
the earth:
a woman encompasses^a a man.

²³ Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Once more they shall use these words in the land of Judah and in its towns when I restore their fortunes:

“The LORD bless you, O abode of
righteousness,
O holy hill!”

²⁴ And Judah and all its towns shall live there together, and the farmers and those who wander^b with their flocks.

²⁵ I will satisfy the weary, and all who are faint I will replenish.

²⁶ Thereupon I awoke and looked, and my sleep was pleasant to me.

²⁷ The days are surely coming, says the LORD, when I will sow the house of Israel and the house of Judah with the seed of humans and the seed of animals. ²⁸ And just as I have watched over them to pluck up and break down, to overthrow, destroy, and bring evil, so I will watch over them to build and to plant, says the LORD. ²⁹ In those days they taken captive by the Assyrians in 722 BCE, the occasion for Rachel's mourning. 18: Ephraim, the more powerful of the Joseph tribes, and therefore representative of all Israel (the north); see 7.15. 19: Struck my thigh, a sign of mourning and regret; see Ezek 21.12. 20: Questions normally expecting a negative response. Though Ephraim does not act like a dear son or delightful child, nevertheless God cannot ultimately turn against him; cf. Hos 11.1–9. Deeply moved, strong language indicating the churning of one's intestines. 21–22: The faithless daughter's return. 21: Road markers, or more likely grave markers (see 2 Kings 23.17; Ezek 39.15). Signposts, term used in v. 15, so likely associated with the mourning at a grave. Israel is to recall its deadly path into exile. 22: A new thing, cf. Isa 43.19. A woman encompasses a man, a cryptic phrase, perhaps playing on the term “faithless.” The word translated “encompasses” is used of God's protective care in Deut 32.10. Normally women were under the protection of male members of their family. 23–26: Conclusion to an earlier dream-vision sequence, a sign of the editing of this material.

31.27–40: Three oracles looking forward to God's radically new future.

31.27–30: God will build and plant the new Israel. 28: Watched over . . . to build and to plant, the central theme of the book; see 1.10,11–12. 29: Cf. Ezek 18.1–4. Unlike Ezekiel, Jeremiah does not refute the saying but simply retires it from its traditional usage as a respected and honored truth about the nature of God; cf. Ex 20.5; 34.7.

“The parents have eaten sour grapes, and the children’s teeth are set on edge.”

³⁰ But all shall die for their own sins; the teeth of everyone who eats sour grapes shall be set on edge.

³¹ The days are surely coming, says the LORD, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and the house of Judah.

³² It will not be like the covenant that I made with their ancestors when I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt—a covenant that they broke, though I was their husband,^a says the LORD. ³³ But this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, says the LORD: I will put my law within them, and I will write it on their hearts; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. ³⁴ No longer shall they teach one another, or say to each other, “Know the LORD,” for they shall all know me, from the least of them to the greatest, says the LORD; for I will forgive their iniquity, and remember their sin no more.

³⁵ Thus says the LORD, who gives the sun for light by day and the fixed order of the moon and the stars for light by night, who stirs up the sea so that its waves roar—

the LORD of hosts is his name:

³⁶ If this fixed order were ever to cease from my presence, says the LORD, then also the offspring of Israel would cease
to be a nation before me forever.

³⁷ Thus says the LORD:

If the heavens above can be measured,
and the foundations of the earth below
can be explored,
then I will reject all the offspring of Israel because of all they have done,
says the LORD.

³⁸ The days are surely coming, says the LORD, when the city shall be rebuilt for the LORD from the tower of Hananel to the Corner Gate. ³⁹ And the measuring line shall go out farther, straight to the hill Gareb, and shall then turn to Goah. ⁴⁰ The whole valley of the dead bodies and the ashes, and all the fields as far as the Wadi Kidron, to the corner of the Horse Gate toward the east, shall be sacred to the LORD. It shall never again be uprooted or overthrown.

This principle, however, was already coming under critique; see Deut 24.16; 2 Kings 14.6.

31.31–37: The renewed covenant. 32: I was their husband, using the term associated with the Canaanite god Baal; cf. Hos 2.16; Jer 3.14. God could function as “husband” or “master” (Heb “ba’al”), and this led to confusion between God and Baal. In functioning as “ba’al,” it is God, not Baal, who gives Israel its “grain, wine and oil”; see Hos 2.8. 33–34: Though the law (Heb “torah,” which also means “teaching”) was traditionally thought of as being “in the heart” (Deut 30.14), it would become so instinctual that “teaching” would become unnecessary, a radically new idea given the strong Deuteronomistic concern for teaching (Deut 4.10; 5.1,31; 11.19; 31.12–13). 35–37: Later additions using standard hymnic language. God’s commitment is as sure as the cosmos is fixed and unfathomable; cf. 33.19–26.

31.38–40: Jerusalem rebuilt. A later oracle depicting the restoration of Jerusalem’s walls around its perimeter. On these places, several of which are otherwise unknown, see Neh 3.1,28; 12.39; Zech 14.10; 2 Kings 14.13.

32.1–33.26: God’s restoration of Israel. These chapters are thematically linked to the “Book of Consolation” (chs 30–31) and so are included here, even though they should follow ch 34 chronologically; they are dated to the very end of the reign of Zedekiah and of the Babylonian siege (588–586 BCE), during which Jeremiah was in confinement. Jer 32.1–44 centers on the theme that “fields shall be bought . . . and deeds shall be signed and sealed and witnessed” (v. 44), using Jeremiah’s offer of redeeming family property in Anathoth as a sign. Jer 33.1–26 centers on the rebuilding of the city and the promise that the city will be given a new name, “the LORD is our righteousness” (v. 16).

32.1–25: Jeremiah purchases the family property. 1: The tenth year . . . the eighteenth year, 588 BCE. 3–5: Jer-

year of Nebuchadrezzar.² At that time the army of the king of Babylon was besieging Jerusalem, and the prophet Jeremiah was confined in the court of the guard that was in the palace of the king of Judah,³ where King Zedekiah of Judah had confined him. Zedekiah had said, “Why do you prophesy and say: Thus says the LORD: I am going to give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall take it;⁴ King Zedekiah of Judah shall not escape out of the hands of the Chaldeans, but shall surely be given into the hands of the king of Babylon, and shall speak with him face to face and see him eye to eye;⁵ and he shall take Zedekiah to Babylon, and there he shall remain until I attend to him, says the LORD; though you fight against the Chaldeans, you shall not succeed?”

⁶Jeremiah said, The word of the LORD came to me: ⁷Hanamel son of your uncle Shallum is going to come to you and say, “Buy my field that is at Anathoth, for the right of redemption by purchase is yours.”⁸ Then my cousin Hanamel came to me in the court of the guard, in accordance with the word of the LORD, and said to me, “Buy my field that is at Anathoth in the land of Benjamin, for the right of possession and redemption is yours; buy it for yourself.” Then I knew that this was the word of the LORD.

⁹And I bought the field at Anathoth from my cousin Hanamel, and weighed out the money to him, seventeen shekels of silver.¹⁰ I signed the deed, sealed it, got witnesses, and weighed the money on scales.¹¹ Then I took the sealed deed of purchase, containing the terms and conditions, and the open copy;¹² and I gave the deed of purchase to Baruch son of Neriah son of Mahseiah, in the presence of my cousin Hanamel, in the presence of the witnesses who signed the deed of purchase, and in the presence of all the Judeans who were sitting in the court of the guard.¹³ In their presence I charged Baruch, saying,¹⁴ Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Take these deeds, both this sealed deed of purchase and this open deed, and put them in an earthenware jar, in order that they may last for a long time.¹⁵ For thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Houses and fields and vineyards shall again be bought in this land.

¹⁶After I had given the deed of purchase to Baruch son of Neriah, I prayed to the LORD, saying:¹⁷ Ah Lord God! It is you who made the heavens and the earth by your great power and by your outstretched arm! Nothing is too hard for you.¹⁸ You show steadfast love to the thousandth generation,^a but repay the guilt of parents into the laps of their children after them, O great and mighty God whose name is the LORD of hosts,¹⁹ great in counsel and mighty in deed; whose eyes are open to all the ways of mortals, rewarding all according to their ways and according to the fruit of their doings.²⁰ You showed signs and wonders in the land of Egypt, and to this day in Israel and among all humankind, and have made yourself a name that continues to this very day.²¹ You brought your people Israel out of the land of Egypt with signs and wonders, with a strong hand and outstretched arm, and with great terror;²² and you gave them this land, which you swore to their ancestors to give them, a land flowing with milk and honey;²³ and they entered and took possession of it. But they did not obey your voice or follow your law; of all you commanded them to do, they did nothing. Therefore you have made all these disasters come upon them.²⁴ See, the siege ramps have been cast up against the city to take it, and the city, emiah's arrest is narrated in 37:1–38:28. The prophetic oracle alluded to is 34:2–3. During a brief lifting of the siege (see 34:8–22) Jeremiah tried to leave the city, was accused of desertion, and was arrested (37:11–16). 4: Chaldeans, i.e., Babylonians. 7: Right of redemption, to keep property within the extended family, members who could do so were expected to “redeem” land that was in jeopardy of being forfeited or sold outside the family; see Lev 25:23–28. 9: Seventeen shekels, ca. 7 oz (194 grams). At this time there was no coinage, and “money” was weighed. 11: Sealed deed . . . open copy, contracts were sealed with a signet ring on a clay “bulla,” but a copy or summary of the contents was left available on the outside of the scroll for reference and public scrutiny. Storage of such documents in clay jars was common practice. 12: Baruch, son of Neriah, Jeremiah's scribe. faced with sword, famine, and pestilence, has been given into the hands of the Chaldeans who are fighting against it. What you spoke has happened, as you yourself can see.²⁵ Yet you, O Lord God, have said to me, “Buy the field for money and get witnesses”—though the city has been given into the hands of the Chaldeans.

²⁶The word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: ²⁷See, I am the LORD, the God of all flesh; is anything too hard for me? ²⁸Therefore, thus says the LORD: I am going to give this city into the hands of the Chaldeans and into the hand of King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon, and he shall take it. ²⁹The Chaldeans who are fighting against this city shall come, set it on fire, and burn it, with the houses on whose roofs offerings have been made to Baal and libations have been poured out to other gods, to provoke me to anger. ³⁰For the people of Israel and the people of Judah have done nothing but evil in my sight from their youth; the people of Israel have done nothing but provoke me to anger by the work of their hands, says the LORD. ³¹This city has aroused my anger and wrath, from the day it was built until this day, so that I will remove it from my sight ³²because of all the evil of the people of Israel and the people of Judah that they did to provoke me to anger—they, their kings and their officials, their priests and their prophets, the citizens of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. ³³They have turned their backs to me, not their faces; though I have taught them persistently, they would not listen and accept correction. ³⁴They set up their abominations in the house that bears my name, and defiled it. ³⁵They built the high places of Baal in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to offer up their sons and daughters to Molech, though

I did not command them, nor did it enter my mind that they should do this abomination, causing Judah to sin.

³⁶Now therefore thus says the LORD, the God of Israel, concerning this city of which you say, “It is being given into the hand of the king of Babylon by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence”: ³⁷See, I am going to gather them from all the lands to which I drove them in my anger and my wrath and in great indignation; I will bring them back to this place, and I will settle them in safety. ³⁸They shall be my people, and I will be their God. ³⁹I will give them one heart and one way, that they may fear me for all time, for their own good and the good of their children after them. ⁴⁰I will make an everlasting covenant with them, never to draw back from doing good to them; and I will put the fear of me in their hearts, so that they may not turn from me. ⁴¹I will rejoice in doing good to them, and I will plant them in this land in faithfulness, with all my heart and all my soul.

⁴²For thus says the LORD: Just as I have brought all this great disaster upon this people, so I will bring upon them all the good fortune that I now promise them. ⁴³Fields shall be bought in this land of which you are saying, It is a desolation, without human beings or animals; it has been given into the hands of the Chaldeans. ⁴⁴Fields shall be bought for money, and deeds shall be signed and sealed and witnessed, in the land of Benjamin, in the places around Jerusalem, and in the cities of Judah, of the hill country, of the Shephelah, and of the Negeb; for I will restore their fortunes, says the LORD.

33 The word of the LORD came to Jeremiah a second time, while he was still confined in the court of the guard: ²Thus ence to the plagues tradition (cf. Ex 3.20; 4.21; Deut 34.11). 25: After reviewing Israel's history of disobedience, Jeremiah is struck by the irony that, with the land about to be captured by the Chaldeans (the Babylonians) and all land-tenure about to be nullified, he is being asked to perform such a foolish transaction. 26–44: In the face of Jeremiah's resistance, God restates the promise of restoration. A typically Deuteronomic sermon (vv. 26–35) is followed by words of promise. 29: Roofs were commonly used for many purposes, including religious rituals both legitimate (Neh 8.16) and illegitimate (19.13; Zeph 1.5). 35: On the rituals in the Hinnom Valley, see 7.31; 19.5–6. Molech is either the name of a foreign god (1 Kings 11.7) or an epithet for Baal, formed by combining the vowels of the word for “foolishness” (Heb “boshet”) with the consonants of the word for “king” (“melek”). 36: Of which you say, the pronoun here, as in v. 43, is plural, indicating that this is the popular sentiment at this critical time of the siege. 39–41: As in 31.31–34, the saving action is here solely God's, who acts unilaterally in the face of Israel's own utter failure. 44: Benjamin . . . Negeb, see 17.26n.

says the LORD who made the earth,^a the LORD who formed it to establish it—the LORD is his name: ³ Call to me and I will answer you, and will tell you great and hidden things that you have not known. ⁴ For thus says the LORD, the God of Israel, concerning the houses of this city and the houses of the kings of Judah that were torn down to make a defense against the siege ramps and before the sword:^b ⁵ The Chaldeans are coming in to fight^c and to fill them with the dead bodies of those whom I shall strike down in my anger and my wrath, for I have hidden my face from this city because of all their wickedness. ⁶ I am going to bring it recovery and healing; I will heal them and reveal to them abundance^b of prosperity and security. ⁷ I will restore the fortunes of Judah and the fortunes of Israel, and rebuild them as they were at first. ⁸ I will cleanse them from all the guilt of their sin against me, and I will forgive all the guilt of their sin and rebellion against me. ⁹ And this city^d shall be to me a name of joy, a praise and a glory before all the nations of the earth who shall hear of all the good that I do for them; they shall fear and tremble because of all the good and all the prosperity I provide for it.

¹⁰ Thus says the LORD: In this place of which you say, “It is a waste without human beings or animals,” in the towns of Judah and the streets of Jerusalem that are desolate, without inhabitants, human or animal, there shall once more be heard ¹¹ the voice of mirth and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride, the voices of those who sing, as they bring thank offerings to the house of the LORD:

“Give thanks to the LORD of hosts, for the LORD is good,
for his steadfast love endures forever!”

For I will restore the fortunes of the land as at first, says the LORD.

¹² Thus says the LORD of hosts: In this place that is waste, without human beings or animals, and in all its towns there shall again be pasture for shepherds resting their flocks. ¹³ In the towns of the hill country, of the Shephelah, and of the Negeb, in the land of Benjamin, the places around Jerusalem, and in the towns of Judah, flocks shall again pass under the hands of the one who counts them, says the LORD.

¹⁴ The days are surely coming, says the LORD, when I will fulfill the promise I made to the house of Israel and the house of Judah. ¹⁵ In those days and at that time I will cause a righteous Branch to spring up for David; and he shall execute justice and righteousness in the land. ¹⁶ In those days Judah will be saved and Jerusalem will live in safety. And this is the name by which it will be called: “The LORD is our righteousness.”

¹⁷ For thus says the LORD: David shall never lack a man to sit on the throne of the house of Israel, ¹⁸ and the levitical priests shall never lack a man in my presence to offer burnt offerings, to make grain offerings, and to make sacrifices for all time.

33.1–26: Oracles of restoration, connected to the previous oracles by their presumed location (Jeremiah in confinement). 4: Houses of this city, introduces the theme of the restoration of Jerusalem’s buildings. Now the city itself becomes the subject of visions of restoration; cf. v. 9. The desperation of the city is clear, as the buildings within it are dismantled to use as raw material to defend against the Babylonian siege ramps. 5: Chaldeans, i.e., Babylonians. 7: At first, or “formerly.” 8–9: God’s favor will be lavished on Israel out of sheer divine mercy, with no preconditions, and the nations of the world will be astounded to see such beneficence. 10: Of which you say, again the pronoun is plural, expressing popular pessimistic sentiment. 11: Cf. 7.34; 16.9; 25.10. This thanksgiving uses standard psalmic language (Pss 106.1; 107.1; 136.1–26; Sir 51.12). 13: Shephelah . . . Negeb, see 17.26n. 14–16: Echoes 23.5–6, except that in v. 6 (“by which it will be called”), it is now the city of Jerusalem that is given the name rather than the anticipated Davidic ruler. 17–18: The first of three appended oracles regarding Jerusalem’s leadership, using late language reflecting 2 Chr 7.18. The term levitical priests is common to Deuteronomy but used only here in Jeremiah. 19–22: Second appended oracle recalling the argument of 31.36–37. Again hopes are placed on both royal and levitical persons, characteristic of the postexilic hopes for both a Davidic and a

¹⁹The word of the LORD came to Jeremiah:

²⁰Thus says the LORD: If any of you could break my covenant with the day and my covenant with the night, so that day and night would not come at their appointed time, ²¹only then could my covenant with my servant David be broken, so that he would not have a son to reign on his throne, and my covenant with my ministers the Levites. ²²Just as the host of heaven cannot be numbered and the sands of the sea cannot be measured, so I will increase the offspring of my servant David, and the Levites who minister to me.

²³The word of the LORD came to Jeremiah:

²⁴Have you not observed how these people say, “The two families that the LORD chose have been rejected by him,” and how they hold my people in such contempt that they no longer regard them as a nation? ²⁵Thus says the LORD: Only if I had not established my covenant with day and night and the ordinances of heaven and earth, ²⁶would I reject the offspring of Jacob and of my servant David and not choose any of his descendants as rulers over the offspring of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. For I will restore their fortunes, and will have mercy upon them.

34 The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, when King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon and all his army and all the kingdoms of the earth and all the peoples under his dominion were fighting against Jerusalem and all its cities: ²Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: Go and speak to King Zedekiah of Judah and say to him: Thus says the LORD: I am going to give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall burn it with fire. ³And you yourself shall not escape from his hand, but shall surely be captured and handed over to him; you shall see the king of Babylon eye to eye and speak with him face to face; and you shall go to Babylon. ⁴Yet hear the word of the LORD, O King Zedekiah of Judah! Thus says the LORD concerning you: You shall not die by the sword; ⁵you shall die in peace. And as spices were burned^a for your ancestors, the earlier kings who preceded you, so they shall burn spices^b for you and lament for you, saying, “Alas, lord!” For I have spoken the word, says the LORD.

⁶Then the prophet Jeremiah spoke all these words to Zedekiah king of Judah, in Jerusalem, ⁷when the army of the king of Babylon was fighting against Jerusalem and against all the cities of Judah that were left, Lachish and Azekah; for these were the only fortified cities of Judah that remained.

priestly leader (compare Zech 4.11–14). 22: Cf. Gen 22.17–18. 23–26: Third appended oracle. Again celebrates the promise to the “two families,” but now this is a reference to the entire land of Israel represented by Jacob (Israel) and David (Judah); cf. the cosmic argument of 31.36–37. 25: Covenant with day and night, this radical language echoes the Priestly language explicit in Gen 9.8–16 that God’s covenant is with “all flesh” and, indeed, with “the earth,” that is, the cosmos. In this tradition, Gen 9 is understood as a recapitulation of creation itself (Gen 1).

34.1–7: Judgment against Zedekiah. This oracle, spoken during the Babylonian siege, recapitulates the speech that, according to 32.3–5, was the basis for Jeremiah’s imprisonment. Though v. 5 sounds as though it is a threat against Zedekiah, it is rather a mitigation of divine judgment, promising Zedekiah a normal death and burial with full honor; contrast the fate of Jehoiakim in 22.18–19, for whom these normal rituals of burial would not be conducted. In fact, Zedekiah’s fate was not this “peaceful,” according to 52.9–11; 2 Kings 25.6–7. 7: Lachish (21 mi [45 km] southwest of Jerusalem) and Azekah (11mi [18 km] north-northwest of Lachish) were two garrison cities defending Jerusalem on the southwest. Letters found at Lachish from this time indicate the drama of these final days, when at last even the signal fire from Azekah could no longer be seen and Lachish alone survived.

34.8–22: The aborted manumission of slaves. The context for this event is the period when the siege was briefly lifted because Egyptian forces under Pharaoh Hophra (Apries) arrived in Judah to attempt to break the siege of the Babylonian army. Babylonian forces temporarily withdrew from Jerusalem in order to face Hophra’s army; see 37.5,11. The manumission was in accord with the principles of Ex 21.2 and Deut 15.12, as referenced in Jer 34.14. The manumission likely also served practical purposes, given scarcity of food resources and the need for male support troops. As soon as the siege was lifted, however, the people presumed that normality would

⁸The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, after King Zedekiah had made a covenant with all the people in Jerusalem to make a proclamation of liberty to them—⁹that all should set free their Hebrew slaves, male and female, so that no one should hold another Judean in slavery.¹⁰ And they obeyed, all the officials and all the people who had entered into the covenant that all would set free their slaves, male or female, so that they would not be enslaved again; they obeyed and set them free.¹¹ But afterward they turned around and took back the male and female slaves they had set free, and brought them again into subjection as slaves.¹² The word of the LORD came to Jeremiah from the LORD:¹³ Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: I myself made a covenant with your ancestors when I brought them out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of slavery, saying,¹⁴ “Every seventh year each of you must set free any Hebrews who have been sold to you and have served you six years; you must set them free from your service.” But your ancestors did not listen to me or incline their ears to me.¹⁵ You yourselves recently repented and did what was right in my sight by proclaiming liberty to one another, and you made a covenant before me in the house that is called by my name;¹⁶ but then you turned around and profaned my name when each of you took back your male and female slaves, whom you had set free according to their desire, and you brought them again into subjection to be your slaves.¹⁷ Therefore, thus says the LORD: You have not obeyed me by granting a release to your neighbors and friends; I am going to grant a release to you, says the LORD—a release to the sword, to pestilence, and to famine. I will make you a horror to all the kingdoms of the earth.¹⁸ And those who transgressed my covenant and did not keep the terms of the covenant that they made before me, I will make like^a the calf when they cut it in two and passed between its parts:¹⁹ the officials of Judah, the officials of Jerusalem, the eunuchs, the priests, and all the people of the land who passed between the parts of the calf²⁰ shall be handed over to their enemies and to those who seek their lives. Their corpses shall become food for the birds of the air and the wild animals of the earth.²¹ And as for King Zedekiah of Judah and his officials, I will hand them over to their enemies and to those who seek their lives, to the army of the king of Babylon, which has withdrawn from you.²² I am going to command, says the LORD, and will bring them back to this city; and they will fight against it, and take it, and burn it with fire. The towns of Judah I will make a desolation without inhabitant.

return and therefore the manumission was retracted. 17: A release to you, using the term for the “amnesty” or “manumission,” Jeremiah offers a play on words. 18: Like the calf when they cut it in two, likely a reference to the fact that covenants were “cut” (Heb “karat,” see v. 13) rather than “made,” and were accompanied by ritual actions such as those suggested by Gen 15.9–18. 19: The eunuchs, the Heb term “saris” is often used of court officials (1 Sam 8.15; 2 Kings 8.6; Jer 29.2; 52.25), indicating perhaps how highly in Judean court life such persons of ambiguous gender could ascend. Some scholars, however, suggest that the term has two distinct meanings (“official” and “eunuch”). There is no indication, however, that the “eunuch” was a social pariah. The common scholarly assumption that the laws of Lev 21.20; 22.24 and Deut 23.1 refer to eunuchs is far from certain. 22: Bring them back, the siege will be resumed.

35.1–19: The sign of the Rechabites. The clan of the Rechabites traced their origins to Jonadab ben Rechab (v. 6), and rallied around the anti-agrarian policies indicated in vv. 8–10, perhaps as a fundamentalist reaction against cultural assimilation to the perceived values of the Canaanites. Jonadab was remembered as an ally of the conservative Yahwist Jehu (842–814 BCE) in his revolt against the syncretistic policies of the Omri dynasty in the Northern Kingdom of Israel (2 Kings 10.15,23). Their faithfulness to their extreme values was used by Jeremiah as a stark contrast with the faithlessness of the people of Jerusalem, who could not obey even divinely sanctioned norms. 1: King Jehoiakim (608–598 BCE), a surprising regression in time, perhaps to prepare the the chambers; then offer them wine to drink.

³ So I took Jaazaniah son of Jeremiah son of Habazziniah, and his brothers, and all his sons, and the whole house of the Rechabites.

says the LORD. ¹⁴ The command has been carried out that Jonadab son of Rechab gave to his descendants to drink no wine; and they drink none to this day, for they have obeyed their ancestor's command. But I myself have spoken to you persistently, and you have not obeyed me. ¹⁵ I have sent to you all my servants the prophets, sending them persistently, saying, "Turn now every one of you from your evil way, and amend your doings, and do not go after other gods to serve them, and then you shall live in the land that I gave to you and your ancestors." But you did not incline your ear or obey me. ¹⁶ The descendants of Jonadab son of Rechab have carried out the command that their ancestor gave them, but this people has not obeyed me. ¹⁷ Therefore, thus says the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel: I am going to bring on Judah and on all the inhabitants of Jerusalem every disaster that I have pronounced against them; because I have spoken to them and they have not listened, I have called to them and they have not answered.

¹⁸ But to the house of the Rechabites Jeremiah said: Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Because you have obeyed the command of your ancestor Jonadab, and kept all his precepts, and done all that he commanded you, ¹⁹ therefore thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Jonadab son of Rechab shall not lack a descendant to stand before me for all time.

36 In the fourth year of King Jehoiakim son of Josiah of Judah, this word came to Jeremiah from the LORD: ² Take a scroll and write on it all the words that I have spoken reader for ch 36, also set during the reign of Jehoiakim. 4: Chamber, prominent families had open rooms in the Temple complex where they gathered, shared sacrificial meals, and conducted other business (36.10; 2 Kings 23.11). Keeper of the threshold, on this important priestly function, see 2 Kings 12.9; 22.4; 23.4; 25.18. 11: When King Nebuchadrezzar . . . came up against the land, must refer to the Babylonian (Chaldean) incursion into the Levant in 605–604 BCE, setting the stage for ch 36. Arameans, centered in Damascus (that is, Syria), who were often the historical enemies of Israel and perhaps always a problem for the nomadic clans of herdsmen in the eastern steppes. 15: See 7.25n.

36.1–32: Commissioning and reading the scroll of 605 BCE. In a pivotal year, the Babylonians defeated the Egyptians in battle and asserted themselves as the dominant power over Judah, forcing the radical reshaping of Judean aspirations and allegiances, events introduced in 35.11. As in ch 25, so here the editor's use of the "scroll tradition" concludes a major section of the oracles (chs 26–35), the second such cycle. The oracles include the chief collection of Jeremiah's utterances from 627 down to 605 BCE (compare 25.3 and 36.2). At this time, Jeremiah was already under a temporary ban from the Temple quarters (36.5), so the story likely follows the event of his being arraigned and beaten by the Temple overseer Pashhur (20.1–6), a possible occa-

to you against Israel and Judah and all the nations, from the day I spoke to you, from the days of Josiah until today. ³ It may be that when the house of Judah hears of all the disasters that I intend to do to them, all of them may turn from their evil ways, so that I may forgive their iniquity and their sin.

⁴ Then Jeremiah called Baruch son of Neriah, and Baruch wrote on a scroll at Jeremiah's dictation all the words of the LORD that he had spoken to him. ⁵ And Jeremiah ordered Baruch, saying, "I am prevented from entering the house of the LORD; ⁶ so you go yourself, and on a fast day in the hearing of the people in the LORD's house you shall read the words of the LORD from the scroll that you have written at my dictation. You shall read them also in the hearing of all the people of Judah who come up from their towns. ⁷ It may be that their plea will come before the LORD, and that all of them will turn from their evil ways, for great is the anger and wrath that the LORD has pronounced against this people." ⁸ And Baruch son of Neriah did all that the prophet Jeremiah ordered him about reading from the scroll the words of the LORD in the LORD's house.

⁹ In the fifth year of King Jehoiakim son of Josiah of Judah, in the ninth month, all the people in Jerusalem and all the people who came from the towns of Judah to Jerusalem proclaimed a fast before the LORD. ¹⁰ Then, in the hearing of all the people, Baruch read the words of Jeremiah from the scroll, in the house of the LORD, in the chamber of Gemariah son of Shaphan the secretary, which was in the upper court, at the entry of the New Gate of the LORD's house.

¹¹ When Micaiah son of Gemariah son of Shaphan heard all the words of the LORD

from the scroll, ¹² he went down to the king's house, into the secretary's chamber; and all the officials were sitting there: Elishama the secretary, Delaiah son of Shemaiah, Elnathan son of Achbor, Gemariah son of Shaphan, Zedekiah son of Hananiah, and all the officials. ¹³ And Micaiah told them all the words that he had heard, when Baruch read the scroll in the hearing of the people. ¹⁴ Then all the officials sent Jehudi son of Nethaniah son of Shelemiah son of Cushi to say to Baruch, "Bring the scroll that you read in the hearing of the people, and come." So Baruch son of Neriah took the scroll in his hand and came to them. ¹⁵ And they said to him, "Sit down and read it to us." So Baruch read it to them. ¹⁶ When they heard all the words, they turned to one another in alarm, and said to Baruch, "We certainly must report all these words to the king." ¹⁷ Then they questioned Baruch, "Tell us now, how did you write all these words? Was it at his dictation?" ¹⁸ Baruch answered them, "He dictated all these words to me, and I wrote them with ink on the scroll." ¹⁹ Then the officials said to Baruch, "Go and hide, you and Jeremiah, and let no one know where you are."

²⁰ Leaving the scroll in the chamber of Elishama the secretary, they went to the court of the king; and they reported all the words to the king. ²¹ Then the king sent Jehudi to get the scroll, and he took it from the chamber of Elishama the secretary; and Jehudi read it to the king and all the officials who stood beside the king. ²² Now the king was sitting in his winter apartment (it was the ninth month), and there was a fire burning in the brazier before him.

²³ As Jehudi read three or four columns, the

sion for the ban. As elsewhere, Jeremiah has the assistance of Baruch, who serves as his scribe (see 32.12–16; 51.59), and is supported by the family of Shaphan within the royal court and family (Gemariah and Micaiah), who send Baruch and Jeremiah into protective hiding (v. 19). Piece by piece Jehoiakim burned the scroll, likely as a means of mitigating the effects of the words of judgment, which would have been received as a type of "curse." Most scholars assume that the second scroll, produced to replace the first destroyed by Jehoiakim (vv. 27–32), contained the core of material now found in chs 1–24 (compare 36.29 with 7.20 and 21.6). 6: On a fast day, that is, on a day specially set aside for public mourning and divine intercession in the face of Judah's political crisis (v. 9). 12: Elnathan son of Achbor, perhaps the king's father-in-law (2 Kings 24.8) and head of the mission that brought the prophet Uriah back from Egypt for execution (Jer 26.22–23). 22: Winter apartment, or "harvest quarters." On the morality of the royal accumulation of such dwellings, see 22.13–17; Am 3.15. Ninth month, November–December.

king^a would cut them off with a penknife and throw them into the fire in the brazier, until the entire scroll was consumed in the fire that was in the brazier. ²⁴ Yet neither the king, nor any of his servants who heard all these words, was alarmed, nor did they tear their garments. ²⁵ Even when Elnathan and Delaiah and Gemariah urged the king not to burn the scroll, he would not listen to them. ²⁶ And the king commanded Jerahmeel the king's son and Seraiah son of Azriel and Shelemiah son of Abdeel to arrest the secretary Baruch and the prophet Jeremiah. But the LORD hid them.

²⁷ Now, after the king had burned the scroll with the words that Baruch wrote at Jeremiah's dictation, the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: ²⁸ Take another scroll and write on it all the former words that were in the first scroll, which King Jehoiakim of Judah has burned. ²⁹ And concerning King Jehoiakim of Judah you shall say: Thus says the LORD, You have dared to burn this scroll, saying, Why have you written in it that the king of Babylon will certainly come and destroy this land, and will cut off from it human beings and animals? ³⁰ Therefore thus says the LORD concerning King Jehoiakim of Judah: He shall have no one to sit upon the throne of David, and his dead body shall be cast out to the heat by day and the frost by night. ³¹ And I will punish him and his offspring and his servants for their iniquity; I will bring on them, and on the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and on the people of Judah, all the disasters with which I have threatened them—but they would not listen.

³² Then Jeremiah took another scroll and gave it to the secretary Baruch son of Neriah, who wrote on it at Jeremiah's dictation all the words of the scroll that King Jehoiakim of Judah had burned in the fire; and many similar words were added to them.

37 Zedekiah son of Josiah, whom King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon made king in the land of Judah, succeeded Coniah son of Jehoiakim. ² But neither he nor his servants nor the people of the land listened to the words of the LORD that he spoke through the prophet Jeremiah.

³ King Zedekiah sent Jehucal son of Shel-emiah and the priest Zephaniah son of Maa-seiah to the prophet Jeremiah saying, "Please pray for us to the LORD our God." ⁴ Now Jeremiah was still going in and out among the people, for he had not yet been put in prison. ⁵ Meanwhile, the army of Pharaoh had come out of Egypt; and when the Chaldeans who were besieging Jerusalem heard news of them, they withdrew from Jerusalem.

⁶ Then the word of the LORD came to the prophet Jeremiah: ⁷ Thus says the LORD, God of Israel: This is what the two of you shall say to the king of Judah, who sent you to me to inquire of me: Pharaoh's army, which set out to help you, is going to return to its own land, to Egypt. ⁸ And the Chaldeans shall return and fight against this city; they shall take it and burn it with fire. ⁹ Thus says the LORD: Do not deceive yourselves, saying, "The Chaldeans will surely go away from us," for they will not go away. ¹⁰ Even if you defeated the whole army of Chaldeans who are fighting against you, and there remained of them only 37.1–38.28: The final arrest of Jeremiah. Two different accounts of what was likely one event have been juxtaposed, recounting the story of Jeremiah's final confinement just before the fall of Jerusalem in 586 BCE. The main story (37.1–21 and 38.14–28), concerning Jeremiah's desire to escape imprisonment in the house of the secretary Jonathan (37.15,20; 38.26), is embellished with the story of Jeremiah's rescue by the Ethiopian courtier, Ebed-melech (38.1–13). As this material begins the third cycle, it resets chronologically to a period prior to the events mentioned in chs 32–33. Jeremiah, not yet under arrest, is still prophesying publicly and openly (37.4; 38.1). During the brief lifting of the Babylonian siege (v. 5, see 34.8–22), Jeremiah attempted to leave Jerusalem to take care of some family business (vv. 11–12). He was arrested for desertion and his fate, which would have been severe at the hands of the officials, was softened by allowance of King Zedekiah. In both accounts, Jeremiah is threatened with harsh incarceration but is allowed to stay under royal protection in the court of the guard.

37.1–10: Jeremiah's response to Zedekiah's request for intercession. The context of the lifting of the siege provides the language for Jeremiah's oracle: the Babylonians (Chaldeans) will be right back, so take no comfort in the brief respite! 1: Coniah, Jehoiachin. 5: See 34.8–22n.

¹¹ Now when the Chaldean army had withdrawn from Jerusalem at the approach of Pharaoh's army, ¹² Jeremiah set out from Jerusalem to go to the land of Benjamin to receive his share of property^a among the people there. ¹³ When he reached the Benjamin Gate, a sentinel there named Irijah son of Shel-emiah son of Hananiah arrested the prophet Jeremiah saying, "You are deserting to the Chaldeans." ¹⁴ And Jeremiah said, "That is a lie; I am not deserting to the Chaldeans." But Irijah would not listen to him, and arrested Jeremiah and brought him to the officials. ¹⁵ The officials were enraged at Jeremiah, and they beat him and imprisoned him in the house of the secretary Jonathan, for it had been made a prison. ¹⁶ Thus Jeremiah was put in the cistern house, in the cells, and remained there many days.

¹⁷ Then King Zedekiah sent for him, and received him. The king questioned him secretly in his house, and said, "Is there any word from the LORD?" Jeremiah said, "There is!" Then he said, "You shall be handed over to the king of Babylon." ¹⁸ Jeremiah also said to King Zedekiah, "What wrong have I done to you or your servants or this people, that you have put me in prison?" ¹⁹ Where are your prophets who prophesied to you, saying, "The king of Babylon will not come against you and against this land?" ²⁰ Now please hear me, my lord king: be good enough to listen to my plea, and do not send me back to the house of the secretary Jonathan to die there." ²¹ So King Zedekiah gave orders, and they committed Jeremiah to the court of the guard; and a loaf of bread was given him daily from the bakers' street, until all the bread of the city was gone. So Jeremiah remained in the court of the guard.

38 Now Shephatiah son of Mattan, Gedaliah son of Pashhur, Jucal son of Shelemiah, and Pashhur son of Malchiah heard the words that Jeremiah was saying to all the people, ² Thus says the LORD, Those who stay in this city shall die by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence; but those who go out to the Chaldeans shall live; they shall have their lives as a prize of war, and live. ³ Thus says the LORD, This city shall surely be handed over to the army of the king of Babylon and be taken. ⁴ Then the officials said to the king, "This man ought to be put to death, because he is discouraging the soldiers who are left in this city, and all the people, by speaking such words to them. For this man is not seeking the welfare of this people, but their harm." ⁵ King Zedekiah said, "Here he is; he is in your hands; for the king is powerless against you." ⁶ So they took Jeremiah and threw him into the cistern of Malchiah, the king's son, which was in the court of the guard, letting Jeremiah down by ropes. Now there was no water in the cistern, but only mud, and Jeremiah sank in the mud.

⁷ Ebed-melech the Ethiopian,^b a eunuch in the king's house, heard that they had put Jeremiah into the cistern. The king happened to be sitting at the Benjamin Gate, ⁸ So Ebed-melech left the king's house and spoke 37.11–21: Jeremiah's incarceration in the Court of the Guard. 12: Jeremiah was from the Benjaminite town of Anathoth (1.1) and would later be invited to redeem some family property there (32.7–9). 16: Cistern house, apparently a vaulted room formerly used as a cistern for water storage. Jeremiah believed that incarceration here would be deadly (v. 20), perhaps because while there he was under threat of some particularly hostile princes and did not enjoy any royal protection. 21: The court of the guard was located in the royal palace itself, under direct supervision of the king (32.2).

38.1–13: An alternate account regarding Jeremiah and Ebed-melech. This story develops the theme of the conflict between Zedekiah and his pro-Egyptian advisers, who were particularly opposed to Jeremiah's message of capitulation to the Babylonians. The charge that Jeremiah was "discouraging the soldiers" is similar to a charge made in the Lachish letters against certain other royal princes (likely those associated with the Shaphan party) that they too were discouraging the troops. That the opposition of this party is lethal to Jeremiah's safety (v. 4) is brought out in this story. Here the cistern into which Jeremiah is thrown has a different name and is located in the court of the guard itself (v. 6). 1: Gedaliah son of Pashhur, see 20.1; Jucal (Jehucal), see 37.3; Pashhur, see 21.1. 6: The cistern was nearly dry, indicating a time shortly before Nebuchadnezzar's final assault, August to the king, ⁹ “My lord king, these men have acted wickedly in all they did to the prophet Jeremiah by throwing him into the cistern to die there of hunger, for there is no bread left in the city.” ¹⁰ Then the king commanded Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, ^a “Take three men with you from here, and pull the prophet Jeremiah up from the cistern before he dies.”

¹¹ So Ebed-melech took the men with him and went to the house of the king, to a wardrobe of ^b the storehouse, and took from there old rags and worn-out clothes, which he let down to Jeremiah in the cistern by ropes. ¹² Then Ebed-melech the Ethiopian ^a said to Jeremiah, “Just put the rags and clothes between your armpits and the ropes.” Jeremiah did so.

¹³ Then they drew Jeremiah up by the ropes and pulled him out of the cistern. And Jeremiah remained in the court of the guard.

¹⁴ King Zedekiah sent for the prophet Jeremiah and received him at the third entrance of the temple of the LORD. The king said to Jeremiah, “I have something to ask you; do not hide anything from me.” ¹⁵ Jeremiah said to Zedekiah, “If I tell you, you will put me to death, will you not? And if I give you advice, you will not listen to me.” ¹⁶ So King Zedekiah swore an oath in secret to Jeremiah, “As the LORD lives, who gave us our lives, I will not put you to death or hand you over to these men who seek your life.”

¹⁷ Then Jeremiah said to Zedekiah, “Thus says the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel, If you will only surrender to the officials of the king of Babylon, then your life shall be spared, and this city shall not be burned with fire, and you and your house shall live. ¹⁸ But if you do not surrender to the officials of the king of Babylon, then this city shall be handed over to the Chaldeans, and they shall burn it with fire, and you yourself shall not escape from their hand.” ¹⁹ King

Zedekiah said to Jeremiah, “I am afraid of the Judeans who have deserted to the Chaldeans, for I might be handed over to them and they would abuse me.” ²⁰ Jeremiah said, “That will not happen. Just obey the voice of the LORD in what I say to you, and it shall go well with you, and your life shall be spared. ²¹ But if you are determined not to surrender, this is what the LORD has shown me—²² a vision of all the women remaining in the house of the king of Judah being led out to the officials of the king of Babylon and saying,

‘Your trusted friends have seduced you and have overcome you;

Now that your feet are stuck in the mud, they desert you.’

²⁴ Then Zedekiah said to Jeremiah, “Do not let anyone else know of this conversation, or you will die. ²⁵ If the officials should hear that I have spoken with you, and they should come and say to you, ‘Just tell us what you said to the king; do not conceal it from us, or we will put you to death. What did the king say to you?’ ²⁶ then you shall say to them, ‘I was presenting my plea to the king not to send me back to the house of Jonathan to die there.’” ²⁷ All the officials did come to Jeremiah and questioned him; and he answered them in the very words the king had commanded. So they stopped questioning him, for the conversation had not been overheard. ²⁸ And Jeremiah remained in the court of the guard until the day that Jerusalem was taken.

Chs 39, 52: Babylon and Judah in the early sixth century BCE.

39 In the ninth year of King Zedekiah of Judah, in the tenth month, King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon and all his army came against Jerusalem and besieged it;² in the eleventh year of Zedekiah, in the fourth month, on the ninth day of the month, a breach was made in the city.³ When Jerusalem was taken,^a all the officials of the king of Babylon came and sat in the middle gate: Nergal-sharezer, Samgar-nebo, Sarsechim the Rabsaris, Nergal-sharezer the Rabmag, with all the rest of the officials of the king of Babylon.⁴ When King Zedekiah of Judah and all the soldiers saw them, they fled, going out of the city at night by way of the king's garden through the gate between the two walls; and they went toward the Arabah.⁵ But the army of the Chaldeans pursued them, and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho; and when they had taken him, they brought him up to King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon, at Riblah, in the land of Hamath; and he passed sentence on him.⁶ The king of Babylon slaughtered the sons of Zedekiah at Riblah before his eyes; also the king of Babylon slaughtered all the nobles of Judah.⁷ He put out the eyes of Zedekiah, and bound him in fetters to take him to Babylon.⁸ The Chaldeans burned the king's house and the houses of the people, and broke down the walls of Jerusalem.⁹ Then Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard exiled to Babylon the rest of the people who were left in the city, those who had deserted to him, and the people who remained.¹⁰ Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard left in the land of Judah some of the poor people who

39.1–18: The fall of Jerusalem. The Hebrew text indicates that ch 39 is a smooth continuation of ch 38 (see textual note a at 39.3), as does the reference to the court of the guard (Jer 39.14; see 38.28). The account here basically follows that of 52.4–16 and 2 Kings 25.1–22. 1–2: The ninth year . . . the eleventh year, the siege of Jerusalem began in January 587 and lasted until July 586 BCE when the walls were breached. 3: Rabsaris and Rabmag are titles of Babylonian officials. Sat in the middle gate, on the dispensing of justice in the gate as a sign of foreign conquest, see 1.15; 43.10. 4: Arabah, the rift valley of the Jordan River and Dead Sea, which continues southward to the Gulf of Aqaba. 5: Riblah, about 70 mi (110 km) north of Damascus, had earlier served as the Egyptian provincial capital (2 Kings 23.33), and was where the Babylonian governorship likewise was temporarily established. According to 52.6–13 and 2 Kings 25.3–9, there was a one-month lag between the breaching of the walls of Jerusalem and the sacking of the city. 9: According to 52.29, the Babylonians deported a total owned nothing, and gave them vineyards and fields at the same time.

¹¹ King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon gave command concerning Jeremiah through Nebuzaradan, the captain of the guard, saying, ¹² “Take him, look after him well and do him no harm, but deal with him as he may ask you.” ¹³ So Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard, Nebushazban the Rabsaris, Nergal-sharezer the Rabmag, and all the chief officers of the king of Babylon sent ¹⁴ and took Jeremiah from the court of the guard. They entrusted him to Gedaliah son of Ahikam son of Shaphan to be brought home. So he stayed with his own people.

¹⁵ The word of the LORD came to Jeremiah while he was confined in the court of the guard: ¹⁶ Go and say to Ebed-melech the Ethiopian:^a Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I am going to fulfill my words against this city for evil and not for good, and they shall be accomplished in your presence on that day. ¹⁷ But I will save you on that day, says the LORD, and you shall not be handed over to those whom you dread. ¹⁸ For I will surely save you, and you shall not fall by the sword; but you shall have your life as a prize of war, because you have trusted in me, says the LORD.

40 The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD after Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard had let him go from Ramah, when he took him bound in fetters along with all the captives of Jerusalem and Judah who were being exiled to Babylon. ² The captain of the guard took Jeremiah and said to him, “The LORD your God threatened this place with this disaster; ³ and now the LORD has brought it about, and has done as he said, because all of you sinned against the LORD and did not obey his voice. Therefore this thing has come upon you. ⁴ Now look, I have just released you today from the fetters on your hands. If you wish to come with me to Babylon, come, and I will take good care of you; but if you do not wish to come with me to Babylon, you need not come. See, the whole land is before you; go wherever you think it good and right to go. ⁵ If you remain,^b then return to Gedaliah son of Ahikam son of

of eight hundred thirty-two persons in this second deportation. 14: Because Gedaliah was a member of the pro-Babylonian party, from the family of Shaphan, Nebuchadnezzar appointed him to serve as “governor” of the new Babylonian province (40.5). 15–18. Words of deliverance for Ebed-melech and his family. See 38.7–13.

40.1–43.13: Political crisis results in the flight of Judeans to Egypt. Following the destruction of Jerusalem, the territorial governorship under Gedaliah was established in Mizpah, the venerable site associated with the ancient judgeship of Samuel (1 Sam 7.16), located between Jerusalem and Bethel. An attempted insurrection led by a member of the royal family, Ishmael son of Nethaniah (see 41.1), led to the assassination of Gedaliah and a debate by the Judeans who were left as to whether their future lay in staying in Judah or in flight to Egypt to avoid certain Babylonian repercussions. Against the advice of Jeremiah, the decision is made to flee to Egypt. 40.1–6: With some slight changes in detail, 40.1–6 repeats the information from 39.11–14. Though the opening of the speech of the captain of the guard (vv. 2–4) is likely Deuteronomistic rhetoric, victorious kings in fact did claim the support of the deity of the conquered territory. So Cyrus of Media, after conquering Babylon, claimed to have been supported by Marduk, the god of Babylon. Compare 2 Kings 18.19–22, where the Assyrian official claims the support of Israel’s God for the Assyrian invasion. 1: Ramah (31.15n.) was a transit point for deportees. Jeremiah was allowed to choose exile or residence in Judah. Choosing the latter, he was placed in the custody of Gedaliah, the newly appointed governor of Judah with whose family Jeremiah had long been friendly (26.24; 36.10). Gedaliah’s family figures prominently, not only in the life of Jeremiah but also at the Judean court and in relation to the Deuteronomic reform. Gedaliah’s grandfather Shaphan delivered the newly discovered law scroll to King Josiah (2 Kings 22.3–13). Gedaliah’s father, Ahikam, a member of the delegation sent to the prophetess Huldah (2 Kings 22.12–14), was Jeremiah’s champion as well (26.24). Gedaliah’s uncle Gemariah (36.24) and first cousin Micaiah (36.25) play similar, though unsuccessful, roles with regard to Jeremiah’s scroll that was read to king Jehoiakim. Another of Gedaliah’s uncles, Elash, delivered Jeremiah’s letter to the exiles (29.3). The close connection between this aristocratic family, the Deuteronomic movement, and the prose of the book of Jeremiah is intriguing.

Shaphan, whom the king of Babylon appointed governor of the towns of Judah, and stay with him among the people; or go wherever you think it right to go.” So the captain of the guard gave him an allowance of food and a present, and let him go. ⁶ Then Jeremiah went to Gedaliah son of Ahikam at Mizpah, and stayed with him among the people who were left in the land.

⁷ When all the leaders of the forces in the open country and their troops heard that the king of Babylon had appointed Gedaliah son of Ahikam governor in the land, and had committed to him men, women, and children, those of the poorest of the land who had not been taken into exile to Babylon, ⁸ they went to Gedaliah at Mizpah—Ishmael son of Nethaniah, Johanan son of Kareah, Seraiah son of Tanhumeth, the sons of Ephai the Netophathite, Jezaniah son of the Maacathite, they and their troops. ⁹ Gedaliah son of Ahikam son of Shaphan swore to them and their troops, saying, “Do not be afraid to serve the Chaldeans. Stay in the land and serve the king of Babylon, and it shall go well with you. ¹⁰ As for me, I am staying at Mizpah to represent you before the Chaldeans who come to us; but as for you, gather wine and summer fruits and oil, and store them in your vessels, and live in the towns that you have taken over.” ¹¹ Likewise, when all the Judeans who were in Moab and among the Ammonites and in Edom and in other lands heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant in Judah and had appointed Gedaliah son of Ahikam son of Shaphan as governor over them, ¹² then all the Judeans returned from all the places to which they had been scattered and came to the land of Judah, to Gedaliah at Mizpah; and they gathered wine and summer fruits in great abundance.

¹³ Now Johanan son of Kareah and all the leaders of the forces in the open country came to Gedaliah at Mizpah ¹⁴ and said to him, “Are you at all aware that Baalis king of the Ammonites has sent Ishmael son of Nethaniah to take your life?” But Gedaliah son of Ahikam would not believe them. ¹⁵ Then Johanan son of Kareah spoke secretly to Gedaliah at Mizpah, “Please let me go and kill Ishmael son of Nethaniah, and no one else will know. Why should he take your life, so that all the Judeans who are gathered around you would be scattered, and the remnant of Judah would perish?” ¹⁶ But Gedaliah son of Ahikam said to Johanan son of Kareah, “Do not do such a thing, for you are telling a lie about Ishmael.”

41 In the seventh month, Ishmael son of Nethaniah son of Elishama, of the royal family, one of the chief officers of the king, came with ten men to Gedaliah son of Ahikam, at Mizpah. As they ate bread together there at Mizpah, ² Ishmael son of Nethaniah and the ten men with him got up and struck down Gedaliah son of Ahikam son of Shaphan with the sword and killed him, because the king of Babylon had appointed him governor in the land. ³ Ishmael also killed all the Judeans who were with Gedaliah at Mizpah, and the Chaldean soldiers who happened to be there.

⁴ On the day after the murder of Gedaliah, before anyone knew of it, ⁵ eighty men arrived from Shechem and Shiloh and Samaria, with their beards shaved and their clothes torn, and their bodies gashed, bringing grain offerings and incense to present at the temple of the LORD. ⁶ And Ishmael son of Nethaniah came out from Mizpah to meet them, weeping as he came. As he met them, he said to them, “Come to Gedaliah son of Ahikam.” ⁷ When they reached the middle of the city,

When they gathered wine and summer fruits in great abundance, Gedaliah’s assurance that life in the land could continue seemed confirmed. 14: The Ammonites, when not fighting Israel, were often their allies against larger imperial powers. Baalis of Ammon supported a nationalistic revolution in Judah led by Ishmael, a member of the royal family, but Gedaliah refused to heed the warnings for his own safety. 41.1: As they ate bread, ancient rules of hospitality and table fellowship bound host and guest to faithfulness toward one another. ⁹ Now the cistern into which Ishmael had thrown all the bodies of the men whom he had struck down was the large cistern^b that King Asa had made for defense against King Baasha of Israel; Ishmael son of Nethaniah filled that cistern with those whom he had killed.¹⁰ Then Ishmael took captive all the rest of the people who were in Mizpah, the king’s daughters and all the people who were left at Mizpah, whom Nebuzaradan, the captain of the guard, had committed to Gedaliah son of Ahikam. Ishmael son of Nethaniah took them captive and set out to cross over to the Ammonites.

¹¹ But when Johanan son of Kareah and all the leaders of the forces with him heard of all the crimes that Ishmael son of Nethaniah had done,¹² they took all their men and went to fight against Ishmael son of Nethaniah. They came upon him at the great pool that is in Gibeon.¹³ And when all the people who were with Ishmael saw Johanan son of Kareah and all the leaders of the forces with him, they were glad.¹⁴ So all the people whom Ishmael had carried away captive from Mizpah turned around and came back, and went to Johanan son of Kareah.¹⁵ But Ishmael son of Nethaniah escaped from Johanan with eight men, and went to the Ammonites.¹⁶ Then Johanan son of Kareah and all the leaders of the forces with

42 Then all the commanders of the forces, and Johanan son of Kareah and Azariah^e son of Hoshai, and all the people from the least to the greatest, approached² the prophet Jeremiah and said, “Be good enough to listen to our plea, and pray to the LORD your God for us—for all this remnant. For there are only a few of us left out of many, as your eyes can see.³ Let the LORD your God show us where we should go and what we should do.”⁴ The prophet Jeremiah said to them, “Very well: I am going to pray to the LORD your God as you request, and whatever the LORD answers you I will tell you; I will keep nothing back from you.”⁵ They in their turn said to Jeremiah, “May the LORD be a true and faithful witness against us if we do mourning. 9: On the building projects of King Asa of Judah (908–867 BCE) in conjunction with his war against King Baasha of Israel (906–883 BCE), including those at Mizpah, see 1 Kings 15:16–22. 12: The great pool . . . in Gibeon, the site of the battle between the forces of Joab and Abner (2 Sam 2:13). 17: Geruth Chimham, perhaps meaning “fief of Chimham,” referring to property given to Barzillai’s son Chimham (see 2 Sam 19:37–40); precise location unknown.

42.1–22: The remnant under the leadership of Johanan son of Kareah asks Jeremiah for divine guidance regarding their plan to go to Egypt. That this takes place near Bethlehem (41:17) suggests that Jeremiah was not at his home in Mizpah but was with the group rescued by Johanan. At first the people seem to be open to whatever direction God provides (vv. 5–6). But as the conversation progresses, it is apparent that their earlier plan to go to Egypt was already set, and they were not open to divine direction. Even before hearing the people’s response, Jeremiah presumes that they have disobeyed (v. 21). Much depends on the significance of the participle “saying” in v. 13 (“But if you continue to say . . .”) and the use of the infinitive in v. 18 (“when you go . . .”). As in earlier times, Egypt was a place of refuge for those fleeing Judah for one reason or another; see 26:21; Gen 12:10; 46:6; 1 Kings 11:40. 1: Azariah, MT reads “Jezeniah,” but see textual note e and cf. 43:2.

not act according to everything that the LORD your God sends us through you. ⁶Whether it is good or bad, we will obey the voice of the LORD our God to whom we are sending you, in order that it may go well with us when we obey the voice of the LORD our God.”

⁷At the end of ten days the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah. ⁸Then he summoned Johanan son of Kareah and all the commanders of the forces who were with him, and all the people from the least to the greatest, ⁹and said to them, “Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel, to whom you sent me to present your plea before him: ¹⁰If you will only remain in this land, then I will build you up and not pull you down; I will plant you, and not pluck you up; for I am sorry for the disaster that I have brought upon you. ¹¹Do not be afraid of the king of Babylon, as you have been; do not be afraid of him, says the LORD, for I am with you, to save you and to rescue you from his hand. ¹²I will grant you mercy, and he will have mercy on you and restore you to your native soil. ¹³But if you continue to say, ‘We will not stay in this land,’ thus disobeying the voice of the LORD your God ¹⁴and saying, ‘No, we will go to the land of Egypt, where we shall not see war, or hear the sound of the trumpet, or be hungry for bread, and there we will stay,’ ¹⁵then hear the word of the LORD, O remnant of Judah. Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: If you are determined to enter Egypt and go to settle there, ¹⁶then the sword that you fear shall overtake you there, in the land of Egypt; and the famine that you dread shall follow close after you into Egypt; and there you shall die. ¹⁷All the people who have determined to go to Egypt to settle there shall die by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence; they shall have no remnant or survivor from the disaster that I am bringing upon them.

¹⁸“For thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Just as my anger and my wrath were poured out on the inhabitants of Jerusalem, so my wrath will be poured out on you when you go to Egypt. You shall become an object of execration and horror, of cursing and ridicule. You shall see this place no more. ¹⁹The LORD has said to you, O remnant of Judah, Do not go to Egypt. Be well aware that I have warned you today ²⁰that you have made a fatal mistake. For you yourselves sent me to the LORD your God, saying, ‘Pray for us to the LORD our God, and whatever the LORD our God says, tell us and we will do it.’ ²¹So I have told you today, but you have not obeyed the voice of the LORD your God in anything that he sent me to tell you. ²²Be well aware, then, that you shall die by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence in the place where you desire to go and settle.”

43 When Jeremiah finished speaking to all the people all these words of the LORD their God, with which the LORD their God had sent him to them, ²Azariah son of Hoshaiah and Johanan son of Kareah and all the other insolent men said to Jeremiah, “You are telling a lie. The LORD our God did not send you to say, ‘Do not go to Egypt to settle there’; ³but Baruch son of Neriah is inciting you against us, to hand us over to the Chaldeans, in order that they may kill us or take us into exile in Babylon.” ⁴So Johanan son of Kareah and all the commanders of the forces and all the people did not obey the voice of the LORD, to stay in the land of Judah. ⁵But Johanan son of Kareah and all the commanders of the forces took all the remnant of Judah who had returned to settle in the land of Judah from all the nations to which they had been driven— ⁶the men, the women, the children, the princesses, and everyone whom Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard had left with Gedaliah son of Ahikam son of Shaphan; also the prophet Jeremiah and Baruch son of Neriah. ⁷And they came into the land of Egypt, for they did not obey the voice of the LORD. And they arrived at Tahpanhes.

43.1–13: The flight to Tahpanhes and Jeremiah’s oracle. The leaders dismiss Jeremiah’s oracle as a “lie,” suggesting that he is colluding with Baruch for their destruction. This insinuates a role for Baruch otherwise left unexplored in the book. The fears of Babylonian reprisal may not have been overdrawn, since 52.30 indicates that five years following the destruction of Jerusalem, there was a third deportation of Judeans, perhaps in response to political crises such as that of the assassination of Gedaliah. 6: Nebuzaradan, see 39.11–14; 40.1–6. 7: Tahpanhes was an Egyptian border fortress in the eastern Nile Delta; see 2.16. There were Judean refugee settlements in many areas of Egypt (see 44.1), especially at the military garrison of Elephantine in the upper Nile.

⁸Then the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah in Tahpanhes: ⁹Take some large stones in your hands, and bury them in the clay pavement^a that is at the entrance to Pharaoh's palace in Tahpanhes. Let the Judeans see you do it, ¹⁰and say to them, Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I am going to send and take my servant King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon, and he^b will set his throne above these stones that I have buried, and he will spread his royal canopy over them. ¹¹He shall come and ravage the land of Egypt, giving those who are destined for pestilence, to pestilence, and those who are destined for captivity, to captivity, and those who are destined for the sword, to the sword.

44 The word that came to Jeremiah for all the Judeans living in the land of Egypt, at Migdol, at Tahpanhes, at Memphis, and in the land of Pathros, ²Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: You yourselves have seen all the disaster that I have brought on Jerusalem and on all the towns of Judah. Look at them; today they are a desolation, without an inhabitant in them, ³because of the wickedness that they committed, provoking me to anger, in that they went to make offerings and serve other gods that they had not known, neither they, nor you, nor your ancestors. ⁴Yet I persistently sent to you all my servants the prophets, saying, "I beg you not to do this abominable thing that I hate!" ⁵But they did not listen or incline their ear, to turn from their wickedness and make no offerings to other gods. ⁶So my wrath and my anger were poured out and kindled in the towns of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem; and they became a waste and a desolation, as they still are today. ⁷And now thus says the LORD God of hosts, the God of Israel: Why are you doing such great harm to yourselves, to cut off man and woman, child and infant, from the midst of Judah, leaving yourselves without a remnant? ⁸ Why do you provoke me to anger with the works of your hands, making offerings to other gods in the land of Egypt where you have come to settle? Will you be cut off and become an object of cursing and ridicule among all the nations of the earth? ⁹ Have you forgotten the crimes of your ancestors, of the kings of Judah, of their wives, your own crimes and those of your wives, which they committed in the land of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem? ¹⁰ They have shown no contrition or fear to this day, nor have they walked in my law and my statutes that I set before you and before your ancestors.

9–10: A prophetic sign-act indicating Babylonian control over Egypt. On setting up the royal throne at the gate, see 39.3. 12: Pick clean, the Hebrew suggests a shepherd wrapping himself in a garment (see 1 Sam 28.14; Ps 109.19), but the LXX understood it to refer to removing lice. The verb can mean "to grasp tightly" (Isa 22.17). 13: Obelisks of Heliopolis, the Hebrew reads "the stone pillars of Beth-shemesh," but Beth-shemesh means "house of the Sun." Heliopolis, or "city of the Sun," was the ancient center with a temple for the worship of the sun, as indicated by its name. It was located in the Nile Delta 6 mi (10 km) northeast of Cairo, and was also known as On (Gen 41.45,50; 46.20).

44.1–30: Dispute over disaster and divine purpose. A final oracle against the Jewish refugee communities in Egypt (cf. ch 43), in the context of a confrontation concerning why Judah has experienced the present crisis. In standard Deuteronomistic language, Jeremiah associates the disaster with the people's faithlessness toward God (vv. 2–10). He meets popular resistance from those who insist that the disaster has come precisely because they had discontinued their ancient syncretistic ritual practices, especially that of the adoration of and homage paid to the goddess known as the "queen of heaven," probably Astarte, variously known as Ishtar in Babylon and Ashtar in Canaan (vv. 15–19). The insinuation is that the reform movement of Josiah, with its restriction of worship to the Jerusalem Temple and its purging of the land of all syncretistic and foreign worship elements, was the cause of offense. Jeremiah's Deuteronomistic argument brackets that of the people, because it represents the fundamental theological principle of the book as prepared by its Deuteronomistic editors. 1: Expands the focus far beyond the Jewish community in Tahpanhes (Jer 43.1–13). Migdol, like Tahpanhes, lay in the eastern Nile Delta and was associated with the Exodus (Ex 14.2). It was apparently the closest Egyptian garrison to Judah (Ezek 29.10). Memphis (or Noph), was the ancient imperial capital located at the head of the Nile Delta; see 2.16. Pathros was a designation for upper (i.e., southern) Egypt, and is listed alongside and parallel to Egypt in several lists (e.g., Isa 11.11); on the Jewish colony at Elephantine in upper Egypt, see 43.7n. 4: See 7.25n.

¹¹ Therefore thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I am determined to bring disaster on you, to bring all Judah to an end. ¹² I will take the remnant of Judah who are determined to come to the land of Egypt to settle, and they shall perish, everyone; in the land of Egypt they shall fall; by the sword and by famine they shall perish; from the least to the greatest, they shall die by the sword and by famine; and they shall become an object of execration and horror, of cursing and ridicule. ¹³ I will punish those who live in the land of Egypt, as I have punished Jerusalem, with the sword, with famine, and with pestilence, ¹⁴ so that none of the remnant of Judah who have come to settle in the land of Egypt shall escape or survive or return to the land of Judah. Although they long to go back to live there, they shall not go back, except some fugitives.

¹⁵ Then all the men who were aware that their wives had been making offerings to other gods, and all the women who stood by, a great assembly, all the people who lived in Pathros in the land of Egypt, answered Jeremiah: ¹⁶ “As for the word that you have spoken to us in the name of the LORD, we are not going to listen to you. ¹⁷ Instead, we will do everything that we have vowed, make offerings to the queen of heaven and pour out libations to her, just as we and our ancestors, our kings and our officials, used to do in the towns of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem. We used to have plenty of food, and prospered, and saw no misfortune. ¹⁸ But from the time we stopped making offerings to the queen of heaven and pouring out libations to her, we have lacked everything and have perished by the sword and by famine.” ¹⁹ And the women said, ^b “Indeed we will go on making offerings to the queen of heaven and pouring out libations to her; do you think that we made cakes for her, marked with her image, and poured out libations to her without our husbands’ being involved?”

²⁰ Then Jeremiah said to all the people, men and women, all the people who were giving him this answer: ²¹ “As for the offerings that you made in the towns of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem, you and your ancestors, your kings and your officials, and the people of the land, did not the LORD remember them? Did it not come into his mind? ²² The LORD could no longer bear the sight of your evil doings, the abominations that you committed; therefore your land became a desolation and a waste and a curse, without inhabitant, as it is to this day. ²³ It is because you burned offerings, and because you sinned against the LORD and did not obey the voice of the LORD or walk in his law and in his statutes and in his decrees, that this disaster has befallen you, as is still evident today.”

²⁴ Jeremiah said to all the people and all the women, “Hear the word of the LORD, all you Judeans who are in the land of Egypt, ²⁵ Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: You and your wives have accomplished in deeds

Her worship included the making of raisin cakes to her, expressive of prayers for fertility (v. 19). This goddess represented the evening-star phase of the planet Venus, while in Canaan her brother, Ashtar, represented the morning-star phase (see Isa 14.12–15, which refers to an ancient myth what you declared in words, saying, ‘We are determined to perform the vows that we have made, to make offerings to the queen of heaven and to pour out libations to her.’ By all means, keep your vows and make your libations! ²⁶Therefore hear the word of the LORD, all you Judeans who live in the land of Egypt: Lo, I swear by my great name, says the LORD, that my name shall no longer be pronounced on the lips of any of the people of Judah in all the land of Egypt, saying, ‘As the Lord God lives.’ ²⁷I am going to watch over them for harm and not for good; all the people of Judah who are in the land of Egypt shall perish by the sword and by famine, until not one is left. ²⁸And those who escape the sword shall return from the land of Egypt to the land of Judah, few in number; and all the remnant of Judah, who have come to the land of Egypt to settle, shall know whose words will stand, mine or theirs! ²⁹This shall be the sign to you, says the LORD, that I am going to punish you in this place, in order that you may know that my words against you will surely be carried out: ³⁰Thus says the LORD, I am going to give Pharaoh Hophra, king of Egypt, into the hands of his enemies, those who seek his life, just as I gave King Zedekiah of Judah into the hand of King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon, his enemy who sought his life.”

associated with Ashtar, the “day star” who ushers in the light of morning); see also 7.18n. 27: Watch over them for harm, it is deeply ironic that this last oracle addressed to the people echoes the language with which the book began (1.11–12), suggesting that, in spite of the hope of 31.28, the book tragically ends where it began for these Egyptian refugees. The promise resides with the exiles in Babylon. 30: Pharaoh Hophra (Apries, ruled ca. 589–570 BCE) was assassinated by an enemy within the Egyptian court.

45.1–5: Words of promise to Baruch. This third and final cycle of oracles is concluded, as were the earlier two, by recollecting the scroll of 605 BCE (see 36.4–6, 27–32). Using the central code language of the book, a final negative judgment is given: building yields to breaking down and planting yields to plucking up (see 1.10; etc.). But Baruch is reassured of his own survival. 5: Prize of war, see 21.9; 38.2; 39.18.

46.1–51.64: Oracles against the nations. Prophetic books commonly have collections of such oracles directed against Israel’s enemies (see Isa 13–23, Ezek 25–32, Am 1–2). These oracles may preserve one of the early functions of prophecy as “war prophecy”: undermining the strength of the enemy with curses and psychologically fortifying the home troops for victory. The placement of these oracles is a major difference between the Hebrew and Greek traditions of the book of Jeremiah, with the latter (the Septuagint [LXX]) locating the oracles within the context of ch 25. The Hebrew and Greek traditions also differ in their ordering of the specific oracles. The Hebrew tradition begins with the oracle against Egypt, connecting with the geographical orientation of the previous chapters. The general sweep is then from west to east (or, using the language of the text, from “south” to “north”) and concludes with the lengthy oracle against Babylon (chs 50–51), the major enemy in the book of Jeremiah.

46.2–28: Against Egypt, two oracles. The first oracle (vv. 3–12) is set in the context of Babylon’s defeat of 45 The word that the prophet Jeremiah spoke to Baruch son of Neriah, when he wrote these words in a scroll at the dictation of Jeremiah, in the fourth year of King Jehoiakim son of Josiah of Judah: ²Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel, to you, O Baruch: ³You said, “Woe is me! The LORD has added sorrow to my pain; I am weary with my groaning, and I find no rest.” ⁴Thus you shall say to him, “Thus says the LORD: I am going to break down what I have built, and pluck up what I have planted—that is, the whole land. ⁵And you, do you seek great things for yourself? Do not seek them; for I am going to bring disaster upon all flesh, says the LORD; but I will give you your life as a prize of war in every place to which you may go.”

46 The word of the LORD that came to the prophet Jeremiah concerning the nations.

²Concerning Egypt, about the army of Pharaoh Neco, king of Egypt, which was by the river Euphrates at Carchemish and which King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon defeated in the fourth year of King Jehoiakim son of Josiah of Judah:

Take your stations with your helmets,
 whet your lances,
 put on your coats of mail!
 5 Why do I see them terrified?
 They have fallen back;
 their warriors are beaten down,
 and have fled in haste.
 They do not look back—terror is all around!

says the LORD.

6 The swift cannot flee away, nor can the warrior escape;
 in the north by the river Euphrates
 they have stumbled and fallen.

7 Who is this, rising like the Nile,

8 Egypt rises like the Nile, like rivers whose waters surge.
 It said, Let me rise, let me cover the let me destroy cities and their inhabitants.

9 Advance, O horses,

 Let the warriors go forth:
 Ethiopia^a and Put who carry the shield,
 the Ludim, who draw^b the bow.

10 That day is the day of the Lord God of a day of retribution,

 to gain vindication from his foes.

The second oracle (vv. 13–28) is set in the context of the later invasion of Egypt by the Babylonian army (compare 43.9–13). 2: Pharaoh Neco II ruled ca. 610–595 BCE. 3: Buckler . . . shield, two different sizes of shields: the first smaller and the second covering the entire body. The unusual poetic meter of these verses mimics the sound of marching armies (compare Nah 2.1–9). 5: Terror is all around, language celebrating the Egyptian defeat; see 6.25n.; 20.3,10; 49.29. 7–8: Like the annual flooding of the Nile, Egypt’s pretensions rose above manageable levels. 9: Ethiopia (Heb “Cush”), Put, and the Ludim were all African nations known for their military prowess (see

² Thus says the LORD:
 See, waters are rising out of the north

 Ashkelon is silenced.

47.1–7: Against Philistia. This oracle alludes to the Babylonian destruction of the Philistine city of Ashkelon in 694 BCE (see vv. 5, 7). 4: Tyre and Sidon were part of Phoenicia rather than Philistia, and elsewhere are listed separately from Philistia (25.20–22; Am 1.6–10; Ezek 25.15–28.26). The Philistines were associated with the ancestral land of Caphtor (Crete, Gen 10.14; Deut 2.23; Am 9.7), but Tyre, Sidon, and Philistia were connected in tradition (Joel 3.4), all associated with incursions of Hellenic groups, and therefore are grouped together and combined here. 5: For similar signs of lamentation, cf. 16.6; 41.5. 6–7: Sword of the LORD, 12.1; 25.31; Isa 34.6.

48.1–47: Against Moab. This lengthy oracle is comprised of a number of originally independent oracles, several of which are found in other prophetic collections. 1: Although Nebo, Kiriathaim, and other Moabite cities were sometimes controlled by the Israelites (Mesha inscription; Num 32.37), they were traditionally part of Moabite territory (Deut 32.49). 2: In Heshbon they planned evil, a play on words, since “plot” or “plan” is Heb “hashab.” Heshbon, a northern Moabite city, is modern Hesban. 3–5: On the place names Horonaim and the

⁷ Surely, because you trusted in your strongholds^c and your treasures,

you also shall be taken;

Chemosh shall go out into exile,

with his priests and his attendants.

⁸ The destroyer shall come upon every town,

and no town shall escape;

the valley shall perish,

and the plain shall be destroyed,

as the LORD has spoken.

⁹ Set aside salt for Moab,

for she will surely fall;

her towns shall become a desolation, with no inhabitant in them.

¹⁰ Accursed is the one who is slack in doing the work of the LORD; and accursed is the one who keeps back the sword from bloodshed.

¹¹ Moab has been at ease from his youth, settled like wine^d on its dregs;

he has not been emptied from vessel to nor has he gone into exile;

therefore his flavor has remained and his aroma is unspoiled.

¹² Therefore, the time is surely coming, says the LORD, when I shall send to him decanters to decant him, and empty his vessels, and break his^e jars in pieces. ¹³ Then Moab shall be ashamed of Chemosh, as the house of Israel was ashamed of Bethel, their confidence.

¹⁴ How can you say, “We are heroes and mighty warriors”?

¹⁵ The destroyer of Moab and his towns has come up, and the choicest of his young men have gone down to slaughter, says the King, whose name is the LORD of hosts.

¹⁶ The calamity of Moab is near at hand and his doom approaches swiftly.

¹⁷ Mourn over him, all you his neighbors, and all who know his name;

But this is also a wordplay on the terms “salt” (Heb “tsits”) and “fall” or “go out” (Heb “tetse”). 10: Probably an editorial comment. 11–12: Uses language referring to Moab’s well-known viticulture; see vv. 32–33. 13: Bethel represented religious apostasy in prophetic critique (Hos 10:15; Am 3:14; 4:4; 5:5–6), because of the worship associated with the calf that Jeroboam installed there (1 Kings 12:26–31; 2 Kings 10:29). 18. Dibon, a Moabite city located near Aroer north of the Wadi Arnon (v.

²⁵ The horn of Moab is cut off, and his arm is broken, says the LORD.

²⁶ Make him drunk, because he magnified himself against the LORD; let Moab wallow in his vomit; he too shall become a laughingstock. ²⁷ Israel was a laughingstock for you, though he was not caught among thieves; but whenever you spoke of him you shook your head!

²⁸ Leave the towns, and live on the rock,
 O inhabitants of Moab!

Be like the dove that nests
 on the sides of the mouth of a gorge.

²⁹ We have heard of the pride of Moab—he is very proud—

of his loftiness, his pride, and his arrogance,
 and the haughtiness of his heart.

³⁰ I myself know his insolence, says the LORD;

his boasts are false,
 his deeds are false.

³¹ Therefore I wail for Moab;
 I cry out for all Moab;
 for the people of Kir-heres I mourn.

³² More than for Jazer I weep for you,
 O vine of Sibmah!
 Your branches crossed over the sea, reached as far as Jazer;^a upon your summer fruits and your vintage the destroyer has fallen.

³³ Gladness and joy have been taken away from the fruitful land of Moab;
 I have stopped the wine from the wine presses;
 no one treads them with shouts of joy;
 the shouting is not the shout of joy.

³⁴ Heshbon and Elealeh cry out;^b as far as Jahaz they utter their voice, from Zoar to Horonaim and Eglath-shelishiyah. For even the waters of Nimrim have become desolate.

³⁵ And I will bring to an end in Moab, says the LORD, those who offer sacrifice at a high place and make offerings to their gods. ³⁶ Therefore my heart moans for Moab like a flute, and my heart moans like a flute for the people of Kir-heres; for the riches they gained have perished.

³⁷ For every head is shaved and every beard cut off; on all the hands there are gashes, and on the loins sackcloth. ³⁸ On all the housetops of Moab and in the squares there is nothing but lamentation; for I have broken Moab like a vessel that no one wants, says the LORD.

³⁹ How it is broken! How they wail! How Moab has turned his back in shame! So Moab has become a derision and a horror to all his neighbors.

⁴⁰ For thus says the LORD:

Look, he shall swoop down like an eagle,
 and spread his wings against Moab;

⁴¹ the towns^c shall be taken and the strongholds seized.

The hearts of the warriors of Moab, on that day,
 shall be like the heart of a woman in labor.

⁴² Moab shall be destroyed as a people, because he magnified himself against
 the LORD.

⁴³ Terror, pit, and trap are before you, O inhabitants of Moab!
 says the LORD.

⁴⁴ Everyone who flees from the terror shall fall into the pit, and everyone who climbs out of the pit shall be caught in the trap.

For I will bring these things^d upon Moab
 in the year of their punishment,
 says the LORD.

49 Concerning the Ammonites.

Thus says the LORD:

Has Israel no sons?

Has he no heir?

Why then has Milcom dispossessed Gad, and his people settled in its towns?

² Therefore, the time is surely coming, says the LORD, when I will sound the battle alarm against Rabbah of the Ammonites; it shall become a desolate mound, and its villages shall be burned with fire;

then Israel shall dispossess those who dispossessed him, says the LORD.

³ Wail, O Heshbon, for Ai is laid waste! Cry out, O daughters^b of Rabbah!

Put on sackcloth, lament, and slash yourselves with whips!^c

For Milcom shall go into exile, with his priests and his attendants.

⁴ Why do you boast in your strength? Your strength is ebbing, O faithless daughter.

You trusted in your treasures, saying, "Who will attack me?"

⁵ I am going to bring terror upon you, says the Lord God of hosts, from all your neighbors, and you will be scattered, each headlong, with no one to gather the fugitives.

⁶ But afterward I will restore the fortunes of the Ammonites, says the LORD.

⁷ Concerning Edom.

Thus says the LORD of hosts:

Is there no longer wisdom in Teman?

Has counsel perished from the prudent?

Has their wisdom vanished?

49.1–6: Against Ammon. The oracle against Ammon follows that of Moab, as the two are connected in tradition; see Gen 19.30–38; Deut 23.3. Both Moab and Ammon had recently been used by the Babylonians as proxies in the effort to subdue Judah (2 Kings 24.2). 1: Milcom . . . Gad, as the east-Jordanian tribe of Reuben tried to establish itself in territory claimed by Moab, so the east-Jordanian tribe of Gad was in competition with the Ammonites, whose national god was Milcom (1 Kings 11.5,33) and who eventually became independent of Israel, thereby claiming their own territory (2 Kings 15.29). 3: Reference to several major Ammonite towns, including Heshbon, the old Amorite city of Sihon (see 48.2n.; Num 21.21–24) and the capital, Rabbah (2 Sam 11.1), modern day Amman. Ai here probably does not refer to the ancient city of Ai near Bethel. The word is also the Heb term for "ruin," and may be used here in reference to Rabbah. 6: Restore the fortunes, see 48.47n.

49.7–22: Against Edom. South of Ammon and Moab, Edom was the third east-Jordanian country that competed with Israel for territory and independence. Parts of this oracle are also found with variations in the book of Obadiah. 7–8: Teman, perhaps in northern Arabia, was associated with Esau, the ancestor of Edom (Gen 36.1,8–11,15). Ancient traditions connected the God of Israel with Teman (Hab 3.3), and it was associated with ancient wisdom (Bar 3.22–23). As Edom's "brother," Israel recognized a strained kinship with the Edomites, but the relationship soured as Edom too was used as a proxy by Babylon (Ps 137.7–9). Dedan, a region in north-must drink it. ¹³ For by myself I have sworn, says the LORD, that Bozrah shall become an object of horror and ridicule, a waste, and an object of cursing; and all her towns shall be perpetual wastes.

¹⁴ I have heard tidings from the LORD, and a messenger has been sent among
the nations:

“Gather yourselves together and come against her,
and rise up for battle!”

¹⁵ For I will make you least among the
nations,
despised by humankind.

¹⁶ The terror you inspire and the pride of your heart have deceived you,

you who live in the clefts of the rock,^a who hold the height of the hill.

Although you make your nest as high as the eagle’s,

from there I will bring you down,

says the LORD.

¹⁷ Edom shall become an object of horror;
everyone who passes by it will be horrified and will hiss because of all its disasters. ¹⁸ As when Sodom and Gomorrah and their neighbors were overthrown, says the LORD, no one shall live there, nor shall anyone settle in it.

¹⁹ Like a lion coming up from the thickets of the Jordan against a perennial pasture, I will suddenly chase Edom^b away from it; and I will appoint over it whomever I choose.^c

For who is like me? Who can summon me?
Who is the shepherd who can stand before me? ²⁰ Therefore hear the plan that the LORD has made against Edom and the purposes that he has formed against the inhabitants of Teman: Surely the little ones of the flock shall be dragged away; surely their fold shall be appalled at their fate. ²¹ At the sound of their fall the earth shall tremble; the sound of their cry shall be heard at the Red Sea.^d

²² Look, he shall mount up and swoop down like an eagle, and spread his wings against Bozrah, and the heart of the warriors of Edom in that day shall be like the heart of a woman in labor.

their might;³⁶ and I will bring upon Elam the four winds from the four quarters of heaven; and I will scatter them to all these winds, and there shall be no nation to which the exiles from Elam shall not come. ³⁷I will

those who seek their life; I will bring disaster upon them, my fierce anger, says the LORD. I will send the sword after them, until I have consumed them;³⁸ and I will set my throne in Elam, and destroy their king and officials,
says the LORD.

fortunes of Elam, says the LORD.

concerning Babylon, concerning the land of the Chaldeans, by the prophet Jeremiah:

49.28–33: Against Kedar and Hazor. Kedar was a collective name for Ishmaelite nomadic tribes (Gen 25.13) who lived in tents (Ps 120.5; Song 1.5) and grazed sheep and goats (Ezek 27.21). Hazor here must also refer to desert nomadic wanderers. As such, they lived in unwallled villages (v. 31) and their economy was based upon camel caravaneering (vv. 29,32). 28: In midwinter 599–598 BCE Nebuchadrezzar led a successful campaign against the Arab tribes in the eastern desert. 29: Terror is all around, see 46.5n. 32: Shaven temples, a mark of eastern nomadic groups; see 9.26n.; 25.23.

49.34–39: Against Elam. The unusually long introduction to this oracle suggests that it was a later addition to the collection. One of the few dated oracles, it is placed in the context of the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah following the first deportation (597 BCE). Elam, with its capital at Susa, lay to the east of Babylon. The reference to the bow of Elam (v. 35) highlights its reputation (Isa 22.6). 36: On the traditional division of the

Babylon is taken,
Bel is put to shame,
Merodach is dismayed.

Her images are put to shame,
her idols are dismayed.

³ For out of the north a nation has come up against her; it shall make her land a desolation, and no one shall live in it; both human beings and animals shall flee away.

⁴ In those days and in that time, says the LORD, the people of Israel shall come, they and the people of Judah together; they shall come weeping as they seek the LORD their God. ⁵ They shall ask the way to Zion, with faces turned toward it, and they shall come and join^a themselves to the LORD by an everlasting covenant that will never be forgotten.

⁶ My people have been lost sheep; their shepherds have led them astray, turning them away on the mountains; from mountain to hill they have gone, they have forgotten their fold. ⁷ All who found them have devoured them, and their enemies have said, “We are not guilty, because they have sinned against the LORD, the true pasture, the LORD, the hope of their ancestors.”

⁸ Flee from Babylon, and go out of the land of the Chaldeans, and be like male goats leading the flock. ⁹ For I am going to stir up and bring against Babylon a company of great nations from the land of the north; and they shall array themselves against her; from there she shall be taken. Their arrows are heavens into four quadrants, each with its wind, see Ezek 37.9; Zech 2.6; 6.5. 39: On the restoration of Elam’s fortunes, see 48.47; 49.6.

50.1–51.58: Against Babylon. The oracle against Babylon (Chaldea) appears last in the list, reflecting its historical importance and the cosmic aspects of Jeremiah’s proclamation of judgment against the nations (25.11–14). This lengthy oracle, made up of numerous fragments, expresses both a harsh judgment upon Babylon and visions of restoration for Judah. Lacking is the sense expressed elsewhere that Babylon was an agent in God’s purposeful design (see 27.6–11). Instead the oracle stresses the arrogance and defiance of Babylon, which will now face retribution from Israel’s God.

50.1–3: Babylon’s destruction is announced. 2: Bel, a title of Marduk, the chief deity of Babylon, related to the Canaanite title ba’al, “lord, master” (Isa 46.1); cf. Bel 1.1–22. Merodach refers to the chief patron deity of Babylon, Marduk, creator of the world in Babylonian mythology and founder of the city of Babylon. The name appears in the Bible only otherwise in the royal names Merodach-baladan (2 Kings 20.12=Isa 39.1) and Evil-merodach (52.31). 3: Even Babylon, the enemy from the north, is subject to her own “enemies from the north” (1.14; 50.9,41–42). Babylon was conquered by Cyrus, head of a coalition of Medes and Persians, in 539 BCE, but the image here may be more literary and mythological than historical.

50.4–10: The restoration of Israel and Judah, envisioning the reestablishment of the united tribal alliance. 7: Metaphor of lost sheep being devoured by predators, but compare with 2.3 and its ritual associations. 8: Cf. Isa 48.20.

50.11–16: The LORD’s vengeance against Babylon. 12: Your mother, that is, Babylon. Cities can often be spoken of as “mothers” to their inhabitants or surrounding villages.

but shall be an utter desolation;
 everyone who passes by Babylon shall be appalled
 and hiss because of all her wounds.

¹⁴Take up your positions around Babylon, all you that bend the bow;
 shoot at her, spare no arrows,
 for she has sinned against the LORD.

¹⁵Raise a shout against her from all sides,
 “She has surrendered;
 her bulwarks have fallen,
 her walls are thrown down.”

For this is the vengeance of the LORD:
 take vengeance on her,
 do to her as she has done.

¹⁶Cut off from Babylon the sower, and the wielder of the sickle in time of harvest;
 because of the destroying sword all of them shall return to their own
 people,
 and all of them shall flee to their own
 land.

¹⁷Israel is a hunted sheep driven away by lions. First the king of Assyria devoured it, and now at the end King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon has gnawed its bones. ¹⁸Therefore, thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I am going to punish the king of Babylon and his land, as I punished the king of Assyria. ¹⁹I will restore Israel to its pasture, and it shall feed on Carmel and in Bashan, and on the hills of Ephraim and in Gilead its hunger shall be satisfied. ²⁰In those days and at that time, says the LORD, the iniquity of Israel shall be sought, and there shall be none; and the sins of Judah, and none shall be found; for I will pardon the remnant that I have spared.

²¹Go up to the land of Merathaim;^a go up against her,
 and attack the inhabitants of Pekod^b

do all that I have commanded you.

²²The noise of battle is in the land, and great destruction!

²³How the hammer of the whole earth is cut down and broken!
 How Babylon has become a horror among the nations!

²⁴You set a snare for yourself and you were caught, O Babylon,
 but you did not know it;
 you were discovered and seized,
 because you challenged the LORD.

²⁵The LORD has opened his armory, and brought out the weapons of his wrath,

for the Lord GOD of hosts has a task to do in the land of the Chaldeans.

²⁶Come against her from every quarter;
 open her granaries;
 pile her up like heaps of grain, and destroy her utterly;
 let nothing be left of her.

²⁷Kill all her bulls,
 let them go down to the slaughter.
 Alas for them, their day has come,
 the time of their punishment!

²⁸Listen! Fugitives and refugees from the land of Babylon are coming to declare in Zion the vengeance of the LORD our God, vengeance for his temple.

²⁹Summon archers against Babylon, all who bend the bow. Encamp all around her; let no one escape. Repay her according to her deeds; just as she has done, do to her—for she has arrogantly defied the LORD, the Holy
 One of Israel. ³⁰Therefore her young men shall fall in her squares, and all her soldiers shall be destroyed on that day, says the LORD.

^a Or of Double Rebellion

^b Or of Punishment

^c Tg: Heb destroy after them

50.17–20: Israel restored. 19: Carmel, a promontory in the western Jezreel Valley, and Bashan in Transjordan were known for their fertility (Isa 33.9; Nah 1.4; Ezek 39.18).

50.21–32: The military assault on Babylon. 21: Merathaim, used only here, is perhaps a derisive term for Babylon meaning “double rebellion,” probably playing on the name of southern Babylon, “mat marrati,” “land of the lagoons.” Pekod was a part of Babylonian territory or an allied territory; see Ezek 23.23. Also a play on words, since Heb “paqad” commonly means to “attend to,” as in punishing (vv. 18,27). 24: You set, Heb “I set.”

³¹I am against you, O arrogant one,
says the Lord God of hosts;
for your day has come,
the time when I will punish you.

³²The arrogant one shall stumble and fall, with no one to raise him up,
and I will kindle a fire in his cities, and it will devour everything around
him.

³³Thus says the LORD of hosts: The people of Israel are oppressed, and so too are the people of Judah; all their captors have held them fast and refuse to let them go. ³⁴Their Redeemer is strong; the LORD of hosts is his name. He will surely plead their cause, that he may give rest to the earth, but unrest to the inhabitants of Babylon.

³⁵A sword against the Chaldeans, says the LORD,
and against the inhabitants of Babylon,
and against her officials and her sages!

³⁶A sword against the diviners, so that they may become fools!
A sword against her warriors,
so that they may be destroyed!

³⁷A sword against her^a horses and against her^a chariots,
and against all the foreign troops in her
midst,
so that they may become women!

A sword against all her treasures, that they may be plundered!

³⁸A drought^b against her waters, that they may be dried up!
For it is a land of images, and they go mad over idols.

³⁹Therefore wild animals shall live with hyenas in Babylon,^c and ostriches shall inhabit her; she shall never again be peopled, or inhabited for all generations. ⁴⁰As when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah and their neighbors, says the LORD, so no one shall live there, nor shall anyone settle in her.

⁴¹Look, a people is coming from the north;
a mighty nation and many kings are stirring from the farthest parts of the earth.

⁴²They wield bow and spear,
they are cruel and have no mercy.
The sound of them is like the roaring sea;
they ride upon horses,
set in array as a warrior for battle, against you, O daughter Babylon!

⁴³The king of Babylon heard news of them, and his hands fell helpless;
anguish seized him,
pain like that of a woman in labor.

⁴⁴Like a lion coming up from the thickets of the Jordan against a perennial pasture, I will suddenly chase them away from her; and I will appoint over her whomever I choose.^d
For who is like me? Who can summon me?
Who is the shepherd who can stand before me? ⁴⁵Therefore hear the plan that the LORD has made against Babylon, and the purposes that he has formed against the land of the Chaldeans: Surely the little ones of the flock shall be dragged away; surely their^e fold shall be appalled at their fate. ⁴⁶At the sound of the capture of Babylon the earth shall tremble, and her cry shall be heard among the nations.

51.1–10: A wind will blow against Babylon. The image of winnowing is used ironically to depict a destructive wind that goes far beyond simply separating grain from chaff. 1: Leb-qamai, a cryptic 'atbash reading for "Kasdim," meaning "Chaldea" or "Babylon"; see textual note b; cf. 25.26n.; 51.41. Also, the term qamai sounds like the word for "standing grain" (Heb "qamah") which is being winnowed, so that Leb-qamai suggests "heart of the standing grain." 7: On God's cup of wine, see 25.15–29. Here it is Babylon herself who is God's cup. The nations drink and "go mad" (the same word as in 50.38).

Cyrus was king of the empire of Media and Persia, and attacked Babylon in 539 BCE. 13: Mighty waters, Babylon was surrounded by the Euphrates and other water-ways as natural defenses. 14: Troops like a swarm of locusts, cf. Joel 1.1–2.11 for the connection of a locust plague and the invasion of enemy troops.

51.34–44: God will seek vengeance against Babylon for devouring Judah. The theme of Babylon “devouring” Judah (v. 34) ushers in a theme pursued through this section. That Israel is “devoured” is a common theme (see 10.25; 30.16). But here the image is combined with the common mythological image of the sea-monster “swallowing” with a voracious appetite (v. 34; Ps 69.15; Prov 1.12), in turn combined with the polemic that Bel, the god of Babylon, has such a voracious appetite (v. 44), but will be forced by God to disgorge all he has devoured in conquest. See Jer 50.2 and the polemic in Bel 1.1–22, where Bel is characterized principally by his voracious appetite. 36: Dry up her sea, that is, the mythological enemy, the sea-dragon with its all-consuming appetite, representing the power of destructive chaos. Marduk, the patron deity of Babylon, was the hero god who slew the dragon Tiamat, and who himself was depicted as a dragon on murals throughout Babylon. 41: Sheshach, as in v. 1, cryptogram for Babel (Babylon); see 25.26n. 42: See v. 36. 44: Bel, see 50.2n. Make him disgorge, that is, “bring out,” leading into what follows.

⁴⁵ Come out of her, my people!
 Save your lives, each of you,
 from the fierce anger of the LORD!
⁴⁶ Do not be fainthearted or fearful at the rumors heard in the land—one year one rumor comes,
 the next year another,
 rumors of violence in the land and of ruler against ruler.

⁴⁷ Assuredly, the days are coming when I will punish the images of Babylon;
 her whole land shall be put to shame,
 and all her slain shall fall in her midst.
⁴⁸ Then the heavens and the earth, and all that is in them,
 shall shout for joy over Babylon;
 for the destroyers shall come against them out of the north,
 says the LORD.

⁴⁹ Babylon must fall for the slain of Israel, as the slain of all the earth have fallen because of Babylon.

⁵⁰ You survivors of the sword, go, do not linger!
 Remember the LORD in a distant land,
 and let Jerusalem come into your mind:
⁵¹ We are put to shame, for we have heard insults;
 dishonor has covered our face, for aliens have come into the holy places of the LORD's house.

⁵² Therefore the time is surely coming, says
 the LORD,
 when I will punish her idols, and through all her land
 the wounded shall groan.
⁵³ Though Babylon should mount up to heaven,

and though she should fortify her strong height,
 from me destroyers would come upon her,
 says the LORD.

⁵⁴ Listen!—a cry from Babylon!
 A great crashing from the land of the Chaldeans!
⁵⁵ For the LORD is laying Babylon waste, and stilling her loud clamor.
 Their waves roar like mighty waters,
 the sound of their clamor resounds; ⁵⁶ for a destroyer has come against her, against Babylon;
 her warriors are taken,
 their bows are broken;
 for the LORD is a God of recompense,
 he will repay in full.
⁵⁷ I will make her officials and her sages drunk,
 also her governors, her deputies, and her warriors;
 they shall sleep a perpetual sleep and never wake,
 says the King, whose name is the LORD of hosts.

⁵⁸ Thus says the LORD of hosts:
 The broad wall of Babylon shall be leveled to the ground, and her high gates
 shall be burned with fire.
 The peoples exhaust themselves for
 nothing,
 and the nations weary themselves only for fire.^a

^a Gk Syr Compare Hab 2.13: Heb and the nations for fire, and they are weary

51.45–49: Israel is urged to “come out” as that which is “disgorged” from Babylon. The figure of Babylon continued for a long time to symbolize the power of God’s great destructive enemy in biblical tradition; see Rev 18.2–21.

51.50–58: Babylon’s ultimate destruction. 50: Remember . . . distant land, normally a difficult task; cf. Ps 137.4. 51: Aliens, unlike “strangers” (sojourners), “aliens” are dangerous to the solidarity of the community and threaten its integrity. Therefore “aliens” (Heb “zarim”) are discriminated against in a way that goes far beyond the favorable concern shown to sojourners. 53: Mount up to heaven, that is, assert itself against God’s authority; cf. Isa 14.13.

51.59–64: The scroll thrown into the Euphrates. The oracles against Babylon (“all these words,” v. 60) were,

Mahseiah, when he went with King Zedekiah of Judah to Babylon, in the fourth year of his reign. Seraiah was the quartermaster. ⁶⁰Jeremiah wrote in a ^a scroll all the disasters that would come on Babylon, all these words that are written concerning Babylon. ⁶¹And Jeremiah said to Seraiah: “When you come to Babylon, see that you read all these words, ⁶²and say, ‘O LORD, you yourself threatened to destroy this place so that neither human beings nor animals shall live in it, and it shall be desolate forever.’ ⁶³When you finish reading this scroll, tie a stone to it, and throw it into the middle of the Euphrates, ⁶⁴and say, ‘Thus shall Babylon sink, to rise no more, because of the disasters that I am bringing on her.’”^b

Thus far are the words of Jeremiah.

52 Zedekiah was twenty-one years old when he began to reign; he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. His mother’s name was Hamutal daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah. ²He did what was evil in the sight of the LORD, just as Jehoiakim had done. ³Indeed, Jerusalem and Judah so angered the LORD that he expelled them from his presence.

Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon. ⁴And in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, on the tenth day of the month, King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon came with all his army against Jerusalem, and they laid siege to it; they built siege-works against it all around. ⁵So the city was besieged until the eleventh year of King Zedekiah. ⁶On the ninth day of the fourth month the famine became so severe in the city that there was no food for the people of the land. ⁷Then a breach was made in the city wall;^c and all the soldiers fled and went out from the city by night by the way of the gate between the two walls, by the king’s garden, though the Chaldeans were all around the city. They went in the direction of the Arabah. ⁸But the army of the Chaldeans pursued the king, and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho; and all his army was scattered, deserting him. ⁹Then they captured the king, and brought him up to the king of Babylon at Riblah in the land of Hamath, and he passed sentence on him. ¹⁰The king of Babylon killed the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes, and also killed all the officers of Judah at Riblah. ¹¹He put out the eyes of Zedekiah, and bound him in fetters, and the king of Babylon took him to Babylon, and put him in prison until the day of his death.

¹²In the fifth month, on the tenth day of the month—which was the nineteenth year of King Nebuchadrezzar, king of Babylon—Nebuzaradan the captain of the bodyguard who served the king of Babylon, entered Jerusalem. ¹³He burned the house of the LORD, the king’s house, and all the houses of Jerusalem; every great house he burned down. ¹⁴All the army of the Chaldeans, who were with the captain of the guard, broke down all the walls around Jerusalem. ¹⁵Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard carried into exile

according to this account, sealed in a scroll and then taken to the Euphrates by courier and thrown in as a prophetic sign and curse that Babylon would so sink in divine disaster. This action is dated to 594 BCE, the year of the likely aborted revolt against Babylon; see 27.1–28.17n. The emissaries sent by Zedekiah to Babylon here may have been in response to a reaffirmation of treaty support by Zedekiah of his Babylonian overlords. 59: Seraiah . . . Neriah . . . Mahseiah, apparently Seraiah was Baruch’s brother; see 32.16. Quartermaster, or perhaps “chief of storage houses,” an appropriate official to send to convince the king of Babylon that no revolt was planned. 64: Thus far are the words of Jeremiah, an additional comment calling attention to the supplementary character of the appendix in ch 52.

52.1–34: The fall and looting of Jerusalem. Vv. 1–27 are nearly identical to 2 Kings 24.18–25.21. Vv. 28–30 provide statistics regarding the numbers of Judeans taken into exile during the three deportations, figures not recorded elsewhere. Vv. 31–34 are excerpted nearly verbatim from 2 Kings 25.27–30. This historical recitation from the Deuteronomistic History makes a fitting ending to the Deuteronomistically edited book of Jeremiah. 1: Zedekiah, the last king of Judah, ruled ca. 597–586 BCE. 3: A tragic theological conclusion consistent with the Deuteronomistic perspective; see 2 Kings 23.26–27. 4–11: January 587 to August 586 BCE. On the attempted escape and capture of Zedekiah and his fate, cf. 39.1–10. 12–14: The fifth month continued to be memorialized in some of the poorest of the people and the rest of the people who were left in the city and the deserters who had defected to the king of Babylon, together with the rest of the artisans.¹⁶ But Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard left some of the poorest people of the land to be vinedressers and tillers of the soil.

¹⁷The pillars of bronze that were in the house of the LORD, and the stands and the bronze sea that were in the house of the LORD, the Chaldeans broke in pieces, and carried all the bronze to Babylon.¹⁸ They took away the pots, the shovels, the snuff-ers, the basins, the ladles, and all the vessels of bronze used in the temple service.¹⁹ The captain of the guard took away the small bowls also, the firepans, the basins, the pots, the lampstands, the ladles, and the bowls for libation, both those of gold and those of silver.²⁰ As for the two pillars, the one sea, the twelve bronze bulls that were under the sea, and the stands,^a which King Solomon had made for the house of the LORD, the bronze of all these vessels was beyond weighing.²¹ As for the pillars, the height of the one pillar was eighteen cubits, its circumference was twelve cubits; it was hollow and its thickness was four fingers.²² Upon it was a capital of bronze; the height of the capital was five cubits; latticework and pomegranates, all of bronze, encircled the top of the capital. And the second pillar had the same, with pomegranates.²³ There were ninety-six pomegranates on the sides; all the pomegranates encircling the latticework numbered one hundred.

²⁴The captain of the guard took the chief priest Seraiah, the second priest Zephaniah, and the three guardians of the threshold;

²⁵ and from the city he took an officer who had been in command of the soldiers, and seven men of the king's council who were found in the city; the secretary of the commander of the army who mustered the people of the land; and sixty men of the people of the land who were found inside the city.

²⁶Then Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard took them, and brought them to the king of Babylon at Riblah.²⁷ And the king of Babylon struck them down, and put them to death at Riblah in the land of Hamath. So Judah went into exile out of its land.

³¹In the thirty-seventh year of the exile of King Jehoiachin of Judah, in the twelfth month, on the twenty-fifth day of the month, King Evil-merodach of Babylon, in the year he began to reign, showed favor to King Jehoiachin of Judah and brought him out of prison;³² he spoke kindly to him, and gave him a seat above the seats of the other kings who were with him in Babylon.³³ So Jehoiachin put aside his prison clothes, and every day of his life he dined regularly at the king's table.³⁴ For his allowance, a regular daily allowance was given him by the king of Babylon, as long as he lived, up to the day of his death.

LAMENTATIONS

NAME, AUTHORSHIP, AND LOCATION IN CANON

The name Lamentations is a translation of the title of the book as it appears in the Septuagint, Threnoi. In the Hebrew Bible the book is titled 'Ekaḥ, literally “How,” which is the first word of the initial verse, “How lonely sits the city.”

In the Christian canon, Lamentations follows Jeremiah, who was traditionally thought to have been its author. While Jewish tradition also ascribes the book's authorship to Jeremiah, in the Hebrew Bible Lamentations is located in the Writings, among the Five Scrolls. It is read liturgically on the Ninth of Av, the day of public mourning in commemoration of the destruction of the First and Second Temples. (The First Temple was destroyed in 586 BCE by the Babylonians, and the Second Temple in 70 CE by the Romans.) In Christian tradition, readings from Lamentations are part of the Holy Week liturgies. The traditional ascription of authorship to Jeremiah derives from the impetus to ascribe all biblical books to inspired biblical authors as those books became authoritative or canonical. Jeremiah, a prophet who lived during the last days of the kingdom of Judah and prophesied its demise, was an obvious choice for Lamentations. According to 2 Chr 35.25, Jeremiah composed laments for the death of King Josiah. This suggests that already by the time of Chronicles, Jeremiah had a reputation as an author of laments.

DATE AND HISTORICAL CONTEXT

The five poems that comprise Lamentations, each with its distinctive tone and theme, were initially composed to lament the destruction of Jerusalem and the Temple by the Babylonians, which brought the independent country of Judah to an end (see 2 Kings 25.8–21). The sequence of the chapters is not chronological, and despite the vividness of their descriptions, the poems may not have been written by eyewitnesses to the events. The dating of the book is clearly after 586 BCE and before the end of the sixth century BCE, when the Temple was rebuilt, but the exact time, place, and reason for their composition is unknown. Perhaps the poems were used at the site of the ruined Temple to commemorate its loss.

GENRE

An ancient Near Eastern tradition of laments over the destruction of cities goes back to the Sumerian laments of the early second millennium BCE (e.g., “Lamentation over the Destruction of Ur,” “Lamentation over the Destruction of Sumer and Ur,” “Nippur Lament”). Despite the generic similarity, however, there is no direct line of influence from the Sumerian laments to the book of Lamentations. Moreover, the Sumerian laments were recited on the occasion of the rebuilding of a temple, so their “story” has a happy ending. Not so in the book of Lamentations, where hopes for the rebuilding of the Jerusalem Temple remain unrealized, and God, who is so movingly implored to end his people's suffering and exile and to restore them to their former condition, never responds. The poems in Lamentations resemble Pss 74 and 79, also written in the aftermath of Jerusalem's destruction (see also Ps 137), but the origin and development of the Jerusalem-laments in Israel remains unknown. The destruction of city and Temple was an unprecedented event in Judah; and perhaps a new genre arose to fill a new need.

STRUCTURE, INTERPRETATION, AND GUIDE TO READING

The book's first four poems (chs 1; 2; 3; 4) are alphabetic acrostics, a formal device found elsewhere in the Bible (e.g., Pss 111; 112; 145; Prov 31.10–31), in which each verse or stanza begins with successive letters of the Hebrew alphabet, twenty-two in all. Chapter 3 is a triple acrostic; all three verses of each stanza begin with the same letter. Chapter 5, although not an acrostic, also contains twenty-two verses. In Lamentations this formal device gives expression to the enormity or totality of the destruction (extending “from A to Z”) and also attempts to give structure and closure to the incomprehensible events and unstructured pain that engulfed Judah and its inhabitants.

The language of the book is highly poetic and extraordinarily moving, so much so that at times we want to avert our eyes from the violence and suffering described. The experiences of warfare, siege, famine, and death are individualized—brave men reduced to begging, mothers unable to nourish their children. The national catastrophe is thus made real, as society disintegrates and people die or are deported. All of this is addressed to God, so that he may feel the suffering of his people and save them. The entire book may be thought of as an appeal for God’s mercy. Yet God remains silent.

If the book fails to move God, it fulfills another function, that of public mourning which both relives and commemorates a catastrophe of incomprehensible proportion. Lamentations does not create a new theology. It assumes the theology of Deuteronomy, where sin leads to divine punishment and exile (see Deut 28). God is responsible for the disaster; the Babylonians are merely divine agents. So, God, whose power is not diminished despite the Temple’s destruction, must be the one to end the Babylonian dominance and bring about the return from exile. Repentance, the antidote to sin, is mentioned but is not central (this is not penitential prayer); rather, the idea in Lamentations is that the punishment, even if deserved, outweighs the sin. The immediacy of the disproportionate punishment drowns out everything else.

As a short book, Lamentations can easily be read in one sitting. Each chapter is a window through which a poet attempts to render chaos into language in the formal structure of the acrostic.

1 How lonely sits the city that once was full of people!
How like a widow she has become,
she that was great among the nations!
She that was a princess among the provinces
has become a vassal.

2 She weeps bitterly in the night, with tears on her cheeks;
among all her lovers
she has no one to comfort her;
all her friends have dealt treacherously with her,
they have become her enemies.

3 Judah has gone into exile with suffering and hard servitude;
she lives now among the nations,
and finds no resting place;
her pursuers have all overtaken her in the midst of her distress.

4 The roads to Zion mourn, for no one comes to the festivals;

all her gates are desolate,
her priests groan;
her young girls grieve,^a and her lot is bitter.

5 Her foes have become the masters,
her enemies prosper,
because the LORD has made her suffer for the multitude of her transgressions;
her children have gone away,
captives before the foe.

6 From daughter Zion has departed all her majesty.
Her princes have become like stags that find no pasture;
they fled without strength before the pursuer.

^a Meaning of Heb uncertain

1.1–22. Lament over the destroyed Jerusalem. The chapter has two sections, vv. 1–11, the lament of the narrator, and vv. 12–22, the lament of the city. Shame, mourning, and suffering are the main themes. The phrase “no one to comfort her/me” occurs four times (vv. 2,9,17,21; cf. vv. 7,16) and emphasizes unceasing mourning.

1.1–11: The poet laments Jerusalem. Jerusalem is personified as a woman, widowed, abandoned, and shamed. 1: How, or “woe” is a common beginning of dirges (Isa 1.21; Jer 48.17; Lam 2.1; 4.1). 2: Lovers, Judah’s political allies who failed to support her. The term also hints that Jerusalem, by taking lovers, was unfaithful to God. 3: Suffering and hard servitude is reminiscent of the Egyptian bondage (Ex 1.14; 2.23; 3.7,17; 4.31; 5.11; 6.6), to which the Babylonian exile is likened. 6: Daughter Zion, or “Mistress Zion,” a common epithet (e.g., 1.15; 2.1;

all the precious things that were hers in days of old.
When her people fell into the hand of the foe,
and there was no one to help her,
the foe looked on mocking over her downfall.

⁸ Jerusalem sinned grievously, so she has become a mockery;
all who honored her despise her,
for they have seen her nakedness;
she herself groans,
and turns her face away.

⁹ Her uncleanness was in her skirts;
she took no thought of her future;
her downfall was appalling,
with none to comfort her.
“O LORD, look at my affliction, for the enemy has triumphed!”

¹⁰ Enemies have stretched out their hands over all her precious things;
she has even seen the nations invade her sanctuary,
those whom you forbade
to enter your congregation.

¹¹ All her people groan
as they search for bread;
they trade their treasures for food
to revive their strength.
Look, O LORD, and see how worthless I have become.

¹² Is it nothing to you,^a all you who pass by?
Look and see
if there is any sorrow like my sorrow, which was brought upon me,

which the LORD inflicted on the day of his fierce anger.

¹³ From on high he sent fire;
it went deep into my bones;
he spread a net for my feet;
he turned me back;
he has left me stunned,
faint all day long.

¹⁴ My transgressions were bound^a into a yoke;
by his hand they were fastened
together;
they weigh on my neck,
sapping my strength;
the Lord handed me over to those whom I cannot withstand.

¹⁵ The LORD has rejected
all my warriors in the midst of me;
he proclaimed a time against me
to crush my young men;
the Lord has trodden as in a wine press
the virgin daughter Judah.

¹⁶ For these things I weep;
my eyes flow with tears;
for a comforter is far from me,
one to revive my courage;
my children are desolate,
for the enemy has prevailed.

4.22) conveying the sense of “dear little Zion.” 8: Mockery, or “banished.” Nakedness, shame, especially sexual shame (cf. Isa 47.5; Jer 13.22; Ezek 16.37; Nah 3.5). 9: Uncleanness, not from menstruation but from sexual impropriety. Jerusalem’s sin was unfaithfulness to God, the taking of other “lovers.” 10: Precious things, the Temple treasures looted by the victors (cf. 2 Chr 36.10). The Babylonian invasion is conveyed in sexual terms, as a rape of Jerusalem by someone who had no rights of access to her. 11: Jerusalem speaks in the final line, and continues speaking in vv. 12–16 and 18–22.

1.12–22. Jerusalem’s lament. 12: Was brought, the Heb word is much stronger and actually conveys violence (cf. 1 Sam 31.4; Jer 38.19; Judg 19.25). Day . . . anger, like “the day of the Lord,” when God comes in judgment against Judah itself (e.g., Am 5.18). 15: Trodden as in a wine press, crushed so the blood runs out (see Deut 32.14; Isa 63.1–2). Virgin, part of the epithet “daughter Zion” (see 1.6n.), Heb “betulah” means a girl of marriageable age. 17: Jacob, a common term for Judah in postexilic literature. Filthy thing, a menstruant, who is ritually impure, not fit to come into contact with holy things and off-limits for sexual contact. Jerusalem’s “lovers” (vv.

Jerusalem has become a filthy thing among them.

¹⁸The LORD is in the right, for I have rebelled against his word;
but hear, all you peoples,
and behold my suffering;
my young women and young men have gone into captivity.

¹⁹I called to my lovers but they deceived me;
my priests and elders perished in the city while seeking food
to revive their strength.

²⁰See, O LORD, how distressed I am;
my stomach churns,
my heart is wrung within me,
because I have been very rebellious.
In the street the sword bereaves;
in the house it is like death.

²¹They heard how I was groaning, with no one to comfort me.
All my enemies heard of my trouble;
they are glad that you have done it.
Bring on the day you have announced, and let them be as I am.

²²Let all their evil doing come before you;
and deal with them

as you have dealt with me because of all my transgressions; for my groans are many
and my heart is faint.

2 How the Lord in his anger has humiliated^a daughter Zion!
He has thrown down from heaven to earth
the splendor of Israel;
he has not remembered his footstool
in the day of his anger.

²The Lord has destroyed without mercy
all the dwellings of Jacob;
in his wrath he has broken down the strongholds of daughter Judah;
he has brought down to the ground in dishonor
the kingdom and its rulers.

³He has cut down in fierce anger
all the might of Israel;
he has withdrawn his right hand from them in the face of the enemy;
he has burned like a flaming fire in Jacob, consuming all around.

⁴He has bent his bow like an enemy, with his right hand set like a foe;
he has killed all in whom we took pride in the tent of daughter Zion;
he has poured out his fury like fire.

2,19) distance themselves from her. The narrator interrupts Jerusalem's speech, just as she did his (1.9c). 18: An admission of sin, but the emphasis is on the suffering. 20: Stomach, innards, the seat of emotions. In the street, better "outside," that is, outside the city walls where the fighting took place. Inside the besieged city the inhabitants were ravaged by famine and disease (see Ezek 7.15). 22: Not simply vindictive revenge, this is a plea to restore the world order in which Israel is safe under God's protection and its enemies are banished. Chapters 3 and 4 end in a similar manner. The trope of the destruction of the enemy is common in psalms of lament.

2.1–22: The Lord has become like an enemy. The tone changes from the despair of ch 1 to anger, with a concomitant shift from a focus on the victim to a focus on God, the perpetrator. Many verbs of strong military action portray God as a destroying enemy: e.g., "thrown down," "destroyed," "cut down," "burned," "bent his bow," "killed."

2.1–10: God in his anger battles against Jerusalem, destroying the city and the country of Judah. 1: How, see 1.1n. Humiliated, or "made loathsome." The splendor of Israel, the Temple, thought of as a link between heaven and earth. That link is now broken and formal ritual access to God is cut off. Footstool, i.e., the ark of the covenant or the Temple. God is envisioned as a king sitting in heaven with his feet touching the Temple (see Ps 132.7; Isa 60.13; Ezek 43.7; 1 Chr 28.2). 3: His right hand, God's fighting arm and the symbol of his power and protection is intentionally withheld from Judah (Ex 15.6,12; Isa 41.10; Pss 48.10; 89.13; 98.1). 4: Tent, an old-fashioned ⁵The Lord has become like an enemy;

 he has destroyed Israel.
 He has destroyed all its palaces, laid in ruins its strongholds, and multiplied in daughter Judah mourning and lamentation.

 he has destroyed his tabernacle;
 the LORD has abolished in Zion festival and sabbath, and in his fierce indignation has spurned

 disowned his sanctuary;
 he has delivered into the hand of the

 the walls of her palaces;
 a clamor was raised in the house of the

 he did not withhold his hand from

 he caused rampart and wall to lament;
 they languish together.

way of referring to the homes in Judah and to the Temple in Jerusalem (cf. 2 Sam 7.6). 6: His booth, a temporary shelter (Job 27.18; Jon 4.5) and also the Temple (Pss 27.5; 76.3). Like a garden, the Temple was destroyed easily, as if it were a booth or hut in a garden. 7: Clamor, the exultant crowing of the invading and plundering enemy has replaced the joyful sounds of the crowds coming to the Temple on festivals. 8–10: We see the towers, walls, and gates disintegrate. The movement is from top to bottom, ending with the inhabitants sitting on the ground in mourning. 8: Stretched the line, like an architect, God made a plan for unbuilding the city (cf. 2 Kings 21.13; Isa 34.11; Jer 31.39; Zech 1.16; Job 38.5). 9: Guidance, Heb "torah."

2.11–19: The narrator's reaction. 11: The narrator's words echo those of Jerusalem in 1.20. Streets, broad places near the gates, squares. The babies are fainting and dying in public. 12: Where is bread and wine, that is, the stored up food supplies, the staples. There is no food left anywhere. Bread, lit. "grain." On their mother's bosom, or, "lap." The mothers are holding their children where they should find comfort (Ruth 4.16) as they they hiss and wag their heads at daughter Jerusalem; “Is this the city that was called the perfection of beauty, the joy of all the earth?”

¹⁶ All your enemies
open their mouths against you;
they hiss, they gnash their teeth,
they cry: “We have devoured her!
Ah, this is the day we longed for;
at last we have seen it!”

¹⁷ The LORD has done what he purposed, he has carried out his threat;
as he ordained long ago,
he has demolished without pity;
he has made the enemy rejoice over you,
and exalted the might of your foes.

¹⁸ Cry aloud^a to the Lord!
O wall of daughter Zion!
Let tears stream down like a torrent day and night!
Give yourself no rest,
your eyes no respite!

¹⁹ Arise, cry out in the night, at the beginning of the watches!
Pour out your heart like water before the presence of the Lord!
Lift your hands to him

for the lives of your children, who faint for hunger
at the head of every street.

²⁰ Look, O LORD, and consider!
To whom have you done this?
Should women eat their offspring,
the children they have borne?
Should priest and prophet be killed in the sanctuary of the Lord?

²¹ The young and the old are lying on the ground in the streets;
my young women and my young men have fallen by the sword;
in the day of your anger you have killed
them,
slaughtering without mercy.

²² You invited my enemies from all around as if for a day of festival;
and on the day of the anger of the LORD
no one escaped or survived;
those whom I bore and reared my enemy has destroyed.

starve to death. 15: Clap . . . hiss . . . wag, gestures of surprise and derision. The trope of the passer-by witnessing the shame of the victims and reacting with shock is common and provides an additional perspective to that of Zion and the narrator. Perfection of beauty, see Ezek 16.14; 27.3; Ps 50.2. Joy of all the earth, see Jer 51.41; Ps 48.2. 16: The enemies mock and taunt the victims, taking credit for Judah’s destruction, which v. 17 ascribes to God. The Babylonians never appear in the book (only Edom is named, in 4.21). 17: Ordained long ago, the decree that if Judah sinned, the Temple would be destroyed and the people exiled from their land (1 Kings 9.6–9). 18: Wall, the physical city should cry out to God on behalf of its people. 19: Watches, the night was divided into three watches (see Ex 14.24; 1 Sam 11.11; Song 3.1–3; 5.7). Nighttime is when suffering seems hardest to bear and when many prayers are offered, with the expectation that God will respond in the morning (cf. Ps 30.5).

2.20–22: Jerusalem’s address to God. 20: Eat their offspring, cannibalism was a result of the famine during a siege (4.10; 2 Kings 6.28) and a punishment for violating the covenant (Deut 28.53–57); this is a common trope in describing a siege. It is the reversal of the norm, in which women feed their children. 21–22: Slaughtering, as if preparing meat for food or sacrifice. The idea continues in the next verse, where God invites the enemies as if for a day of festival when they would participate in a sacrificial meal in the Temple. Day of the anger of the LORD, the time of punishment, like “the day of the LORD,” when God will punish those who deserve it (cf. 1.12; 2.1).

3.1–66: The complaint of the one who has seen affliction. The longest and most complex poem of the book, arranged as a triple acrostic: each stanza has three short verses assigned to each successive letter of the alphabet. The logical subdivisions according to content do not correspond to the alphabetic structure,

³ against me alone he turns his hand, again and again, all day long.

⁴ He has made my flesh and my skin waste
away,
and broken my bones;

⁵ he has besieged and enveloped me with bitterness and tribulation;

⁶ he has made me sit in darkness like the dead of long ago.

⁷ He has walled me about so that I cannot escape;

he has put heavy chains on me;

⁸ though I call and cry for help,
he shuts out my prayer;

⁹ he has blocked my ways with hewn stones,
he has made my paths crooked.

¹⁰ He is a bear lying in wait for me,
a lion in hiding;

¹¹ he led me off my way and tore me to pieces;

he has made me desolate;

¹² he bent his bow and set me as a mark for his arrow.

¹³ He shot into my vitals
the arrows of his quiver;

¹⁴ I have become the laughingstock of all my people,
the object of their taunt-songs all day long.

¹⁵ He has filled me with bitterness,
he has sated me with wormwood.

¹⁶ He has made my teeth grind on gravel,
and made me cower in ashes;

¹⁷ my soul is bereft of peace;
I have forgotten what happiness is;

¹⁸ so I say, "Gone is my glory, and all that I had hoped for from the LORD."

¹⁹ The thought of my affliction and my homelessness
is wormwood and gall!

²⁰ My soul continually thinks of it and is bowed down within me.

²¹ But this I call to mind, and therefore I have hope:

his mercies never come to an end;

^a Syr Tg: Heb LORD, we are not cut off with the result that the reader is pulled along from one thought to the next and interrupted by a new stanza in mid-thought. The chapter uses the language of lament and of wisdom or theological reflection on God's punishment and mercy. The mood alternates between despair and hope. The identity of the male speaker has long been debated. Some think he was a historical individual (Jeremiah, Jehoiachin, or Zedekiah have been suggested), but it seems preferable to take him as a literary persona, the counterpart of the female city speaking in 1.12–22. He is a Job-like figure, using some phraseology similar to Job's (especially in vv. 25–39), crying out to God from his suffering, trying to make sense of the terrible event, and to provoke God's response. But unlike Job, this speaker is not successful, for God never answers him.

3.1–20: The lament of the male persona, who appears to be a survivor in exile, or perhaps the collective voice of the people. Verses 1–13 are constructed on the image of God as a bad shepherd who leads his flock into dark and dangerous places (exile), in stark contrast to the image of God as a good shepherd (as in Ps 23). 1: I am one, (lit. "I am the man"). Heb "geber" is clearly masculine although NRSV has stripped it of gender. Rod of God's wrath, the shepherd's rod, normally an instrument of protection, is here the rod with which God punishes, as in Isa 10.5, where Assyria is the rod of God's wrath. 2: Driven and brought, like a flock (cf. Isa 40.11; Ps 78.52–53). 6: Darkness like the dead, exile is often compared to darkness, prison, and death. In exile the Judeans were cut off from access to God's Temple, like a dead person. The dead of long ago, better, "like the eternally dead," those who have no hope of life. 8: He shuts out my prayer, see 3.44n. 10: Bear . . . lion, from being a bad shepherd God changes into the dangerous wild animals from whom the shepherd is supposed to protect his flock (cf. David in 1 Sam 17.34–37). 12–13: Instead of shooting at the wild animals, God shoots at the speaker. God is elsewhere a divine archer who shoots disaster from his bow; cf. Deut 32.23–24; Ps 38.2–3; Job 16.12–13. 15: Bitterness . . . wormwood, a common symbol of suffering, see 3.19; 4.21; Jer 9.14; Job 9.18. 17: My soul, my being or self.

3.21–24: Despair turns to hope in these transitional verses framed by Therefore I have hope/Therefore I will

²³ they are new every morning; great is your faithfulness.
²⁴ “The LORD is my portion,” says my soul, “therefore I will hope in him.”
²⁵ The LORD is good to those who wait for
 him,
 to the soul that seeks him.
²⁶ It is good that one should wait quietly for the salvation of the LORD.
²⁷ It is good for one to bear the yoke in youth,
²⁸ to sit alone in silence
 when the Lord has imposed it, ²⁹ to put one’s mouth to the dust
 (there may yet be hope), ³⁰ to give one’s cheek to the smiter, and be filled with insults.
³¹ For the Lord will not

³² Although he causes grief, he will have compassion
 according to the abundance of his
 steadfast love;
³³ for he does not willingly afflict and return to the LORD.

⁴¹ Let us lift up our hearts as well as our ⁴² We have transgressed and rebelled, and you have not forgiven.

⁴³ You have wrapped yourself with anger and pursued us,
 killing without pity;
⁴⁴ you have wrapped yourself with a cloud so that no prayer can pass through.
⁴⁵ You have made us filth and rubbish among the peoples.
⁴⁶ All our enemies
 have opened their mouths against us; ⁴⁷ panic and pitfall have come upon us, devastation and destruction.
⁴⁸ My eyes flow with rivers of tears because of the destruction of my
 people.
⁴⁹ My eyes will flow without ceasing, without respite,

hope in him. 22: Steadfast love . . . mercies . . . faithfulness, attributes of God representing covenant loyalty (Ex 34.6–7; see also 2 Sam 7.15; Ps 89.2–4).

3.25–39: Drawing on wisdom thought, the poet finds reasons for hope in the face of suffering. 25–27: Good begins each verse, applied to God and to human patience. Humans must wait for God’s merciful help, and in the meantime accept the burden of their suffering (bear the yoke). 29: Put one’s mouth to the dust, accept God’s discipline submissively (cf. Mic 7.17; Ps 72.9). 33: Willingly, better “willfully” (lit. “from his heart”). God does not mete out punishment capriciously. 34–39: Standard biblical theology: all is ordained by God, who is the source of both good and evil (cf. Job 2.10; Isa 45.7); punishment received is punishment deserved.

3.40–47: Communal lament. The discourse shifts back to lament, although now in the first-person plural with direct address to God. At the beginning the tone is conciliatory, but then becomes accusatory. 40–41: As if persuaded by 3.25–29, the speakers call for self-examination, repentance, and contrition. 41: Lift up our hearts as well as our hands, a call for sincerity in repentance, not merely going through the motions of prayer. 42–44: A devastating turning point: confession of sin does not bring forgiveness. 44: Wrapped yourself with a cloud, the cloud through which God revealed himself at Sinai (Ex 19.16), and which protects the people from fatal direct contact with the divine, is here perceived as a barrier that God erected to prevent prayer from reaching him.

3.48–66: Individual lament. The first-person singular “I” returns, emphasizing the personal dimension of

⁵⁰ until the LORD from heaven

⁵¹ My eyes cause me grief at the fate of all the young women in my city.

⁵² Those who were my enemies without cause

and hurled stones on me; ⁵⁴ water closed over my head;
I said, "I am lost."

⁵⁵ I called on your name, O LORD, from the depths of the pit;
⁵⁶ you heard my plea, "Do not close your ear to my cry for help, but give me relief!" ⁵⁷ You came near when I called on you;
you said, "Do not fear!"

⁵⁸ You have taken up my cause, O Lord, you have redeemed my life.
⁵⁹ You have seen the wrong done to me,
O LORD;

Isa 14.15; Pss 30.3; 88.4). 54: Water closed over my head, the water in the cistern, but also a metaphor for desperation (see Jon 2.6–7; 2 Sam 22.5–6 = Ps 18.5–6). 56: The verbs translated in the past tense here and in the following verses probably express a wish for the future. 58–60: Legal language. The poet casts himself as a plaintiff in court where God will judge him innocent and the enemy guilty (cf. 3.34–36). 63: Whether they sit or rise, whatever they do, at all times. 64–66: A call for retribution; see 1.22. 66: From under the LORD's heavens, there is no place in God's world for the wicked.

4.1–22: The community under siege in Jerusalem. The physical and social effects of starvation are graphically described. The progression is realistic: first the children and then the adults. Degradation and debasement is the main theme; those once well-off are now destitute, those once healthy are dying or dead. Much of the effect is achieved by the contrast in color, the "before" and the "after," as the rich palette of the colors of wealth and health (gold, scarlet, white, red, sapphire in vv. 1,2,5,7,8) is drained away to blackness. Heat is another dimension, the unrelenting heat of the summer siege, the dry and blackened skin (v. 8), the parched mouths (v. 4), God's burning anger setting fire to Zion (v. 11). There is no shade, no protection provided by God or the king (v. 20). Like chs 1 and 2, this chapter contains a single alphabetic acrostic and opens with the word How (see 1.1n).

4.1–10: The suffering of the siege. 1: Sacred stones, or gems, and gold, though appearing to be meant literally, are metaphors for the children (v. 2). 2: Earthen pots were cheap and easily broken and discarded, while gold was an expensive and durable material. The children are likened to throw-away objects because no one can care for them. 3: Jackals, considered despicable scavengers. Ostriches, thought to be cruel and neglectful parents (cf. Job 39.13–18). My people has become cruel, not willingly but from desperation; they are no longer able

So they became fugitives and wanderers;
it was said among the nations, to care for their children. 4: The tongue . . . sticks to the roof of its mouth, an expression meaning that no sound is uttered (Ezek 3.26; Ps 137.6; Job 29.10). The children are too weak even to cry. 6: Sodom, whose punishment was legendary (Gen 19.24–25), was overthrown in an instant, whereas Jerusalem was made to suffer long agony. 7–8: The colors associated with vigor have disappeared; now people are dried up. 10: See 2.20n.

4.11–16: God’s wrathful punishment. 12: The Judean belief in the inviolability of Zion, that God would never permit his city to be destroyed (see Pss 46.5; 48.3–8), is here attributed even to foreigners, a creative use of the “passers-by” trope (see 2.15n). 13–14: Prophets . . . priests, those most associated with purity and vision are described as the most blind and defiled. 15: Away! Unclean! The public warning that lepers must give so that no one will come in contact with them (Lev 13.45–46).

4.17–22: The voice of the community. As in 3.40–47, the speaker is “we,” describing the final days of the siege and the fall of Jerusalem. 17: For a nation that could not save, most likely Egypt, the major power opposed to Babylonia (see Jer 37.5–10; Isa 30.7). from another nation, not from God. 19: Perhaps an allusion to the aftermath of the fall of Jerusalem, when Zedekiah and his soldiers fled the city and were pursued and captured by the Babylonian army (2 Kings 25.4–5). 20: The LORD's anointed, the breath of our life, . . . under his shadow, royal epithets (1 Sam 24.7; 2 Sam 1.14,16; Pss 17.8; 91.1). The reference is most likely to Zedekiah, the last king of Judah, whose defeat signals the failure of the Davidic dynasty to protect the people. 21–22: A curse on Edom, a neighbor of Judah who was a vassal to Babylonia. Edom is often singled out for negative comment in postexilic literature (Ezek 35; Ob 11; Ps 137.7). Edom is synonymous with Esau (Gen 36.1) and therefore the traditional enemy or rival of Jacob/Israel (=Judah). 21: Rejoice and be glad, an ironic statement. Daughter Edom, an epithet parallel to "Daughter Zion." Uz, a region in southern Jordan or northwestern Arabia, often connected with Edom (Gen 36.28; Jer 25.20; Job 1.1; 1 Chr 1.42). The cup, of God's wrath (see 3.15; Jer 25.15–29; 49.12; 51.7; Hab 2.15–16), which will make Edom drunk. Strip yourself bare, expose your nakedness and be shamed as Jerusalem was (1.8–10). 22: The most hopeful sentiment in the book (cf. Joel 4).

5.1–22: A prayer of the survivors in Judah in the aftermath of the destruction. A call to God to notice the abject state of his people in Judah and to restore them to their previous condition. The chapter resembles communal laments and also penitential prayers of the Second Temple period. 1: The plea to God to remember is framed by "Why have you forgotten" in v. 20. Remember means "to pay mind to" and "forget" means "to ignore." 2–3: The breakdown of the institution of the family. 2: Our inheritance, ancestral land was to be kept within the family. Here the reference may be to individual real estate or to the country as a whole. Strangers, those outside the family. Aliens, foreigners. 3: Fatherless, an orphan is a person without a father. Widows and orphans are defenseless and required special protection (e.g., Isa 1.23; Ps 68.5). 4–5: Harsh economic conditions; rampant inflation. Water and wood are basic necessities. 6: Egypt and Assyria, traditional superpowers and enemy-invaders of Israel, are often found in parallelism even when, as in this period, Assyria was long gone (Isa 52.4; Zech 10.10–11). 7: Iniquities also means "punishment." Earlier sinful generations did not suffer punishment like the current generation. Did the current generation also see itself as sinful and deserving of punishment, or do

⁸ Slaves rule over us;
 there is no one to deliver us from their hand.
⁹ We get our bread at the peril of our lives, because of the sword in the wilderness.
¹⁰ Our skin is black as an oven from the scorching heat of famine.
¹¹ Women are raped in Zion, virgins in the towns of Judah.
¹² Princes are hung up by their hands;
 no respect is shown to the elders.
¹³ Young men are compelled to grind, and boys stagger under loads of wood.
¹⁴ The old men have left the city gate,
 the young men their music.
¹⁵ The joy of our hearts has ceased;
 our dancing has been turned to mourning.
¹⁶ The crown has fallen from our head;

woe to us, for we have sinned!
¹⁷ Because of this our hearts are sick, because of these things our eyes have grown dim:
¹⁸ because of Mount Zion, which lies desolate;
 jackals prowl over it.
¹⁹ But you, O LORD, reign forever;
 your throne endures to all generations.
²⁰ Why have you forgotten us completely?
 Why have you forsaken us these many days?
²¹ Restore us to yourself, O LORD, that we may be restored;
 renew our days as of old—²² unless you have utterly rejected us, and are angry with us beyond measure.

they think they are paying unfairly for the sins of their ancestors? The verse is ambiguous. 8: Slaves rule over us, previously Judah was ruled by its own king but now it is governed by the lackeys of the Babylonian king (cf. 2 Kings 25.24). 9: Food is scarce. The sword in the wilderness, a difficult phrase which may mean that scavenging in the countryside was dangerous because of marauders. Alternatively, it is a metaphor for the dehydration and starvation of the inhabitants of Judah, who suffer famine that resembles the famine of the siege (v. 10 and cf. 4.8). 11–14: Social order has disintegrated; violence and indignity abound. Women are shamed sexually; leaders are shamed publicly; young and old are denied their proper calling and subjected to abusive labor. 12: Hung up, impalement of corpses was a form of public shaming (Deut 21.22; Josh 10.26–27; 1 Sam 31.10). By their hands, probably meaning by the hands of the enemy (see v. 8), since victims were not generally hung by their hands. A better interpretation may be that this is not a form of execution or corpse display, but a form of torture and humiliation of the living, like putting a person in the stocks. 13: To grind, a task normally done by women (Ex 11.5; Isa 47.2; Job 31.10) or slaves (Judg 16.21) and therefore demeaning if undertaken by a man. The Hebrew is “pull the millstone,” which may refer to a large milling operation in which a donkey would normally pull the heavy millstone, making this line parallel in meaning to the next one. Boys stagger under loads of wood, humans are made to do the work of animals, beasts of burden. 14: City gate, the location of business and legal transactions (Ruth 4.1; Job 29.7). 16: The crown, the emblem of kingship, the Davidic dynasty. Or perhaps the crenelated walls of the city. We have sinned, an admission of guilt (cf. 3.42 and 5.7n). 18: Jackals, or “foxes,” proverbial inhabitants of ruined cities (see 4.3; Ezek 13.4; Isa 34.11–17; Zeph 2.13–15). 19: A strong theological statement: Even though God’s earthly throne, the Temple, lies in ruins, God continues to reign forever. 21: A wish that the former relationship with God be reinstated. 22: The book ends in tragic despair, with the suggestion that God’s rejection of the people continues. Unless is difficult in the Hebrew; perhaps it is better translated “but instead,” or even more literally, “for if,” suggesting that the conclusion of the conditional clause has been withheld, thus perpetuating indefinitely the divine rejection with which the book ends.

EZEKIEL

NAME

The book is named for the prophet to whom it is attributed. His name, “Ezekiel,” means “God strengthens.” God’s strengthening turns out to be imperative for Ezekiel, whose rebellious audience is characterized by ingrained defiance and stubbornness (see 2.5n. [rebellious house]; 3.8–9n. [hard]).

LOCATION IN CANON

Ezekiel is the last of the three major prophets, the others being Isaiah and Jeremiah. Their books are arranged in presumed chronological order: the first part of the book of Isaiah focuses on the prophet Isaiah’s ministry in Jerusalem in the late eighth century BCE; the prophet Jeremiah was active in the late seventh and early sixth centuries; and Ezekiel’s prophecies follow those of Jeremiah, his older contemporary. (In many English Bibles, following the order of the Septuagint [LXX], Lamentations comes between Jeremiah and Ezekiel.) According to the Talmud and in some manuscripts there was another order for the major prophets, in which Ezekiel’s combined message of judgment and salvation appears between Jeremiah’s predominant tone of sorrow and Isaiah’s emphatic promises.

AUTHORSHIP

The only information we have about the prophet comes from the book itself. In this collection, God’s divine prerogative overshadows and submerges the prophetic personality. Since Ezekiel is a literary character within his own prophecies, his shocking and mystifying actions must often be interpreted in a highly symbolic and theological manner, not necessarily as a window into the prophet’s actual personality.

Some facts seem established. Ezekiel was a Judean exile in Babylonia, living in the deportee settlement of Tel-abib (see 3.15n.). His prophetic career stretched from 593 to at least 571 BCE. The prophet and his school—the followers who edited and preserved his prophecies—were members of a lineage of priests in Israel known as the Zadokites (see 1.1–3n.; 44.15–31n.).

At the time of Ezekiel’s exile, the Zadokites controlled the Israelite high priesthood and held power at the Jerusalem Temple. They took a specific priestly theology with them into exile, preserved elsewhere in the Hebrew Bible as a source of the Pentateuch known as the “Holiness School.” The priestly theology of the Holiness School thoroughly infuses the book of Ezekiel.

DATE OF COMPOSITION AND HISTORICAL CONTEXT

Ezekiel wrote his prophecies, and his followers edited, expanded, and preserved them, in the sixth century BCE in Babylonia, during the exile of the Judeans from their homeland. The exile thus forms the historical context of the book, and at several points, particularly in the allegory in 17:1–24, Ezekiel refers to the Babylonian subjugation of Judah.

The Babylonians under Nebuchadrezzar II (ruled 605–562 BCE) defeated the Egyptians in 605 at the battle of Carchemish. The Egyptians had allied with the great Assyrian empire, which the Babylonians destroyed between 614 and 609. Although these victories made Babylonia the leading political power in Syria-Palestine, including the territory of Judah, the Judeans, often acting in concert with other neighboring states, eventually rebelled. The Babylonians, in an escalating response to the continued efforts of the Judeans to throw them off, exiled the Judeans in two phases, spaced about a decade apart. They first besieged Jerusalem in 597 during the reign of King Jehoiakim, who died during the siege. When his successor, his son Jehoiachin, surrendered to the Babylonians, he, along with many of the Judean ruling class, was exiled to Babylon. The Babylonians installed a puppet king, Zedekiah; when he, too, attempted to rebel, they destroyed Jerusalem and the Temple in 586, and exiled much of the population, except the poorest, to Babylon.

Ezekiel was among the first group of exiles, taken to Babylonia in 597. Even so, he remained well informed about events in Judah, and his prophecies concern both the exiles and those who remained in Judah. He could address both communities as a single entity, since they were in frequent contact with each other, and both were passionately concerned about the fate of Jerusalem. Neither group accepted Ezekiel’s indictment of their guilt or believed his prophecies about Jerusalem's coming destruction. After the destruction took place, the prophet's words turned to themes of renewed hope, regeneration, and blessing.

LITERARY HISTORY

The prophet and his followers composed the book in writing and preserved it for the specific purpose of instructing readers at a later time. The written composition and the careful preservation of Ezekiel contrast with much of the other prophetic literature in the Bible, which was spoken directly to a contemporaneous audience. Many of the words of prophets, such as Isaiah, were written down only a considerable time after they had been spoken; therefore they could be, and often were, modified to adapt them to situations that arose in later times. In Ezekiel, however, there are clear indications of an originally written composition and of an early intention to preserve the text. For instance, the thoroughgoing chronological notations show that Ezekiel and his followers took great care to demonstrate the timeliness and veracity of Ezekiel's oracles, and thereby their authority as prophecy. This care for the written text and its accurate transmission, as well as for the preservation of authoritative traditions such as the Holiness School material (see Interpretation section), mark a breakthrough in the development of written scripture in Israel, and therefore help us to understand the historical processes that created the biblical canon over the centuries.

STRUCTURE AND CONTENTS

The book of Ezekiel is complex, but fortunately its organization and outline are agreeably simple. Chapters 1–24 are set before the fall of Jerusalem and are largely prophecies of doom against the city and against Judah. An extended body of material on Ezekiel's call to prophesy begins this section in chs 1–3. Chapters 25–32 are prophecies against foreign nations, forming a bridge between Ezekiel's initial message of doom and his ultimate message of hope. The hope comes in the prophecies of restoration, chs 33–48, dating from the time after Jerusalem's fall. Clearly the capture and destruction of Jerusalem in 586 was the critical moment in Ezekiel's prophetic career. The prophecies of restoration include an apocalyptic passage (chs 38–39) and an extended blueprint for the restored Temple and land (chs 40–48).

INTERPRETATION

Ezekiel and his editors were Jerusalem priests at the center of Judean society, and as such were proponents of "Zion theology," the traditions that emphasized God's choice of Zion (Jerusalem), the holy city, as his home, and the protection that resulted from this choice (see 2 Sam 7.4–17; Pss 46; 132) both for the city and for the Davidic dynasty whose capital it was. The exile of the Judean elite and the destruction of Jerusalem directly challenged this theology, since they called into question God's promises to Zion of eternal protection. Ezekiel answered these challenges with cosmic, eschatological, and apocalyptic visions of a rebuilt Zion that will fulfill God's promises despite the fall of the earthly Jerusalem (see 1.22–25n., 26–28n.; 37.28n.; 38.12n.; 43.7n.; 48.35n.). In these visions particularly, Ezekiel anticipated much that was yet to come in the biblical writings, including later developments of apocalypticism (see especially Dan 7–12 and, in the New Testament, the book of Revelation).

The specific language and laws of the priests and the traditions of the Temple heavily influenced Ezekiel as a Zadokite. A significant body of these traditions, the "Holiness School" (HS) can be found in the Pentateuch. (Multiple references to the Pentateuch in this introduction and in the annotations that precede the notation [HS] are included in this body of material, except where noted.) The Holiness School material extends beyond the confines of Lev 17–26 (known as the "Holiness Code" or "Holiness Collection"), and includes other parts of the Pentateuch often identified as belonging to the Priestly source (P). The relationship between God and Israel assumed by the Holiness School is that of a vassal-covenant (see Lev 26.9,15,25), a type of agreement in which guarantees on one side are specifically linked to responsibilities on the other, with significant sanctions if the responsibilities of vassalage are not met. For Ezekiel this covenant form proved invaluable in interpreting the exile, since it allowed for the possibility that defilement, injustice, and covenant infidelity on Israel's part could lead to punishments, including exile, without annulling God's eternal promises to Israel (Lev 26.42).

In his allegory of the unfaithful wife (ch 16), the prophet rehearses the failed history of the Israelites' vassal-covenant with God. As in a marriage, with all its mutual obligations, God "pledged myself to you and entered into a covenant with you" (16.8). Because Jerusalem proves an adulterous wife, however, God determines to divorce her and expose her to be stoned (16.40; cf. Lev 20.10 [HS]). Jerusalem is doomed, because the people have “despised the oath, breaking the covenant” (16.59; cf. 17.19).

For the Holiness School, God’s land is a delicately organized structure of holiness, subject to overthrow through the spread of uncleanness and bloodshed. It is like an uneasy stomach, ready to vomit out those who defile it (Lev 18.24–28). Ezekiel, in 36.16–19, insists that just such regurgitation has now happened. The land has fallen victim to defilement, and God’s people have lost possession of it just as the Holiness School warned they would. Defiling any part of the land, God’s holy territory, constitutes an assault of impurity on God’s shrine (Lev 15.31; 19.30; 26.2; Num 5.3; 19.13; Ezek 8.6; 9.9). If the pollution of the sanctuary becomes willful and chronic, it will eventually force out God’s glory (Num 35.34; Ezek 10.19; 11.22–23). Exposed to catastrophic judgment, the people become cut off (Ezek 37.11).

Despite Israel’s lack of obedience to the covenant, Ezekiel prophesies a renewed covenantal relationship after the exile (16.60,62). God will guarantee this new vassal-covenant’s success by transplanting new obedient hearts into the people (11.19–20; 16.60; 36.26–28; 37.23–27). Under God’s new plan, the people will “follow my statutes and keep my ordinances and obey them. Then they shall be my people, and I will be their God” (11.20; cf. 36.27; Lev 26.3 [HS]).

The Holiness School stresses the unique sacredness of the people and land of Israel, in the midst of which dwells the glory of the LORD. This sacredness includes not only ritual and worship but also morality and social justice. The tangible dwelling of God’s glory in the Temple at the center of Israel brings sanctity to all people and groups arrayed around it. It means the realization of Lev 20.26, where God proclaims: “You shall be holy to me; for I the LORD am holy, and I have separated you from the other peoples to be mine.”

Since Israel is so intimately associated with God in this theology, the people must constantly grow in personal and collective holiness through their interaction with the divine presence (Ezek 11.12; 20.12; 37.28; Lev 11.44–45; 19.2; 20.7,26 [HS]). God’s people, in Ezekiel’s ideal world, emulate the holiness of God that sojourns in their midst (37.27; 43.9; cf. Ex 25.8; 29.45–46; 40.34; Lev 26.11; Num 5.3; 35.34 [HS]). From the midst of Israel, God radiates the divine holiness out to the entire land and to every sector of society (37.28; cf. Ex 31.13; Lev 21.15,23; 22.32 [HS]).

The prophecies in the book of Ezekiel are among the most fascinating and puzzling writings in the Bible. The prophet expresses his thought through a variety of literary forms, including symbolic action reports, visions, allegories, denunciations, and legal arguments. He sometimes uses bizarre or extreme imagery and elaborates it to an almost excessive point. He has inspired fear, awe, and wonder in readers because he attempts not merely to name but also to embody God’s sovereignty, holiness, and mystery in words that come close to the limits of expression.

At first this variety, intricacy, and elaboration can seem confusing. It is easy to get lost in Ezekiel’s images and forget his larger concerns; it is easy as well to pick out striking passages and ignore the context of the book as a whole. But Ezekiel makes a coherent effort to deal with profound and difficult issues, and readers should honor this effort by attending to the full sweep of the book in all its profundity. Ezekiel’s book has been carefully put together and preserved for the instruction of later readers.

Ezekiel’s character as a literary text makes it a complex book to read and interpret. Much of the other prophetic material of the Bible, as oral literature, generally uses less elaborate forms; Ezekiel, however, is made up of intricate, deliberately composed literary creations. Although some scholars have viewed such literary ornamentation and intricacy as indicating confused layers of literary growth, more recently scholars have argued for literary integrity in the texts, even when the final form has resulted from a process of transmission and editing. One of the characteristic features of the book is the frequent repetition of key words or phrases, such as “mortal” (literally, “son of man”), “for the sake of my holy name,” and “so that you/they will know that I am the LORD.” Important aspects of the theology of Ezekiel are reinforced by the repetition of these and other formulas.

The style of Ezekiel does not always render reality by direct representation. Instead, it probes behind or beyond observable things and events, using metaphors and mythic poetry to portray the underlying structure of existence or the transcendent realities beneath both plain sensory observation and historical records. The visions in Ezekiel show both inner and outer realities, going beyond or abolishing normal sensory and temporal bounds.

Because of these literary qualities, reading Ezekiel requires a sophisticated approach, in order to avoid mistaking some of the descriptions for historical events, observable behaviors, or factual reports. For example, some interpretations of Ezekiel's behavior take it as evidence of a disoriented or abnormal personality. But the descriptions of these acts—such as muteness (3.22–27), holding prolonged, agonizing postures (4.4–8), and a failure to mourn (24.15–27)—are not evidence of psychological illness but are instead literary images that have rich theological import. The book portrays Ezekiel engaging in bizarre and disturbing behavior in order to provoke recollection of preceding scripture and intense theological reflection. A profound reorientation in the relationship of God and Israel is imminent, the authors believe, and they ask their audience to detect radical implications for life and faith in the metaphorical and parabolic character of their descriptions.

1 In the thirtieth year, in the fourth month, on the fifth day of the month, as I was among the exiles by the river Chebar, the heavens were opened, and I saw visions of God. ²On the fifth day of the month (it was the fifth year of the exile of King Jehoiachin), ³the word of the LORD came to the priest Ezekiel son of Buzi, in the land of the Chaldeans by the river Chebar; and the hand of the LORD was on him there.

⁴As I looked, a stormy wind came out of the north: a great cloud with brightness around it and fire flashing forth continually, and in the middle of the fire, something like gleaming amber. ⁵In the middle of it was something like four living creatures. This was their appearance: they were of human form. ⁶Each had four faces, and each of them had four wings. ⁷Their legs were straight, and the soles of their feet were like the sole of a calf's foot; and they sparkled like burnished bronze. ⁸Under their wings on their four sides they had human hands. And the four had their faces and their wings thus: ⁹their

1.1–3.27: The call of Ezekiel. 1.1–3: Superscription. Ezekiel was a Zadokite priest (v. 3; 4.5–6n.; 44.15–31n.), steeped in the theological traditions of Zion and of the Holiness School (see Introduction). Despite being a deportee, he never loses his priestly identity (cf. 43.12n.), although many priestly tasks would be impossible for him in exile away from Jerusalem. The thirtieth year, probably Ezekiel's own age. At the age for assuming his duties at the Jerusalem Temple (Num 4.3 [HS]), Ezekiel sought solitude outside his settlement (see 3.14–15) to reflect on what course his life might instead take in exile. Fifth day of the fourth month . . . fifth year of the exile would be July 31, 593 BCE. This would make Ezekiel fifty years old in 573 when he envisioned the ideal Temple at the end of his book (40.1n.), so his career fits the normal twenty-year span of a priest's active service (Num 4.3,23,30 [HS]). Chebar, a canal near Nippur, providing artificial irrigation from the Euphrates. It is mentioned also in fifth-century Babylonian documents. 3: The name Ezekiel means "God strengthens." Hand of the LORD (3.14,22; 8.1; 33.22; 37.1; 40.1), a metaphor highlighting how God is about to seize the prophet, exercising control over his person, so that he will undergo the same types of divine compulsions and ecstatic trances experienced by Israel's early prophets, such as Elijah and Elisha (1 Kings 18.46; 2 Kings 3.15). The prophetic narratives of Ezekiel, like the prophetic legends of the books of Kings, depict stupendous, wondrous events in a manner intended to enliven readers' imaginations. Chaldeans, Babylonians.

1.4–28a: The throne-chariot vision. Cf. the imagery in 1 Kings 22.19–22; Isa 6.1–9. The first two-thirds of Ezekiel's vision of God describes the creatures and wheels below the platform supporting God's throne. In Ezekiel's theology of God's transcendence, God is clearly far removed from earthly perception. A graduated, spatial system of layered holiness with wheels, heavenly creatures, and a crystalline expanse separates the prophet from the divine presence. 4: Stormy wind . . . cloud . . . and fire are phenomena often associated with the appearance of God (see Ps 18.8–12; Nah 1.3), as are "the sound of mighty waters" and "thunder" (v.24; see also 43.2; Ps 29.3). Brightness . . . fire flashing forth continually, as in the Holiness School, God's glory appears as a brilliant, fiery radiance (Ex 24.17; 40.38; Num 16.35, all HS). Something like, Ezekiel struggles to find words to express transcendent reality. 5–14: The living creatures are later identified as cherubim (10.15,20), guardians of God's throne (see Ex 25.18–22; 1 Kings 6.23–28), namely winged, human-headed lions or bulls exhibiting the qualities of mobility, intelligence, and strength. Uncharacteristically, the creatures Ezekiel sees have four faces wings touched one another; each of them moved straight ahead, without turning as they moved.¹⁰ As for the appearance of their faces: the four had the face of a human being, the face of a lion on the right side, the face of an ox on the left side, and the face of an eagle;¹¹ such were their faces. Their wings were spread out above; each creature had two wings, each of which touched the wing of another, while two covered their bodies.¹² Each moved straight ahead; wherever the spirit would go, they went, without turning as they went.¹³ In the middle of^a the living creatures there was something that looked like burning coals of fire, like torches moving to and fro among the living creatures; the fire was bright, and lightning issued from the fire.¹⁴ The living creatures darted to and fro, like a flash of lightning.

¹⁵ As I looked at the living creatures, I saw a wheel on the earth beside the living creatures, one for each of the four of them.^b ¹⁶ As for the appearance of the wheels and their construction: their appearance was like the gleaming of beryl; and the four had the same form, their construction being something like a wheel within a wheel.¹⁷ When they moved, they moved in any of the four directions without veering as they moved.¹⁸ Their rims were tall and awesome, for the rims of all four were full of eyes all around.¹⁹ When the living creatures moved, the wheels moved beside them; and when the living creatures rose from the earth, the wheels rose.²⁰ Whenever the spirit would go, they went, and the wheels rose along with them; for the spirit of the living creatures was in the wheels.

²¹ When they moved, the others moved; when they stopped, the others stopped; and when they rose from the earth, the wheels rose along with them; for the spirit of the living creatures was in the wheels.

²⁶ And above the dome over their heads there was something like a throne, in appearance like sapphire;^e and seated above the likeness of a throne was something that seemed like a human form.²⁷ Upward from what appeared like the loins I saw something like gleaming amber, something that looked like fire enclosed all around; and downward from what looked like the loins I saw something that looked like fire, and there was a splendor all around.²⁸ Like the bow in a cloud on a rainy day, such was the appearance of

(v. 10). 13: Torches, cf. Gen 15.17. 15–21: The four . . . wheels (cf. the four faces of the creatures) to God's throne are a crucial element in Ezekiel's reconciling his central priestly belief that God had chosen and dwelled in Zion with the earthly Zion's coming destruction by the Babylonians (see Introduction). Its wheels mean that the real, cosmic Zion-throne has omnidirectional mobility and is not tied down to earthly Jerusalem. See also 1.26–28n. 18: Full of eyes, symbolic of omniscience (10.12; Zech 4.2,5,10). 22–25: A dome, referring to the cosmic firmament of Gen 1.6–8, which separates earth and heaven. Jerusalem and its Temple mount symbolize the cosmic mountain where heaven and earth intersect at the dome. 26–28: Thus the LORD was still really enthroned atop the cosmos, even though Jerusalem, the symbol of God's cosmic dwelling (Pss 26.8; 63.2; 102.16), was to be destroyed by the Babylonians. 26: Seemed like a human form, Ezekiel provides a rather humanlike image of God in keeping with the imagery of the Holiness School; the Mesopotamian god Ashur can also be depicted as a human figure with a glowing upper torso and a flaming lower body. Other biblical traditions, such as those in Isa 40–66 and in the Priestly Torah, would be aghast that Ezekiel would dare associate God with any sort of likeness or appearance (see Isa 40.18,25; 46.5). 28: Appearance of the likeness, the qualified language again emphasizes God's transcendence and cosmic power (see 1.4n.). God's self is three levels removed from Ezekiel's the splendor all around. This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the LORD.

When I saw it, I fell on my face, and I heard the voice of someone speaking.

2 He said to me: O mortal,^a stand up on your feet, and I will speak with you. ² And when he spoke to me, a spirit entered into me and set me on my feet; and I heard him speaking to me. ³ He said to me, Mortal, I am sending you to the people of Israel, to a nation^b of rebels who have rebelled against me; they and their ancestors have transgressed against me to this very day. ⁴ The descendants are impudent and stubborn. I am sending you to them, and you shall say to them, “Thus says the Lord God.” ⁵ Whether they hear or refuse to hear (for they are a rebellious house), they shall know that there has been a prophet among them. ⁶ And you, O mortal, do not be afraid of them, and do not be afraid of their words, though briars and thorns surround you and you live among scorpions; do not be afraid of their words, and do not be dismayed at their looks, for they are a rebellious house. ⁷ You shall speak my words to them, whether they hear or refuse to hear; for they are a rebellious house.

⁸ But you, mortal, hear what I say to you; do not be rebellious like that rebellious house; open your mouth and eat what I give you. ⁹ I looked, and a hand was stretched out to me, and a written scroll was in it. ¹⁰ He spread it before me; it had writing on the front and on the back, and written on it were words of lamentation and mourning and woe.

3 He said to me, O mortal, eat what is offered to you; eat this scroll, and go, speak to the house of Israel. ² So I opened my mouth, and he gave me the scroll to eat. ³ He said to me, Mortal, eat this scroll that I give you and fill your stomach with it. Then I ate it; and in my mouth it was as sweet as honey.

⁴ He said to me: Mortal, go to the house of Israel and speak my very words to them. ⁵ For you are not sent to a people of obscure speech and difficult language, but to the house of Israel—⁶ not to many peoples of obscure speech and difficult language, whose words you cannot understand. Surely, if I sent you to them, they would listen to you. ⁷ But the house of Israel will not listen to you, for they are not willing to listen to me; because all the house of Israel have a hard forehead and a stubborn heart. ⁸ See, I have made your face hard against their faces, and description of God. The glory of the LORD is not God's self, but divine holiness made present, tangible, and accessible; see further 10.1–22n. It is Israel's divinely appointed role to receive this holiness, be transformed by it, and then reflect it back to God.

1.28b–3.27: Ezekiel's commissioning. The length of this section helps buttress Ezekiel's authority in the face of opposition and perhaps reflects his own resistance to God's commissioning. 1.28b–2.8a: Ezekiel is commissioned in a series of addresses. 1:28b: Fell on my face, a reaction of awe, and a gesture of submission to authority (also 3.23; 43.3). 2.1: Mortal (Heb “ben adam,” see textual note a), a member of the category of “humanity.” Ezekiel emphasizes that God and the divine realm tower above this category; the idiom occurs ninety-three times in the book. Yet in Ezekiel's Holiness School theology God brings the holy realm of the creator and the profane realm of creatures into permanent contact. 2: Spirit (see 3.12,14,24), a vigorous empowerment that Ezekiel experiences at receiving God's word. 3: Transgressed, violated the terms of the covenant with God of the Holiness School (Lev 26.9,15,25). In this type of covenant, there are punishments for disobedience: Israel can forfeit its status as God's people on God's land. 5: Rebellious house, a phrase unique to Ezekiel (2.5,6,8; 3.9,26,27; 12.2,3,9,25; 17.12; 24.3) that expresses one of his major themes: Judah's defiance and contempt for God's holiness (ch 20). The theme has roots in the Holiness School, which emphasizes the people's ingrained tendency toward stubbornness and irreverence (cf. Num 17.10). 6: Briars and thorns . . . scorpions, though Ezekiel is a priestly official, his message will be met with hostility.

2.8b–3.3: In keeping with the contemporary emergence of the concept of God's word as sacred text, Ezekiel is told to eat a scroll (cf. Jer 1.9; Zech 5.1–4). The scroll depicts the coming, fixed judgment of Judah; see 3.22–27n. 3.3: Jeremiah's metaphor (Jer 15.16) becomes concrete in Ezekiel. God's word is sweet (Ps 19.10), even when its contents involve pain. 3.4–9: Preparation for resistance. 5–6: Obscure speech, like the language of Judah's enemies, perceived as harsh and unintelligible (Isa 33.19; Jer 5.15). 8–9: Hard, or “strong”; compare the meaning your forehead hard against their foreheads.⁹ Like the hardest stone, harder than flint, I have made your forehead; do not fear them or be dismayed at their looks, for they are a rebellious house.¹⁰ He said to me: Mortal, all my words that I shall speak to you receive in your heart and hear with your ears;¹¹ then go to the exiles, to your people, and speak to them. Say to them, “Thus says the Lord God”; whether they hear or refuse to hear.

¹²Then the spirit lifted me up, and as the glory of the LORD rose^a from its place, I heard behind me the sound of loud rumbling;¹³ it was the sound of the wings of the living creatures brushing against one another, and the sound of the wheels beside them, that sounded like a loud rumbling.¹⁴ The spirit lifted me up and bore me away; I went in bitterness in the heat of my spirit, the hand of the LORD being strong upon me.¹⁵ I came to the exiles at Tel-abib, who lived by the river Chebar.^b And I sat there among them, stunned, for seven days.

¹⁶At the end of seven days, the word of the LORD came to me:¹⁷ Mortal, I have made you a sentinel for the house of Israel; whenever you hear a word from my mouth, you shall give them warning from me.¹⁸ If I say to the wicked, “You shall surely die,” and you give them no warning, or speak to warn the wicked from their wicked way, in order to save their life, those wicked persons shall die for their iniquity; but their blood I will require at your hand.¹⁹ But if you warn the wicked, and they do not turn from their wickedness, or from their wicked way, they shall die for their iniquity; but you will have saved your life.²⁰ Again, if the righteous turn from their righteousness and commit iniquity, and I lay a stumbling block before them, they shall die; because you have not warned them, they shall die for their sin, and their righteous deeds that they have done shall not be remembered; but their blood I will require at your hand.²¹ If, however, you warn the righteous not to sin, and they do not sin, they shall surely live, because they took warning; and you will have saved your life.

²²Then the hand of the LORD was upon me there; and he said to me, Rise up, go out into the valley, and there I will speak with you.²³ So I rose up and went out into the valley; and the glory of the LORD stood there, like the glory that I had seen by the river Chebar; and I fell on my face.²⁴ The spirit entered into me, and set me on my feet; and he spoke with me and said to me: Go, shut yourself inside your house.²⁵ As for you, mortal, cords shall be placed on you, and you shall be bound with of Ezekiel's name, “God strengthens” (1.3n.). 10–11: A final charge.

3.12–15: Ezekiel returns to his people. 12: Glory of the LORD, see 10.1–22n. 14: Ezekiel feels either God's anger at the people or his own distress over his difficult task. The hand of the LORD, see 1.3n. 15: Tel-abib, (“mound of the deluge”), not modern Tel Aviv but a settlement of exiles near Nippur, not far from the Chebar canal. Chebar, 1.1–3n.

3.16–21: The sentinel. Prophets as sentries (Jer 6.17; Hab 2.1) provide early warnings of possible dangers (cf. 2 Kings 9.17). Ezekiel is assured that his personal responsibility is limited to delivering such warnings; the members of his audience are accountable for their responses (18.1–32; see also 33.1–9). 16: The word of the LORD came to me, a form of expression occurring about fifty times in Ezekiel, which marks the beginnings of nearly all his main units of prophetic speech.

3.22–27: Ezekiel's speechlessness. The hand of the LORD was upon me, a phrase that in Ezekiel frequently introduces a vision; cf. 1.3n. The valley, a specific site near Tel-abib (see 37.1n.). It was probably a low-lying area, perhaps with a spring. Ezekiel's speechless state is best seen as one of the characteristic literary metaphors of the book, with a complex relationship to observable reality (Ezekiel is not literally speechless after this point; cf. 11.25). The metaphor's meaning is bound up with the growing significance of written, authoritative scripture in Ezekiel's time. In view of this development, Ezekiel must fall speechless, and let the scroll that he has swallowed (2.8b–3.3n.) have its fulfillment. The judgments of scripture (such as those of the book of Habakkuk) are now inevitable. The metaphor of speechlessness helps structure the book of Ezekiel. The judgments of the swallowed scroll play themselves out in the first half of Ezekiel, after which he regains his speech (24.25–27; 33.21–22).

them, so that you cannot go out among the people;²⁶ and I will make your tongue cling to the roof of your mouth, so that you shall be speechless and unable to reprove them; for they are a rebellious house.²⁷ But when I speak with you, I will open your mouth, and you shall say to them, “Thus says the Lord God”; let those who will hear, hear; and let those who refuse to hear, refuse; for they are a rebellious house.

4 And you, O mortal, take a brick and set it before you. On it portray a city, Jerusalem;² and put siegeworks against it, and build a siege wall against it, and cast up a ramp against it; set camps also against it, and plant battering rams against it all around.³ Then take an iron plate and place it as an iron wall between you and the city; set your face toward it, and let it be in a state of siege, and press the siege against it. This is a sign for the house of Israel.

⁴ Then lie on your left side, and place the punishment of the house of Israel upon it; you shall bear their punishment for the number of the days that you lie there.⁵ For I assign to you a number of days, three hundred ninety days, equal to the number of the years of their punishment; and so you shall bear the punishment of the house of Israel.

⁶ When you have completed these, you shall lie down a second time, but on your right side, and bear the punishment of the house of Judah; forty days I assign you, one day for each year.⁷ You shall set your face toward the siege of Jerusalem, and with your arm bared you shall prophesy against it.⁸ See, I am putting cords on you so that you cannot turn from one side to the other until you have completed the days of your siege.

⁹ And you, take wheat and barley, beans and lentils, millet and spelt; put them into one vessel, and make bread for yourself. During the number of days that you lie on your side, three hundred ninety days, you shall eat it.¹⁰ The food that you eat shall be twenty shekels a day by weight; at fixed times you shall eat it.¹¹ And you shall drink water by measure, one-sixth of a hin; at fixed times you shall drink.¹² You shall eat it as a barley-cake, baking it in their sight on human dung.¹³ The LORD said, “Thus shall the people of Israel eat their bread, unclean, among the nations to which I will drive them.”¹⁴ Then I said, “Ah Lord God! I have never defiled

4.1–24,27: Prophecies of doom against Judah and Jerusalem. 4.1–5.17: Actions symbolizing Jerusalem’s coming siege. Like Ezekiel’s speechlessness, these actions appear to be literary metaphors rather than observable performances (e.g., see 4.4–8n.). In Ezekiel, reality is more complex than the merely observable. 4.1–3: A brick (common in Babylonia) inscribed, before baking, with a drawing of Jerusalem. Archaeologists have unearthed several ancient clay bricks like this one, inscribed with city plans. An iron plate, a baking griddle, symbolizing the barrier between the city and God. 4–8: More than simple, nonverbal dramatization, Ezekiel’s symbolic actions contain complex layers of meaning. At one level the postures commanded of Ezekiel illustrate the coming siege of Jerusalem. At a deeper level, they also depict both God’s pre-siege punishments of Israel in the land over the previous 390 years (v. 5; see Lev 26.14–32 [HS]) and God’s post-siege punishment of Judah in exile over the course of forty years (v. 6; cf. Num 14.34 [HS]). 4–5: Punishment, or “iniquity.” Bearing the weight of Israel’s iniquity was a normal function of Israelite priests such as Ezekiel (Num 18.1 [HS]). 5–6: The figure of 390 years may be Ezekiel’s retrospective tabulation of the years that Israel polluted the Temple with its iniquity, from the time of its dedication by Solomon until its imminent destruction. The second figure of forty years (roughly one generation) represents Judah’s coming period of exile outside of the promised land. The figure echoes the period of wilderness wanderings in the book of Numbers (see Num 14.34 [HS]). As with the wanderings of Numbers, the exile in Babylonia may set the stage for a new beginning of God with Israel. 9–17: Coarse bread and rationing symbolize the rigors of the coming siege of Jerusalem (cf. Jer 19.9; Lam 4.10). 9: The necessity of mixing grains in odd combinations indicates scarcity of foodstuffs. 10–11: Twenty shekels, approximately 8 oz. (228 gr). One-sixth of a hin, approximately .67 qt. (64 liters). On this extremely meager diet, Jerusalem’s inhabitants would totter on the brink of starvation (vv. 16–17). 12–13: Siege symbolism again blurs into exile symbolism here. Human dung, considered unclean (Deut 23.12–14), represents the defiling effects of exile to an unclean land. (Lands outside Israel were deemed unclean, since God’s holy presence did not reside there to purify and sanctify the territory; cf. Josh 22.19; Hos 9.3; Amos 7.17. Zech 3.3–5 shows how those in the tradition of Ezekiel came to terms with the defilement of the exile after the return.) Ezekiel was allowed to substitute dried “cow’s myself; from my youth up until now I have never eaten what died of itself or was torn by animals, nor has carrion flesh come into my mouth.”¹⁵ Then he said to me, “See, I will let you have cow’s dung instead of human dung, on which you may prepare your bread.”

¹⁶ Then he said to me, Mortal, I am going to break the staff of bread in Jerusalem; they shall eat bread by weight and with fearfulness; and they shall drink water by measure and in dismay. ¹⁷ Lacking bread and water, they will look at one another in dismay, and waste away under their punishment.

5 And you, O mortal, take a sharp sword; use it as a barber’s razor and run it over your head and your beard; then take balances for weighing, and divide the hair. ² One third of the hair you shall burn in the fire inside the city, when the days of the siege are completed; one third you shall take and strike with the sword all around the city;³ and one third you shall scatter to the wind, and I will unsheathe the sword after them. ³ Then you shall take from these a small number, and bind them in the skirts of your robe. ⁴ From these, again, you shall take some, throw them into the fire and burn them up; from there a fire will come out against all the house of Israel.

have not followed my statutes or kept my ordinances, but have acted according to the ordinances of the nations that are all around you;⁸ therefore thus says the Lord God: I, I myself, am coming against you; I will execute judgments among you in the sight of the nations. ⁹ And because of all your abominations, I will do to you what I have never yet done, and the like of which I will never do again. ¹⁰ Surely, parents shall eat their children in your midst, and children shall eat their parents; I will execute judgments on you, and any of you who survive I will scatter to every wind. ¹¹ Therefore, as I live, says the Lord God, surely, because you have defiled my sanctuary with all your detestable things and with all your abominations—therefore I will cut you down;^b my eye will not spare, and I will have no pity. ¹² One third of you shall die of pestilence or be consumed by famine among you; one third shall fall by the sword around you; and one third I will scatter to every wind and will unsheathe the sword after them.

¹³ My anger shall spend itself, and I will vent my fury on them and satisfy myself; and they shall know that I, the LORD, have spoken in my jealousy, when I spend my fury on them. ¹⁴ Moreover I will make you a desolation and an object of mocking among the nations around you, in the sight of all that pass by. ¹⁵ You shall be^c a mockery and a taunt, a warning and a horror, to the nations around you, when I execute judgments on you in anger and fury, and with furious punishments—I, the LORD, have spoken—¹⁶ when I dung” (v. 15), a common fuel in the Near East. 14: Cf. Lev 17:10–16 (HS). 16: In Ezekiel’s antecedent text, Lev 26:26 (HS), God’s breaking the staff of bread (“food supply”) is a penalty for violating the Holiness School covenant. 5.1–17: The razor symbolizes military defeat (Isa 7:20). The defeated people are then destroyed in three different ways. Even the surviving remnant undergoes further judgment. 3: Objects could be carried in the folds of one’s garments (Hag 2:12). 5: Center of the nations, Jerusalem was viewed as the mythic center of the earth (see 38:12, “center [lit., navel] of the earth”; 43:13–17n.). 8: Formulaic language for challenging someone to a duel. God is resolved to come against Jerusalem as an enemy. Sight of the nations, Ezekiel is concerned throughout the book that the nations, as well as Israel, understand God’s holiness. Israel should have been an object lesson in holiness to other nations. 10: Cannibalism was a curse for breaking the Holiness School covenant (Lev 26:29). 11: If textual note b is the correct reading, this verse anticipates the departure of the LORD’s glory from the Temple described in 10:1–22 and 11:22–25. 12: Pestilence . . . famine, cf. the Holiness School covenant sanctions in Lev loose against you^a my deadly arrows of famine, arrows for destruction, which I will let loose to destroy you, and when I bring more and more famine upon you, and break your staff of bread. ¹⁷I will send famine and wild animals against you, and they will rob you of your children; pestilence and bloodshed shall pass through you; and I will bring the sword upon you. I, the LORD, have spoken.

6 The word of the LORD came to me:

²O mortal, set your face toward the mountains of Israel, and prophesy against them, ³and say, You mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord God! Thus says the Lord God to the mountains and the hills, to the ravines and the valleys: I, I myself will bring a sword upon you, and I will destroy your high places. ⁴Your altars shall become desolate, and your incense stands shall be broken; and I will throw down your slain in front of your idols. ⁵I will lay the corpses of the people of Israel in front of their idols; and I will scatter your bones around your altars. ⁶Wherever you live, your towns shall be waste and your high places ruined, so that your altars will be waste and ruined,^b your idols broken and destroyed, your incense stands cut down, and your works wiped out. ⁷The slain shall fall in your midst; then you shall know that I am the LORD.

⁸But I will spare some. Some of you shall escape the sword among the nations and be scattered through the countries. ⁹Those of you who escape shall remember me among the nations where they are carried captive, how I was crushed by their wanton heart that turned away from me, and their wanton eyes that turned after their idols. Then they will be loathsome in their own sight for the evils that they have committed, for all their abominations. ¹⁰And they shall know that I am the LORD; I did not threaten in vain to bring this disaster upon them.

¹¹Thus says the Lord God: Clap your hands and stamp your foot, and say, Alas for all the vile abominations of the house of Israel! For they shall fall by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence. ¹²Those far off shall die of pestilence; those nearby shall fall by the sword; and any who are left and are spared shall die of famine. Thus I will spend my fury upon them. ¹³And you shall know that I am the LORD, when their slain lie among their idols around their altars, on every high hill, on all the mountain tops, under every green tree, and under every leafy oak, wherever they offered pleasing odor to all their idols. ¹⁴I will stretch out my hand against them, and make the land

26.25–26. 13: They shall know . . ., 6.7n. 16: Staff of bread, 4.16n. 17: 14.21; Lev 26.22 (HS).

6.1–14: Two prophecies against Israel's idolatry. 1–10: The mountains of Israel, the central highland ridge of the promised land representing, in Ezekiel, the entire homeland territory (19.9; 33.38; 34.14; 35.12; 37.22; 38.8). Mountains symbolized the intersection of earth and heaven, so Israel's typography points to its unique status as God's holy land and the world's center (38.12; cf. Lev 26.11–12; Zech 2.12). Degrading this holy status, Israel's mountains are here associated with illegitimate worship (v. 9; cf. 18.6). 2: Set your face toward, an idiom of Ezekiel (cf. 13.17; 20.46; 21.2; 25.2; 28.21; 29.2; 35.2; 38.2) calling for a hostile orientation based on God's angry disposition. 3: High places were ritual installations or shrines. Their destruction was a curse for breaking the Holiness School covenant (Lev 26.30). 4: Idols translates Ezekiel's characteristic term "gillulim," found in Lev 26.30 and thirty-nine times in Ezekiel, compared with eight times elsewhere in the Bible. The term is contemptuous, probably equating idols with sheep droppings. The people are devoted to vile futility. 6: Towns shall be waste, Lev 26.31 (HS). 7: You shall know . . ., one of over sixty similar closing declarations in Ezekiel (see vv. 10,13–14). Ezekiel shares an emphasis on recognition of the LORD with the Holiness School (e.g., Ex 6.7; 7.5; 10.2; 16.12; 31.13). He prophesies that God's judging and saving acts will prove God's sovereign identity and result in human recognition of God. The central purpose of God's work on earth is to evoke this recognition, which in the understanding of Ezekiel and the Holiness School means being drawn into direct experience of God's life. God is focused on making Israel holy, and nothing is more important than for Israel to align itself with this intention (see Ex 10.2; 16.32; Lev 23.43 [HS]). In general, the book of Ezekiel de-emphasizes the prophet's human experience, focusing instead on God's desire to reveal the mystery and "otherness" of God's own self. 9: The people will finally despair of their state of alienation from God. 11–14: A second prophecy of judgment, beginning with an expressive action (cf. 21.14n.) communicating divine distress and anger over the people's abominations. 11:

Sword . . . famine . . . pestilence, Lev 26.25–26 (HS). 14: Stretch out my hand, a repeated expression of Ezekiel denoting hard, crushing judgment (14.9,13; 16.27; 25.7; 35.3). From the wilderness of southern Judah to Riblah in central Syria was the maximum extent of Israelite territory.

7.1–27: Prophecies on the approaching end. 1–4: The theme, the end, is reminiscent of Am 8.2. 3: Cf. Ps 78.49. 5–9: The day (v. 7) of the end is “the day of the LORD,” the time of God’s appearance to defeat evil and establish justice (Am 5.18–20; Isa 2.11,12–17; Joel 1.15). The experience will be nothing short of cataclysmic, leaving nothing unchanged (Zeph 1.14–18). 9: See v. 4. 10–27: The end spells dissolution of normal life. 10: The rod, the term both connotes “discipline” and evokes a similar Hebrew word meaning “injustice.” 12: The joys and sorrows of daily life and commerce (Prov 20.14) are rendered moot by the approach of Jerusalem’s end. 14: The trumpet calls to the defense, but the people are too enfeebled to respond. 18: Wearing coarse sackcloth and shaving the head (baldness) were both intentional displays of mourning (cf. 27.31; Am 8.10; Isa 22.12). The disaster will also provoke involuntary reactions of horror and shame. 19: Zeph 1.18. 20: Beautiful ornament, perhaps the gold and silver of the Temple treasury, used to fashion idolatrous images (16.17; 2 Kings 21.7). 22: My treasured place, the land of Israel, and particularly Jerusalem, containing God's Temple. 23a: Perhaps a call to be chained together in a long train for exile (cf. Nah 3.10; Jer 40.1), but see textual note c. 23b: Social ethics, as well as idolatry, concern Ezekiel and the Holiness School (12.19; 28.16; cf. Gen 6.11). 24: Human arrogance has no place in the Zion theology used by Ezekiel (see Introduction), which stresses God's sovereignty (Lev 26.19 [HS]). 25–27: The confusion and brutality of the invasion and siege.

8.1–11.25: The Temple visions. 8.1–18: The vision of idolatry (September 17, 592 BCE). In his vision of wickedness in Jerusalem's Temple, Ezekiel saw beyond the observable offenses of his time into the ingrained, polluted essence of the shrine. 1: The elders in exile with the prophet (also his audience in 14.1; 20.1) were the traditional leaders, from premonarchic times, of Israel's family lines and kin groups. During the exile, they stepped in to fill the leadership vacuum among the deportees. The hand of the Lord God (see 1.3n.) grips Ezekiel suddenly, yanking him into a vision of a scene far removed, both spatially and temporally, from his setting in Babylonia. 2: The figure is described in terms similar to those in 1.26–27. 3: By a lock of my head, cf. Bel 36. The gateway to the Temple's inner court is also termed the altar gate (v. 5), as it led from the outer court to the great altar of sacrifice. The image of jealousy is probably the carved image of the goddess Asherah that King Manasseh set up in the Temple (2 Kings 21.7). Though removed by Ezekiel's time (2 Kings 23.6), it stood out starkly in the prophto the seat of the image of jealousy, which provokes to jealousy.⁴ And the glory of the God of Israel was there, like the vision that I had seen in the valley.

⁵ Then God^a said to me, “O mortal, lift up your eyes now in the direction of the north.” So I lifted up my eyes toward the north, and there, north of the altar gate, in the entrance, was this image of jealousy.⁶ He said to me, “Mortal, do you see what they are doing, the great abominations that the house of Israel are committing here, to drive me far from my sanctuary? Yet you will see still greater abominations.”

⁷ And he brought me to the entrance of the court; I looked, and there was a hole in the wall.⁸ Then he said to me, “Mortal, dig through the wall”; and when I dug through the wall, there was an entrance.⁹ He said to me, “Go in, and see the vile abominations that they are committing here.”¹⁰ So I went in and looked; there, portrayed on the wall all around, were all kinds of creeping things, and loathsome animals, and all the idols of the house of Israel.¹¹ Before them stood seventy of the elders of the house of Israel, with Jaazaniah son of Shaphan standing among them. Each had his censer in his hand, and the fragrant cloud of incense was ascending.¹² Then he said to me, “Mortal, have you seen what the elders of the house of Israel are doing in the dark, each in his room of images?

For they say, “The LORD does not see us, the LORD has forsaken the land.”¹³ He said also to me, “You will see still greater abominations that they are committing.”

¹⁴ Then he brought me to the entrance of the north gate of the house of the LORD; women were sitting there weeping for Tammuz.¹⁵ Then he said to me, “Have you seen this, O mortal? You will see still greater abominations than these.”

¹⁶ And he brought me into the inner court of the house of the LORD; there, at the entrance of the temple of the LORD, between the porch and the altar, were about twenty-five men, with their backs to the temple of the LORD, and their faces toward the east, prostrating themselves to the sun toward the east.¹⁷ Then he said to me, “Have you seen this, O mortal? Is it not bad enough that the house of Judah commits the abominations done here? Must they fill the land with violence, and provoke my anger still further? See, they are putting the branch to their nose!¹⁸ Therefore I will act in wrath; my eye will not spare, nor will I have pity; and though they cry in my hearing with a loud voice, I will not listen to them.”

9 Then he cried in my hearing with a loud voice, saying, “Draw near, you executioners of the city, each with his destroying weapon in his hand.”² And six men came from et’s transhistorical perception. 4: See 3.22–23. On the glory of the God of Israel, see 10.1–22n. 7–13: The Temple stands infested by an ongoing rebellion against God’s hierarchies of holiness that began in the wilderness period. The elders of Judah with censers inside the secret gatehouse chamber perform the very same improper act as that described in Num 16.2,17,35 (HS). Ezekiel views the scriptural story in Num 16 as prototypical, and it informs his assessment of the preexilic Temple’s wickedness (see also 44.6–14n.). 10: Cf. 23.14; Deut 4.17–18. 11: The elders here are in the prophet’s vision of Jerusalem, and are not the same as those in v. 1. The mention of Jaazaniah among the encroachers upon the holy precincts is particularly disturbing, given his family’s record of faithfulness. His father Shaphan was active in King Josiah’s reform movement (2 Kings 22), and his brother Ahikam and nephew Gedaliah assisted and protected Jeremiah (Jer 26.24; 39.14). 12: The elders’ idea that the LORD has forsaken the land becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy (see 11.22–23). 14–15: Tammuz, a Mesopotamian god; the weeping was for his descent into the underworld. Transtemporal perception is again suggested here, since Ezekiel sees the weeping rite in the sixth month (v. 1) and not in the fourth month (June–July), when it was normally practiced. 16–18: The climactic abomination seen by Ezekiel was sun worship. Its practice in Israel is evidenced by texts such as 2 Kings 23.5,11 and by an Israelite ritual stand found at Taanach that depicts the sun as a deity. 17: The branch gesture may be an obscene expression. The Hebrew text originally referred to God’s nose, but the scribes toned down the offensive image. 18: The judgment is irrevocable (see 14.12–23n.).

9.1–11: The punishment of the guilty. 1–2: From the upper gate (Jer 20.2) come the executioners (divine functionaries sent to punish) and a man clothed in linen, who functions as the LORD’s scribe, as did the Mesopotamian god Nabu among the seven Babylonian planetary deities. Linen, a bleached fabric signifying purity, was the direction of the upper gate, which faces north, each with his weapon for slaughter in his hand; among them was a man clothed in linen, with a writing case at his side. They went in and stood beside the bronze altar.

³ Now the glory of the God of Israel had gone up from the cherub on which it rested to the threshold of the house. The LORD called to the man clothed in linen, who had the writing case at his side; ⁴ and said to him, “Go through the city, through Jerusalem, and put a mark on the foreheads of those who sigh and groan over all the abominations that are committed in it.” ⁵ To the others he said in my hearing, “Pass through the city after him, and kill; your eye shall not spare, and you shall show no pity. ⁶ Cut down old men, young men and young women, little children and women, but touch no one who has the mark. And begin at my sanctuary.” So they began with the elders who were in front of the house. ⁷ Then he said to them, “Defile the house, and fill the courts with the slain. Go!” So they went out and killed in the city. ⁸ While they were killing, and I was left alone, I fell prostrate on my face and cried out, “Ah Lord God! will you destroy all who remain of Israel as you pour out your wrath upon Jerusalem?” ⁹ He said to me, “The guilt of the house of Israel and Judah is exceedingly great; the land is full of bloodshed and the city full of perversity; for they say, ‘The LORD has forsaken the land, and the LORD does not see.’” ¹⁰ As for me, my eye will not spare, nor will I have pity, but I will bring down their deeds upon their heads.”

¹¹ Then the man clothed in linen, with the writing case at his side, brought back word, saying, “I have done as you commanded me.”

10 Then I looked, and above the dome that was over the heads of the cherubim there appeared above them something like a sapphire,^a in form resembling a throne. ² He said to the man clothed in linen, “Go within the wheelwork underneath the cherubim; fill your hands with burning coals from among the cherubim, and scatter them over the city.” He went in as I looked on. ³ Now the cherubim were standing on the south side of the house when the man went in; and a cloud filled the inner court. ⁴ Then the glory of the LORD rose up from the cherub to the threshold of the house; the house was filled with the cloud, and the court was full of the brightness of the glory of the LORD. ⁵ The sound of the wings of the cherubim was heard as far as the outer court, like the voice of God Almighty^b when he speaks.

worn by divine messengers (Dan 10.5) and also by priests (44.17; Lev 6.10 [HS]). 3: On the departure of the glory, see 10.1–22n. The cherub, in the singular (also 10.4), is used of the inanimate pair of statues in the Temple that formed part of the divine throne. The actual living entities are referred to with the Heb plural, “cherubim.” 4: The mark was the Heb letter “taw,” made like an X. 6: The elders are those of 8.16. 7: Ezekiel’s Holiness School traditions stressed that corpses defile (Lev 21.1; Num 5.2–3; 9.6; 19.11,13 [HS]). 8: All who remain, those remaining in Palestine after the initial deportation of 597 BCE.

10.1–22 and 11.22–25: The departure of the LORD’s glory from the Temple is repeatedly described in each of three versions of Jerusalem’s abandonment (9.3; 10.4; 11.22). The glory of the LORD is the revealed, objective presence of the majesty of God, manifesting God’s holiness in fiery radiance (1.28n.; Lev 9.23; Num 20.6). The pattern of movement of the glory of the LORD helps structure the book of Ezekiel. The glory has been present in Jerusalem, even when the city’s inhabitants felt forsaken by it (8.4,12b), but because of their wickedness it departs, first to the doorway of the Temple (also 9.3), and then to the east gate of the Temple’s outer court (10.18–19). It then leaves the desecrated sanctuary. The departure continues in 11.22–25, where the glory heads east over the Mount of Olives toward Babylon. It was in Babylonia that Ezekiel first saw the glory of the LORD (1.28; 3.22–23; cf. 8.4; 11.16). Eventually, the prophet envisions it returning to the restored Temple (43.2–5; 44.4). 1: Cherubim, see 1.5–14n. 2: Man clothed in linen, see 9.1–2n. Burning coals, cf. Isa 31.9; Ps 18.10–13. 3–4: The throne-chariot comes to collect the glory of the LORD from the cherub statues (see 9.3n.). The cloud filling the cherubim, took some of it and put it into the hands of the man clothed in linen, who took it and went out. ⁸The cherubim appeared to have the form of a human hand under their wings.

⁹I looked, and there were four wheels beside the cherubim, one beside each cherub; and the appearance of the wheels was like gleaming beryl. ¹⁰And as for their appearance, the four looked alike, something like a wheel within a wheel. ¹¹When they moved, they moved in any of the four directions without veering as they moved; but in whatever direction the front wheel faced, the others followed without veering as they moved. ¹²Their entire body, their rims, their spokes, their wings, and the wheels—the wheels of the four of them—were full of eyes all around. ¹³As for the wheels, they were called in my hearing “the wheelwork.” ¹⁴Each one had four faces: the first face was that of the cherub, the second face was that of a human being, the third that of a lion, and the fourth that of an eagle.

¹⁸Then the glory of the LORD went out from the threshold of the house and stopped above the cherubim. ¹⁹The cherubim lifted up their wings and rose up from the earth in my sight as they went out with the wheels beside them. They stopped at the entrance of the east gate of the house of the LORD; and the glory of the God of Israel was above them.

²⁰These were the living creatures that I saw underneath the God of Israel by the river Chebar; and I knew that they were cherubim. ²¹Each had four faces, each four wings, and underneath their wings something like human hands. ²²As for what their faces were like, they were the same faces whose appearance I had seen by the river Chebar. Each one moved straight ahead.

11 The spirit lifted me up and brought me to the east gate of the house of the LORD, which faces east. There, at the entrance of the gateway, were twenty-five men; among them I saw Jaazaniah son of Azzur, and Pelatiah son of Benaiah, officials of the people. ²He said to me, “Mortal, these are the men who devise iniquity and who give wicked counsel in this city; ³they say, ‘The time is not near to build houses; this city is the pot, and we are the meat.’ ⁴Therefore prophesy against them; prophesy, O mortal.”

⁵Then the spirit of the LORD fell upon me, and he said to me, “Say, Thus says the LORD: This is what you think, O house of Israel; I know the things that come into your mind. ⁶You have killed many in this city, and have filled its streets with the slain. ⁷Therefore thus says the Lord God: The slain whom you have placed within it are the meat, and this city is the pot; but you shall be taken out of it. ⁸You have feared the sword; and I will bring the sword upon you, says the Lord God. ⁹I will take you out of it and give you over to the hands of foreigners, and execute judgments

Temple recalls Ex 16.10; 40.34–35 (HS); it both conceals and reveals the divine presence. 12: Eyes all around, see 1.18n. 14: That of the cherub, the bull face of 1.10 (some ancient cherubim were bovine). 15: Chebar, 1.1–3n.

11.1–25: Judgment and promise. 11.1–13: A disputation over the city. Jaazaniah and Pelatiah are otherwise unknown officials of the people (a postexilic title). Wicked counsel perhaps refers to the plot between Egypt and the pro-Egyptian counselors of King Zedekiah of Judah against the Babylonian king Nebuchadnezzar (Jer 27.1–3; 37.5,7,11). 3: Having a false confidence in Zion’s ironclad invulnerability (the pot), they assure the populace of the city’s security. They put off domestic construction, perhaps because they have now appropriated the houses of the slain (v. 6) and of the deportees (v. 15). Alternatively, they are urging that all construction be concentrated on fortifying Jerusalem for their planned rebellion. The pot, an impenetrable metal cauldron or a sturdy crock where food was safely stored. Ezekiel returns to the symbol of the pot in 24.3–8. 5–13: Ezekiel has formulated a far more sophisticated Zion theology than their rather denuded conception (see 1.15–21n., 26–28n.). Accusing the leaders of gross violence (7.23; ch 22), he tells them that a morally complacent trust in Zion will not protect them (cf. 24.1–14), but they will be judged at the border of Israel (v. 11; perhaps Riblah; see 6.14n.; 2 Kings upon you. ¹⁰ You shall fall by the sword; I will judge you at the border of Israel. And you shall know that I am the LORD. ¹¹ This city shall not be your pot, and you shall not be the meat inside it; I will judge you at the border of Israel. ¹² Then you shall know that I am the LORD, whose statutes you have not followed, and whose ordinances you have not kept, but you have acted according to the ordinances of the nations that are around you.”

¹³ Now, while I was prophesying, Pelatiah son of Benaiah died. Then I fell down on my face, cried with a loud voice, and said, “Ah Lord God! will you make a full end of the remnant of Israel?”

¹⁴ Then the word of the LORD came to me: ¹⁵ Mortal, your kinsfolk, your own kin, your fellow exiles,^a the whole house of Israel, all of them, are those of whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem have said, “They have gone far from the LORD; to us this land is given for a possession.” ¹⁶ Therefore say: Thus says the Lord God: Though I removed them far away among the nations, and though I scattered them among the countries, yet I have been a sanctuary to them for a little while^b in the countries where they have gone. ¹⁷ Therefore say: Thus says the Lord God: I will gather you from the peoples, and assemble you out of the countries where you have been scattered, and I will give you the land of Israel. ¹⁸ When they come there, they will remove from it all its detestable things and all its abominations. ¹⁹ I will give them one^c heart, and put a new spirit within them; I will remove the heart of stone from their flesh and give them a heart of flesh,²⁰ so that they may follow my statutes and keep my ordinances and obey them. Then they shall be my people, and I will be their God. ²¹ But as for those whose heart goes after their detestable things and their abominations,^d I will bring their deeds upon their own heads, says the Lord God.

²² Then the cherubim lifted up their wings, with the wheels beside them; and the glory of the God of Israel was above them. ²³ And the glory of the LORD ascended from the middle of the city, and stopped on the mountain east of the city. ²⁴ The spirit lifted me up and brought me in a vision by the spirit of God into Chaldea, to the exiles. Then the vision that I had seen left me. ²⁵ And I told the exiles all the things that the LORD had shown me.

12 The word of the LORD came to me: ² Mortal, you are living in the midst of a rebellious house, who have eyes to see but do not see, who have ears to hear but do not hear;³ for they are a rebellious house.

25.6,18–21). 13: Pelatiah’s death is a prediction within the prophetic vision, not an actual event. Ezekiel’s desperate question at the end of this verse receives a reassuring negative answer in vv. 14–21, an authentically early (pre-586 BCE, see v. 15) oracle of promise in Ezekiel.

11.14–21: The future lies with the exiles. This passage disputes the claim of those who remained in the land that the exiles were bearing God’s punishment, and that their property thus now belonged to those who remained. Ezekiel warns them that God is with his exiled people and will restore them. It is the exile group that constitutes the true Israel (cf. 20.41–42). 15: Your fellow exiles, see textual note a; the rare Heb noun translated “kindred” denotes people who, according to the Holiness School, should be defended against the permanent alienation of their land (Lev 25.25–28). The Jerusalemites are violating Holiness School traditions (see 45.8–9n.). 16: A sanctuary, the Hebrew indicates that the glory of the LORD is now tabernacling with the exiles in Babylonia rather than with those who remained behind (v. 23). 17–21: Promise of restoration to the exiles. The prophecy is authentic to the prophet’s message before the city’s fall in 586 BCE, as shown by its concern with contemporaries inhabiting Jerusalem before its destruction (v. 21). 19: New heart, see 36.26n. 20: The new covenant, cf. 16.60; 36.27–28; 37.23,27. 24: Chaldea, Babylonia.

11.22–25: Two reports conclude the Temple visions. 22–23: See 10.1–22n. The mountain east of the city is the Mount of Olives.

12.1–20: Two symbolic actions. 12.1–16: First symbol, an exile’s baggage. Ezekiel symbolizes the Jerusalemites’ coming exile by collecting whatever goods exiles could carry (Jer 10.17; 46.19) and leaving the city. Features within this text later revealed themselves as stunningly applicable to events surrounding Zedekiah

Therefore, mortal, prepare for yourself an exile's baggage, and go into exile by day in their sight; you shall go like an exile from your place to another place in their sight. Perhaps they will understand, though they are a rebellious house. ⁴ You shall bring out your baggage by day in their sight, as baggage for exile; and you shall go out yourself at evening in their sight, as those do who go into exile.

⁵ Dig through the wall in their sight, and carry the baggage through it. ⁶ In their sight you shall lift the baggage on your shoulder, and carry it out in the dark; you shall cover your face, so that you may not see the land; for I have made you a sign for the house of Israel.

⁸ In the morning the word of the LORD came to me: ⁹ Mortal, has not the house of Israel, the rebellious house, said to you, "What are you doing?" ¹⁰ Say to them, "Thus says the Lord God: This oracle concerns the prince in Jerusalem and all the house of Israel in it." ¹¹ Say, "I am a sign for you: as I have done, so shall it be done to them; they shall go into exile, into captivity." ¹² And the prince who is among them shall lift his baggage on his shoulder in the dark, and shall go out; he^a shall dig through the wall and carry it through; he shall cover his face, so that he may not see the land with his eyes.

¹³ I will spread my net over him, and he shall be caught in my snare; and I will bring him to Babylon, the land of the Chaldeans, yet he shall not see it; and he shall die there. ¹⁴ I will scatter to every wind all who are around him, his helpers and all his troops; and I will unsheathe the sword behind them. ¹⁵ And they shall know that I am the LORD, when I disperse them among the nations and scatter them through the countries. ¹⁶ But I will let a few of them escape from the sword, from famine and pestilence, so that they may tell of all their abominations among the nations where they go; then they shall know that I am the LORD.

¹⁷ The word of the LORD came to me:

¹⁸ Mortal, eat your bread with quaking, and drink your water with trembling and with fearfulness; ¹⁹ and say to the people of the land, Thus says the Lord God concerning the inhabitants of Jerusalem in the land of Israel: They shall eat their bread with fearfulness, and drink their water in dismay, because their land shall be stripped of all it contains, on account of the violence of all those who live in it. ²⁰ The inhabited cities shall be laid waste, and the land shall become a desolation; and you shall know that I am the LORD.

²² Mortal, what is this proverb of yours about the land of Israel, which says, "The days are prolonged, and every vision comes to nothing"? ²³ Tell them therefore, "Thus says the Lord God: I will put an end to this proverb, and they shall use it no more as a proverb in Israel." But say to them, The days are near, and the fulfillment of every vision. ²⁴ For there shall no longer be any false vision or flattering divination within the house of Israel. ²⁵ But I the LORD will speak the word that I speak, and it will be fulfilled. It will no longer be delayed; but in your days, O rebellious house, I will speak the word and fulfill it, says the Lord God.

(the prince, v. 12), who left Jerusalem by night at the city's fall. The oracle was then revised to bring out this applicability. It now specifies how Zedekiah was captured (17.20) and blinded (may not see, vv. 6,12; 2 Kings 25.4,7; Jer 39.1–10). 2: Cf. Isa 6.10. 3–4: An exile's baggage, deportees typically carried large sacks with supplies and personal items for the long trek into exile. Such sacks appear in several Assyrian reliefs, including a depiction of Judean captives from Lachish. 5: Dig through the wall, either the prophet switched roles and portrayed Jerusalem's besiegers breaching the city's walls (cf. Jer 39.2) or he depicts fugitives attempting to dig their way out of the city (through partially breached walls). 12: The Heb text may mean "they [the besiegers] will dig through the wall to bring [the prince] out through it" (see textual note a). 14: 5.2,12; 17.21; Lev 26.33 (HS). 15–16: 14.21–23.

12.17–20: Second symbol, eating with trembling. The people's emotional breakdown at the approaching invasion (cf. Ps 80.5) is prophesied.

12.21–28: Disputations about prophecy. Ezekiel condemns the people's skepticism about prophecies of

²⁶ The word of the LORD came to me:

²⁷ Mortal, the house of Israel is saying, “The vision that he sees is for many years ahead; he prophesies for distant times.” ²⁸ Therefore say to them, Thus says the Lord God: None of my words will be delayed any longer, but the word that I speak will be fulfilled, says the Lord God.

13 ² The word of the LORD came to me: Mortal, prophesy against the prophets of Israel who are prophesying; say to those who prophesy out of their own imagination: “Hear the word of the LORD!” ³ Thus says the Lord God, Alas for the senseless prophets who follow their own spirit, and have seen nothing! ⁴ Your prophets have been like jackals among ruins, O Israel. ⁵ You have not gone up into the breaches, or repaired a wall for the house of Israel, so that it might stand in battle on the day of the LORD. ⁶ They have envisioned falsehood and lying divination; they say, “Says the LORD,” when the LORD has not sent them, and yet they wait for the fulfillment of their word! ⁷ Have you not seen a false vision or uttered a lying divination, when you have said, “Says the LORD,” even though I did not speak?

⁸ Therefore thus says the Lord God: Because you have uttered falsehood and envisioned lies, I am against you, says the Lord God. ⁹ My hand will be against the prophets who see false visions and utter lying divinations; they shall not be in the council of my people, nor be enrolled in the register of the house of Israel, nor shall they enter the land of Israel; and you shall know that I am the Lord God. ¹⁰ Because, in truth, because they have misled my people, saying, “Peace,” when there is no peace; and because, when the people build a wall, these prophets^a smear whitewash on it. ¹¹ Say to those who smear whitewash on it that it shall fall. There will be a deluge of rain,^b great hailstones will fall, and a stormy wind will break out. ¹² When the wall falls, will it not be said to you, “Where is the whitewash you smeared on it?” ¹³ Therefore thus says the Lord God: In my wrath I will make a stormy wind break out, and in my anger there shall be a deluge of rain, and hailstones in wrath to destroy it. ¹⁴ I will break down the wall that you have smeared with whitewash, and bring it to the ground, so that its foundation will be laid bare; when it falls, you shall perish within it; and you shall know that I am the LORD. ¹⁵ Thus I will spend my wrath upon the wall, and upon those who have smeared it with whitewash; and I will say to you, The wall is no more, nor those who smeared it— ¹⁶ the prophets of Israel who prophesied concerning Jerusalem and saw visions of peace for it, when there was no peace, says the Lord God.

¹⁷ As for you, mortal, set your face against the daughters of your people, who prophesy out of their own imagination; prophesy against them ¹⁸ and say, Thus says the Lord God: Woe to the women who sew bands on all wrists, and make veils for the heads of persons of every height, in the hunt for hujudgment (vv. 22,27; Jer 5.12; 17.15). 26–28: Second disputation.

13.1–23: Oracles against false prophecy. 1–16: A major challenge for Ezekiel was opposing false prophets, particularly ones advocating nationalistic hope. Such prophets gave the people a false security that robbed them of their chance to find life amid the coming judgment. 4: Jackals among ruins have no regard for their surroundings and actually contribute to their decay (Lam 5.18). 5: True prophets would care enough about their people to go up into the breaches (like Moses, Ps 106.23), i.e., to risk their lives by arguing with God on the people’s behalf (9.8; 11.13). Day of the LORD, see 7.5–9n. 10–16: Whitewash, better “plaster.” The false prophets’ messages (Jer 23; 27–29), like mud-plaster that dissolves in a storm, were futile attempts to bolster the people, despite their ultimate defenselessness before God’s inevitable coming judgment. Peace . . . no peace, cf. Jer 6.14; 8.11.

13.17–23: Against sorceresses. For a meager fee (v. 19), some exiles safeguarded the wicked and attacked their enemies through black magic. Bands and veils (perhaps “head clothes” or “necklaces” with amulets attached) were likely magical devices used in Babylonian witchcraft to attack and defend, respectively. Magic was prevalent in ancient Babylonia. 18: The hunting may have involved snatching victims’ souls from their bodies. The sorceresses entrap souls like hunters trapping prey, luring people to their deaths.

man lives! Will you hunt down lives among my people, and maintain your own lives?

¹⁹ You have profaned me among my people for handfuls of barley and for pieces of bread, putting to death persons who should not die and keeping alive persons who should not live, by your lies to my people, who listen to lies.

²⁰ Therefore thus says the Lord God: I am against your bands with which you hunt lives;^a I will tear them from your arms, and let the lives go free, the lives that you hunt down like birds. ²¹ I will tear off your veils, and save my people from your hands; they shall no longer be prey in your hands; and you shall know that I am the LORD. ²² Because you have disheartened the righteous falsely, although I have not disheartened them, and you have encouraged the wicked not to turn from their wicked way and save their lives; ²³ therefore you shall no longer see false visions or practice divination; I will save my people from your hand. Then you will know that I am the LORD.

14 Certain elders of Israel came to me and sat down before me. ² And the word of the LORD came to me: ³ Mortal, these men have taken their idols into their hearts, and placed their iniquity as a stumbling block before them; shall I let myself be consulted by them? ⁴ Therefore speak to them, and say to them, Thus says the Lord God: Any of those of the house of Israel who take their idols into their hearts and place their iniquity as a stumbling block before them, and yet come to the prophet—I the LORD will answer those who come with the multitude of their idols, ⁵ in order that I may take hold of the hearts of the house of Israel, all of whom are estranged from me through their idols.

⁶ Therefore say to the house of Israel, Thus says the Lord God: Repent and turn away from your idols; and turn away your faces from all your abominations. ⁷ For any of those of the house of Israel, or of the aliens who reside in Israel, who separate themselves from me, taking their idols into their hearts and placing their iniquity as a stumbling block before them, and yet come to a prophet to inquire of me by him, I the LORD will answer them myself. ⁸ I will set my face against them; I will make them a sign and a byword and cut them off from the midst of my people; and you shall know that I am the LORD.

⁹ If a prophet is deceived and speaks a word, I, the LORD, have deceived that prophet, and I will stretch out my hand against him, and will destroy him from the midst of my people Israel. ¹⁰ And they shall bear their punishment—the punishment of the inquirer and the punishment of the prophet shall be the same— ¹¹ so that the house of Israel may no longer go astray from me, nor defile themselves any more with all their transgressions. Then they shall be my people, and I will be their God, says the Lord God.

14.1–11: A legal case involving consultation. Ezekiel uses the legal language of the Holiness School to indict sinful elders who try to consult God. Consultation is refused, since the words for the situation have already been inscribed as scripture (see 3.22–27n.). For now there will be no negotiation, only performance (12.28). 5: Idols, not necessarily only false gods here, but any religious duplicity. 6: Repent, cf. 18.21,30; 33.11. 7: Aliens, see 47.21–23n. 9–11: Deceived prophets will be punished similarly to those inquiring of them. For the LORD deceiving prophets, see 1 Kings 22.23.

14.12–23: The inevitability of God's judgment. Infamous Sodom might have been spared for a sufficient number of righteous people (Gen 18.22–33), but Jerusalem's impending punishment is inevitable (since it is already a matter of scriptural record, 2.8b–3.3n.). Under these circumstances, only righteous individuals themselves can be saved. 14: Noah (Gen 6.9) and Job (Job 1.1) are renowned in the Bible for their righteousness. Ezekiel's references to Daniel (also 28.3) suggest the Canaanite Danel (see textual note b) of the Ugaritic texts (ca.

pass through because of the animals;¹⁶ even if these three men were in it, as I live, says the Lord GOD, they would save neither sons nor daughters; they alone would be saved, but the land would be desolate.¹⁷ Or if I bring a sword upon that land and say, “Let a sword pass through the land,” and I cut off human beings and animals from it;¹⁸ though these three men were in it, as I live, says the Lord GOD, they would save neither sons nor daughters, but they alone would be saved.¹⁹ Or if I send a pestilence into that land, and pour out my wrath upon it with blood, to cut off humans and animals from it;²⁰ even if Noah, Daniel,^a and Job were in it, as I live, says the Lord GOD, they would save neither son nor daughter; they would save only their own lives by their righteousness.

²¹For thus says the Lord GOD: How much more when I send upon Jerusalem my four deadly acts of judgment, sword, famine, wild animals, and pestilence, to cut off humans and animals from it!²² Yet, survivors shall be left in it, sons and daughters who will be brought out; they will come out to you. When you see their ways and their deeds, you will be consoled for the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, for all that I have brought upon it.²³ They shall console you, when you see their ways and their deeds; and you shall know that it was not without cause that I did all that I have done in it, says the Lord GOD.

15 The word of the LORD came to me:
²⁰O mortal, how does the wood of the vine surpass all other wood—the vine branch that is among the trees of the forest?

³Is wood taken from it to make anything?
 Does one take a peg from it on which to hang any object?

⁴It is put in the fire for fuel;
 when the fire has consumed both ends of it
 and the middle of it is charred, is it useful for anything?

⁵When it was whole it was used for
 nothing;
 how much less—when the fire has consumed it,
 and it is charred—
 can it ever be used for anything!

⁶Therefore thus says the Lord GOD: Like the wood of the vine among the trees of the forest, which I have given to the fire for fuel, so I will give up the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

⁷I will set my face against them; although they escape from the fire, the fire shall still consume them; and you shall know that I am the LORD, when I set my face against them.

⁸And I will make the land desolate, because they have acted faithlessly, says the Lord GOD.

16 The word of the LORD came to me:

 her abominations,³ and say, Thus says the Lord GOD to Jerusalem: Your origin and your birth were in the land of the Canaanites; your father was an Amorite, and your mother a Hittite.⁴ As for your birth, on the day you were born your navel cord was not cut, nor 1400 BCE), who is described as an ideally righteous ruler. 21: On the four agents of divine judgment, see 5.17 (cf. 5.10n.; 33.27). The four scenarios in vv. 13–14, 15–16, 17–18, and 19–20 each highlighted one of the agents. 22–23: Console, since their wicked behavior would prove the justice of God’s judgment.

15.1–8: Analogy of the useless vine. The wood of the vine is good only when it is cultivated in a vineyard and produces; a wild vine of the forest is practically useless—its fruit may be poisonous (2 Kings 4.39–40), and it is unusable for woodworking. This metaphor for Jerusalem shows it has no worthiness on its own. 7: They escaped from total destruction back in 597 BCE, when the Babylonians first attacked Jerusalem.

16.1–63: The allegory of the unfaithful wife. 1–8: Jerusalem, the foundling. 3: Jerusalem’s historical ancestry here suggests a predisposition to apostasy. Ezekiel conveys a ruthless theological image of sin as deep rooted and ineradicable (cf. Gen 8.21; Ps 51.5). The Canaanites, Amorites, and Hittites were Israel’s predecessors in the Promised Land (e.g., Ex 3.8, 17; Josh 3.10), whom God commanded Israel to drive out. According to Ezekiel’s Holiness School traditions, they were depraved peoples who defiled the land through their abominations (vv. 44–52; Lev 18.24–25). As Israel took root in the land, it did not fully drive out the inhabitants but often assimilated them, their practices, and their cities. The prophet is literally correct that Jerusalem was a Canaanite city, which for you out of compassion for you; but you were thrown out in the open field, for you were abhorred on the day you were born.

⁶ I passed by you, and saw you flailing about in your blood. As you lay in your blood, I said to you, “Live! ⁷ and grow up^a like a plant of the field.” You grew up and became tall and arrived at full womanhood;^b your breasts were formed, and your hair had grown; yet you were naked and bare.

⁸ I passed by you again and looked on you; you were at the age for love. I spread the edge of my cloak over you, and covered your nakedness: I pledged myself to you and entered into a covenant with you, says the Lord GOD, and you became mine. ⁹ Then I bathed you with water and washed off the blood from you, and anointed you with oil. ¹⁰ I clothed you with embroidered cloth and with sandals of fine leather; I bound you in fine linen and covered you with rich fabric.^c ¹¹ I adorned you with ornaments: I put bracelets on your arms, a chain on your neck, ¹² a ring on your nose, earrings in your ears, and a beautiful crown upon your head. ¹³ You were adorned with gold and silver, while your clothing was of fine linen, rich fabric,^c and embroidered cloth. You had choice flour and honey and oil for food. You grew exceedingly beautiful, fit to be a queen. ¹⁴ Your fame spread among the nations on account of your beauty, for it was perfect because of my splendor that I had bestowed on you, says the Lord GOD.

¹⁶ You took some of your garments, and made for yourself colorful shrines, and on them played the whore; nothing like this has ever been or ever shall be.^c ¹⁷ You also took your beautiful jewels of my gold and my silver that I had given you, and made for yourself male images, and with them played the whore; ¹⁸ and you took your embroidered garments to cover them, and set my oil and my incense before them. ¹⁹ Also my bread that I gave you—I fed you with choice flour and oil and honey—you set it before them as a pleasing odor; and so it was, says the Lord GOD. ²⁰ You took your sons and your daughters, whom you had borne to me, and these you sacrificed to them to be devoured. As if your whorings were not enough! ²¹ You slaughtered my children and delivered them up as an offering to them. ²² And in all your abominations and your whorings you did not remember the days of your youth, when you were naked and bare, flailing about in your blood.

King David captured and assimilated (2 Sam 5.6–10). 4: Rubbing the skin with salt may have been thought to make it firm; alternatively, the salt may have functioned as an antibacterial agent. Wrapping infants in swaddling cloths was a sign of care (Wis 7.4), which this infant was not given. 5–7: By God’s intervention, this abandoned and exposed infant grew into full womanhood. Breasts and pubic hair indicate sexual maturity. 8: Covering a woman’s nakedness with a garment is a euphemism for taking a wife and sharing in her sexuality (Ruth 3.9; Deut 22.30; 27.20). I pledged myself, see 20.5. The bilateral, mutually committed, and legally binding relationship of marriage constituted a covenant in the ancient world (Mal 2.14; Prov 2.17). Several biblical texts depict God’s covenant with Israel as a marriage (Hos 1–3; Jer 2.2; 31.32; Isa 50.1; 54.5–6). In like manner, ancient Near Eastern vassal treaties spoke of the covenant relationship between sovereigns and their subjects in terms of love. 9–14: The beautiful bride. 9: The blood may signify the breaking of the virginal bride’s hymen (see Deut 22.13–21). Alternatively, due to the time compression of the allegory, the birth blood of v. 6 may still be in mind. 15–34: Sexual betrayal. The image of Israel as a sexually unfaithful wife was first popularized by Hosea, for whom the image had both literal reference to sexualized worship (Hos 4.10–14) and metaphorical reference to religious apostasy in general (Hos 2.13). Ezekiel adopts the image as a metaphor from Hosea and Jeremiah (Jer 3.1–13), intensifies it to shocking extremes, and expands it into a quasi-biography of Israel’s infidelity. This biography will climax in Jerusalem’s destruction. 20–22: Children were offered as human sacrifices (20.26,31; 23.37; 2 Kings 23.10; Jer 7.31; 32.35; Isa 57.5,9), against the prohibitions of the Holiness School (Lev 18.21; 20.2). 23–34: The Zion street you built your lofty place and prostituted your beauty, offering yourself to every passer-by, and multiplying your whoring.

²⁶ You played the whore with the Egyptians, your lustful neighbors, multiplying your whoring, to provoke me to anger. ²⁷ Therefore I stretched out my hand against you, reduced your rations, and gave you up to the will of your enemies, the daughters of the Philistines, who were ashamed of your lewd behavior. ²⁸ You played the whore with the Assyrians, because you were insatiable; you played the whore with them, and still you were not satisfied. ²⁹ You multiplied your whoring with Chaldea, the land of merchants; and even with this you were not satisfied.

³⁰ How sick is your heart, says the Lord God, that you did all these things, the deeds of a brazen whore; ³¹ building your platform at the head of every street, and making your lofty place in every square! Yet you were not like a whore, because you scorned payment. ³² Adulterous wife, who receives strangers instead of her husband! ³³ Gifts are given to all whores; but you gave your gifts to all your lovers, bribing them to come to you from all around for your whorings. ³⁴ So you were different from other women in your whorings: no one solicited you to play the whore; and you gave payment, while no payment was given to you; you were different.

³⁵ Therefore, O whore, hear the word of the LORD: ³⁶ Thus says the Lord God, Because your lust was poured out and your nakedness uncovered in your whoring with your lovers, and because of all your abominable idols, and because of the blood of your children that you gave to them, ³⁷ therefore, I will gather all your lovers, with whom you took pleasure, all those you loved and all those you hated; I will gather them against you from all around, and will uncover your nakedness to them, so that they may see all your nakedness. ³⁸ I will judge you as women who commit adultery and shed blood are judged, and bring blood upon you in wrath and jealousy. ³⁹ I will deliver you into their hands, and they shall throw down your platform and break down your lofty places; they shall strip you of your clothes and take your beautiful objects and leave you naked and bare. ⁴⁰ They shall bring up a mob against you, and they shall stone you and cut you to pieces with their swords. ⁴¹ They shall burn your houses and execute judgments on you in the sight of many women; I will stop you from playing the whore, and you shall also make no more payments. ⁴² So I will satisfy my fury on you, and my jealousy shall turn away from you; I will be calm, and will be angry no longer. ⁴³ Because you have not remembered the days of your youth, but have enraged me with all these things; therefore, I have returned your deeds upon your head, says the Lord God.

Have you not committed lewdness beyond all your abominations? ⁴⁴ See, everyone who theology (see Introduction), in which Ezekiel was steeped, advocated trust in God's exclusive sovereignty over geopolitics (cf. Isa 7.8–9). Given this divine prerogative, foreign alliances were a form of unfaithfulness. 26: Israel's illicit relations with Egypt culminated for Ezekiel in the negotiations in the early sixth century BCE of King Zedekiah of Judah with Pharaoh Psammetichus II for assistance against Babylonia (17.7n.). Lustful neighbors, the Hebrew denotes their oversized genitals (cf. 23.20). 27: A probable reference to the Assyrian king Sennacherib's transfer of Judean territory to the Philistine cities of Ashdod, Ekron, and Gaza in 701 BCE. Sennacherib's annals describe the event. Who were ashamed, even the foreign Philistines were embarrassed by Jerusalem's behavior. 28: Judah willingly became an Assyrian vassal in 734 BCE (see 2 Kings 16.7–8), after which Assyria dominated the region until the rise of the Babylonians, who destroyed their empire between 614 and 609 BCE. Assyrian records mention that King Manasseh of Judah (698/687–642 BCE) was a loyal vassal. 29: Chaldea, Babylonia. After the battle of Carchemish in 605 BCE, Babylonia became the leading political power in Syria-Palestine. Already in the eighth century BCE, King Hezekiah of Judah entertained a Babylonian embassy to the dismay of the prophet Isaiah, according to 2 Kings 20.12–19. Later, King Jehoiakim of Judah (608–598 BCE) became a vassal of Babylonia (2 Kings 24.1) as did King Zedekiah (597–586 BCE; 17.13–14; 2 Kings 24.20; 2 Chr 36.13). 30–34: Instead of receiving income for her services, Jerusalem invited her lovers and paid them. 33: Gifts, see 2 Kings 16.7–9; 18.14–16; 23.34–35; Jer 2.18 for examples of Judah's payment of tribute to foreign powers. 35–43: The threat of punishment. Foreign nations (her lovers) will turn against her. uses proverbs will use this proverb about you, “Like mother, like daughter.”⁴⁵ You are the daughter of your mother, who loathed her husband and her children; and you are the sister of your sisters, who loathed their husbands and their children. Your mother was a Hittite and your father an Amorite.

⁴⁶ Your elder sister is Samaria, who lived with her daughters to the north of you; and your younger sister, who lived to the south of you, is Sodom with her daughters. ⁴⁷ You not only followed their ways, and acted according to their abominations; within a very little time you were more corrupt than they in all your ways. ⁴⁸ As I live, says the Lord God, your sister Sodom and her daughters have not done as you and your daughters have done.

⁴⁹ This was the guilt of your sister Sodom: she and her daughters had pride, excess of food, and prosperous ease, but did not aid the poor and needy. ⁵⁰ They were haughty, and did abominable things before me; therefore I removed them when I saw it. ⁵¹ Samaria has not committed half your sins; you have committed more abominations than they, and have made your sisters appear righteous by all the abominations that you have committed. ⁵² Bear your disgrace, you also, for you have brought about for your sisters a more favorable judgment; because of your sins in which you acted more abominably than they, they are more in the right than you. So be ashamed, you also, and bear your disgrace, for you have made your sisters appear righteous.

theirs,⁵⁴ in order that you may bear your disgrace and be ashamed of all that you have done, becoming a consolation to them. ⁵⁵ As for your sisters, Sodom and her daughters shall return to their former state, Samaria and her daughters shall return to their former state, and you and your daughters shall return to your former state. ⁵⁶ Was not your sister Sodom a byword in your mouth in the day of your pride, ⁵⁷ before your wickedness was uncovered? Now you are a mockery to the daughters of Aram^a and all her neighbors, and to the daughters of the Philistines, those all around who despise you. ⁵⁸ You must bear the penalty of your lewdness and your abominations, says the LORD.

⁵⁹ Yes, thus says the Lord God: I will deal with you as you have done, you who have despised the oath, breaking the covenant; ⁶⁰ yet I will remember my covenant with you in the days of your youth, and I will establish with you an everlasting covenant. ⁶¹ Then you will remember your ways, and be ashamed when I^b take your sisters, both your elder and your younger, and give them to you as daughters, but not on account of my^c covenant with you. ⁶² I will establish my covenant with you, and you shall know that I am the LORD, ⁶³ in order that you may remember and be confounded, and never open your mouth again because of your shame, when I forgive you all that you have done, says the Lord God.

(Lev 20.10). 44–58: Additional accusation. This section elaborates the preceding theme, showing Jerusalem to be so much worse than Samaria (2 Kings 17) and Sodom (Gen 19), both of which were destroyed, that they appear righteous by comparison (Jer 3.11). 46: Elder sister, better “bigger sister” (which makes more sense historically). Likewise, Sodom is a “smaller” sister, not necessarily a younger one (by Canaanite geopolitical standards, Sodom was an unimpressive city-state). 49: Ezekiel does not represent Sodom’s characteristic sin in sexual terms but primarily as social and moral injustice, especially toward the poor and needy. His perspective expands on Gen 18.20 and 19.13. Ezekiel’s Holiness School traditions especially stressed social justice and care for the poor (Lev 19.9–15, 33–35; 23.22; 25.13–17 [HS]). 53–58: God will restore all three sisters, humiliating Jerusalem by putting it on the same footing as Samaria and Sodom. 57: Aram should probably be read as “Edom” (see textual note a; cf. 36.5). 59–63: Jerusalem’s restoration. God will remember the covenant with the ancestors, as the Holiness School anticipated (Lev 26.43–45), as well as his marriage contract with Jerusalem (v. 8). 62: Will establish my covenant (see also v. 60), a phrase characteristic of the Holiness School (e.g., Gen 17.7; Ex 6.4; Lev 26.9 [HS]).

17 The word of the LORD came to me:
²O mortal, propound a riddle, and speak an allegory to the house of Israel. ³Say: Thus says the Lord God:

A great eagle, with great wings and long
 pinions,
 rich in plumage of many colors,
 came to the Lebanon.

He took the top of the cedar,
⁴broke off its topmost shoot;

he carried it to a land of trade, set it in a city of merchants.

⁵Then he took a seed from the land, placed it in fertile soil;
 a plant^a by abundant waters,
 he set it like a willow twig.

⁶It sprouted and became a vine spreading out, but low;
 its branches turned toward him,
 its roots remained where it stood.

So it became a vine;
 it brought forth branches,
 put forth foliage.

⁷There was another great eagle, with great wings and much plumage.

And see! This vine stretched out its roots toward him;
 it shot out its branches toward him,
 so that he might water it.

From the bed where it was planted ⁸it was transplanted to good soil by abundant waters, so that it might produce branches and bear fruit
 and become a noble vine.

⁹Say: Thus says the Lord God:
 Will it prosper?

Will he not pull up its roots, cause its fruit to rot^a and wither, its fresh sprouting leaves to fade?
 No strong arm or mighty army will be needed

to pull it from its roots.
¹⁰When it is transplanted, will it thrive?
 When the east wind strikes it, will it not utterly wither, wither on the bed where it grew?

¹¹Then the word of the LORD came to me:
¹²Say now to the rebellious house: Do you not know what these things mean? Tell them:
 The king of Babylon came to Jerusalem, took its king and its officials, and brought them back with him to Babylon. ¹³He took one of the royal offspring and made a covenant with him, putting him under oath (he had taken away the chief men of the land), ¹⁴so that the kingdom might be humble and not lift itself up, and that by keeping his covenant it might stand. ¹⁵But he rebelled against him by sending ambassadors to Egypt, in order that they might give him horses and a large army. Will he succeed? Can one escape who does such things? Can he break the covenant and yet escape? ¹⁶As I live, says the Lord God, surely in the place where the king resides who made him king, whose oath he despised, and whose covenant with him he broke—in Babylon he shall die. ¹⁷Pharaoh with his mighty army and great company will not help him in war, when ramps are cast up and siege walls built to cut off many lives. ¹⁸Because he despised the oath and broke the covenant, because he gave his hand and yet did all these things, he shall not escape. ¹⁹Therefore thus says the Nebuchadrezzar would have to punish Zedekiah for violating his oath of loyalty (see v. 7n.). 17: The original text read, “and not with a mighty army shall he [Nebuchadrezzar] deal with him” (as in v. 9b). The verse was revised after the siege of Jerusalem to reflect historical detail, thus bringing out the prophecy’s correlation with its fulfillment.

Lord God: As I live, I will surely return upon his head my oath that he despised, and my covenant that he broke. ²⁰I will spread my net over him, and he shall be caught in my snare; I will bring him to Babylon and enter into judgment with him there for the treason he has committed against me. ²¹All the pick^a of his troops shall fall by the sword, and the survivors shall be scattered to every wind; and you shall know that I, the LORD, have spoken.

²²Thus says the Lord God:

I myself will take a sprig from the lofty top of a cedar;
I will set it out.

I will break off a tender one from the topmost of its young twigs;
I myself will plant it on a high and lofty mountain.

I will plant it,
in order that it may produce boughs and

that I am the LORD.

I bring low the high tree,
I make high the low tree;
I dry up the green tree
and make the dry tree flourish.
I the LORD have spoken;
I will accomplish it.

18 The word of the LORD came to me:

19–21: Just as Nebuchadnezzar will not overlook Zedekiah’s breaking his oath of loyalty, so also will God punish him for breaking the LORD’s covenant with Israel (16.59). 22–24: The fable expanded, an allegory about the restoration of the Davidic monarchy. As in v. 3, the top of a cedar is the house of David, but now God becomes the great eagle who is protecting and cultivating it. For the image of the coming king as a twig or branch, cf. Isa 11.1; Jer 23.5–6; 33.15; Zech 3.8; 6.12. Other passages in Ezekiel that speak of a new, ideal Davidic king include 29.21; 34.23–24; 37.24–25. Lofty mountain, Mount Zion (cf. Isa 2.2). Noble cedar, the archetypical “cosmic tree” in Near Eastern mythology. Planted at the center of the world, it connects heaven and earth and offers shelter to all peoples.

18.1–32: Being accountable. 1–4: The text does not necessarily deny the notion of corporate (communal) punishment or contradict the statement of Ex 20.5 that parents can pass on the consequences of sin to their children. In places such as 16.44 and 20.4,³⁰ Ezekiel affirms that sins and their punishments may involve long-term consequences for individuals and for the corporate community. What Ezekiel is stressing is that the exiles cannot hide behind a defense of fatalism but must take responsibility for their present circumstances and their future. The prophet’s audience is far from an innocent generation, and it is not appropriate for them to view their present fate as inexorably determined by past actions of their ancestors (cf. Jer 31.29–30, which quotes the same proverb). 4: Ezekiel’s stress on individual responsibility is not innovative but recalls Num 16:22–24 (HS; cf. Deut 24.16). God, who owns all lives, i.e., “the spirits of all flesh” (Num 16.22 [HS]), desires life for each human creature (cf. Ezek 18.23,32; 33:11), and those Israelites who separate themselves from all offenders against God’s holiness will surely find salvation in the midst of God’s judgment (Num 16.24 [HS]; cf. Deut 24.16). 5–9: First, righteous generation. The list includes both ritual and ethical provisions; Ezekiel’s theology shares with the Holiness School a concern with the entire range of sin from ceremonial to moral. 6: Eat upon the mountains, idolatrous sacrifices at high places (6.1–14). Lift up his eyes, seek aid from (cf. 23.27; 33.25). Defile his neighbor’s wife, Lev 18.20 (HS). Menstrual period, Lev 18.19 (HS). 7: Oppress anyone, Lev 25.17 (HS). Restores to the debtor his his hand from iniquity, executes true justice between contending parties,⁹ follows my statutes, and is careful to observe my ordinances, acting faithfully—such a one is righteous; he shall surely live, says the Lord God.

¹⁰ If he has a son who is violent, a shedder of blood,¹¹ who does any of these things (though his father^a does none of them), who eats upon the mountains, defiles his neighbor's wife,¹² oppresses the poor and needy, commits robbery, does not restore the pledge, lifts up his eyes to the idols, commits abomination,¹³ takes advance or accrued interest; shall he then live? He shall not. He has done all these abominable things; he shall surely die; his blood shall be upon himself.

¹⁴ But if this man has a son who sees all the sins that his father has done, considers, and does not do likewise,¹⁵ who does not eat upon the mountains or lift up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, does not defile his neighbor's wife,¹⁶ does not wrong anyone, exacts no pledge, commits no robbery, but gives his bread to the hungry and covers the naked with a garment,¹⁷ withholds his hand from iniquity,^b takes no advance or accrued interest, observes my ordinances, and follows my statutes; he shall not die for his father's iniquity; he shall surely live.¹⁸ As for his father, because he practiced extortion, robbed his brother, and did what is not good among his people, he dies for his iniquity.

¹⁹ Yet you say, "Why should not the son suffer for the iniquity of the father?" When the son has done what is lawful and right, and has been careful to observe all my statutes, he shall surely live.²⁰ The person who sins shall die. A child shall not suffer for the iniquity of a parent, nor a parent suffer for the iniquity of a child; the righteousness of the righteous shall be his own, and the wickedness of the wicked shall be his own.

²¹ But if the wicked turn away from all their sins that they have committed and keep all my statutes and do what is lawful and right, they shall surely live; they shall not die.²² None of the transgressions that they have committed shall be remembered against them; for the righteousness that they have done they shall live.²³ Have I any pleasure in the death of the wicked, says the Lord God, and not rather that they should turn from their ways and live?

²⁴ But when the righteous turn away from their righteousness and commit iniquity and do the same abominable things that the wicked do, shall they live? None of the righteous deeds that they have done shall be remembered; for the treachery of which they are guilty and the sin they have committed, they shall die.

²⁵ Yet you say, "The way of the Lord is unfair." Hear now, O house of Israel: Is my way unfair? Is it not your ways that are unfair?²⁶ When the righteous turn away from their righteousness and commit iniquity, they shall die for it; for the iniquity that they have committed they shall die.²⁷ Again, when the wicked turn away from the wickedness they have committed and do what is lawful and right, they shall save their life.²⁸ Because they considered and turned away from all the transgressions that they had committed, they shall surely live; they shall not die.²⁹ Yet the house of Israel says, "The way of the Lord is unfair." O house of Israel, are my ways unfair? Is it not your ways that are unfair?

⁷ And he ravaged their strongholds,^a and laid waste their towns; the land was appalled, and all in it, at the sound of his roaring.

⁸ The nations set upon him from the provinces all around; they spread their net over him; he was caught in their pit.

⁹ With hooks they put him in a cage, and brought him to the king of Babylon; they brought him into custody, so that his voice should be heard no more on the mountains of Israel.

¹⁰ Your mother was like a vine in a vineyard^b transplanted by the water, fruitful and full of branches from abundant water.

¹¹ Its strongest stem became a ruler's scepter;^c it towered aloft among the thick boughs; it stood out in its height with its mass of branches.

¹² But it was plucked up in fury, cast down to the ground; the east wind dried it up; its fruit was stripped off, its strong stem was withered; the fire consumed it.

¹³ Now it is transplanted into the wilderness, into a dry and thirsty land.

¹⁴ And fire has gone out from its stem, has consumed its branches and fruit, so that there remains in it no strong stem, no scepter for ruling.

This is a lamentation, and it is used as a lamentation.

19.1–14: Two funeral dirges. 1–9: First dirge. 1: Lamentation, a parody of a dirge, condemning the exploitative and high-handed rule of Judah's last monarchs. Princes, monarchic rulers (cf. 12.10; 19.1; 34.24; 37.25; 44.1–3n.). 2: The lioness is Judah (cf. Gen 49.9). 3–4: The first cub is Jehoahaz, the king who was taken to Egypt in 609 BCE (2 Kings 23.30–34; Jer 22.10–12; 2 Chr 36.4). 5–9: The identity of the second cub is less certain. It could be King Jehoiachin, who was exiled to Babylon in 597 BCE (Jer 22.24–30; 2 Kings 24.8–16), but is more likely King Zedekiah, likewise exiled to Babylon in 586 BCE (2 Kings 25.7; Jer 39.7). If the latter, the two cubs would have the same literal mother, Hamutal (2 Kings 23.31; 24.18; Jer 52.1). Alternatively, the second cub is Zedekiah's predecessor, King Jehoiakim, although the biblical references to his being brought into custody (v. 9) by Nebuchadnezzar and the Babylonians are of questionable historicity (2 Chr 36.6; Dan 1.1–2). Jehoiakim fits the description of the second cub in that the land was appalled (v. 7) during his reign (cf. 2 Kings 24.4; Jer 22.13–19).

19.10–14: Second dirge. 10: The vine is Judah, and its wild, towering growth signals arrogant pride. 11–13: The strongest stem is King Zedekiah, who was dried up by the east wind (Nebuchadnezzar, 17.10) and transplanted (taken to Babylon). If the reading of textual note c is correct, however, two Judean kings, both Jehoiachin and Zedekiah, are in view.

20 In the seventh year, in the fifth month, on the tenth day of the month, certain elders of Israel came to consult the LORD, and sat down before me. ² And the word of the LORD came to me: ³ Mortal, speak to the elders of Israel, and say to them: Thus says the Lord God: Why are you coming? To consult me? As I live, says the Lord God, I will not be consulted by you. ⁴ Will you judge them, mortal, will you judge them? Then let them know the abominations of their ancestors, ⁵ and say to them: Thus says the Lord God: On the day when I chose Israel, I swore to the offspring of the house of Jacob—making myself known to them in the land of Egypt—I swore to them, saying, I am the LORD your God. ⁶ On that day I swore to them that I would bring them out of the land of Egypt into a land that I had searched out for them, a land flowing with milk and honey, the most glorious of all lands. ⁷ And I said to them, Cast away the detestable things your eyes feast on, every one of you, and do not defile yourselves with the idols of Egypt; I am the LORD your God. ⁸ But they rebelled against me and would not listen to me; not one of them cast away the detestable things their eyes feasted on, nor did they forsake the idols of Egypt.

Then I thought I would pour out my wrath upon them and spend my anger against them in the midst of the land of Egypt. ⁹ But I acted for the sake of my name, that it should not be profaned in the sight of the nations among whom they lived, in whose sight I made myself known to them in bringing them out of the land of Egypt. ¹⁰ So I led them out of the land of Egypt and brought them into the wilderness. ¹¹ I gave them my statutes and showed them my ordinances, by whose observance everyone shall live. ¹² Moreover I gave them my sabbaths, as a sign between me and them, so that they might know that I the LORD sanctify them. ¹³ But the house of Israel rebelled against me in the wilderness; they did not observe my statutes but rejected my ordinances, by whose observance everyone shall live; and my sabbaths they greatly profaned.

Then I thought I would pour out my wrath upon them in the wilderness, to make an end of them. ¹⁴ But I acted for the sake of my name, so that it should not be profaned in the sight of the nations, in whose sight I had brought them out. ¹⁵ Moreover I swore to them in the wilderness that I would not bring them into the land that I had given them, a land flowing with milk and honey, the most

20.1–44: Israel's pattern of rebellion. The passage is not intended as a chronological account but as a theological narrative about the people's ingrained waywardness, evident in a pattern of rebellion despite God's self-revelation (vv. 5–9, 10–17, 18–26). Israel has repeatedly failed to know the LORD, appreciate the LORD's holiness (vv. 12, 20, 26), and demonstrate this holiness before the world (vv. 9, 14, 22, 39, 41). The effect of Ezekiel's rhetoric is to drive home how this same rebellious pattern is inevitable for the present generation (vv. 30–32). 1–4: Date: August 14, 591 BCE. All consultation of the LORD is prohibited (see v. 31n.; 3.22–27n.; 14.1–11n.). 5–9: Rebellion in Egypt. 5: I am the LORD your God, Ex 6.7 (HS). 6: On God's oath to bring the people to the promised land, see Ex 6.8 (HS). A land flowing with milk and honey, v. 15; Lev 20.24 (HS; cf. Ex 3.8; Deut 6.3). Most glorious of all lands, in Ezekiel God is intensely, even patriotically devoted to the sacred land of Israel (Lev 25.23 [HS]; Ezek 7.22; 34.26; 35.10; 36.5). 7–8: I am the LORD your God, Lev 19.4 (HS). Idolatrous worship in Egypt is mentioned explicitly in Josh 24.14. The Exodus narratives themselves lack information on Hebrew worship practices in Egypt, but Ex 32.1–6 suggests that the people had grown comfortable with worship of images and orgiastic rites. 9: For the sake of my name (vv. 14, 22, 39, 44; cf. 36.20–23; 39.7, 25; 43.7–8), the motif in Ezekiel of God's intense concern with the honor of the divine name comes straight out of the Holiness School (see Lev 18.21; 19.12; 20.3; 21.6; 22.2, 32 [HS]). The motif emphasizes the mystery of God's mercy (see 36.22–32n.) over against Israel's fossilized heart (cf. 2.4; 3.7; 20.33; 36.26). The people are not, and have not been, pleasing to God, so God must act in a manner set by God's character (God's "name") and by God's intention to infuse the world with divine holiness, not based on how humans make God feel. Only God's proactive grace has preserved Israel in the past and gives the people hope for the future. 10–17: Rebellion in the wilderness. 11: Lev 18.5 (HS). 12–13: Ezekiel is influenced by the emphasis on the sabbath in the Holiness School (Ex 31.13; Lev 19.30; 26.2 [HS]). In this tradition, keeping the sabbath is a sign of the holiness and priestly service of all God's people. For a particular example of violation of the sabbath within the narratives of the Holiness School, see Ex 16.27–30. 13b–17: Ex 32.9–14; Num 14.11–20;

glorious of all lands,¹⁶ because they rejected my ordinances and did not observe my statutes, and profaned my sabbaths; for their heart went after their idols.¹⁷ Nevertheless my eye spared them, and I did not destroy them or make an end of them in the wilderness.

¹⁸ I said to their children in the wilderness, Do not follow the statutes of your parents, nor observe their ordinances, nor defile yourselves with their idols.¹⁹ I the LORD am your God; follow my statutes, and be careful to observe my ordinances,²⁰ and hallow my sabbaths that they may be a sign between me and you, so that you may know that I the LORD am your God.²¹ But the children rebelled against me; they did not follow my statutes, and were not careful to observe my ordinances, by whose observance everyone shall live; they profaned my sabbaths.

Then I thought I would pour out my wrath upon them and spend my anger against them in the wilderness.²² But I withheld my hand, and acted for the sake of my name, so that it should not be profaned in the sight of the nations, in whose sight I had brought them out.²³ Moreover I swore to them in the wilderness that I would scatter them among the nations and disperse them through the countries,²⁴ because they had not executed my ordinances, but had rejected my statutes and profaned my sabbaths, and their eyes were set on their ancestors' idols.²⁵ Moreover I gave them statutes that were not good and ordinances by which they could not live.²⁶ I defiled them through their very gifts, in their offering up all their firstborn, in order that I might horrify them, so that they might know that I am the LORD.

²⁷ Therefore, mortal, speak to the house of Israel and say to them, Thus says the Lord

GOD: In this again your ancestors blasphemed me, by dealing treacherously with me.²⁸ For when I had brought them into the land that I swore to give them, then wherever they saw any high hill or any leafy tree, there they offered their sacrifices and presented the provocation of their offering; there they sent up their pleasing odors, and there they poured out their drink offerings.²⁹ (I said to them, What is the high place to which you go? So it is called Bamah^a to this day.)³⁰ Therefore say to the house of Israel, Thus says the Lord God: Will you defile yourselves after the manner of your ancestors and go astray after their detestable things?³¹ When you offer your gifts and make your children pass through the fire, you defile yourselves with all your idols to this day. And shall I be consulted by you, O house of Israel? As I live, says the Lord God, I will not be consulted by you.

³² What is in your mind shall never happen—the thought, “Let us be like the nations, like the tribes of the countries, and worship wood and stone.”

³³ As I live, says the Lord God, surely with a mighty hand and an outstretched arm, and with wrath poured out, I will be king over you.³⁴ I will bring you out from the peoples and gather you out of the countries where you are scattered, with a mighty hand and an outstretched arm, and with wrath poured out;³⁵ and I will bring you into the wilderness of the peoples, and there I will enter into judgment with you face to face.³⁶ As I entered into judgment with your ancestors in the wilderness of the land of Egypt, so I will enter into judgment with you, says the Lord God.³⁷ I will make you pass under the staff,

^a That is High Place

Deut 9.25–29. 18–26: Rebellion of the next generation. 25–26: The people may have been using the “law of the firstborn” (Ex 22.29; 34.19) to legitimate child sacrifice (16.20–22n.). The notion that God’s law may be an occasion of punishment, unique in the Hebrew Bible, recurs in Rom 7.7–13. 27–32: Application of the passage to Ezekiel’s contemporaries. 29: High place, 6.3n. The Heb word for “high place” (“bamah”) is explained by the preceding words (“what” [“mah”] and “go” [“ba”]). 31: On making children pass through the fire, see 16.20–22n.; 23.37; Deut 18.10; 2 Kings 16.3; 17.17; 21.6. The end of the verse echoes v. 3, forming an inclusio (envelope) around the passage. Judgment on the people’s faithless state is fixed: Ezekiel can not intervene for them with God (see 3.22–27n.). 33–38: A new Exodus and judgment in the wilderness. This is an oracle of promise, but with an angry tone dating prior to Jerusalem’s destruction in 586 BCE. God will triumph with Israel, through force if necessary. (In accord with Zion theology, the election of God’s people is ultimately irrevocable. See Introduction; and will bring you within the bond of the covenant. ³⁸ I will purge out the rebels among you, and those who transgress against me; I will bring them out of the land where they reside as aliens, but they shall not enter the land of Israel. Then you shall know that I am the LORD.

³⁹ As for you, O house of Israel, thus says the Lord God: Go serve your idols, every one of you now and hereafter, if you will not listen to me; but my holy name you shall no more profane with your gifts and your idols.

⁴⁰ For on my holy mountain, the mountain height of Israel, says the Lord God, there all the house of Israel, all of them, shall serve me in the land; there I will accept them, and there I will require your contributions and the choicest of your gifts, with all your sacred things. ⁴¹ As a pleasing odor I will accept you, when I bring you out from the peoples, and gather you out of the countries where you have been scattered; and I will manifest my holiness among you in the sight of the nations. ⁴² You shall know that I am the LORD, when I bring you into the land of Israel, the country that I swore to give to your ancestors. ⁴³ There you shall remember your ways and all the deeds by which you have polluted yourselves; and you shall loathe yourselves for all the evils that you have committed.

⁴⁴ And you shall know that I am the LORD, when I deal with you for my name's sake, not according to your evil ways, or corrupt deeds, O house of Israel, says the Lord God.

⁴⁵ ^a The word of the LORD came to me: ⁴⁶ Mortal, set your face toward the south, preach against the south, and prophesy against the forest land in the Negeb; ⁴⁷ say to the forest of the Negeb, Hear the word of the LORD: Thus says the Lord God, I will kindle a fire in you, and it shall devour every green tree in you and every dry tree; the blazing flame shall not be quenched, and all faces from south to north shall be scorched by it. ⁴⁸ All flesh shall see that I the LORD have kindled it; it shall not be quenched. ⁴⁹ Then I said, "Ah Lord God! they are saying of me, 'Is he not a maker of allegories?'"

21 ^b The word of the LORD came to me: ² Mortal, set your face toward Jerusalem and preach against the sanctuaries; prophesy against the land of Israel ³ and say to the land of Israel, Thus says the LORD: I am coming against you, and will draw my sword out of its sheath, and will cut off from you both righteous and wicked. ⁴ Because I will cut off from you both righteous and wicked, therefore my sword shall go out of its sheath against all flesh from south to north; ⁵ and all flesh shall know that I the LORD have drawn my sword out of its sheath; it shall not be sheathed again. ⁶ Moan therefore, mortal; moan with breaking heart and bitter grief before their eyes. ⁷ And when they say to you, "Why do you moan?" you shall say, "Because of the news that has come. Every heart will melt and all hands will be feeble, every spirit will faint and all knees will turn to water. See, it comes and it will be fulfilled," says the Lord God.

⁸ And the word of the LORD came to me: ⁹ Mortal, prophesy and say: Thus says the Lord; Say:

A sword is sharpened,
it is also polished;
¹⁰ it is sharpened for slaughter, honed to flash like lightning!
How can we make merry?

Lev 26.42 [HS].) As in the wilderness (Num 14.26–35 [HS]), the unfaithful will be purged. 37: Pass under the staff, see Lev 27.32 (HS). 39–44: Final acceptance. After the new Exodus, God will restore the people to Zion, and their sacrifices will again be acceptable. Deity, nation, and land will be united in covenant once and for all. 40: Ezekiel's Zion theology (cf. 5.5n.; 28.14; 40:2; 43.12; Ob 16; Zech 8.3; Joel 3.17). Mountain height of Israel, 17.23; 34.14.

20.45–21.32: Sword prophecies (Lev 26.25,33 [HS]). 20.45–21.7: The sword against all flesh. 20.45–49: South and Negeb both stand for Judah and Jerusalem, which lie south of their attackers. 49: The people cannot take a claim of Jerusalem's vulnerability seriously (see 2.6n.; 3.7; 33.32). 21.1–5: The preceding forest fire is interpreted as the sword of God. 6–7: The message is reiterated through an expressive action.

21.8–17: Song of the sword. The sword is first polished (vv. 8–13), and then it will be engaged (vv. 14–17). 12:

¹¹The sword^a is given to be polished, to be grasped in the hand;
it is sharpened, the sword is polished,
to be placed in the slayer's hand.

¹²Cry and wail, O mortal, for it is against my people;
it is against all Israel's princes;
they are thrown to the sword,
together with my people.
Ah! Strike the thigh!

¹³For consider: What! If you despise the rod, will it not happen?^b says the Lord GOD.

¹⁴And you, mortal, prophesy;
strike hand to hand.
Let the sword fall twice, thrice;
it is a sword for killing.

A sword for great slaughter—it surrounds them;

¹⁵therefore hearts melt and many stumble.

At all their gates I have set

Ah! It is made for flashing, ¹⁶Attack to the right!

Engage to the left!

¹⁷I too will strike hand to hand,
I will satisfy my fury;
I the LORD have spoken.

¹⁸The word of the LORD came to me: ¹⁹Mortal, mark out two roads for the sword of the king of Babylon to come; both of them shall issue from the same land. And make a signpost, make it for a fork in the road leading to a city; ²⁰mark out the road for the sword to come to Rabbah of the Ammonites or to Judah and to^d Jerusalem the fortified. ²¹For the king of Babylon stands at the parting of the way, at the fork in the two roads, to use divination; he shakes the arrows, he consults the teraphim,^e he inspects the liver. ²²Into his right hand comes the lot for Jerusalem, to set battering rams, to call out for slaughter, for raising the battle cry, to set battering rams against the gates, to cast up ramps, to build siege towers. ²³But to them it will seem like a false divination; they have sworn solemn oaths; but he brings their guilt to remembrance, bringing about their capture.

²⁴Therefore thus says the Lord GOD: Because you have brought your guilt to remembrance, in that your transgressions are uncovered, so that in all your deeds your sins appear—because you have come to remembrance, you shall be taken in hand.^f

²⁵As for you, vile, wicked prince of Israel, you whose day has come, the time of final punishment,

²⁶thus says the Lord GOD:

things shall not remain as they are.

Exalt that which is low,
abase that which is high.

²⁷A ruin, a ruin, a ruin—
I will make it!
(Such has never occurred.)

Until he comes whose right it is;
to him I will give it.

29: Divination (v. 21) has directed the sword's use. 30–32: Although Nebuchadnezzar served as God's agent, he himself, and Babylonia, will eventually face God's judgment.

22.1–31: Prophecies of smelting judgment. 22.1–16: A prophecy against Jerusalem, the bloody city. The indictment of vv. 6–12 contains a catalogue of sins based on the regulations of the Holiness School (Lev 18–20). 13–16: In scorn and anger (strike my hands together, 21.14,17) God will punish this bloody city (18.10n.; Num 35.33–34 [HS]).

22.17–22: Israel is dross. The judgment will be like a smelter in which base metals are removed.

²³ The word of the LORD came to me:

²⁴ Mortal, say to it: You are a land that is not cleansed, not rained upon in the day of indignation. ²⁵ Its princes^a within it are like a roaring lion tearing the prey; they have devoured human lives; they have taken treasure and precious things; they have made many widows within it. ²⁶ Its priests have done violence to my teaching and have profaned my holy things; they have made no distinction between the holy and the common, neither have they taught the difference between the unclean and the clean, and they have disregarded my sabbaths, so that I am profaned among them. ²⁷ Its officials within it are like wolves tearing the prey, shedding blood, destroying lives to get dishonest gain. ²⁸ Its prophets have smeared whitewash on their behalf, seeing false visions and divining lies for them, saying, “Thus says the Lord God,” when the LORD has not spoken. ²⁹ The people of the land have practiced extortion and committed robbery; they have oppressed the poor and needy, and have extorted from the alien without redress. ³⁰ And I sought for anyone among them who would repair the wall and stand in the breach before me on behalf of the land, so that I would not destroy it; but I found no one. ³¹ Therefore I have poured out my indignation upon them; I have consumed them with the fire of my wrath; I have returned their conduct upon their heads, says the Lord God.

23 The word of the LORD came to me: ² Mortal, there were two women, the daughters of one mother; ³ they played the whore in Egypt; they played the whore in their youth; their breasts were caressed there, and their virgin bosoms were fondled. ⁴ Oholah was the name of the elder and Oholibah the name of her sister. They became mine, and they bore sons and daughters. As for their names, Oholah is Samaria, and Oholibah is Jerusalem.

22.23–31: All classes are corrupt. This oracle seems to come after Jerusalem’s fall in 586 BCE (see v. 31) and describes Judah’s sinfulness in retrospect. All classes of Judean society were corrupt, and all must be punished; cf. Jer 8.8–10; Zeph 3.3–4. 26: 42.20; 44.23; Lev 10.10–11 (HS). 28: 13.10–16n. 30: 13.5n.

23.1–49: The allegory of the sisters, Oholah and Oholibah (cf. ch 16). 1–4: Introduction. 3: In Egypt, thus Israel’s apostasy was deep-rooted (20.5–9). 4: The wordplay Oholah, “her [own] tent,” (i.e., Samaria, which had been the northern kingdom of Israel), and Oholibah, “my tent [is] in her” (i.e., Jerusalem), may suggest that though the northern kingdom had shrines to Yahweh, God’s real dwelling (tent) was in Jerusalem, thus emphasizing the enormity of Judah’s apostasy. The two names are reminiscent of the Israelites’ origins as tent-dwelling peoples (see Gen 36.2 for a similar type of name). Oholah/Samaria is a “bigger” sister, not necessarily an elder one (see 16.46n.). Ezekiel borrowed the image of the marrying of sisters from Jeremiah (Jer 3.6–11). 5–10: Oholah. The northern kingdom is condemned for its alliances with Assyria (e.g., 2 Kings 15.19; 17.3). Like Jeremiah (4.30; same rare word for “lovers” as in Ezek 23.5,9), Ezekiel viewed foreign alliances as disloyalty to God. For Ezekiel, true realism was not political pragmatism but trust in God’s geopolitical prerogative. 10: The fall of Samaria to Assyria in 722 BCE. 11–21: Indictment of Oholibah. Jerusalem, like Samaria, is condemned for its foreign alliances. Judah had allied itself with Assyria (2 Kings 16.7–9) and then with Babylon (17.13; 2 Kings 24.1,17;

¹¹ Her sister Oholibah saw this, yet she was more corrupt than she in her lusting and in her whorings, which were worse than those of her sister. ¹² She lusted after the Assyrians, governors and commanders, warriors^a clothed in full armor, mounted horsemen, all of them handsome young men. ¹³ And I saw that she was defiled; they both took the same way. ¹⁴ But she carried her whorings further; she saw male figures carved on the wall, images of the Chaldeans portrayed in vermilion, ¹⁵ with belts around their waists, with flowing turbans on their heads, all of them looking like officers—a picture of Babylonians whose native land was Chaldea. ¹⁶ When she saw them she lusted after them, and sent messengers to them in Chaldea. ¹⁷ And the Babylonians came to her into the bed of love, and they defiled her with their lust; and after she defiled herself with them, she turned from them in disgust. ¹⁸ When she carried on her whorings so openly and flaunted her nakedness, I turned in disgust from her, as I had turned from her sister. ¹⁹ Yet she increased her whorings, remembering the days of her youth, when she played the whore in the land of Egypt ²⁰ and lusted after her paramours there, whose members were like those of donkeys, and whose emission was like that of stallions. ²¹ Thus you longed for the lewdness of your youth, when the Egyptians^b fondled your bosom and caressed^c your young breasts.

²² Therefore, O Oholibah, thus says the Lord God: I will rouse against you your lovers from whom you turned in disgust, and I will bring them against you from every side: ²³ the Babylonians and all the Chaldeans, Pekod and Shoa and Koa, and all the Assyrians with them, handsome young men, governors and commanders all of them, officers and warriors,^d all of them riding on horses. ²⁴ They shall come against you from the north^e with chariots and wagons and a host of peoples; they shall set themselves against you on every side with buckler, shield, and helmet, and I will commit the judgment to them, and they shall judge you according to their ordinances. ²⁵ I will direct my indignation against you, in order that they may deal with you in fury. They shall cut off your nose and your ears, and your survivors shall fall by the sword. They shall seize your sons and your daughters, and your survivors shall be devoured by fire. ²⁶ They shall also strip you of your clothes and take away your fine jewels. ²⁷ So I will put an end to your lewdness and your whoring brought from the land of Egypt; you shall not long for them, or remember Egypt any more. ²⁸ For thus says the Lord God: I will deliver you into the hands of those whom you hate, into the hands of those from whom you turned in disgust; ²⁹ and they shall deal with you in hatred, and take away all the fruit of your labor, and leave you naked and bare, and the nakedness of your whorings shall be exposed. Your lewdness and your whorings ³⁰ have brought this upon you, because you played the whore with the nations, and polluted yourself with their idols. ³¹ You have gone the way of your sister; therefore I will give her cup into your hand. ³² Thus says the Lord God:

You shall drink your sister's cup, deep and wide;
you shall be scorned and derided,
it holds so much.

³³ You shall be filled with drunkenness and sorrow.

A cup of horror and desolation is the cup of your sister Samaria;

"war cry!" and "shriek!" and Ezekiel may have chosen the names to produce a striking wordplay. Assyrian troops were co-opted by their Babylonian conquerors. 32–34: The poem of the cup of wrath (Jer 25:15–29; Hab 2:16; Ob 16)

³⁶The LORD said to me: Mortal, will you judge Oholah and Oholibah? Then declare to them their abominable deeds. ³⁷For they have committed adultery, and blood is on their hands; with their idols they have committed adultery; and they have even offered up to them for food the children whom they had borne to me. ³⁸Moreover this they have done to me: they have defiled my sanctuary on the same day and profaned my sabbaths. ³⁹For when they had slaughtered their children for their idols, on the same day they came into my sanctuary to profane it. This is what they did in my house.

⁴⁰They even sent for men to come from far away, to whom a messenger was sent, and they came. For them you bathed yourself, painted your eyes, and decked yourself with ornaments; ⁴¹you sat on a stately couch, with a table spread before it on which you had placed my incense and my oil. ⁴²The sound of a raucous multitude was around her, with many of the rabble brought in drunken from the wilderness; and they put bracelets on the arms^a of the women, and beautiful crowns upon their heads.

⁴⁶For thus says the Lord God: Bring up an assembly against them, and make them an object of terror and of plunder. ⁴⁷The assembly shall stone them and with their swords they shall cut them down; they shall kill their sons and their daughters, and burn up their houses. ⁴⁸Thus will I put an end to lewdness in the land, so that all women may take warning and not commit lewdness as you have done. ⁴⁹They shall repay you for your lewdness, and you shall bear the penalty for your sinful idolatry; and you shall know that I am the Lord God.

24 In the ninth year, in the tenth month, on the tenth day of the month, the word of the LORD came to me: ²Mortal, write down the name of this day, this very day. The king of Babylon has laid siege to Jerusalem this very day. ³And utter an allegory to the rebellious house and say to them, Thus says the Lord God:

links Jerusalem's fate with Samaria's. 36–49: The case against the sisters. As adulterers are stoned (Lev 20.10), so the adultery (i.e., idolatry, child sacrifice, profanation of the sabbath, foreign alliances) of Samaria and Judah has been and will be punished—with death. 37: 16.20–22n. 40: Cf. vv. 16–17. 48: Oholibah's fate becomes an object lesson (cf. v. 10; 26.16; 27.35; 30.9).

24:1–14: The allegory of the pot is a disputation with those still quoting nationalistic slogans about Jerusalem being as inviolable as a cauldron (11.3). Ezekiel turns the cauldron image on its head by depicting it as a dirty pot about to be cleaned by overheating (like a modern self-cleaning oven; vv. 5,9) until the bones inside are burned (v. 10). 1: January 15, 588 BCE, the day that the Babylonian siege of Jerusalem began. 5: Jerusalem will be boiled as its assailants heap siege equipment around it. 6–8: Going beyond mere interpretation, these verses expand the image of the pot to provide reasons for Jerusalem's punishment. Rust, or, alternatively, "encrusted you shall not mourn or weep, nor shall your no mourning for the dead. Bind on your

to them: The word of the LORD came to me:

you shall pine away in your iniquities and groan to one another. ²⁴Thus Ezekiel shall be gunk” (also vv. 11–12), represents injustice and bloodguilt (22.6–12).

24.15–27: The sign of the death of Ezekiel’s wife. Ezekiel’s symbolic action shows the people that the loss of the Temple and cherished persons at Jerusalem’s fiery destruction in 586 BCE will bring profound recognition, reverent awe, and the submergence of ego. The people will mirror Aaron’s silent mourning following the release of holy fire in Lev 10.1–7, when God manifested the divine holiness and took two of Aaron’s sons with one blow. Ezek 24.17 uses the same Heb verb as Lev 10.3. 16–17: The LORD commands the prophet to stifle all expressions of grief and forgo all rituals of mourning, such as the unbinding of the hair, the removal of shoes, the covering of the upper lip, and the eating of the bread of mourners. Ezekiel is again drawing from Lev 10.1–7, where the Holiness School stresses that Aaron’s silence at God’s epiphany should properly include shunning all participation in mourning and funerary rituals. Holiness and death are antithetical realities for the Holiness School, and those in contact with God’s holiness must avoid the realm of death, mourning, and burial (see 44.25n.). In acting out Aaron’s avoidance of mourning, Ezekiel conveys to the people that the fall of Jerusalem will be a major epiphany of divine holiness on earth. 22–24: The people’s deep, silent grief will signify a profound discernment of divine judgment (in contrast to their previous skepticism and enmity toward Ezekiel). It will also entail recognition of God’s otherness (v. 24), which will afford the exiles the gracious opportunity for self-transcendence. 25–27: The release from speechlessness predicted. The prophet's muted response to the death of his wife has been a continuation of the divinely imposed bridling of his tongue in effect since his commissioning (3.22–27). When word of the fall of Jerusalem reaches Ezekiel (see 33.21–22), his tongue will be loosed (3.27), and he will proclaim a new message of restoration. At that time, Ezekiel's speechlessness will be transferred to and appropriated by the people (v. 23). That is, they will fully accept God's insistence from the start of the book on radically prioritizing the divine intention and its sure performance. They will drop a false reliance on the pride of their power (v. 21) and their stronghold (v. 25).

25.1–32.32: Oracles against the nations. This part of Ezekiel is an effective bridge between the book's message of doom and its message of hope. Here, doom for Israel's antagonists spells hope for Israel itself. Seven nations (Ammon, Moab, Edom, Philistia, Tyre, Sidon, and Egypt) will be punished before Israel is restored (36.5–7).

25.1–17: Oracles against Ammon, Moab, Edom, and Philistia. 1–7: Against Ammon (21.28; Am 1.13–15; Jer 49.1–6). Ammon, which had maliciously gloated over Judah's fall (Lam 2.15–16), is to be occupied by the people of the east (v. 4; cf. Isa 11.14), i.e., nomadic Arab tribes. 5: Rabbah (modern Amman, Jordan) was the Ammonite

I will cut you off from the peoples and will make you perish out of the countries; I will destroy you. Then you shall know that I am the LORD.

⁸ Thus says the Lord GOD: Because Moab^a said, The house of Judah is like all the other nations, ⁹ therefore I will lay open the flank of Moab from the towns^b on its frontier, the glory of the country, Beth-jeshimoth, Baalmeon, and Kiriathaim. ¹⁰ I will give it along with Ammon to the people of the east as a possession. Thus Ammon shall be remembered no more among the nations, ¹¹ and I will execute judgments upon Moab. Then they shall know that I am the LORD.

¹² Thus says the Lord GOD: Because Edom acted revengefully against the house of Judah and has grievously offended in taking vengeance upon them, ¹³ therefore thus says the Lord GOD, I will stretch out my hand against Edom, and cut off from it humans and animals, and I will make it desolate; from Teman even to Dedan they shall fall by the sword. ¹⁴ I will lay my vengeance upon Edom by the hand of my people Israel; and they shall act in Edom according to my anger and according to my wrath; and they shall know my vengeance, says the Lord GOD.

¹⁵ Thus says the Lord GOD: Because with unending hostilities the Philistines acted in vengeance, and with malice of heart took revenge in destruction; ¹⁶ therefore thus says the Lord GOD, I will stretch out my hand against the Philistines, cut off the Cherethites, and destroy the rest of the seacoast. ¹⁷ I will execute great vengeance on them with wrathful punishments. Then they shall know that I am the LORD, when I lay my vengeance on them.

26 In the eleventh year, on the first day of the month, the word of the LORD came to me: ² Mortal, because Tyre said concerning Jerusalem,

“Aha, broken is the gateway of the peoples; it has swung open to me; I shall be replenished, now that it is wasted,”

³ therefore, thus says the Lord GOD:

See, I am against you, O Tyre!

I will hurl many nations against you, as the sea hurls its waves.

⁴ They shall destroy the walls of Tyre and break down its towers.

I will scrape its soil from it and make it a bare rock.

⁵ It shall become, in the midst of the sea, a place for spreading nets.

I have spoken, says the Lord GOD.

It shall become plunder for the nations,

⁶ and its daughter-towns in the country shall be killed by the sword.

Then they shall know that I am the LORD.

⁷ For thus says the Lord GOD: I will bring against Tyre from the north King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon, king of kings, together with horses, chariots, cavalry, and a great and powerful army.

⁸ Your daughter-towns in the country he shall put to the sword.

He shall set up a siege wall against you, cast up a ramp against you, and raise a roof of shields against you.

26.1–28.19: Oracles against Tyre. 26.1–21: Tyre is to be destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar. 1–6: Tyre is judged for gloating over the fall of Jerusalem, a commercial rival, and for looking forward to taking over the city’s trade. 1: Both the (partially preserved) Hebrew and Septuagint texts date the passage several months before Jerusalem’s fall, anticipating it as having occurred already (v. 2). 7–14: Nebuchadnezzar will besiege the island city, which lay about a half-mile (1 km) offshore from the mainland city, after destroying the outlying settlements on the mainland (daughter-towns, v. 8). In fact, Nebuchadnezzar besieged the island of Tyre (after the mainland fell) for thirteen years. Tyre lost the war, but it was not destroyed or pillaged (as prophesied, v. 12). This state of affairs is

¹¹ With the hoofs of his horses he shall trample all your streets. He shall put your people to the sword, and your strong pillars shall fall to the ground.

¹² They will plunder your riches and loot your merchandise; they shall break down your walls and destroy your fine houses. Your stones and timber and soil they shall cast into the water.

¹³ I will silence the music of your songs; the sound of your lyres shall be heard no more.

¹⁴ I will make you a bare rock; you shall be a place for spreading nets. You shall never again be rebuilt, for I the LORD have spoken, says the Lord God.

¹⁵ Thus says the Lord God to Tyre: Shall not the coastlands shake at the sound of your fall, when the wounded groan, when slaughter goes on within you? ¹⁶ Then all the princes of the sea shall step down from their thrones; they shall remove their robes and strip off their embroidered garments. They shall clothe themselves with trembling, and shall sit on the ground; they shall tremble every moment, and be appalled at you. ¹⁷ And they shall raise a lamentation over you, and say to you:

How you have vanished^a from the seas, O city renowned, once mighty on the sea, you and your inhabitants,^b who imposed your^c terror on all the mainland!^d

¹⁸ Now the coastlands tremble on the day of your fall; the coastlands by the sea are dismayed at your passing.

¹⁹ For thus says the Lord God: When I make you a city laid waste, like cities that are not inhabited, when I bring up the deep over you, and the great waters cover you, ²⁰ then I will thrust you down with those who descend into the Pit, to the people of long ago, and I will make you live in the world below, among primeval ruins, with those who go down to the Pit, so that you will not be inhabited or have a place^e in the land of the living. ²¹ I will bring you to a dreadful end, and you shall be no more; though sought for, you will never be found again, says the Lord God.

27 The word of the LORD came to me: ² Now you, mortal, raise a lamentation over Tyre, ³ and say to Tyre, which sits at the entrance to the sea, merchant of the peoples on many coastlands, Thus says the Lord God: O Tyre, you have said, “I am perfect in beauty.”

The men of Gamad are perhaps the Cimmerians or Cappadocians in eastern Asia Minor. 12–25: A (mostly prose) description of the gallant ship's cargo of rich wares from many nations. Tyre's commercial empire is described first in horizontal fashion from west to east (vv. 12–15): Tarshish, perhaps Tartessus in southern Spain or Sardinia; Javan, Ionians, i.e., the Greeks of the Aegean; Tubal and Meshech, Assyrian "Tabal" and "Mushki," peoples settled in Asia Minor; Beth-togarmah, Assyrian "Tilgarimmu," in eastern Asia Minor (Armenia), east of the southernmost Halys River, east of Tubal. The description then moves vertically from south to northeast (vv. 16–19): Edom; Judah and Israel; Minnith, an Ammonite city (Judg 11.33); Damascus; Helbon, a famed wine center thirteen miles north of Damascus. The Arabian region is treated next (vv. 20–22): Dedan, in northwest Arabia; Kedar, a tribal group of northern Arabia; Sheba and Ramah, in southwest Arabia. Several Mesopotamian cities conclude the list (v. 23): Haran, in northwest Mesopotamia; Caneh, a town near Haran; Eden, the Aramaean state of Bit-Adini, south of Haran; Asshur, south of Nineveh;

Ramah traded with you; they exchanged for your wares the best of all kinds of spices, and all precious stones, and gold.
²³ Haran, Canneh, Eden, the merchants of Sheba, Asshur, and Chilmad traded with you. ²⁴ These traded with you in choice garments, in clothes of blue and embroidered work, and in carpets of colored material, bound with cords and made secure; in these they traded with you.^a ²⁵ The ships of Tarshish traded for you in your trade.

So you were filled and heavily laden in the heart of the seas.

²⁶ Your rowers have brought you into the high seas.

The east wind has wrecked you in the heart of the seas.

²⁷ Your riches, your wares, your merchandise, your mariners and your pilots, your caulkers, your dealers in merchandise, and all your warriors within you, with all the company that is with you, sink into the heart of the seas on the day of your ruin.

²⁸ At the sound of the cry of your pilots the countryside shakes, ²⁹ and down from their ships come all that handle the oar.

The mariners and all the pilots of the sea stand on the shore

³⁰ and wail aloud over you, and cry bitterly.

They throw dust on their heads and wallow in ashes;

³¹ they make themselves bald for you, and put on sackcloth, and they weep over you in bitterness of soul, with bitter mourning.

³² In their wailing they raise a lamentation for you, and lament over you:

“Who was ever destroyed^b like Tyre in the midst of the sea?

³³ When your wares came from the seas, you satisfied many peoples; with your abundant wealth and merchandise you enriched the kings of the earth.

³⁴ Now you are wrecked by the seas, in the depths of the waters; your merchandise and all your crew have sunk with you.

³⁵ All the inhabitants of the coastlands are appalled at you; and their kings are horribly afraid, their faces are convulsed.

³⁶ The merchants among the peoples hiss at you; you have come to a dreadful end and shall be no more forever.”

28 The word of the LORD came to me: ² Mortal, say to the prince of Tyre, Thus says the Lord God:

Because your heart is proud and you have said, “I am a god; I sit in the seat of the gods, in the heart of the seas,” yet you are but a mortal, and no god, though you compare your mind with the mind of a god.

³ You are indeed wiser than Daniel;^c no secret is hidden from you;

⁴ by your wisdom and your understanding you have amassed wealth for yourself, and have gathered gold and silver into your treasuries.

Chilmad, unidentified. 25: Ships of Tarshish, see 1 Kings 10.22; 22.48; Ps 48.7; Isa 23.1. 26–36: With this section, the dirge shifts from picturing Tyre’s past glory to describing its sudden end. As in 19.12, the east wind (sirocco) is an agent of destruction (cf. Ps 48.7). The sudden end of the great commercial city brings astonishment, fear, and grief to seafarers, merchants, and inhabitants of the coastlands. 31: 7:18n.

28.1–10: Oracle against the leader of Tyre. 2: Prince, the Heb term means “leader” or “ruler” here. The leader, who represents the whole people of Tyre, is judged for his pride (a universal offense, Prov 16.5). Hubris leads to self-deification. Thus the prince of Tyre sat in the seat of the gods (cf. Isa 14.13–14). Heart of the seas, see 28.14n.

⁶Therefore thus says the Lord God:
Because you compare your mind
with the mind of a god,

⁷therefore, I will bring strangers against
you,
the most terrible of the nations;
they shall draw their swords against the beauty of your wisdom and defile your splendor.

⁸They shall thrust you down to the Pit, and you shall die a violent death in the heart of the seas.

⁹Will you still say, “I am a god,” in the presence of those who kill you, though you are but a mortal, and no god, in the hands of those who wound
you?

¹⁰You shall die the death of the uncircumcised
by the hand of foreigners;
for I have spoken, says the Lord God.

¹¹Moreover the word of the LORD came to me: ¹²Mortal, raise a lamentation over the king of Tyre, and say to him, Thus says the Lord God:

You were the signet of perfection,^a full of wisdom and perfect in beauty.

¹³You were in Eden, the garden of God;
every precious stone was your covering,
carnelian, chrysolite, and moonstone,
beryl, onyx, and jasper,
sapphire,^b turquoise, and emerald;
and worked in gold were your settings and your engravings.^a

On the day that you were created they were prepared.

¹⁴With an anointed cherub as guardian I placed you;^a
you were on the holy mountain of God;
you walked among the stones of fire.

¹⁵You were blameless in your ways from the day that you were created, until iniquity was found in you.

¹⁶In the abundance of your trade you were filled with violence, and you sinned;

^a Meaning of Heb uncertain

^b Or lapis lazuli

3: In the Ugaritic tablets, Danel is the wise judge of widows and orphans (see 14.14n.). 6–10: The leader will be slain by the most terrible of the nations, Babylonia (30.10–11), and come to an ignominious end (the death of the uncircumcised, v. 10) in the Pit (v. 8), that is, Sheol, where the unfortunate dead are cut off from life and community (32.30). Like the Israelites, the Phoenicians practiced circumcision, and would be shocked to experience a postmortem fate in the abysmal depths of the netherworld where unclean and vile souls were confined.

28.11–19: A dirge over the king of Tyre. The passage reworks 28.1–10 based on a mythic tale in which a celestial figure succumbed to ambition and met his downfall through hubris (cf. the Ugaritic myth of Athtar). Since this myth was familiar outside of Israel, it provided Ezekiel a basis for the judgment of a nation such as Tyre that was outside Israel’s covenant. 12: The judgment of the king of Tyre serves as a concrete instance of the downfall of an archetypal being, but the text (especially vv. 14 and 16) is ambiguous as to whether this being was with a cherub, or, more likely, was a great cherub himself (see v. 14n. and v. 16b n.). A cherub would fit Ezekiel’s mythic tale well, since cherubim have an unstable, animalistic nature vulnerable to the lure of the cosmic center that they guard (cf. 28.2). Furthermore, in ancient Near Eastern myth, cherubim are nowhere companions to humans, as the NRSV translation would have it, but are interlocked with the divine presence itself (cf. 1.5–14n.). Wisdom, a characteristic trait of cherubim. Cf. the Ugaritic god Athtar, celebrated for knowledge and understanding, but unable successfully to occupy the throne at the cosmic center for which he longed. 13: Eden, ancient images of cherubim often appear in association with highly stylized trees, which mark paradise, where God is present (cf. Gen 3.24; Ezek 31.9; 41.18). With the cherub’s covering of precious stones, cf. the stones of the high priest’s breastplate in Ex 28.17–20, which itself must have had a symbolic connection to Eden. 14: The translation of the verse is contested (see textual note a). The Heb reads, “You were an anointed cherub.” The outstretched, shielding wings of a cherub made it an effective guardian of the cosmic center. Tyre’s ruler might initially have appreciated the comparison to a cherub. A magnificent, ninth-century Phoenician ivory depicts a human monarch in the guise of a semidivine cherub. The garden paradise of Eden (v. 13) sat atop the mythic cosmic mountain, the holy mountain of God that connects earth and heaven. Rivers flow from God’s mountain to fill earth’s lakes and oceans, making the mountain the “heart of the seas” (v. 2; cf. 47.1–12; Gen 2.10–14; Ps 46.4; Zech 14.8). Stones of fire, the stars of heaven, the astral coterie of the cherub. Arrayed in delicate balance so I cast you as a profane thing from the mountain of God, and the guardian cherub drove you out from among the stones of fire.

¹⁷Your heart was proud because of your beauty;
you corrupted your wisdom for the sake of your splendor.

I cast you to the ground;
I exposed you before kings,
to feast their eyes on you.

¹⁸By the multitude of your iniquities, in the unrighteousness of your trade,
you profaned your sanctuaries.

So I brought out fire from within you;
it consumed you,
and I turned you to ashes on the earth
in the sight of all who saw you.

¹⁹All who know you among the peoples are appalled at you;
you have come to a dreadful end and shall be no more forever.

²⁰The word of the LORD came to me:

²¹Mortal, set your face toward Sidon, and prophesy against it, ²²and say, Thus says the Lord God:

I am against you, O Sidon, and I will gain glory in your midst.

They shall know that I am the LORD
when I execute judgments in it, and manifest my holiness in it;

²³for I will send pestilence into it, and bloodshed into its streets;
and the dead shall fall in its midst,

by the sword that is against it on every side.

And they shall know that I am the LORD.

²⁴The house of Israel shall no longer find a pricking brier or a piercing thorn among all their neighbors who have treated them with contempt. And they shall know that I am the Lord God.

²⁵Thus says the Lord God: When I gather the house of Israel from the peoples among whom they are scattered, and manifest my holiness in them in the sight of the nations, then they shall settle on their own soil that I gave to my servant Jacob. ²⁶They shall live in safety in it, and shall build houses and plant vineyards. They shall live in safety, when I execute judgments upon all their neighbors who have treated them with contempt. And they shall know that I am the LORD their God.

29 In the tenth year, in the tenth month, on the twelfth day of the month, the word of the LORD came to me: ²Mortal, set your face against Pharaoh king of Egypt, and prophesy against him and against all Egypt; ³speak, and say, Thus says the Lord God:

I am against you,
Pharaoh king of Egypt,
the great dragon sprawling in the midst of its channels, saying, "My Nile is my own;
I made it for myself."

⁴I will put hooks in your jaws, and make the fish of your channels stick to your scales.

about the holy center of the universe, cherubim may covet the center's power. 16–19: The dirge moves from the cherub's past glory to an account of his downfall through hubris. 16a: The actual referent (Tyre's corrupt trade) intrudes into the allegorical figure (the primal cherub's sin) here. 16b: The NRSV is following the Septuagint (cf. Gen 3.23–24). The Heb reads, "I drove you out, O guardian cherub." For demotions of supernatural figures, cf. Ps 82.6–7; Isa 14.12; Lk 10.18. 17–18: The cherub arrogated to himself the "seat of the gods" (v. 2). Mimicking the hubris of this diabolical, celestial cherub, the earthly king of Tyre profaned his land. To the ground, in Ugaritic myth, Athtar's descent is also said to be to the "earth"/"underworld."

28.20–26: Oracle against Sidon, another Phoenician city, on the Mediterranean coast north of Tyre. 22: A good example of Ezekiel's Priestly language (cf. Ex 14.17–18; Lev 10.3). 24–26: Sidon's doom spells God's vindication. 24: Cf. Num 33.55 (HS). 25–26: Cf. 34.28; Lev 25.19.

29.1–32.32: Prophecies against Egypt. 29.1–16: Against Pharaoh (January 7, 587 BCE). 3: In a prophecy with strong Egyptian flavoring, the pharaoh is depicted as a monstrous crocodile of the Nile, whom God will cast on the land as carrion. Dragon, the Heb term often refers to the mythical monster of watery chaos (see 32.2n.), but here, as in Ex 7.8–12, its basic denotation is the reptilian crocodile (a signature creature of Egypt). (The Heb term takes on more of its common mythological connotations in 32.1–16.) Its channels, the Nile delta and canals. My own; I made it, in Egyptian religion the pharaoh created and controlled the Nile. 4: Hooks, cf. 38:4; Isa 37.29. Fish of your channels, the Egyptians and their mercenaries. 6b–9a: Staff of reed, compare the Assyrian Rabshakeh's

I will draw you up from your channels, with all the fish of your channels sticking to your scales.

⁵ I will fling you into the wilderness, you and all the fish of your channels;
you shall fall in the open field,
and not be gathered and buried.

To the animals of the earth and to the birds of the air
I have given you as food.

⁶ Then all the inhabitants of Egypt shall know
that I am the LORD

because you^a were a staff of reed
to the house of Israel;

⁷ when they grasped you with the hand, you broke,
and tore all their shoulders;
and when they leaned on you, you broke,
and made all their legs unsteady.^b

⁸ Therefore, thus says the Lord God: I will bring a sword upon you, and will cut off from you human being and animal; ⁹ and the land of Egypt shall be a desolation and a waste.
Then they shall know that I am the LORD.

Because you^c said, “The Nile is mine, and I made it,” ¹⁰ therefore, I am against you, and against your channels, and I will make the land of Egypt an utter waste and desolation, from Migdol to Syene, as far as the border of Ethiopia.^d ¹¹ No human foot shall pass through it, and no animal foot shall pass through it; it shall be uninhabited forty years.
¹² I will make the land of Egypt a desolation among desolated countries; and her cities shall be a desolation forty years among cities that are laid waste. I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and disperse them among the countries.

¹³ Further, thus says the Lord God: At the end of forty years I will gather the Egyptians from the peoples among whom they were scattered; ¹⁴ and I will restore the fortunes of Egypt, and bring them back to the land of Pathros, the land of their origin; and there they shall be a lowly kingdom. ¹⁵ It shall be the most lowly of the kingdoms, and never again exalt itself above the nations; and I will make them so small that they will never again rule over the nations. ¹⁶ The Egyptians^e shall never again be the reliance of the house of Israel; they will recall their iniquity, when they turned to them for aid.

Then they shall know that I am the Lord
GOD.

¹⁷ In the twenty-seventh year, in the first month, on the first day of the month, the word of the LORD came to me: ¹⁸ Mortal, King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon made his army labor hard against Tyre; every head was made bald and every shoulder was rubbed bare;
yet neither he nor his army got anything from Tyre to pay for the labor that he had expended against it. ¹⁹ Therefore thus says the Lord God: I will give the land of Egypt to King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon; and he shall carry off its wealth and despoil it and plunder it; and it shall be the wages for his army.

²⁰ I have given him the land of Egypt as his payment for which he labored, because they worked for me, says the Lord God.

²¹ On that day I will cause a horn to sprout up for the house of Israel, and I will open your lips among them. Then they shall know that I am the LORD.

similar belittlement of Egypt in 2 Kings 18.21; Isa 36.6. 29.17–21: Egypt as “wages” for Nebuchadrezzar, instead of Tyre. Ezekiel's latest dated oracle, April 26, 571 BCE. This unique passage amends the Tyre prophecies (26.12) in light of subsequent events. Nebuchadrezzar will get sufficient plunder from Egypt to compensate for his lack of booty from the siege of Tyre. The preservation of an earlier, embarrassingly unfulfilled prophecy (ch 26) in the book shows how quickly Ezekiel's prophecies took on scriptural authority. 21: Horn may refer to a reestablished Davidic monarch in Israel (Ps 132.17); cf. 17.22–24n.

Wail, “Alas for the day!”

³ For a day is near,
the day of the LORD is near;
it will be a day of clouds,
a time of doom^a for the nations.

⁴ A sword shall come upon Egypt, and anguish shall be in Ethiopia,^b
when the slain fall in Egypt, and its wealth is carried away,
and its foundations are torn down.

⁵ Ethiopia,^b and Put, and Lud, and all Arabia, and Libya,^c and the people of the allied land^d shall fall with them by the sword.

⁶ Thus says the LORD:
Those who support Egypt shall fall,
and its proud might shall come down;
from Migdol to Syene
they shall fall within it by the sword,
says the Lord God.

⁷ They shall be desolated among other desolated countries,
and their cities shall lie among cities
laid waste.

⁸ Then they shall know that I am the LORD,
when I have set fire to Egypt,
and all who help it are broken.

⁹ On that day, messengers shall go out from me in ships to terrify the unsuspecting Ethiopians;^e and anguish shall come upon them on the day of Egypt’s doom;^f for it is coming!

¹⁰ Thus says the Lord God:
I will put an end to the hordes of Egypt, by the hand of King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon.

¹¹ He and his people with him, the most terrible of the nations, shall be brought in to destroy the land;

and they shall draw their swords against Egypt,
and fill the land with the slain.

¹² I will dry up the channels, and will sell the land into the hand of
evildoers;

I will bring desolation upon the land and everything in it
by the hand of foreigners;
I the LORD have spoken.

¹³ Thus says the Lord God:
I will destroy the idols and put an end to the images in Memphis;
there shall no longer be a prince in the land of Egypt;

so I will put fear in the land of Egypt.
¹⁴ I will make Pathros a desolation, and will set fire to Zoan, and will execute acts of judgment on Thebes.

¹⁵ I will pour my wrath upon Pelusium, the stronghold of Egypt, and cut off the hordes of Thebes.

¹⁶ I will set fire to Egypt;
Pelusium shall be in great agony;
Thebes shall be breached, and Memphis face adversaries by day.

¹⁷ The young men of On and of Pi-beseth shall fall by the sword;
and the cities themselves^g shall go into captivity.

30.1–19: The doom of Egypt. 1–9: Since the time of the prophet Amos (Am 5:18–20), the “day of the LORD” was God’s judgment day on the Israelites (7:5–9n.; 13:5); later, as here, it became Israel’s restoration day but remained doomsday for the nations (38:18; 39:8). Put, and Lud, see 27:10n. 6–9: Egypt’s allies will collapse. Migdol to Syene, see 29:10n. Unsuspecting Ethiopians, the enormity of Egypt’s fall is emphasized by describing onlookers’ reactions. 10–12: Nebuchadrezzar is Egypt’s destroyer. 12: Channels, see 29:3n. 13–19: All Egypt will be destroyed. Images are condemned in Holiness School texts, such as Lev 19:4; 26:1. Memphis, south of Cairo, was the ancient capital of lower (northern) Egypt. Pathros, see 29:14n. Zoan, in the northeast delta region. Thebes, capital of upper Egypt, is present-day Karnak and Luxor. Pelusium, east of Zoan, in the delta region. On is Heliopolis, slightly northeast of Memphis. Pi-beseth, Bubastis, in the eastern delta. Tehaphnehes, Tahpanhes, on Egypt’s northeastern frontier.

when I break there the dominion of Egypt,
and its proud might shall come to an end;
the city^a shall be covered by a cloud, and its daughter-towns shall go into captivity.

¹⁹ Thus I will execute acts of judgment on Egypt.
Then they shall know that I am the
LORD.

²⁰ In the eleventh year, in the first month, on the seventh day of the month, the word of the LORD came to me: ²¹ Mortal, I have broken the arm of Pharaoh king of Egypt; it has not been bound up for healing or wrapped with a bandage, so that it may become strong to wield the sword. ²² Therefore thus says the Lord God: I am against Pharaoh king of Egypt, and will break his arms, both the strong arm and the one that was broken; and I will make the sword fall from his hand. ²³ I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and disperse them throughout the lands. ²⁴ I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, and put my sword in his hand; but I will break the arms of Pharaoh, and he will groan before him with the groans of one mortally wounded. ²⁵ I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, but the arms of Pharaoh shall fall. And they shall know that I am the LORD, when I put my sword into the hand of the king of Babylon. He shall stretch it out against the land of Egypt, ²⁶ and I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations and disperse them throughout the countries. Then they shall know that I am the LORD.

31 In the eleventh year, in the third month, on the first day of the month, the word of the LORD came to me: ² Mortal, say to Pharaoh king of Egypt and to his hordes:

Whom are you like in your greatness?

³ Consider Assyria, a cedar of Lebanon,

with fair branches and forest shade,
and of great height,
its top among the clouds.^b

⁴ The waters nourished it, the deep made it grow tall, making its rivers flow^c around the place it was planted, sending forth its streams to all the trees of the field.

⁵ So it towered high above all the trees of the field; its boughs grew large
and its branches long,
from abundant water in its shoots.

⁶ All the birds of the air made their nests in its boughs;
under its branches all the animals of the field gave birth to their young;
and in its shade
all great nations lived.

⁷ It was beautiful in its greatness, in the length of its branches;
for its roots went down to abundant water.

⁸ The cedars in the garden of God could not rival it,
nor the fir trees equal its boughs;
the plane trees were as nothing compared with its branches; no tree in the garden of God was like it in beauty.

30.20–26: Pharaoh disarmed. April 29, 587 BCE. The body imagery of broken arms represents military defeat. Nebuchadnezzar had broken one arm of Hophra the year before (vv. 20–21; see 29.6b–9a n.). The next time, he will break both arms (vv. 22–26).

31.1–18: The comparison between Assyria and Egypt. Date, June 21, 587 BCE. Ezekiel uses the archetype of the “cosmic tree” (see 17.22–24n.) to emphasize that, as with Assyria, the cause for Egypt’s fall will be pride (hubris). 3a: The fact of the downfall undergone by great Assyria, the superpower preceding Babylonia, supports the credibility of Ezekiel’s judgments against Egypt. See Nah 3.8–10 for a similar comparison of Egypt and Assyria. Ezekiel’s image of Assyria as a tree may have its source of inspiration in Isa 10.33–34. 3b–9: A dirge for the cosmic tree begins by describing its former glory. 4: The deep (Heb “tehom”), here, the world’s subterranean sweet-waters (Gen 7.11), which nourished the tree so that it reached into the heavens and sheltered all life (cf. Dan 4). 7–9: The splendor of the great cedar was incomparable (v. 18), surpassing those in the garden of

⁹I made it beautiful
with its mass of branches, the envy of all the trees of Eden that were in the garden of God.

¹⁰Therefore thus says the Lord God: Because it^a towered high and set its top among the clouds,^b and its heart was proud of its height,¹¹ I gave it into the hand of the prince of the nations; he has dealt with it as its wickedness deserves. I have cast it out.¹² Foreigners from the most terrible of the nations have cut it down and left it. On the mountains and in all the valleys its branches have fallen, and its boughs lie broken in all the watercourses of the land; and all the peoples of the earth went away from its shade and left it.

¹³On its fallen trunk settle all the birds of the air, and among its boughs lodge
all the wild animals.

¹⁴All this is in order that no trees by the waters may grow to lofty height or set their tops among the clouds,^b and that no trees that drink water may reach up to them in height.

For all of them are handed over to death,
to the world below;
along with all mortals,
with those who go down to the Pit.

¹⁵Thus says the Lord God: On the day it went down to Sheol I closed the deep over it and covered it; I restrained its rivers, and its mighty waters were checked. I clothed Lebanon in gloom for it, and all the trees of the field fainted because of it.¹⁶ I made the nations quake at the sound of its fall, when I cast it down to Sheol with those who go down to the Pit; and all the trees of Eden, the choice and best of Lebanon, all that were well watered, were consoled in the world below.¹⁷ They also went down to Sheol with it, to those killed by the sword, along with its allies,^c those who lived in its shade among the nations.

¹⁸Which among the trees of Eden was like you in glory and in greatness? Now you shall be brought down with the trees of Eden to the world below; you shall lie among the uncircumcised, with those who are killed by the sword. This is Pharaoh and all his horde, says the Lord God.

32 In the twelfth year, in the twelfth month, on the first day of the month, the word of the LORD came to me: ²Mortal, raise a lamentation over Pharaoh king of Egypt, and say to him:

God (28.13). 10–18: The tree's two-phased disaster. God will have it cut down; the life it sheltered will be dispersed (vv. 10–14). Once felled, it will go down still farther (vv. 15–18), to the Pit (v. 14), i.e., to Sheol, the abode of the dead, where it will lie with those who died in untimely, violent, or dishonorable ways. 11: Prince of the nations, Nabopolassar (626–605 BCE), founder of the Neo-Babylonian Empire, who, in alliance with the Medes, destroyed the Assyrian Empire in a series of battles between 614 and 609 BCE. 18: Uncircumcised, see 28.6–10n., 32.17–32n.

32.1–16: Dirge over Pharaoh. Date, March 3, 585 BCE. Although Pharaoh fancied himself a lion (v. 2; symbol of world-ranging power), Ezekiel declares he is better viewed as a sea-monster. 2: Dragon, a monstrous crocodile as in 29.3, but here with some of the fantastic proportions of the mythological chaos monster that the term signifies in Job 7:12; Ps 74.13; Isa 27.1; 51.9. In his hubris, Pharaoh aspires to rock the cosmos (in the seas, cf. Isa 27.1 and the watery chaos of Pss 46.3; 93.3). Verses 2,13–14 show, however, that in reality he can stir up only a little local trouble, muddying the water with his feet. 3–8: His punishment. Verses 6–8 recall the “day of the LORD” (see 30.1–9n.; Isa 13.10; Joel 2.2,30), in which God overcomes all opposing forces. They also echo the Exodus and will cause all the birds of the air to settle on you, and I will let the wild animals of the whole earth gorge themselves with you.

⁵ I will strew your flesh on the mountains, and fill the valleys with your carcass.^a

⁶ I will drench the land with your flowing blood up to the mountains, and the watercourses will be filled with you.

⁷ When I blot you out, I will cover the heavens, and make their stars dark; I will cover the sun with a cloud, and the moon shall not give its light.

⁸ All the shining lights of the heavens I will darken above you, and put darkness on your land,
says the Lord GOD.

⁹ I will trouble the hearts of many peoples, as I carry you captive^b among the nations, into countries you have not known.

¹⁰ I will make many peoples appalled at you; their kings shall shudder because of you.

When I brandish my sword before them, they shall tremble every moment for their lives, each one of them, on the day of your downfall.

¹¹ For thus says the Lord GOD: The sword of the king of Babylon shall come against you.

¹² I will cause your hordes to fall by the swords of mighty ones, all of them most terrible among the nations.

They shall bring to ruin the pride of Egypt, and all its hordes shall perish.

¹³ I will destroy all its livestock from beside abundant waters; and no human foot shall trouble them any more, nor shall the hoofs of cattle trouble them.

¹⁴ Then I will make their waters clear, and cause their streams to run like oil, says the Lord GOD.

¹⁵ When I make the land of Egypt desolate and when the land is stripped of all that fills it, when I strike down all who live in it, then they shall know that I am the LORD.

¹⁶ This is a lamentation; it shall be chanted. The women of the nations shall chant it.

Over Egypt and all its hordes they shall chant it,
says the Lord GOD.

¹⁷ In the twelfth year, in the first month,^c on the fifteenth day of the month, the word of the LORD came to me:

¹⁸ Mortal, wail over the hordes of Egypt, and send them down, with Egypt^d and the daughters of majestic nations, to the world below, with those who go down to the Pit.

¹⁹ “Whom do you surpass in beauty? Go down! Be laid to rest with the uncircumcised!”

²⁰ They shall fall among those who are killed by the sword. Egypt^e has been handed over to the sword; carry away both it and its hordes.

²¹ The mighty chiefs shall speak of them, with plagues against Egypt: blood (Ex 7:17); darkness (Ex 10.21–23 [HS]). 9–10: The nations’ reactions (cf. 26.16; 27.35). 11–15: The sword of God (v. 10; 30.4; Lev 26.25,33 [HS]) is concretely the Babylonians’ sword (cf. 30.25). 14: Reversing v. 2, God restores the Nile’s natural state (cf. Lev 26.34–35 [HS]).

32.17–32: Egypt in the underworld. The Septuagint’s date (textual note c) is April 27, 586 BCE. Like Tyre (28.10), Egypt belongs in the section of the underworld (“the Pit,” “Sheol”) reserved for the uncircumcised and those who are executed or who die violent or untimely deaths. They do not enjoy the status of the honored war-dead, who were properly buried (v. 27). The Egyptians apparently practiced circumcision, as did the Edomites (v. 29) and the Sidonians (v. 30; cf. 28.10n.). Thus, their fate is to the disgrace of all three peoples.

their helpers, out of the midst of Sheol: “They have come down, they lie still, the uncircumcised, killed by the sword.”

²² Assyria is there, and all its company, their graves all around it, all of them killed, fallen by the sword. ²³ Their graves are set in the uttermost parts of the Pit. Its company is all around its grave, all of them killed, fallen by the sword, who spread terror in the land of the living.

²⁶ Meshech and Tubal are there, and all their multitude, their graves all around them, all of them uncircumcised, killed by the sword; for they spread terror in the land of the living. ²⁷ And they do not lie with the fallen warriors of long ago^b who went down to Sheol with their weapons of war, whose swords were laid under their heads, and whose shields^c are upon their bones; for the terror of the warriors was in the land of the living. ²⁸ So you shall be broken and lie among the uncircumcised, with those who are killed by the sword.

³⁰ The princes of the north are there, all of them, and all the Sidonians, who have gone down in shame with the slain, for all the terror that they caused by their might; they lie uncircumcised with those who are killed by the sword, and bear their shame with those who go down to the Pit.

³¹ When Pharaoh sees them, he will be consoled for all his hordes—Pharaoh and all his army, killed by the sword, says the Lord GOD. ³² For he^d spread terror in the land of the living; therefore he shall be laid to rest among the uncircumcised, with those who are slain by the sword—Pharaoh and all his multitude, says the Lord GOD.

33 The word of the LORD came to me: ² O Mortal, speak to your people and say to them, If I bring the sword upon a land, and the people of the land take one of their number as their sentinel; ³ and if the sentinel sees the sword coming upon the land and blows the trumpet and warns the people; ⁴ then if any who hear the sound of the trumpet do not take warning, and the sword comes and takes them away, their blood shall be upon their own heads. ⁵ They heard the sound of the trumpet and did not take warning; their blood shall be upon themselves. But if they had taken warning, they would have saved their lives. ⁶ But if the sentinel sees the sword coming and does not blow the trumpet, so that the people are not warned, and the sword comes and takes any of them, they are taken away in their iniquity, but their blood I will require at the sentinel’s hand.

22–30: A roster. In its dishonorable demise Egypt will join others who were objects of God’s wrath (Isa 14.9–11), such as Assyria (31.3–17); Elam (defeated by Assyria, its western neighbor); Meshech and Tubal (see 27.12–25n.); Edom (25.12–14); princes of the north (unnamed rulers in Phoenicia and Syria); and Sidon (28.20–26). 23: The uttermost parts of the Pit constitute, in mythic poetry, a fate opposite to the goal of ascending to heaven (Isa 14.15).

33.1–39.29: Prophecies of Israel’s restoration. 33.1–20: Clarification of Ezekiel’s role. The social setting is given in v. 10. The exiles are now resigned to their condemnation and to Jerusalem’s destruction, but this resignation has led to an unanticipated, paralyzing hopelessness. Ezekiel delivers two responses to their demoralized state: God desires people to live, and sin is forgivable. 1–9: God reminds Ezekiel of his commission as a sentinel (3.16–21). This metaphor had originally assuaged Ezekiel’s personal reluctance about his calling. Here the prophet’s role as sentinel is stressed again to explain how the intention behind Ezekiel’s doom prophecy is not

⁷ So you, mortal, I have made a sentinel for the house of Israel; whenever you hear a word from my mouth, you shall give them warning from me. ⁸ If I say to the wicked, “O wicked ones, you shall surely die,” and you do not speak to warn the wicked to turn from their ways, the wicked shall die in their iniquity, but their blood I will require at your hand. ⁹ But if you warn the wicked to turn from their ways, and they do not turn from their ways, the wicked shall die in their iniquity, but you will have saved your life.

¹⁰ Now you, mortal, say to the house of Israel, Thus you have said: “Our transgressions and our sins weigh upon us, and we waste away because of them; how then can we live?” ¹¹ Say to them, As I live, says the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turn from their ways and live; turn back, turn back from your evil ways; for why will you die, O house of Israel? ¹² And you, mortal, say to your people, The righteousness of the righteous shall not save them when they transgress; and as for the wickedness of the wicked, it shall not make them stumble when they turn from their wickedness; and the righteous shall not be able to live by their righteousness^a when they sin.

¹³ Though I say to the righteous that they shall surely live, yet if they trust in their righteousness and commit iniquity, none of their righteous deeds shall be remembered; but in the iniquity that they have committed they shall die. ¹⁴ Again, though I say to the wicked, “You shall surely die,” yet if they turn from their sin and do what is lawful and right—¹⁵ if the wicked restore the pledge, give back what they have taken by robbery, and walk in the statutes of life, committing no iniquity—they shall surely live, they shall not die. ¹⁶ None of the sins that they have committed shall be remembered against them; they have done what is lawful and right, they shall surely live.

¹⁷ Yet your people say, “The way of the Lord is not just,” when it is their own way that is not just. ¹⁸ When the righteous turn from their righteousness, and commit iniquity, they shall die for it.^b ¹⁹ And when the wicked turn from their wickedness, and do what is lawful and right, they shall live by it.^b ²⁰ Yet you say, “The way of the Lord is not just.” O house of Israel, I will judge all of you according to your ways!

²¹ In the twelfth year of our exile, in the tenth month, on the fifth day of the month, someone who had escaped from Jerusalem came to me and said, “The city has fallen.” ²² Now the hand of the LORD had been upon me the evening before the fugitive came; but he had opened my mouth by the time the fugitive came to me in the morning; so my mouth was opened, and I was no longer unable to speak.

²³ The word of the LORD came to me: ²⁴ Mortal, the inhabitants of these waste places in the land of Israel keep saying, “Abraham was only one man, yet he got possession of the land; but we are many; the land is surely given us to possess.” ²⁵ Therefore say to them, Thus says the Lord God: You eat flesh with the blood, and lift up your eyes to your idols, and shed blood; shall you then possess the land? ²⁶ You depend on your swords, death but life, to call the people to repentance. 10–20: Repentance as the way to life. This oracle reemphasizes ch 18 and its stress on the moral autonomy of generations. Earlier this material had aimed to convict the exiles of their personal culpability. Here, Ezekiel’s theme of taking responsibility is used to show that one’s personal sinfulness is forgivable. 11: Cf. 18.23n.; 18.31. God’s impassioned plea is for all to find life, even the wicked.

33.21–22: Release from speechlessness. Escaped from Jerusalem, escaped death by exile to Babylonia. The exiles from Jerusalem arrived in Babylonia on January 19, 585 BCE, about half a year after Jerusalem’s fall. (See Ezra 7.9 for a comparable travel time.) Ezekiel’s concurrent release from the speechlessness of 3.26–27 was predicted at 24.27. The event is a watershed: the written judgment on Jerusalem of scripture, symbolized by the “written scroll” of 2.9–10, had been fulfilled, and now a new prophetic message of promise was possible.

33.23–33: Resistance in the homeland and in exile. 23–29: Disputation over possession of homeland property. Verse 24 reveals the social setting. The homelanderers are repeating their earlier claim to the land (11.15; cf. Isa 51.2). Verses 25–26 indict them in terms echoing 18.1–20; 22.11; Lev 19.16,26 (HS). On the three punishments you commit abominations, and each of you defiles his neighbor's wife; shall you then possess the land? ²⁷ Say this to them, Thus says the Lord God: As I live, surely those who are in the waste places shall fall by the sword; and those who are in the open field I will give to the wild animals to be devoured; and those who are in strongholds and in caves shall die by pestilence. ²⁸ I will make the land a desolation and a waste, and its proud might shall come to an end; and the mountains of Israel shall be so desolate that no one will pass through. ²⁹ Then they shall know that I am the LORD, when I have made the land a desolation and a waste because of all their abominations that they have committed.

³⁰ As for you, mortal, your people who talk together about you by the walls, and at the doors of the houses, say to one another, each to a neighbor, "Come and hear what the word is that comes from the LORD." ³¹ They come to you as people come, and they sit before you as my people, and they hear your words, but they will not obey them. For flattery is on their lips, but their heart is set on their gain. ³² To them you are like a singer of love songs,^a one who has a beautiful voice and plays well on an instrument; they hear what you say, but they will not do it. ³³ When this comes—and come it will!—then they shall know that a prophet has been among them.

34 The word of the LORD came to me: ² Mortal, prophesy against the shepherds of Israel: prophesy, and say to them—to the shepherds: Thus says the Lord God: Ah, you shepherds of Israel who have been feeding yourselves! Should not shepherds feed the sheep? ³ You eat the fat, you clothe yourselves with the wool, you slaughter the fatlings; but you do not feed the sheep. ⁴ You have not strengthened the weak, you have not healed the sick, you have not bound up the injured, you have not brought back the strayed, you have not sought the lost, but with force and harshness you have ruled them. ⁵ So they were scattered, because there was no shepherd; and scattered, they became food for all the wild animals. ⁶ My sheep were scattered, they wandered over all the mountains and on every high hill; my sheep were scattered over all the face of the earth, with no one to search or seek for them.

⁷ Therefore, you shepherds, hear the word of the LORD: ⁸ As I live, says the Lord God, because my sheep have become a prey, and my sheep have become food for all the wild animals, since there was no shepherd; and because my shepherds have not searched for my sheep, but the shepherds have fed themselves, and have not fed my sheep; ⁹ therefore, you shepherds, hear the word of the LORD: ¹⁰ Thus says the Lord God, I am against the shepherds; and I will demand my sheep at their hand, and put a stop to their feeding the sheep; no longer shall the shepherds feed themselves. I will rescue my sheep from their mouths, so that they may not be food for them.

¹¹ For thus says the Lord God: I myself will search for my sheep, and will seek them out. ¹² As shepherds seek out their flocks when they are among their scattered sheep, so I will seek out my sheep. I will rescue them from all the places to which they have been scattered on a day of clouds and thick darkness. ¹³ I will bring them out from the peoples and gather them from the countries, and will bring them into their own land; and I will feed them on the mountains of Israel, by the watercourses, and in all the inhabited parts of the land. ¹⁴ I in v. 27, cf. 5.17; 14.21. 30–33: With the fulfillment of his prophecy of Jerusalem's destruction, Ezekiel's popularity grew among the exiles. Unfortunately, the response of many exiles to Ezekiel's words was shallow, lacking in personal commitment. 32: Love songs, the Hebrew indicates that Ezekiel's words were just erotic entertainment to them; the same word is mistranslated "flattery" in v. 31.

34.1–31: The shepherds of Israel. 1–10: Israel's kings are symbolized by shepherders, contracted by God to care for God's livestock, the people (my sheep, v. 6); the same metaphor is widely used in the ancient Near East. But they had abused their people and scattered them. The chapter combines priestly ("Holiness School," see below) and Jeremianic (Jer 10.21; 23.1–4) language. 5: Wild animals, Judah's attackers, especially Babylonia. 7–10: Punishment of the herders and rescue of the flock. 11–16: God is the good shepherd (Isa 40.11; Jer 31.10) who will gather the entire dispersed flock. 12: Day of clouds and thick darkness, the Day of the LORD, as in Joel 2.2 and will feed them with good pasture, and the mountain heights of Israel shall be their pasture; there they shall lie down in good grazing land, and they shall feed on rich pasture on the mountains of Israel. ¹⁵ I myself will be the shepherd of my sheep, and I will make them lie down, says the Lord God. ¹⁶ I will seek the lost, and I will bring back the strayed, and I will bind up the injured, and I will strengthen the weak, but the fat and the strong I will destroy. I will feed them with justice.

¹⁷ As for you, my flock, thus says the Lord God: I shall judge between sheep and sheep, between rams and goats: ¹⁸ Is it not enough for you to feed on the good pasture, but you must tread down with your feet the rest of your pasture? When you drink of clear water, must you foul the rest with your feet? ¹⁹ And must my sheep eat what you have trodden with your feet, and drink what you have fouled with your feet?

²⁰ Therefore, thus says the Lord God to them: I myself will judge between the fat sheep and the lean sheep. ²¹ Because you pushed with flank and shoulder, and butted at all the weak animals with your horns until you scattered them far and wide, ²² I will save my flock, and they shall no longer be ravaged; and I will judge between sheep and sheep.

²³ I will set up over them one shepherd, my servant David, and he shall feed them: he shall feed them and be their shepherd. ²⁴ And I, the Lord, will be their God, and my servant David shall be prince among them; I, the Lord, have spoken.

²⁵ I will make with them a covenant of peace and banish wild animals from the land, so that they may live in the wild and sleep in the woods securely. ²⁶ I will make them and the region around my hill a blessing; and I will send down the showers in their season; they shall be showers of blessing. ²⁷ The trees of the field shall yield their fruit, and the earth shall yield its increase. They shall be secure on their soil; and they shall know that I am the Lord, when I break the bars of their yoke, and save them from the hands of those who enslaved them. ²⁸ They shall no more be plundered for the nations, nor shall the animals of the land devour them; they shall live in safety, and no one shall make them afraid. ²⁹ I will provide for them a splendid vegetation so that they shall no more be consumed with hunger in the land, and no longer suffer the insults of the nations. ³⁰ They shall know that I, the Lord their God, am with them, and that they, the house of Israel, are my people, says the Lord God. ³¹ You are my sheep, the sheep of my pasture^a and I am your God, says the Lord God.

35 The word of the Lord came to me: ² Mortal, set your face against Mount Seir, and prophesy against it, ³ and say to it, Thus says the Lord God:

I am against you, Mount Seir;

I stretch out my hand against you to make you a desolation and a waste.

⁴ I lay your towns in ruins;

you shall become a desolation, and you shall know that I am the Lord.

Zeph 1.15 (see 30.1–9n.; 32.3–8n.) 16: The focus shifts to God's care for needy individuals within the flock and to God's judgment of particular sheep (not just their shepherds). 17–31: A new order for Israel. 17–24: Sheep, good and bad, are found in the flock; the bad must be separated out (20.38). 23–24: God will install a Davidic ruler over the people (37.22–25; Jer 23.3–6; 30.9; Zech 6.12). Prince, see 44:1–3n. 25–31: An announcement of future blessedness dependent on the Holiness School: God will banish wild animals (v. 25; see Lev 26.6 [HS]), bless the people from Mount Zion (my hill, v. 26), and break the bars of their yoke (v. 27; see Lev 26.13 [HS]). Thus, the people will live in safety (v. 28; see Lev 26.5–6 [HS]). 29: Insults, see 36.15.

35.1–36.15: Oracle on behalf of the mountains of Israel. 35.1–15: Oracles against Edom. Edom has already been judged in Ezekiel's middle section (25.12–14). The present description of its grabbing of land belonging to Israel (v. 10; cf. 1 Esd 4.50) has been placed here as a foil for the restoration message of 35.1–36.15. Ezekiel's prophecies of restoration generally have as foils past wrongs, which they aim to reverse. 1–4: First oracle. 2: Mount Seir is the plateau in which Sela, the Edomite capital, was located. 5–9: Second oracle. 5: Cf. 25.12; Ob 10–14; Ps 137.7. The ancient enmity refers to the rivalry between Esau, the ancestor of the Edomites, and Jacob, ⁶ therefore, as I live, says the Lord God, I will prepare you for blood, and blood shall pursue you; since you did not hate bloodshed, bloodshed shall pursue you. ⁷ I will make Mount Seir a waste and a desolation; and I will cut off from it all who come and go. ⁸ I will fill its mountains with the slain; on your hills and in your valleys and in all your watercourses those killed with the sword shall fall. ⁹ I will make you a perpetual desolation, and your cities shall never be inhabited. Then you shall know that I am the LORD.

¹⁰ Because you said, “These two nations and these two countries shall be mine, and we will take possession of them,”—although the LORD was there— ¹¹ therefore, as I live, says the Lord God, I will deal with you according to the anger and envy that you showed because of your hatred against them; and I will make myself known among you,^a when I judge you. ¹² You shall know that I, the LORD, have heard all the abusive speech that you uttered against the mountains of Israel, saying, “They are laid desolate, they are given us to devour.” ¹³ And you magnified yourselves against me with your mouth, and multiplied your words against me; I heard it. ¹⁴ Thus says the Lord God: As the whole earth rejoices, I will make you desolate. ¹⁵ As you rejoiced over the inheritance of the house of Israel, because it was desolate, so I will deal with you; you shall be desolate, Mount Seir, and all Edom, all of it. Then they shall know that I am the LORD.

36 And you, mortal, prophesy to the mountains of Israel, and say: O mountains of Israel, hear the word of the LORD. ² Thus says the Lord God: Because the enemy said of you, “Aha!” and, “The ancient heights have become our possession,” ³ therefore prophesy, and say: Thus says the Lord God: Because they made you desolate indeed, and crushed you from all sides, so that you became the possession of the rest of the nations, and you became an object of gossip and slander among the people; ⁴ therefore, O mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord God: Thus says the Lord God to the mountains and the hills, the watercourses and the valleys, the desolate wastes and the deserted towns, which have become a source of plunder and an object of derision to the rest of the nations all around; ⁵ therefore thus says the Lord God: I am speaking in my hot jealousy against the rest of the nations, and against all Edom, who, with wholehearted joy and utter contempt, took my land as their possession, because of its pasture, to plunder it. ⁶ Therefore prophesy concerning the land of Israel, and say to the mountains and hills, to the watercourses and valleys, Thus says the Lord God: I am speaking in my jealous wrath, because you have suffered the insults of the nations; ⁷ therefore thus says the Lord God: I swear that the nations that are all around you shall themselves suffer insults.

⁸ But you, O mountains of Israel, shall shoot out your branches, and yield your fruit to my people Israel; for they shall soon come home. ⁹ See now, I am for you; I will turn to you, and you shall be tilled and sown; ¹⁰ and I will multiply your population, the whole house of Israel, all of it; the towns shall be

The highlands, representing all Israel, are here promised deliverance and blessing as a sort of pseudo-punishment for being desolated and slandered. Though dispossessed by Edom (35.1–15) and surrounding nations (Neh 2.19), Israel will be restored to her heritage. This oracle reverses ch 6 (e.g., contrast v. 10 with 6.4–7). 5: God’s personal identification with the land of Israel is shown by the phrase my land (cf. Lev 25.23 [HS]). 8–12: God’s redemption goes beyond the people’s repatriation and inner healing to include God’s granting them a new fruitfulness within a physically transformed environment. inhabited and the waste places rebuilt;¹¹ and I will multiply human beings and animals upon you. They shall increase and be fruitful; and I will cause you to be inhabited as in your former times, and will do more good to you than ever before. Then you shall know that I am the LORD.¹² I will lead people upon you—my people Israel—and they shall possess you, and you shall be their inheritance. No longer shall you bereave them of children.

¹³ Thus says the Lord God: Because they say to you, “You devour people, and you bereave your nation of children,”¹⁴ therefore you shall no longer devour people and no longer bereave your nation of children, says the Lord God;¹⁵ and no longer will I let you hear the insults of the nations, no longer shall you bear the disgrace of the peoples; and no longer shall you cause your nation to stumble, says the Lord God.

¹⁷ Mortal, when the house of Israel lived on their own soil, they defiled it with their ways and their deeds; their conduct in my sight was like the uncleanness of a woman in her menstrual period.¹⁸ So I poured out my wrath upon them for the blood that they had shed upon the land, and for the idols with which they had defiled it.¹⁹ I scattered them among the nations, and they were dispersed through the countries; in accordance with their conduct and their deeds I judged them.²⁰ But when they came to the nations, wherever they came, they profaned my holy name, in that it was said of them, “These are the people of the LORD, and yet they had to go out of his land.”²¹ But I had concern for my holy name, which the house of Israel had profaned among the nations to which they came.

²² Therefore say to the house of Israel, Thus says the Lord God: It is not for your sake, O house of Israel, that I am about to act, but for the sake of my holy name, which you have profaned among the nations to which you came.²³ I will sanctify my great name, which has been profaned among the nations, and which you have profaned among them; and the nations shall know that I am the LORD, says the Lord God, when through you I display my holiness before their eyes.²⁴ I will take you from the nations, and gather you from all the countries, and bring you into your own land.²⁵ I will sprinkle clean water upon you, and you shall be clean from all your uncleannesses, and from all your idols I will cleanse you.²⁶ A new heart I will give you, and a new spirit I will put within you; and I will remove from your body the heart of stone and give you a heart of flesh.²⁷ I will put my spirit within you, and make you follow my statutes and be careful to observe my ordinances.²⁸ Then you shall live in the land that I gave to your ancestors; and you shall be my people, and I will be your God.²⁹ I will save you from all your unclean-

36.16–38: God’s honor as the cause of the restoration. 16–21: Historical prologue. According to the Holiness School, when the homeland becomes defiled, it vomits out its inhabitants (Lev 18.25,28). This is what has happened to the exiled Israelites. 17: Uncleanness, see Lev 15.19–30 (Priestly tradition); 18.19 (HS). 20: My holy name, 20.9n. God’s name was desecrated (cf. Lev 20.3; 22.2,32 [HS]) either because the exile made God look powerless to protect the Israelites (NRSV’s interpretation; cf. Num 14.16) or because God’s people from God’s own land prove to be depraved (alternate sense of the Hebrew). 22–32: Verses 22 and 32 form an envelope around this section by their parallel assertions that the restoration is not something deserved. God’s mercy is unmerited by the people and even precedes their repentance (see 20.9n). According to v. 31, the people show remorse only after their restoration to the land. This chapter thus moves beyond texts such as Lev 26.40–42; Jer 31.18–20, where repentance is the driving motivation behind restoration. 24: A reversal of v. 19. 25: God will sprinkle them (cf. Num 19.20 [HS]; Ps 51.7) with water, purifying them, inasmuch as human beings cannot make themselves clean. 26: Ezekiel’s calls to repentance have failed (see 18.31n.). A radical, new creation (cf. 11.19; Ps 51.10) will be needed to break the people’s bondage to the cycles of sin and retribution of Israel’s past (ch 20). The concept of excising the people’s old incorrigible heart of stone (cf. 2.4; 3.7–9; Zech 7.12) and engrafting a completely new heart goes beyond Jer 31.33 and Deut 30.1–6, and is in keeping with Ezekiel’s focus on God’s sovereignty in effecting salvation (20.33–34). 27: The infusion of God’s spirit (cf. 37.14; 39.29; Ps 51.10–11; Joel 2.29; Zech 12.10) effects a fundamental regeneration of the people, so that obedience to the covenant (Lev 26.3 nesses, and I will summon the grain and make it abundant and lay no famine upon you. ³⁰ I will make the fruit of the tree and the produce of the field abundant, so that you may never again suffer the disgrace of famine among the nations. ³¹ Then you shall remember your evil ways, and your dealings that were not good; and you shall loathe yourselves for your iniquities and your abominable deeds. ³² It is not for your sake that I will act, says the LORD GOD; let that be known to you. Be ashamed and dismayed for your ways, O house of Israel.

³³ Thus says the Lord GOD: On the day that I cleanse you from all your iniquities, I will cause the towns to be inhabited, and the waste places shall be rebuilt. ³⁴ The land that was desolate shall be tilled, instead of being the desolation that it was in the sight of all who passed by. ³⁵ And they will say, “This land that was desolate has become like the garden of Eden; and the waste and desolate and ruined towns are now inhabited and fortified.” ³⁶ Then the nations that are left all around you shall know that I, the LORD, have rebuilt the ruined places, and replanted that which was desolate; I, the LORD, have spoken, and I will do it.

37 The hand of the LORD came upon me, and he brought me out by the spirit of the LORD and set me down in the middle of a valley; it was full of bones. ² He led me all around them; there were very many lying in the valley, and they were very dry. ³ He said to me, “Mortal, can these bones live?” I answered, “O Lord GOD, you know.” ⁴ Then he said to me, “Prophecy to these bones, and say to them: O dry bones, hear the word of the LORD. ⁵ Thus says the Lord GOD to these bones: I will cause breath^b to enter you, and you shall live. ⁶ I will lay sinews on you, and will cause flesh to come upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath^b in you, and you shall live; and you shall know that I am the LORD.”

⁷ So I prophesied as I had been commanded; and as I prophesied, suddenly there was a noise, a rattling, and the bones came together, bone to its bone. ⁸ I looked, and there were sinews on them, and flesh had come upon them, and skin had covered them; but there was no breath in them. ⁹ Then he said to me, “Prophecy to the breath, prophesy, mortal, and say to the breath:^c Thus says the Lord GOD: Come from the four winds, O breath,^c and breathe upon these slain, that they may live.” ¹⁰ I prophesied as he commanded me, and the breath came into them, and they lived, and stood on their feet, a vast multitude.

¹¹ Then he said to me, “Mortal, these bones are the whole house of Israel. They say, ‘Our [HS]) will come naturally from now on and the restoration will be permanent. 29–30: Lev 26.4 (HS). 33–36: The skeptical nations (v. 20) will recognize Israel’s transformation to a paradise as God’s act. 35: Garden of Eden, Gen 2.4–14; cf. Ezek 47.1–12n.; Isa 51.3. God will now be at home in Israel just as in God’s garden, Eden. 37–38: Note the reversal of 14.3; 20.3,31. As Jerusalem always bustled with flocks at pilgrimage times, Israel will now teem with human interaction, mutuality, and spiritual energy (a blessing of the Holiness School covenant; Lev 26.9). Thus, the proliferation of the flock will signal its consecration (see textual note a).

37.1–14: Vision of the valley of dry bones. 1: A valley, in Heb, “the valley,” suggesting that this is the same locale as in 3.22; 8.4. 3: Ezekiel does not yet realize that this vision refers to the reestablishment of the exiles back in their homeland. Thus bodily resurrection was at least a theoretical possibility for Ezekiel (cf. 1 Kings 17.22; 2 Kings 4.35; 13.21). 4–8: The first of two prophecies that are enfolded within the vision. As in Gen 2.7, life is generated here in two stages. 9–10: Suspense builds, as a second prophesying is required in order to animate the bones. Hebrew “ruah” can mean “spirit,” “breath,” or “wind”; thus there is a constant wordplay here. Four winds may refer to God’s cosmic reach (1.17; Zech 6.5). These slain, the bones’ identity is still unclear at this point, the assumption now being that Ezekiel is surveying an old battlefield. (The Hebrew word multitude in v. 10 com-bones are dried up, and our hope is lost; we are cut off completely.¹² Therefore prophesy, and say to them, Thus says the Lord God: I am going to open your graves, and bring you up from your graves, O my people; and I will bring you back to the land of Israel.¹³ And you shall know that I am the LORD, when I open your graves, and bring you up from your graves, O my people.¹⁴ I will put my spirit within you, and you shall live, and I will place you on your own soil; then you shall know that I, the LORD, have spoken and will act, says the LORD.”

¹⁵ The word of the LORD came to me: ¹⁶ Mortal, take a stick and write on it, “For Judah, and the Israelites associated with it”; then take another stick and write on it, “For Joseph (the stick of Ephraim) and all the house of Israel associated with it”;¹⁷ and join them together into one stick, so that they may become one in your hand.¹⁸ And when your people say to you, “Will you not show us what you mean by these?”¹⁹ say to them, Thus says the Lord God: I am about to take the stick of Joseph (which is in the hand of Ephraim) and the tribes of Israel associated with it; and I will put the stick of Judah upon it,^a and make them one stick, in order that they may be one in my hand.²⁰ When the sticks on which you write are in your hand before their eyes,²¹ then say to them, Thus says the Lord God: I will take the people of Israel from the nations among which they have gone, and will gather them from every quarter, and bring them to their own land.²² I will make them one nation in the land, on the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king over them all. Never again shall they be two nations, and never again shall they be divided into two kingdoms.²³ They shall never again defile themselves with their idols and their detestable things, or with any of their transgressions. I will save them from all the apostasies into which they have fallen,^b and will cleanse them. Then they shall be my people, and I will be their God.

²⁴ My servant David shall be king over them; and they shall all have one shepherd. They shall follow my ordinances and be careful to observe my statutes.²⁵ They shall live in the land that I gave to my servant Jacob, in which your ancestors lived; they and their children and their children’s children shall live there forever; and my servant David shall be their prince forever.²⁶ I will make a covenant of peace with them; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them; and I will bless^c them and multiply them; and I will set my sanctuary among them forevermore.²⁷ My dwelling place shall be with them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people.²⁸ Then the nations shall know that I the LORD sanctify Israel, when my sanctuary is among them forevermore.

38 The word of the LORD came to me: ² Mortal, set your face toward Gog, of the land of Magog, the chief prince of monly means “army.” 11–14: The interpretation. Verse 11 finally reveals the actual life setting of the prophecy by citing words from a lament: The exiles’ bones are dried, a metaphor for a downcast spirit (Prov 17.22; 15.30). The metaphor of resurrection is the antidote to such despair. Cut off, a metaphor for being within the power of death (Ps 88.5; Lam 3.54). In vv. 12–14, the passage shifts to a metaphor of disinterment as an antidote to this complaint.

37.15–28: The symbolic action of the two sticks (cf. Zech 11.7–14) envisions the reunification of the Southern (“Judah”) and Northern (“Joseph/Ephraim/Israel”) Kingdoms. Full restoration will then be realized (34.28; 36.10): law-abiding living (11.20) in the promised land (28.25) under the Davidic ruler (34.23–24) in a covenant of peace (34.25). At that time, God will permanently return to the central sanctuary (43.9). 22: Mountains of Israel, 6.1–10n. 25: Prince, monarchic ruler (cf. 12.10; 19.1; 34.24; 44.1–3n.). 27: Dwelling place, in the theology of the Holiness School, God’s glory properly dwells among God’s people (cf. Ex 25.8; 29.45–46; 40.34; Lev 26.11; Num 5.3; 35.34 [HS]). 28: As in the ideal of the Holiness School, God sanctifies Israel by radiating the divine holiness out to the entire land (cf. Ex 31.13; Lev 19.2; 21.15; 22.32[HS]).

38.1–39.29: The Gog of Magog oracles are early apocalyptic literature, describing the imminent attack on the promised land by an embodiment of evil from the north. After a cataclysmic, doomsday battle, God will Meshech and Tubal. Prophecy against him³ and say: Thus says the Lord God: I am against you, O Gog, chief prince of Meshech and Tubal; ⁴I will turn you around and put hooks into your jaws, and I will lead you out with all your army, horses and horsemen, all of them clothed in full armor, a great company, all of them with shield and buckler, wielding swords. ⁵Persia, Ethiopia,^a and Put are with them, all of them with buckler and helmet; ⁶Gomer and all its troops; Beth-togarmah from the remotest parts of the north with all its troops—many peoples are with you.

⁷Be ready and keep ready, you and all the companies that are assembled around you, and hold yourselves in reserve for them.

⁸After many days you shall be mustered; in the latter years you shall go against a land restored from war, a land where people were gathered from many nations on the mountains of Israel, which had long lain waste; its people were brought out from the nations and now are living in safety, all of them. ⁹You shall advance, coming on like a storm; you shall be like a cloud covering the land, you and all your troops, and many peoples with you.

¹⁰Thus says the Lord God: On that day thoughts will come into your mind, and you will devise an evil scheme. ¹¹You will say, “I will go up against the land of unwalled villages; I will fall upon the quiet people who live in safety, all of them living without walls, and having no bars or gates”; ¹²to seize spoil and carry off plunder; to assail the waste places that are now inhabited, and the people who were gathered from the nations, who are acquiring cattle and goods, who live at the center^b of the earth. ¹³Sheba and Dedan and the merchants of Tarshish and all its young warriors^c will say to you, “Have you come to seize spoil? Have you assembled your horde to carry off plunder, to carry away silver and gold, to take away cattle and goods, to seize a great amount of booty?”

¹⁴Therefore, mortal, prophesy, and say to Gog: Thus says the Lord God: On that day when my people Israel are living securely, you will rouse yourself^d and come from your place out of the remotest parts of the north, you and many peoples with you, all of them riding on horses, a great horde, a mighty army; ¹⁶you will come up against my people Israel, like a cloud covering the earth. In the latter days I will bring you against my land, so that the nations may know me, when through you, O Gog, I display my holiness before their eyes.

¹⁷Thus says the Lord God: Are you he of whom I spoke in former days by my ser-be acknowledged by all nations as the undisputed victor (38.23; 39.21–29). At this point in the book, Ezekiel's prophecies of restoration, which aim to reverse preceding tragedies, have not yet reversed Israel's Babylonian destruction. The northern foe here is thus probably an end-time surrogate for Babylon, and for any superpower that has challenged the sovereignty of God. The followers of Ezekiel who recorded these apocalyptic oracles were central priests of their society, despite the claims of some scholars that all apocalyptic texts derive from peripheral groups. 38.1–9: Prophecy against Gog. 2: Gog, a name perhaps derived from Gyges, a seventh-century BCE ruler of Lydia in Asia Minor. For Ezekiel's audience, the name would have conjured thoughts of mysterious and barbaric happenings in the far north. Gog is no symbol in this text but a mythic-realistic entity: tangibly real, but of mythological proportions. He is God's archetypal enemy, arising against God's people on doomsday. Magog, Gen 10.2. 3: Meshech and Tubal, see 27.12–25n.; Gen 10.2. 5: Put, Libya; Gen 10.5. 6: Gomer, the Cimmerians in Asia Minor (Gen 10.2–3), far north of Israel. Beth-togarmah, see 27.12–25n. 10–13: The perspective shifts from God's external control (vv. 3–9) to Gog's interior motives. 12: Center, see 5.5n. Ezekiel is affirming and re-envisioning Zion theology here. 13: Sheba, Dedan, and Tarshish were all engaged in trade; see 27.12–25n. 14–16: God's motive is God's glory. 17: Transition. 18–23 (and 39.11–16): Expansion of the Gog oracles, radicalizing their apocalyptic and priestly fervor. The radical magnitude of the apocalyptic threat is clear from the cosmic collapse (cf. Joel 2.10,30; Zech 14.4–5) and from the seven months (39.12) required to bury the enemy dead in the region east of the Dead Sea. In keeping with the Ezekiel group's status as priests, increasing priestly concern accompanies the increased apocalyptic feeling: This section draws heavily on Holiness School wants the prophets of Israel, who in those days prophesied for years that I would bring you against them? ¹⁸On that day, when Gog comes against the land of Israel, says the Lord GOD, my wrath shall be aroused. ¹⁹For in my jealousy and in my blazing wrath I declare: On that day there shall be a great shaking in the land of Israel; ²⁰the fish of the sea, and the birds of the air, and the animals of the field, and all creeping things that creep on the ground, and all human beings that are on the face of the earth, shall quake at my presence, and the mountains shall be thrown down, and the cliffs shall fall, and every wall shall tumble to the ground. ²¹I will summon the sword against Gog^a in^b all my mountains, says the Lord GOD; the swords of all will be against their comrades. ²²With pestilence and bloodshed I will enter into judgment with him; and I will pour down torrential rains and hailstones, fire and sulfur, upon him and his troops and the many peoples that are with him. ²³So I will display my greatness and my holiness and make myself known in the eyes of many nations. Then they shall know that I am the LORD.

39 And you, mortal, prophesy against Gog, and say: Thus says the Lord GOD: I am against you, O Gog, chief prince of Meshech and Tubal! ²I will turn you around and drive you forward, and bring you up from the remotest parts of the north, and lead you against the mountains of Israel. ³I will strike your bow from your left hand, and will make your arrows drop out of your right hand. ⁴You shall fall on the mountains of Israel, you and all your troops and the peoples that are with you; I will give you to birds of prey of every kind and to the wild animals to be devoured. ⁵You shall fall in the open field; for I have spoken, says the Lord GOD. ⁶I will send fire on Magog and on those who live securely in the coastlands; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

⁷My holy name I will make known among my people Israel; and I will not let my holy name be profaned any more; and the nations shall know that I am the LORD, the Holy One in Israel. ⁸It has come! It has happened, says the Lord GOD. This is the day of which I have spoken.

⁹Then those who live in the towns of Israel will go out and make fires of the weapons and burn them—bucklers and shields, bows and arrows, handpikes and spears—and they will make fires of them for seven years. ¹⁰They will not need to take wood out of the field or cut down any trees in the forests, for they will make their fires of the weapons; they will despoil those who despoiled them, and plunder those who plundered them, says the Lord GOD.

¹¹On that day I will give to Gog a place for burial in Israel, the Valley of the Travelers^c east of the sea; it shall block the path of the travelers, for there Gog and all his horde will be buried; it shall be called the Valley of Hamon-gog.^d ¹²Seven months the house of Israel shall spend burying them, in order to cleanse the land. ¹³All the people of the land shall bury them; and it will bring them honor on the day that I show my glory, says the Lord GOD. ¹⁴They will set apart men to pass through the land regularly and bury any invaders^e who remain on the face of the land, so as to cleanse it; for seven months they shall make their search. ¹⁵As the searchers^e pass through the land, anyone who sees a human bone shall set up a sign by it, until the buriers have buried it in the Valley of Hamon-gog.^d ¹⁶(A city Hamonah^f is there also.) Thus they shall cleanse the land.

¹⁷ As for you, mortal, thus says the Lord God: Speak to the birds of every kind and to all the wild animals: Assemble and come, gather from all around to the sacrificial feast that I am preparing for you, a great sacrificial feast on the mountains of Israel, and you shall eat flesh and drink blood. ¹⁸ You shall eat the flesh of the mighty, and drink the blood of the princes of the earth—of rams, of lambs, and of goats, of bulls, all of them fatlings of Bashan. ¹⁹ You shall eat fat until you are filled, and drink blood until you are drunk, at the sacrificial feast that I am preparing for you. ²⁰ And you shall be filled at my table with horses and charioteers,^a with warriors and all kinds of soldiers, says the Lord God.

²¹ I will display my glory among the nations; and all the nations shall see my judgment that I have executed, and my hand that I have laid on them. ²² The house of Israel shall know that I am the LORD their God, from that day forward. ²³ And the nations shall know that the house of Israel went into captivity for their iniquity, because they dealt treacherously with me. So I hid my face from them and gave them into the hand of their adversaries, and they all fell by the sword. ²⁴ I dealt with them according to their uncleanness and their transgressions, and hid my face from them.

²⁵ Therefore thus says the Lord God: Now I will restore the fortunes of Jacob, and have mercy on the whole house of Israel; and I will be jealous for my holy name. ²⁶ They shall forget^b their shame, and all the treachery they have practiced against me, when they live securely in their land with no one to make them afraid, ²⁷ when I have brought them back from the peoples and gathered them from their enemies' lands, and through them have displayed my holiness in the sight of many nations. ²⁸ Then they shall know that I am the LORD their God because I sent them into exile among the nations, and then gathered them into their own land. I will leave none of them behind; ²⁹ and I will never again hide my face from them, when I pour out my spirit upon the house of Israel, says the Lord God.

40 In the twenty-fifth year of our exile, at the beginning of the year, on the tenth day of the month, in the fourteenth year after the city was struck down, on that very day, the hand of the LORD was upon me, and he brought me there. ² He brought me, in visions of God, to the land of Israel, and set me down upon a very high mountain, on which was a structure like a city to the south. ³ When he brought me there, a man was there, whose appearance shone like bronze,

40.1–48.35: Blueprint for the restored Temple and land. The blueprint that Ezekiel details here includes new ideal features that aim to prevent the wrongs of the past—those that led to the destruction of Solomon's Temple in 586 BCE—from ever happening again. New Temple fortifications and new land boundaries will demarcate the holiness of the land and people (e.g., 42.20n.) with the Temple functioning as an organizing center of this holiness (43.12). In accordance with the Holiness School, the plan provides for the settlements and entire people of Israel to be encompassed by the holiness of God, whose dwelling in their midst is now to be permanently safeguarded (43.7; 44.1–3; 48.35). This section of Ezekiel does not prophesy a literal future for the Temple; rather, it offers a Temple plan as an embodiment of the values of Ezekiel and his followers.

40.1–42.20: The new Temple. Ezekiel's Temple complex is modeled on that of Solomon (see 1 Kings 6 and 2 Chr 3), but with key modifications, such as immense gate-towers and graded zones of holiness, meant to secure the hierarchical world of the Holiness School. 40.1–27: The Temple area and gates: 1–5: April 28, 573 BCE. On the twenty-fifth anniversary of his exile, Ezekiel is transported in a vision (cf. 8.2–3) to the Temple mountain with a linen cord and a measuring reed in his hand; and he was standing in the gateway.

⁴The man said to me, “Mortal, look closely and listen attentively, and set your mind upon all that I shall show you, for you were brought here in order that I might show it to you; declare all that you see to the house of Israel.”

⁵Now there was a wall all around the outside of the temple area. The length of the measuring reed in the man’s hand was six long cubits, each being a cubit and a handbreadth in length; so he measured the thickness of the wall, one reed; and the height, one reed. ⁶Then he went into the gateway facing east, going up its steps, and measured the threshold of the gate, one reed deep.^a There were ⁷recesses, and each recess was one reed wide and one reed deep; and the space between the recesses, five cubits; and the threshold of the gate by the vestibule of the gate at the inner end was one reed deep. ⁸Then he measured the inner vestibule of the gateway, one cubit. ⁹Then he measured the vestibule of the gateway, eight cubits; and its pilasters, two cubits; and the vestibule of the gate was at the inner end. ¹⁰There were three recesses on either side of the east gate; the three were of the same size; and the pilasters on either side were of the same size. ¹¹Then he measured the width of the opening of the gateway, ten cubits; and the width of the gateway, thirteen cubits. ¹²There was a barrier before the recesses, one cubit on either side; and the recesses were six cubits on either side. ¹³Then he measured the gate from the back^b of the one recess to the back^b of the other, a width of twenty-five cubits, from wall to wall.^c ¹⁴He measured^d also the vestibule, twenty cubits; and the gate next to the pilaster on every side of the court.^e ¹⁵From the front of the gate at the entrance to the end of the inner vestibule of the gate was fifty cubits. ¹⁶The recesses and their pilasters had windows, with shutters^e on the inside of the gateway all around, and the vestibules also had windows on the inside all around; and on the pilasters were palm trees.

¹⁷Then he brought me into the outer court; there were chambers there, and a pavement, all around the court; thirty chambers fronted on the pavement. ¹⁸The pavement ran along the side of the gates, corresponding to the length of the gates; this was the lower pavement. ¹⁹Then he measured the distance from the inner front of^f the lower gate to the outer front of the inner court, one hundred cubits.^g

²⁰Then he measured the gate of the outer court that faced north—its depth and width. ²¹Its recesses, three on either side, and its pilasters and its vestibule were of the same size as those of the first gate; its depth was fifty cubits, and its width twenty-five cubits. ²²Its windows, its vestibule, and its palm trees were of the same size as those of the gate that faced toward the east. Seven steps led up to it; and its vestibule was on the inside.^h ²³Opposite the gate on the north, as on the east, was a gate to the inner court; he measured from gate to gate, one hundred cubits.

Heavy pilasters (piers) with windows separated the recessed chambers, or guardrooms, inside the gate-tower (three on each side). This gate is treated further in 43.1–5; 44.1–3. The plan of the gate is similar to several excavated gateways, such as those at Megiddo, Hazor, and Gezer. 8: One cubit, the Hebrew text is problematic here. 16: Palm trees, see 28.13n.; cf. 1 Kings 6.29,35. 17–19: The Temple area’s outer courtyard. ²⁸ Then he brought me to the inner court by the south gate, and he measured the south gate; it was of the same dimensions as the others. ²⁹ Its recesses, its pilasters, and its vestibule were of the same size as the others; and there were windows all around in it and in its vestibule; its depth was fifty cubits, and its width twenty-five cubits. ³⁰ There were vestibules all around, twenty-five cubits deep and five cubits wide. ³¹ Its vestibule faced the outer court, and palm trees were on its pilasters, and its stairway had eight steps.

Temple platform was an elevated area. 28–46: The inner gate-towers. Ezekiel is shown three gates (south, east, north) leading to the inner court corresponding to those leading to the outer court. Only priests could pass through these inner gates (42.14; 44.19; 46.3). 31: Eight steps, the Temple was built on a succession of terraces, so that height demarcated gradations of holiness, just as did walled perimeters and gates (vv. 34,37). Holiness increased as one proceeded farther up and into the Temple. 38–43: The vestibules of the inner gates contained facilities for the preparation of sacrifices. Burnt, sin, and guilt offerings, see Lev 1.1–7.38. 44–46: Priests' chambers. On the north and south sides of the inner court were buildings for the use of the priests. These may be small cells (for priests on guard duty?), different from the chambers in 42.1–14. 44: The singers, Levitical priests (cf. 1 Chr 9.33). East gate, read "south gate" with the Septuagint. 46b: An editorial clarification that only Zadokite priests, such as Ezekiel and his group, may sacrifice at the altar (43.19; 44.15–31n.). 40.47–41.4: The Temple south, the other at the side of the east gate facing north. ⁴⁵He said to me, “This chamber that faces south is for the priests who have charge of the temple, ⁴⁶and the chamber that faces north is for the priests who have charge of the altar; these are the descendants of Zadok, who alone among the descendants of Levi may come near to the LORD to minister to him.” ⁴⁷He measured the court, one hundred cubits deep, and one hundred cubits wide, a square; and the altar was in front of the temple.

⁴⁸Then he brought me to the vestibule of the temple and measured the pilasters of the vestibule, five cubits on either side; and the width of the gate was fourteen cubits; and the sidewalls of the gate were three cubits^a on either side. ⁴⁹The depth of the vestibule was twenty cubits, and the width twelve^b cubits; ten steps led up^c to it; and there were pillars beside the pilasters on either side.

41 Then he brought me to the nave, and measured the pilasters; on each side six cubits was the width of the pilasters.^d ²The width of the entrance was ten cubits; and the sidewalls of the entrance were five cubits on either side. He measured the length of the nave, forty cubits, and its width, twenty cubits. ³Then he went into the inner room and measured the pilasters of the entrance, two cubits; and the width of the entrance, six cubits; and the sidewalls^e of the entrance, seven cubits. ⁴He measured the depth of the room, twenty cubits, and its width, twenty cubits, beyond the nave. And he said to me, This is the most holy place.

⁵Then he measured the wall of the temple, six cubits thick; and the width of the side chambers, four cubits, all around the temple. ⁶The side chambers were in three stories, one over another, thirty in each story. There were offsets^f all around the wall of the temple to serve as supports for the side chambers, so that they should not be supported by the wall of the temple. ⁷The passageway^g of the side chambers widened from story to story; for the structure was supplied with a stairway all around the temple. For this reason the structure became wider from story to story. One ascended from the bottom story to the uppermost story by way of the middle one. ⁸I saw also that the temple had a raised platform all around; the foundations of the side chambers measured a full reed of six long cubits. ⁹The thickness of the outer wall of the side chambers was five cubits; and the free space between the side chambers of the temple ¹⁰and the chambers of the court was a width of twenty cubits all around the temple on every side. ¹¹The side chambers opened onto the area left free, one door toward the north, and another door toward the south; and the width of the part that was left free was five cubits all around.

¹²The building that was facing the temple yard on the west side was seventy cubits wide; and the wall of the building was five cubits thick all around, and its depth ninety cubits.

¹³Then he measured the temple, one hundred cubits deep; and the yard and the building with its walls, one hundred cubits deep; ¹⁴also the width of the east front of the temple and the yard, one hundred cubits.

¹⁵Then he measured the depth of the building facing the yard at the west, together proper. The successive entrances to the Temple's three rooms become more narrow, symbolizing increasing holiness (40.48; 41.2; 41.3). 40.49: According to the Septuagint (textual note c), the Temple was ten steps (10 ft [3 m]; see 41.8) above the level of the inner court. (Again, steps indicate increasing holiness; cf. vv. 22,31.) In front of the vestibule were freestanding pillars (1 Kings 7.15–22). The vestibule (40.48–49) was 34 ft (10.5 m) x 20.5 ft (6.3 m). The nave (41.1–2), which Ezekiel could enter as a Zadokite priest, was 69 ft (21 m) x 34 ft (10.5 m). The adytum (inner room or most holy place, 41.3–4), which Ezekiel did not enter (Lev 16), was a square of 34 ft (10.5 m) per side (1 Kings 6.16; 7.50; 8.6; Ex 26.33–34). 41.5–15a: Annexes and surroundings. The three tiers of thirty chambers per tier on the sides of the Temple (1 Kings 6.5–10) probably stored Temple treasures (cf. 44.30; 1 Kings 14.26; 2 Kings 14.14) and equipment for Temple services. 10: Chambers of the court, 42.1–14.

The nave of the temple and the inner room and the outer^b vestibule¹⁶ were paneled,^c and, all around, all three had windows with recessed^d frames. Facing the threshold the temple was paneled with wood all around, from the floor up to the windows (now the windows were covered),¹⁷ to the space above the door, even to the inner room, and on the outside. And on all the walls all around in the inner room and the nave there was a pattern.^e ¹⁸ It was formed of cherubim and palm trees, a palm tree between cherub and cherub. Each cherub had two faces: ¹⁹ a human face turned toward the palm tree on the one side, and the face of a young lion turned toward the palm tree on the other side. They were carved on the whole temple all around; ²⁰ from the floor to the area above the door, cherubim and palm trees were carved on the wall.^f

²¹ The doorposts of the nave were square. In front of the holy place was something resembling²² an altar of wood, three cubits high, two cubits long, and two cubits wide;^g its corners, its base,^h and its walls were of wood. He said to me, "This is the table that stands before the LORD."²³ The nave and the holy place had each a double door.²⁴ The doors had two leaves apiece, two swinging leaves for each door.²⁵ On the doors of the nave were carved cherubim and palm trees, such as were carved on the walls; and there was a canopy of wood in front of the vestibule outside.²⁶ And there were recessed windows and palm trees on either side, on the sidewalls of the vestibule.ⁱ

42 Then he led me out into the outer court, toward the north, and he brought me to the chambers that were opposite the temple yard and opposite the building on the north.² The length of the building that was on the north side^j was^k one hundred cubits, and the width fifty cubits.³ Across the twenty cubits that belonged to the inner court, and facing the pavement that belonged to the outer court, the chambers rose^l gallery^m by gallery^m in three stories.⁴ In front of the chambers was a passage on the inner side, ten cubits wide and one hundred cubits deep,ⁿ and its^o entrances were on the north.⁵ Now the upper chambers were narrower, for the galleries^m took more away from them than from the lower and middle chambers in the building.⁶ For they were in three stories, and they had no pillars like the pillars of the outer^p court; for this reason the upper chambers were set back from the ground more than the lower and the middle ones.⁷ There was a wall outside parallel to the chambers, toward the outer court, opposite the chambers, fifty cubits long.⁸ For the chambers on the outer court were fifty cubits long, while those opposite the temple were one hundred cubits long.⁹ At the foot of these chambers ran a passage that one entered from the east in order to enter them from the outer court.

12: A large auxiliary building stood west of the Temple; it may also have been intended for storage purposes.

15b–26: Wall decoration and interior furnishings. 16: The windows were like those in the gates (40.16). 18–20: The Temple aimed to model Eden, God's cosmic dwelling, where fantastic trees and cherubim are present (cf. 28.13n.; 1 Kings 6.29–30). 22: The table in the nave was for the bread of the Presence, see Ex 25.23–30 (not HS); Lev 24.5–9 (HS).

42.1–14: The priests' chambers. Ezekiel first sees the north sacristy, which was behind (west of) the north gate-tower to the inner court. Similar chambers were on the Temple's south side (vv. 10–12). Perhaps the three stories of chambers were arranged terrace-fashion against the north and south walls retaining the inner court.

¹⁰ The width of the passage^a was fixed by the wall of the court.

On the south^b also, opposite the vacant area and opposite the building, there were chambers¹¹ with a passage in front of them; they were similar to the chambers on the north, of the same length and width, with the same exits^c and arrangements and doors.¹² So the entrances of the chambers to the south were entered through the entrance at the head of the corresponding passage, from the east, along the matching wall.^d

¹³ Then he said to me, “The north chambers and the south chambers opposite the vacant area are the holy chambers, where the priests who approach the LORD shall eat the most holy offerings; there they shall deposit the most holy offerings—the grain offering, the sin offering, and the guilt offering—for the place is holy.¹⁴ When the priests enter the holy place, they shall not go out of it into the outer court without laying there the vestments in which they minister, for these are holy; they shall put on other garments before they go near to the area open to the people.”

¹⁵ When he had finished measuring the interior of the temple area, he led me out by the gate that faces east, and measured the temple area all around.¹⁶ He measured the east side with the measuring reed, five hundred cubits by the measuring reed.¹⁷ Then he turned and measured^e the north side, five hundred cubits by the measuring reed.¹⁸ Then he turned and measured^e the south side, five hundred cubits by the measuring reed.¹⁹ Then he turned to the west side and measured, five hundred cubits by the measuring reed.²⁰ He measured it on the four sides. It had a wall around it, five hundred cubits long and five hundred cubits wide, to make a separation between the holy and the common.

43 Then he brought me to the gate, the gate facing east.² And there, the glory of the God of Israel was coming from the east; the sound was like the sound of mighty waters; and the earth shone with his glory.³ The^f vision I saw was like the vision that I had seen when he came to destroy the city, and⁹ like the vision that I had seen by the river Chebar; and I fell upon my face.⁴ As the glory of the LORD entered the temple by the gate facing east,⁵ the spirit lifted me up, and brought me into the inner court; and the glory of the LORD filled the temple.

⁶ While the man was standing beside me, I heard someone speaking to me out of the temple.⁷ He said to me: Mortal, this is the place of my throne and the place for the soles of my feet, where I will reside among the people of Israel forever. The house of Israel shall no more defile my holy name, neither they nor their kings, by their whoring, and by the corpses of their kings at their death.^h⁸ When they placed their threshold by my threshold and their doorposts beside my doorposts, with only a wall between me and them, they were defiling my holy name by their abominations that they committed; therefore I have consumed them in my anger.⁹ Now let them put away their idolatry and the corpses

A second, smaller apartment building was opposite, on the outer-court side. 13: On the sacrifices, see 40.38–39n.; 44.28–31; Lev 2.1–10; 7.7–10. 14: See 44.19n. 15–20: The measuring completed. The total Temple area was a square of 861 ft (262 m) per side. 20: Marking boundaries of holiness, distinguishing between the holy and the common, was a central concern of Zadokites, such as Ezekiel (22.26; 44.23; Lev 10.10–11 [HS]).

43.1–12: Return of the glory of the LORD. As God on the throne-chariot had forsaken the Temple by the east gate (10.18–19; 11.22–23), so God’s glory (see 10.1–22n.) returns through the same gate (40.6–16; 44.1–3) and dwells in the new Temple (Ex 40.34–38 [HS]; 1 Kings 8.10–11). 2: Sound of mighty waters, see 1.4n. 3: Chebar, 1.1–3n. Fell upon my face, 1.28n.; 3.23. 6–12: God warns against any more defiling of the Temple. The text particularly attacks royal encroachment on the Temple, perhaps in constructing shrines to other deities in the Temple courtyard, and the practice of royal funerary offerings at the Temple (the Hebrew may refer not to corpses but to deification of deceased kings). 7: Holiness School theology triumphs, as God’s glory takes up permanent of their kings far from me, and I will reside among them forever.

¹⁰ As for you, mortal, describe the temple to the house of Israel, and let them measure the pattern; and let them be ashamed of their iniquities. ¹¹ When they are ashamed of all that they have done, make known to them the plan of the temple, its arrangement, its exits and its entrances, and its whole form—all its ordinances and its entire plan and all its laws; and write it down in their sight, so that they may observe and follow the entire plan and all its ordinances. ¹² This is the law of the temple: the whole territory on the top of the mountain all around shall be most holy. This is the law of the temple.

¹⁸ Then he said to me: Mortal, thus says the Lord God: These are the ordinances for the altar: On the day when it is erected for offering burnt offerings upon it and for dashing blood against it, ¹⁹ you shall give to the levitical priests of the family of Zadok, who draw near to me to minister to me, says the Lord God, a bull for a sin offering. ²⁰ And you shall take some of its blood, and put it on the four horns of the altar, and on the four corners of the ledge, and upon the rim all around; thus you shall purify it and make atonement for it. ²¹ You shall also take the bull of the sin offering, and it shall be burnt in the appointed place belonging to the temple, outside the sacred area.

²² On the second day you shall offer a male goat without blemish for a sin offering; and the altar shall be purified, as it was purified with the bull. ²³ When you have finished purifying it, you shall offer a bull without blemish and a ram from the flock without blemish. ²⁴ You shall present them before the LORD, and the priests shall throw salt on them and offer them up as a burnt offering to the LORD. ²⁵ For seven days you shall provide daily a goat for a sin offering; also a bull and a ram from the flock, without blemish, shall be provided. ²⁶ Seven days shall they make atonement for the altar and cleanse it, and so consecrate it. ²⁷ When these days are over, then from the eighth day onward the priests shall offer upon the altar your burnt offerings and your offerings of well-being; and I will accept you, says the Lord God.

The Temple plan of chs 40–42 provides for the holiness appropriate for God's eternal presence. 12: Law of the temple, it was the priests, such as Ezekiel, who transmitted such law to people (44.23n.).

43.13–17: The altar of burnt offerings (40.47). The altar symbolizes a mythic cosmic center (cf. 5.5n.; 38.12n.), its shape resembling the Babylonian ziggurats meant to be cosmic centers and gateways to heaven (see Gen 11.4). The base on the ground (v. 14) is literally, "the bosom of the earth." The altar hearth (v. 15) in Hebrew is spelled like "the mountain of God." 13: Cubit, see 40.5n. 15: Horns, see 1 Kings 1.50n. 16: Hearth, the altar's top layer, where sacrifices were burned. 17: The height of the altar, over 17 ft (5.2 m), necessitated its having steps (contrast Ex 20.26). 43.18–27: The altar's consecration. On the analogy of earlier consecratory rites (Ex 29.36–37 (not HS); 40.1–38 [HS]; Lev 8.14–15), the priests of Zadok (40.46n.; 44.15–31n.) are to dedicate the altar upon its completion. 21: Lev 4.11–12; 8.16–17.

44.1–3: The outer east gate. This gate-tower (40.6–14) remains closed, symbolizing its consecration by God's entrance (43.4) and God's permanent presence inside the Temple (43.7). Thus shut, the gate-complex becomes a ceremonial room. As his sacral privilege, the prince was to enter it from the Temple's outer courtyard to eat his part of the sacrificial meal (43.27; Lev 7.15; 22.21). Ezekiel's preferred term for Israel's monarchic leader me: This gate shall remain shut; it shall not be opened, and no one shall enter by it; for the LORD, the God of Israel, has entered by it; therefore it shall remain shut.³ Only the prince, because he is a prince, may sit in it to eat food before the LORD; he shall enter by way of the vestibule of the gate, and shall go out by the same way.

⁴Then he brought me by way of the north gate to the front of the temple; and I looked, and lo! the glory of the LORD filled the temple of the LORD; and I fell upon my face.

⁵The LORD said to me: Mortal, mark well, look closely, and listen attentively to all that I shall tell you concerning all the ordinances of the temple of the LORD and all its laws; and mark well those who may be admitted to^a the temple and all those who are to be excluded from the sanctuary.⁶ Say to the rebellious house,^b to the house of Israel, Thus says the Lord God: O house of Israel, let there be an end to all your abominations⁷ in admitting foreigners, uncircumcised in heart and flesh, to be in my sanctuary, profaning my temple when you offer to me my food, the fat and the blood. You^c have broken my covenant with all your abominations.⁸ And you have not kept charge of my sacred offerings; but you have appointed foreigners^d to act for you in keeping my charge in my sanctuary.

⁹Thus says the Lord God: No foreigner, uncircumcised in heart and flesh, of all the foreigners who are among the people of Israel, shall enter my sanctuary.¹⁰ But the Levites who went far from me, going astray from me after their idols when Israel went astray, shall bear their punishment.¹¹ They shall be ministers in my sanctuary, having oversight at the gates of the temple, and serving in the temple; they shall slaughter the burnt offering and the sacrifice for the people, and they shall attend on them and serve them.¹² Because they ministered to them before their idols and made the house of Israel stumble into iniquity, therefore I have sworn concerning them, says the Lord God, that they shall bear their punishment.¹³ They shall not come near to me, to serve me as priest, nor come near any of my sacred offerings, the things that are most sacred; but they shall bear their shame, and the consequences of the abominations that they have committed.¹⁴ Yet I will appoint them to keep charge of the temple, to do all its chores, all that is to be done in it.

¹⁵But the levitical priests, the descendants of Zadok, who kept the charge of my sanctuis prince. The term derives from Israel's tribal past, and Ezekiel uses it to uphold the kinship networks of the countryside and the landed patrimonies that supported them (see 45:8–9n.; 46:18n.). The Holiness School is concerned with organizing and stabilizing God's entire holy territory including the countryside, not just an isolated royal capital. In 34.24 and 37.25, the prince is a Davidic figure in the new era of restoration. Here in chs 40–48, the prince is less an ideal royal figure than a civil ruler with immediate, concrete tasks.

44.4–31: Temple ordinances. 4–5: A renewed commission. 6–16: Ezekiel's blueprint for the restored priesthood of Israel again redresses past wrongs. Under the influence of the Holiness School, Ezekiel finds these particular past wrongs encapsulated in Num 16–18, a text about the rebellion of Levites during Israel's wilderness wanderings. 7–8: The primary reference is to a prototypical narrative: the Levites' encroachment on priestly prerogatives in Num 16.40; 18.4.7. The Levites are foreigners, that is "outsiders," with respect to the priestly obligations of the sanctuary and the altar. 10–14: After their rebellion in the wilderness, the Levites were given circumscribed responsibilities. Here, the Levites are restored to these responsibilities in the new Temple, as the Holiness School had specified them (Num 18:3–4). 10: When Israel went astray, Num 16.2,22,41. Bear their punishment, Num 18.23. 11: The limitation of the slaughtering of sacrifices to the Levites, thus disenfranchising the general populace, is a new holiness stricture that goes beyond Lev 1.5,11. Attend . . . and serve, Num 16.9. 13: Num 18.3. 14: Num 18.4. 15–31: The Zadokite priesthood (see 40.46b n.; 43.19; 48.11). The Zadokites, one of at least three major priestly lineages in ancient Israel, had been the central priests at Jerusalem's preexilic Temple. Their origins trace back to Solomon's elevation of Zadok, the founder of the Zadokite lineage, to be chief priest after Abiathar's banishment (2 Sam 20.25; 1 Kings 1.7–8,41–45; 2.26–27). Ezekiel and his group were themselves Zadokite priests. 1 Chr 6.50–53 and 24.31 trace Zadok's ancestry back to Eleazar, Aaron's son. Here, vv. 15–16 refer ary when the people of Israel went astray from me, shall come near to me to minister to me; and they shall attend me to offer me the fat and the blood, says the Lord God. ¹⁶ It is they who shall enter my sanctuary, it is they who shall approach my table, to minister to me, and they shall keep my charge. ¹⁷ When they enter the gates of the inner court, they shall wear linen vestments; they shall have nothing of wool on them, while they minister at the gates of the inner court, and within. ¹⁸ They shall have linen turbans on their heads, and linen undergarments on their loins; they shall not bind themselves with anything that causes sweat. ¹⁹ When they go out into the outer court to the people, they shall remove the vestments in which they have been ministering, and lay them in the holy chambers; and they shall put on other garments, so that they may not communicate holiness to the people with their vestments. ²⁰ They shall not shave their heads or let their locks grow long; they shall only trim the hair of their heads. ²¹ No priest shall drink wine when he enters the inner court. ²² They shall not marry a widow, or a divorced woman, but only a virgin of the stock of the house of Israel, or a widow who is the widow of a priest. ²³ They shall teach my people the difference between the holy and the common, and show them how to distinguish between the unclean and the clean. ²⁴ In a controversy they shall act as judges, and they shall decide it according to my judgments. They shall keep my laws and my statutes regarding all my appointed festivals, and they shall keep my sabbaths holy. ²⁵ They shall not defile themselves by going near to a dead person; for father or mother, however, and for son or daughter, and for brother or unmarried sister they may defile themselves. ²⁶ After he has become clean, they shall count seven days for him. ²⁷ On the day that he goes into the holy place, into the inner court, to minister in the holy place, he shall offer his sin offering, says the Lord God.

²⁸ This shall be their inheritance: I am their inheritance; and you shall give them no holding in Israel; I am their holding. ²⁹ They shall eat the grain offering, the sin offering, and the guilt offering; and every devoted thing in Israel shall be theirs. ³⁰ The first of all the first fruits of all kinds, and every offering of all kinds from all your offerings, shall belong to the priests; you shall also give to the priests the first of your dough, in order that a blessing may rest on your house. ³¹ The priests shall not eat of anything, whether bird or animal, that died of itself or was torn by animals.

45 When you allot the land as an inheritance, you shall set aside for the LORD a portion of the land as a holy district, twenty-five thousand cubits long and twenty^a thousand cubits wide; it shall be holy throughout its entire extent. ² Of this, a square plot of five hundred by five hundred cubits shall be for the sanctuary, with fifty cubits for an open space around it. ³ In the holy district you shall measure off a section twenty-five thousand cubits long and ten thousand wide, in which shall be the sanctuto how Aaron and Eleazar had been faithful during the Levites' rebellion (Num 16.11,20–22,36–40,46–50). These priests were the ancestors of the Zadokites, and Ezekiel views the Zadokites as present "embryonically" in their actions. 15–16: Num 18.7 (cf. Lev 16.14–15). 17–31: Priestly rules. 17: Linen vestments, see 9.1–2n.; Ex 39.27–29 (HS). 19: 42.14. Communicate holiness, cf. 46.20. Sanctity could sometimes be transmitted through direct contact with a sacred substance (see Lev 6.18,26–27). The goal here is to preserve gradations of sanctity. Failure in this regard was life-threatening (see Num 16.38 [HS]). 20: The care of the hair, Lev 21.5 (HS). 21: No wine before service, Lev 10.9 (HS). 22: Proper marriage, Lev 21.7,13–15 (HS). 23: Teaching of the people, Lev 10.10–11 (HS); 2 Chr 17.9; Hag 2.10–13. 24: Judges, 1 Chr 23.4; 2 Chr 19.11. 25: Defilement by a corpse, see 39.11–16n.; Lev 21.1–3 (HS). 28: No inheritance, 45.1–5; 48.8–14; Num 18.20–24 (HS). 29–30: Eating sacrifices and first fruits, Num 18.9–13 (HS); Lev 2.3; 6.16,26; 7.6–7. Every devoted thing, Num 18.14 (HS). 31: Lev 7.24; 22.8 (HS).

45.1–9: The distribution of land (continued in 47.13–48.35) is idealized. A holy district is to contain a northern section for the Levites and a southern section for the sacrificing priests. The latter includes the square section for the Temple area (42.15–20) plus an enclosure space (not mentioned earlier). The property of Jerusalem south of the holy district (v. 6) makes with the holy district (v. 1) a square area of ca. 8 mi (13 km) per side. The prince ary, the most holy place. ⁴It shall be a holy portion of the land; it shall be for the priests, who minister in the sanctuary and approach the LORD to minister to him; and it shall be both a place for their houses and a holy place for the sanctuary. ⁵Another section, twenty-five thousand cubits long and ten thousand cubits wide, shall be for the Levites who minister at the temple, as their holding for cities to live in.^a ⁶Alongside the portion set apart as the holy district you shall assign as a holding for the city an area five thousand cubits wide, and twenty-five thousand cubits long; it shall belong to the whole house of Israel.

⁷And to the prince shall belong the land on both sides of the holy district and the holding of the city, alongside the holy district and the holding of the city, on the west and on the east, corresponding in length to one of the tribal portions, and extending from the western to the eastern boundary ⁸of the land. It is to be his property in Israel. And my princes shall no longer oppress my people; but they shall let the house of Israel have the land according to their tribes.

⁹Thus says the Lord God: Enough, O princes of Israel! Put away violence and oppression, and do what is just and right. Cease your evictions of my people, says the Lord God.

¹⁰You shall have honest balances, an honest ephah, and an honest bath.^b ¹¹The ephah and the bath shall be of the same measure, the bath containing one-tenth of a homer, and the ephah one-tenth of a homer; the homer shall be the standard measure. ¹²The shekel shall be twenty gerahs. Twenty shekels, twenty-five shekels, and fifteen shekels shall make a mina for you.

¹³This is the offering that you shall make: one-sixth of an ephah from each homer of wheat, and one-sixth of an ephah from each homer of barley,¹⁴ and as the fixed portion of oil,^c one-tenth of a bath from each cor (the cor,^d like the homer, contains ten baths);¹⁵ and one sheep from every flock of two hundred, from the pastures of Israel. This is the offering for grain offerings, burnt offerings, and offerings of well-being, to make atonement for them, says the Lord God. ¹⁶All the people of the land shall join with the prince in Israel in making this offering. ¹⁷But this shall be the obligation of the prince regarding the burnt offerings, grain offerings, and drink offerings, at the festivals, the new moons, and the sabbaths, all the appointed festivals of the house of Israel: he shall provide the sin offerings, grain offerings, the burnt offerings, and the offerings of well-being, to make atonement for the house of Israel.

¹⁸Thus says the Lord God: In the first month, on the first day of the month, you shall take a young bull without blemish, and purify the sanctuary. ¹⁹The priest shall take some of the blood of the sin offering and put it on the doorposts of the temple, the four corners of the ledge of the altar, and the posts of the gate of the inner court. ²⁰You shall do the same on the seventh day of the month for anyone who has sinned through error or ignorance; so you shall make atonement for the temple.

²¹In the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month, you shall celebrate the festival

(see 44.1–3n.) is to hold the strips of land to the west and east of this square area. 8–9: In accordance with the ideals of the Holiness School (Lev 25.10,23–24,42), princes are denied the power to evict subjects from their family homesteads (cf. 11.15n.; 22.27; 46.18n.).

45.10–17: Weights and measures for offerings. For present-day equivalents of ephah, bath, homer, shekel, gerah, and mina, see Table of Weights and Measures. The Holiness School insisted on honest measures (see Lev 19.35–36). 13–17: The people will bring gifts for the regular sacrifices to the prince, who, as their representative, will offer them to God. These offerings are additional to the donations given to the priests of 44.30.

45.18–25: Festival regulations. 18–20: A new annual ritual for purifying the Temple or a one-time, inaugural purification. 21–25: Ezekiel's brief festival-calendar highlights the passover (Ex 12; Lev 23.4–8) and the festival of booths (the festival of the seventh month in v. 25; see Lev 23.33–36). It omits the festival of weeks (Pentecost; of the passover, and for seven days unleavened bread shall be eaten.²² On that day the prince shall provide for himself and all the people of the land a young bull for a sin offering.²³ And during the seven days of the festival he shall provide as a burnt offering to the LORD seven young bulls and seven rams without blemish, on each of the seven days; and a male goat daily for a sin offering.²⁴ He shall provide as a grain offering an ephah for each bull, an ephah for each ram, and a hin of oil to each ephah.²⁵ In the seventh month, on the fifteenth day of the month and for the seven days of the festival, he shall make the same provision for sin offerings, burnt offerings, and grain offerings, and for the oil.

46 Thus says the Lord God: The gate of the inner court that faces east shall remain closed on the six working days; but on the sabbath day it shall be opened and on the day of the new moon it shall be opened.² The prince shall enter by the vestibule of the gate from outside, and shall take his stand by the post of the gate. The priests shall offer his burnt offering and his offerings of well-being, and he shall bow down at the threshold of the gate. Then he shall go out, but the gate shall not be closed until evening.³ The people of the land shall bow down at the entrance of that gate before the LORD on the sabbaths and on the new moons.⁴ The burnt offering that the prince offers to the LORD on the sabbath day shall be six lambs without blemish and a ram without blemish;⁵ and the grain offering with the ram shall be an ephah, and the grain offering with the lambs shall be as much as he wishes to give, together with a hin of oil to each ephah.⁶ On the day of the new moon he shall offer a young bull without blemish, and six lambs and a ram, which shall be without blemish;⁷ as a grain offering he shall provide an ephah with the bull and an ephah with the ram, and with the lambs as much as he wishes, together with a hin of oil to each ephah.⁸ When the prince enters, he shall come in by the vestibule of the gate, and he shall go out by the same way.

¹³ He shall provide a lamb, a yearling, without blemish, for a burnt offering to the LORD daily; morning by morning he shall provide it.¹⁴ And he shall provide a grain offering with it morning by morning regularly, one-sixth of an ephah, and one-third of a hin of oil to moisten the choice flour, as a grain offering to the LORD; this is the ordinance for all time.¹⁵ Thus the lamb and the grain offering and the oil shall be provided, morning by morning, as a regular burnt offering.

¹⁶ Thus says the Lord God: If the prince makes a gift to any of his sons out of his 46.1–15: Gate regulations and the prince's minor offerings. 1–7: Both weekly and monthly, the prince (see 44.1–3n.) shall bring offerings (vv. 4–7) into the inner east gate leading to the altar (40.32–34). Kings might have performed priestly functions in preexilic times (1 Kings 8.63; 2 Kings 16.12–13), but now they will stand by while the priests offer the sacrifices. For the sabbath sacrifices, see Num 28.9–10; on Ezekiel's emphasis on the sabbath here, see 20.12–13n. For the new moon (i.e., monthly) sacrifices, see Num 28.11–15. 8–10: Exit procedures. The great festival crowds require regulations for controlled egress. 11–15: Further rules. 11: 45.24; 46.5,7. 12: When the prince makes a freewill offering (Lev 22.18–23 [HS]), the inner east gate (v. 1) may be opened. 13–15: The prince must also provide for daily sacrifices (Num 28.3–8; Ex 29.38–42 [HS]).

inheritance,^a it shall belong to his sons, it is their holding by inheritance. ¹⁷ But if he makes a gift out of his inheritance to one of his servants, it shall be his to the year of liberty; then it shall revert to the prince; only his sons may keep a gift from his inheritance. ¹⁸ The prince shall not take any of the inheritance of the people, thrusting them out of their holding; he shall give his sons their inheritance out of his own holding, so that none of my people shall be dispossessed of their holding.

¹⁹ Then he brought me through the entrance, which was at the side of the gate, to the north row of the holy chambers for the priests; and there I saw a place at the extreme western end of them. ²⁰ He said to me, “This is the place where the priests shall boil the guilt offering and the sin offering, and where they shall bake the grain offering, in order not to bring them out into the outer court and so communicate holiness to the people.”

²¹ Then he brought me out to the outer court, and led me past the four corners of the court; and in each corner of the court there was a court—²² in the four corners of the court were small^b courts, forty cubits long and thirty wide; the four were of the same size. ²³ On the inside, around each of the four courts^c was a row of masonry, with hearths made at the bottom of the rows all around. ²⁴ Then he said to me, “These are the kitchens where those who serve at the temple shall boil the sacrifices of the people.”

47 Then he brought me back to the entrance of the temple; there, water was flowing from below the threshold of the temple toward the east (for the temple faced east); and the water was flowing down from below the south end of the threshold of the temple, south of the altar. ² Then he brought me out by way of the north gate, and led me around on the outside to the outer gate that faces toward the east;^d and the water was coming out on the south side.

³ Going on eastward with a cord in his hand, the man measured one thousand cubits, and then led me through the water; and it was ankle-deep. ⁴ Again he measured one thousand, and led me through the water; and it was knee-deep. Again he measured one thousand, and led me through the water; and it was up to the waist. ⁵ Again he measured one thousand, and it was a river that I could not cross, for the water had risen; it was deep enough to swim in, a river that could not be crossed. ⁶ He said to me, “Mortal, have you seen this?”

Then he led me back along the bank of the river. ⁷ As I came back, I saw on the bank of the river a great many trees on the one side and on the other. ⁸ He said to me, “This water flows toward the eastern region and goes down into the Arabah; and when it enters the sea, the sea of stagnant waters, the water will become fresh. ⁹ Wherever the river goes,^e every living creature that swarms will live, and there will be very many fish, once these waters reach there. It will become fresh; and everything will live where the river goes. ¹⁰ People will stand fishing beside the sea^f from En-gedi to En-eglaim; it will be a place for the spreading of nets; its fish will be of a great many kinds, like the fish of the Great Sea. ¹¹ But its swamps and marshes will not

Their fruit will be for food, and their leaves for healing.”

¹³ Thus says the Lord God: These are the boundaries by which you shall divide the land for inheritance among the twelve tribes of Israel. Joseph shall have two portions.

¹⁴ You shall divide it equally; I swore to give it to your ancestors, and this land shall fall to you as your inheritance.

¹⁸ On the east side, between Hauran and Damascus; along the Jordan between Gilead and the land of Israel; to the eastern sea and as far as Tamar.^c This shall be the east side.

¹⁹ On the south side, it shall run from Tamar as far as the waters of Meribath-kadesh, from there along the Wadi of Egypt^d to the Great Sea. This shall be the south side.

²⁰ On the west side, the Great Sea shall be the boundary to a point opposite Lebo-hamath. This shall be the west side.

Great Sea, the Mediterranean. 11: A source of salt would supply Temple rituals (43.24).

47.13–48.29: A new holy land. 47.13–23: Boundary and allotment instructions. Ezekiel's new Exodus and settlement (cf. 20.33–38n.; 36.8–12; 37.14) occasion a new allotment of the land. 14: I swore, 20.6; 36.28. 15–20: National boundaries. Several of the sites mentioned are unidentified. North border: roughly from the Mediterranean (the Great Sea) north of Tyre to Damascus (cf. Num 34.7–9). It is approximately the northern border of Solomon's territory (1 Kings 8.65). East border: along the Jordan to Tamar, a site south of the Dead Sea (eastern sea) (Num 34.10–12). Territory in the Transjordan is not included in the new land (contrast Num 34.13–15). South border: from Tamar along the southern Negeb through Kadesh-barnea (Meribath-kadesh) to the Wadi of Egypt (1 Kings 8.65n.) and the Mediterranean (Num 34.3–5). West border: the Mediterranean Sea (Num 34.6). 21–23: Allotment. That resident aliens and native Israelites should be treated alike was a widespread principle in the Holiness School: Num 15.29; Lev 19.33–34; 24.22. Ezekiel radicalizes the principle to allow aliens to receive their own allotted portions of land.

48 These are the names of the tribes: Beginning at the northern border, on the Hethlon road,^a from Lebo-hamath, as far as Hazar-enon (which is on the border of Damascus, with Hamath to the north), and^b extending from the east side to the west,^c Dan, one portion.² Adjoining the territory of Dan, from the east side to the west, Asher, one portion.³ Adjoining the territory of Asher, from the east side to the west, Naphtali, one portion.⁴ Adjoining the territory of Naphtali, from the east side to the west, Manasseh, one portion.⁵ Adjoining the territory of Manasseh, from the east side to the west, Ephraim, one portion.⁶ Adjoining the territory of Ephraim, from the east side to the west, Reuben, one portion.⁷ Adjoining the territory of Reuben, from the east side to the west, Judah, one portion.

NAME

The book of Daniel is named for its primary character, the exile from Judea who becomes a counselor and dream interpreter in the courts of the Babylonian, Median, and Persian kings (chs 1–6), and who himself is a recipient of mysterious revelations (chs 7–12).

The Daniel mentioned in Ezekiel (14.14,20; 28.3) is not the same character as the hero of the book of Daniel, but a figure of the remote past known also from Ugaritic texts of the fourteenth or thirteenth centuries BCE. In Ezekiel he is paired with Noah and Job: all three were non-Jews whose piety and wisdom were legendary. The hero of the book of Daniel is similar in knowledge and fidelity; he is, however, emphatically Jewish.

CONTENTS AND DATE OF COMPOSITION

The first six chapters are examples of the ancient Jewish short story, like Jonah, Esther, Tobit, and similar works. The purpose of such stories is to edify but also to entertain. More specifically, the stories in Daniel 1–6 are examples of “court tales,” narratives that describe the dangers and triumphs experienced by Jewish heroes and heroines in the courts of foreign kings. Like Joseph in Gen 40–41, Daniel succeeds in service to the ruler through his ability to interpret dreams; like Mordecai in the book of Esther, he succeeds in such service despite challenges by rival politicians. Even though the court tales in Daniel are set in the time of the Babylonian exile and immediately following the fall of Babylon (in 539 BCE), they were most likely composed either in the late Persian (450–333 BCE) or early Hellenistic (333–170 BCE) periods, possibly in the eastern Diaspora. They reflect a time in which the imperial ruler is perceived as ignorant and dangerously unpredictable rather than malevolent, and a social context in which Jews can live at peace with their non-Jewish neighbors, although without complete security. The narratives also address a serious theological issue: How could Jews reconcile their belief in the sovereign power of God with the reality of Gentile imperial rule? In these stories the Gentile kings are shown as slowly recognizing that it is the “Most High” who is truly sovereign and that they rule only by divine permission.

The court tales in the first half of the book contrast with the apocalyptic materials in chs 7–12, which depict extreme hostility to foreign governments and feature lengthy periods of universal tribulation rather than temporary personal danger. In this second section, Daniel is not the interpreter of dream visions but the visionary himself, and he is now in need of an angel’s interpretive skills. In a series of dreams, he learns of the history of the Near East from the Babylonian empire in the sixth century, through Persian rule, to the time of Alexander the Great in the late fourth century, and finally to the attacks against Jewish practice and belief as well as against the Jerusalem Temple by the Syrian-Greek ruler Antiochus IV Epiphanes (early second century BCE). The increasingly detailed descriptions of the period following the division of Alexander’s empire to the rule of Antiochus suggest that the apocalyptic sections were composed between 167 and 164 BCE during the Maccabean revolt against the Hellenizing policies of Antiochus and his allies in Jerusalem’s priestly circles (see 1 Macc 1). This dating makes the work the latest book in the Hebrew Bible. Its author may have been one of the “wise” who emphasized confidence in a divine plan to redeem Israel from idolatrous leaders, even in the face of martyrdom, and who rejected the armed resistance of the Maccabees (Dan 11.33–35); in the end, the author believed, God would punish the wicked and redeem the faithful (Dan 12.3). The visions are presented pseudonymously, that is, under the name of an ancient figure (in this case, Daniel, the sage of the sixth–fifth centuries BCE) who “foresees” what is to come, as in other apocalypses such as 2 Esdras, 2 Baruch, and the later Christian Apocalypse of Peter.

LANGUAGE AND CANONICAL STATUS

Daniel 2.4b–7.28 is written in Aramaic, the common language of the Near East during the Persian and early Hellenistic periods; chs 1.1–2.4a and chs 8–12 are in Hebrew, which had been eclipsed by Aramaic during this period, but which enjoyed a literary revival in the second century BCE. Complicating the history of the book of Daniel are additions to the story in some ancient Greek versions: Susanna, the Prayer of Azariah and the Song of the Three Jews, and Bel and the Dragon. These short works are considered Deuterocanonical by Catholic and Orthodox churches, that is, as having canonical status; Protestant churches regard them as part of the Apocrypha, and they have no canonical status in Judaism. (See the Introduction to the Apocryphal/Deuterocanonical books.)

Additional tales belonging to the cycle of stories about Daniel appear among the Dead Sea Scrolls. One text, the Prayer of Nabonidus (4QprNab), may represent an earlier version of Dan 4.

Jewish tradition places the book of Daniel among the Writings (Heb “Ketubim”), between the books of Esther and Ezra (see rabbinic discussion in b. Meg. 3a; b. Sanh. 94a). This decision may reflect the late date of composition of Daniel. Christian tradition locates the book among the Prophets, between the books of Ezekiel and Hosea.

INTERPRETATION

Despite the different genres and dates of composition, the book of Daniel does have a consistent theme: the sovereignty of God in history. By juxtaposing the wisdom of the Jewish courtiers in negotiating the difficulties of living under an often arbitrary and dangerous foreign rule with its visions of wars, persecutions, and, finally, salvation under God’s sovereignty, the book of Daniel offers its readers both advice and consolation. The folktales speak to all peoples persecuted as religious and ethnic minorities. The apocalyptic materials, whose meanings would have been known to the author’s own circle, have provided for more than two thousand years the occasion for speculation and, often, hope. Already 1 Macc 2.59–60 shows that Daniel and his three friends served as role models of resistance and deliverance. The apocalyptic materials, with their promise of divine salvation, also were often reinterpreted for later circumstances. For example, the apocalypse of 2 Esdras—a text originally written by a Jew but then edited and preserved by the Christian church—reinterprets the vision of Daniel 7 to express hope for the punishment of Rome and the redemption of Israel following the Roman destruction of Jerusalem in 70 CE. Early Christians saw in the figure of the “son of man” in Daniel 7 a reference to Jesus, and the synagogue saw in this same figure a reference to the covenant community of Israel.

1.1–21: The Babylonian exile. This first chapter introduces the young courtier Daniel, his companions in exile, and the difficulties they will face as Jews in the foreign court. 1: The third year of the reign of King Jehoiakim is 606 BCE (see 2 Chr 36.5–7). Nebuchadnezzar reigned 605–562 BCE (see 2 Kings 24–25; 1 Chr 6; 2 Chr 36; Jer 27–29), and invaded Israel in 604, but did not attack Jerusalem until 597, when Jehoiakim’s son Jehoiachin was king. The difficulties of the dating cannot be resolved; such chronological inaccuracy is typical of folktales (cf. Jdt 1.1). 2: Lord, Israel’s God, not the gods of Babylon, reigns over history. Shinar, an ancient term for Babylon (Gen 10.10; 14.1.9; Josh 7.21; Isa 11.11; Zech 5.11), is the site of the tower of Babel (Gen 11.2); both tower and Babylon fall through the sin of pride. His gods, Marduk, Babylon’s national god, and Nabu, the king’s personal deity; see Isa 46.1n. Vessels, noted in 2 Kings 24.13; 25.13–15; 2 Chr 36.7,10, foreshadow Belshazzar’s feast (ch 5).

1.3–7: Courtiers in exile. 3: Palace master (lit. “chief of his eunuchs,” although the term may have lost the literal meaning). Nobility from conquered kingdoms were typically brought into exile (see 2 Kings 24.14–16); educating their youth was thought to increase acceptance of foreign rule and minimize the likelihood of revolt. Israelites: lit. “children/sons of Israel.” 4: Without physical defect may suggest priests (Lev 21.17–23) as well as sacrificial animals (Lev 22.19–22), or may simply indicate attractive individuals (Absalom in 2 Sam 14.25; Song 4.7). Versed in every branch of wisdom also describes the heroes of the author’s generation (11.33,35; 12.3). Chaldeans can refer either to the Babylonians in general (5.30; 9.1), or more specifically to magicians and astrologers (2.2–5,10; 4.7; 5.7,11). 5: Three years are cited by Persian texts as the time required for gaining knowledge of reli-

with knowledge and insight, and competent to serve in the king's palace; they were to be taught the literature and language of the Chaldeans.⁵ The king assigned them a daily portion of the royal rations of food and wine. They were to be educated for three years, so that at the end of that time they could be stationed in the king's court.⁶ Among them were Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, from the tribe of Judah.⁷ The palace master gave them other names: Daniel he called Belteshazzar, Hananiah he called Shadrach, Mishael he called Meshach, and Azariah he called Abednego.

⁸But Daniel resolved that he would not defile himself with the royal rations of food and wine; so he asked the palace master to allow him not to defile himself.⁹ Now God allowed Daniel to receive favor and compassion from the palace master.¹⁰ The palace master said to Daniel, "I am afraid of my lord the king; he has appointed your food and your drink. If he should see you in poorer condition than the other young men of your own age, you would endanger my head with the king."¹¹ Then Daniel asked the guard whom the palace master had appointed over Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah:¹² "Please test your servants for ten days. Let us be given vegetables to eat and water to drink."¹³ You can then compare our appearance with the appearance of the young men who eat the royal rations, and deal with your servants according to what you observe."¹⁴ So he agreed to this proposal and tested them for ten days.¹⁵ At the end of ten days it was observed that they appeared better and fatter than all the young men who had been eating the royal rations.¹⁶ So the guard continued to withdraw their royal rations and the wine they were to drink, and gave them vegetables.¹⁷ To these four young men God gave knowledge and skill in every aspect of literature and wisdom; Daniel also had insight into all visions and dreams.

¹⁸At the end of the time that the king had set for them to be brought in, the palace master brought them into the presence of Nebuchadnezzar,¹⁹ and the king spoke with them. And among them all, no one was found to compare with Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah; therefore they were stationed in the king's court.²⁰ In every matter of wisdom and understanding concerning which the king inquired of them, he found them ten times better than all the magicians and enchanters in his whole kingdom.²¹ And Daniel continued there until the first year of King Cyrus.

2 In the second year of Nebuchadnezzar's reign, Nebuchadnezzar dreamed such dreams that his spirit was troubled and his gious concerns. 6–7: The original names are Jewish names, with "el" and "[y]ah" suffixes relating to Israel's God; all four occur in the book of Nehemiah (8.4; 10.2,6,23), although referring to different individuals. Judah is the tribe of Israel's monarchy. The new names refer to the Babylonian gods Bel (Marduk; see 1.2n; 2.26n.) and Nabu ("nego"). The meaning of the names Shadrach and Meshach is uncertain. Changing names was a well-known practice of kings (Gen 41.45; 2 Kings 24.17). Fidelity is marked when those whose names are changed preserve their ethnic and religious identity, such as Joseph and Daniel.

1.8–21: The first resistance. 8: Defile himself by eating the royal rations, which likely contained meat that had been sacrificed and wine that had been poured out as a libation to Babylon's gods. In the postexilic period, diet was a major indication of Jewish identity (Tob 1.10–11; 1 Macc 1.62–63; Jdt 12.1–4; 2 Macc 6–7; Esth 14.17); early followers of Jesus addressed the question of eating food offered to idols (Acts 15.29; 21.25; 1 Cor 8; Rev 2.14,20). 10: The palace master, Ashpenaz (v. 3), is one of several sympathetic court functionaries in these tales (Gen 41.9–13; Esth 2.15; Achior of the book of Judith). 12: Test your servants suggests trial by ordeal, a stock folktale motif. Ten days, see Rev 2.10. Vegetables . . . and water, not typically offered in sacrifice or libation, are in contrast to meat and wine. 17: God grants the youths what Nebuchadnezzar had sought to teach them (v. 4). Visions and dreams associates Daniel with Joseph, another handsome youth carried into a foreign land (Gen 39–50), as well as with Mordecai in the Gk Additions to Esther. 20: Magicians appear in the sagas of Joseph (Gen 41.8,24) and Moses and Aaron (Ex 7.11,22; 8.7,18–19; 9.11). Enchanters are priests who make incantations (2.2,10,27; 4.4; 5.7,11,15). 21: First year of King Cyrus, 539 BCE (see 6.28, 10.1; 2 Chr 36.22–23; Ezra 1.1–2; 6.3; Isa 45; 1 Esdr 2.1–3).

2.1–13: Nebuchadnezzar's test. 1: Second year is 604 BCE. Dreams are a major motif in the book of Daniel; dreams, especially those of kings, were regarded as portents (Gen 15.12; 20.3; 28.11–15; 31.10–11,24; 37.5–10; 40.5; 41.1–32; Jdg 7.13–15; 1 Kings 3.5–15; Mt 1.20; 2.12,13,19,22; 27.19; Artemidorus's Onirocritica). His spirit was troubled also describes Pharaoh in Gen 41.8; Daniel in turn resembles Joseph in the foreign court. In Genesis 41 sleep left him.² So the king commanded that the magicians, the enchanters, the sorcerers, and the Chaldeans be summoned to tell the king his dreams. When they came in and stood before the king,³ he said to them, “I have had such a dream that my spirit is troubled by the desire to understand it.”⁴ The Chaldeans said to the king (in Aramaic),^a “O king, live forever! Tell your servants the dream, and we will reveal the interpretation.”⁵ The king answered the Chaldeans, “This is a public decree: if you do not tell me both the dream and its interpretation, you shall be torn limb from limb, and your houses shall be laid in ruins.⁶ But if you do tell me the dream and its interpretation, you shall receive from me gifts and rewards and great honor. Therefore tell me the dream and its interpretation.”⁷ They answered a second time, “Let the king first tell his servants the dream, then we can give its interpretation.”⁸ The king answered, “I know with certainty that you are trying to gain time, because you see I have firmly decreed:⁹ if you do not tell me the dream, there is but one verdict for you. You have agreed to speak lying and misleading words to me until things take a turn. Therefore, tell me the dream, and I shall know that you can give me its interpretation.”¹⁰ The Chaldeans answered the king, “There is no one on earth who can reveal what the king demands! In fact no king, however great and powerful, has ever asked such a thing of any magician or enchanter or Chaldean.¹¹ The thing that the king is asking is too difficult, and no one can reveal it to the king except the gods, whose dwelling is not with mortals.”

¹² Because of this the king flew into a violent rage and commanded that all the wise men of Babylon be destroyed.¹³ The decree was issued, and the wise men were about to be executed; and they looked for Daniel and his companions, to execute them.¹⁴ Then Daniel responded with prudence and discretion to Arioch, the king’s chief executioner, who had gone out to execute the wise men of Babylon;¹⁵ he asked Arioch, the royal official, “Why is the decree of the king so urgent?” Arioch then explained the matter to Daniel.¹⁶ So Daniel went in and requested that the king give him time and he would tell the king the interpretation.

¹⁷ Then Daniel went to his home and informed his companions, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah,¹⁸ and told them to seek mercy from the God of heaven concerning this mystery, so that Daniel and his companions with the rest of the wise men of Babylon might not perish.¹⁹ Then the mystery was revealed the reader is immediately told the content of the dream. Here, the content of the dream is withheld until Daniel’s interpretation in vv. 31–45. 2: Magicians and Chaldeans, see 1.4n.,20n.; they are not depicted favorably in biblical accounts. 4: The greeting begins the Aramaic section; the book shifts back to Hebrew at 8.1. Live forever, a standard greeting to a ruler (3.9; 5.10; 6.6,21; 1 Kings 1.31; Neh 2.3). 5: Nebuchadnezzar’s insistence that the magicians tell . . . the dream as well as its interpretation tests their abilities; this hint of distrust anticipates his later celebration of Daniel’s God. Torn limb from limb suggests the king’s volatility (see also 3.29; 2 Macc 1.16). Houses . . . laid in ruins, cf. Ezra 6.11; Sir 21.18. 6: Gifts and rewards, contrast Daniel’s lack of interest in 5.17. 10–11: The Chaldeans’ admission, coupled with lack of prayer to their own gods, contrasts with Daniel’s abilities and faith. 12–13: Neither the magicians nor the executioners distinguish Daniel from the other wise men.

2.14–19: Daniel seeks divine aid. This section suggests that Daniel and his colleagues were not present at the earlier meeting with the king. 14: Daniel’s question indicates that at this point, he knows less than the magicians do. The name Arioch appears in Gen 14.1 and Jdt 1.6 to refer to a king from the distant east. Here, like Ashpenaz (1.10), he is a royal servant who willingly helps Daniel. 16: Daniel’s access to Nebuchadnezzar contrasts with v. 24, where he requires Arioch’s intervention. This discrepancy, coupled with the reintroduction of Daniel’s companions in v. 17, suggests that vv. 13–23 are an addition to the story. 17: The companions were introduced in 1.6–7. 18: God of heaven is a common phrase from the Persian and Hellenistic periods (vv. 19,37,44; 2 Chr 36.23; Ezra 1.2; 5.11–12; 6.9–10; 7.12,21,23; Neh 1.4–5; 2.4,20; Ps 136.26; Jon 1.9; Tob 7.12; 8.15; Jdt 5.8; 6.19; 11.17); its universalistic implications befit accounts set in exile. Mystery (2.19,27–30,47; 4.9; see also Rom 11.25; 16.25; 1 Cor 2.1; 15.51; Eph 1.9; 3.3–5.9; 5.32; 6.19), a term found frequently in the Dead Sea Scrolls, indicates a secret that can be learned through divine wisdom. Rest of the wise men, Daniel’s intervention also saves the king’s magicians; after Daniel’s promotion (v. 48) they will turn on his colleagues (ch 3). 19: Appropriately, Daniel to Daniel in a vision of the night, and Daniel blessed the God of heaven.

²⁰ Daniel said:

“Blessed be the name of God from age to age,

for wisdom and power are his.

²¹ He changes times and seasons, deposes kings and sets up kings;
he gives wisdom to the wise and knowledge to those who have understanding.

²² He reveals deep and hidden things;
he knows what is in the darkness,
and light dwells with him.

²³ To you, O God of my ancestors, I give thanks and praise,
for you have given me wisdom and power, and have now revealed to me what we asked of you,
for you have revealed to us what the king ordered.”

²⁴ Therefore Daniel went to Arioch, whom the king had appointed to destroy the wise men of Babylon, and said to him, “Do not destroy the wise men of Babylon; bring me in before the king, and I will give the king the interpretation.”

²⁵ Then Arioch quickly brought Daniel before the king and said to him: “I have found among the exiles from Judah a man who can tell the king the interpretation.” ²⁶ The king said to Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar, “Are you able to tell me the dream that I have seen and its interpretation?” ²⁷ Daniel answered the king, “No wise men, enchanters, magicians, or diviners can show to the king the mystery that the king is asking, ²⁸ but there is a God in heaven who reveals mysteries, and he has disclosed to King Nebuchadnezzar what will happen at the end of days. Your dream and the visions of your head as you lay in bed were these: ²⁹ To you, O king, as you lay in bed, came thoughts of what would be hereafter, and the revealer of mysteries disclosed to you what is to be. ³⁰ But as for me, this mystery has not been revealed to me because of any wisdom that I have more than any other living being, but in order that the interpretation may be known to the king and that you may understand the thoughts of your mind.

³¹ “You were looking, O king, and lo! there was a great statue. This statue was huge, its brilliance extraordinary; it was standing before you, and its appearance was frightening. ³² The head of that statue was of fine gold, its chest and arms of silver, its middle and thighs of bronze, ³³ its legs of iron, its feet partly of iron and partly of clay. ³⁴ As you looked on, a receives a vision of the night, i.e., a dream (1.17n; 2.1n; 7.2; Gen 46.2; Zech 1.8; see also Job 20.8; 33.15; Isa 29.7), that discloses the meaning of Nebuchadnezzar’s dream. The author defers relating the content of the dream and so heightens suspense. Daniel’s words of praise to God in the following verses hint at the content.

2.20–23: Daniel’s doxology. This short psalm (see e.g., Pss 41.13; 106.48; 139.11–12) emphasizes the divine as the repository of wisdom (see also Prov 2.6; Isa 60.19–20; Hab 3.4; Job 12.13) and as one who controls the reigns of kings. Hymns and prayers are frequently inserted into postexilic narratives (Add Est, Jdt, Tob). 20: Blessed be the name of God is a major theme in Jewish prayers (Job 1.21; Ps 113.2; Mt 6.9; the Kaddish). Wisdom and power, divine attributes that will be bestowed upon Daniel (v. 23). 21: Deposits kings, Job 12.18–21; Lk 1.52. Here, ironically, Nebuchadnezzar is not deposed, although Belshazzar will be (ch.5). 22: See Job 12.22–23. 23: God of . . . ancestors, a traditional epithet (Ex 3.13,15–16; Deut 1.11,21; 4.1; 6.3; 12.1; 27.3; Josh 18.3; 2 Chr 13.12; 28.9; 29.5; Ezra 8.28; 10.11; Wis 9.1; Acts 7.32) here emphasizes Daniel’s continuity with his community in exile. Thanks and praise, 2 Chr 31.2. Revealed to us: Daniel includes his colleagues in the revelation.

2.24–30: Daniel approaches the king. 24–25: See vv. 14–16. Arioch trusts Daniel’s powers. 25: Arioch locates Daniel not among the Babylonian magicians but among the Judean exiles (see 13n). 26: Belteshazzar, see 1.7. The name in Babylonian would be Balat-su-utsur, “Protect his life” or Balat-shar-utsur, “Protect the life of the prince.” 27: Daniel agrees with the magicians (see 10–11), then distinguishes his power from human wisdom. 28: End of days here means the distant future (10.14; see also Isa 2.2; Jer 23.20; 30.24; Ezek 38.16; Hos 3.5). 29–30: The true revealer of mysteries is God (cf. Gen 41.16). Daniel gives God full glory, but the effect of the revelation is nonetheless that Daniel will be promoted.

2.31–35: Nebuchadnezzar’s dream. 31: Giant figures are frequent in ancient Near Eastern dream records; there were also several famous giant statues. 32–33: The metals are of decreasing worth; the descent from the golden age through silver, bronze, and iron periods appears in Greek (Hesiod, Works and Days), Roman (Ovid, stone was cut out, not by human hands, and it struck the statue on its feet of iron and clay and broke them in pieces.³⁵ Then the iron, the clay, the bronze, the silver, and the gold, were all broken in pieces and became like the chaff of the summer threshing floors; and the wind carried them away, so that not a trace of them could be found. But the stone that struck the statue became a great mountain and filled the whole earth.

³⁶ “This was the dream; now we will tell the king its interpretation.³⁷ You, O king, the king of kings—to whom the God of heaven has given the kingdom, the power, the might, and the glory,³⁸ into whose hand he has given human beings, wherever they live, the wild animals of the field, and the birds of the air, and whom he has established as ruler over them all—you are the head of gold.³⁹ After you shall arise another kingdom inferior to yours, and yet a third kingdom of bronze, which shall rule over the whole earth.⁴⁰ And there shall be a fourth kingdom, strong as iron; just as iron crushes and smashes everything,^a it shall crush and shatter all these.⁴¹ As you saw the feet and toes partly of potter’s clay and partly of iron, it shall be a divided kingdom; but some of the strength of iron shall be in it, as you saw the iron mixed with the clay.⁴² As the toes of the feet were part iron and part clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong and partly brittle.⁴³ As you saw the iron mixed with clay, so will they mix with one another in marriage,^b but they will not hold together, just as iron does not mix with clay.⁴⁴ And in the days of those kings the God of heaven will set up a kingdom that shall never be destroyed, nor shall this kingdom be left to another people. It shall crush all these kingdoms and bring them to an end, and it shall stand forever;⁴⁵ just as you saw that a stone was cut from the mountain not by hands, and that it crushed the iron, the bronze, the clay, the silver, and the gold. The great God has informed the king what shall be hereafter. The dream is certain, and its interpretation trustworthy.”

⁴⁶ Then King Nebuchadnezzar fell on his face, worshiped Daniel, and commanded that a grain offering and incense be offered to Metamorphoses) and Persian (Bahman Yasht) texts; see also 2 Esd 7.55–56. 33: Clay, this substance cannot support the weightier metals. 34: A stone was cut out, not by human hands indicates divine control of history. Idols are made with human hands (e.g., Deut 4.28; 2 Kings 19.18; 2 Chr 32.19; Pss 115.4; 135.15; Isa 17.19; Wis 13.10). 35: A great mountain may suggest the permanence of the divine dwelling, Sinai, Zion, or the covenant community; see also v. 45.

2.36–45: Daniel’s first interpretation. 37–38: Elaborating Nebuchadnezzar’s powers, Daniel actually celebrates the rule of his God. For Nebuchadnezzar as a ruler designated by God, see Jer 25.9; 27.5–7. 37: King of kings is used for Nebuchadnezzar in Ezek 26.7. For other references, see Ezra 7.12; 2 Mac 13.4; and the Christ, 1 Tim 6.15; Rev 17.14; 19.16. 38: Interpreting the dream allegorically, Daniel equates Nebuchadnezzar, and by extension the neo-Babylonian empire with gold. 39–44: The other kingdoms, although not named, are probably Media (silver), Persia (bronze), and Greece (iron and clay; the two elements probably represent the division of Alexander the Great’s eastern empire into Ptolemaic and Seleucid kingdoms). This four-fold pattern of kingdoms appears also in Sibylline Oracles 4, Babylonian and Greek writings, and the Dead Sea Scrolls (4QPseudoDan). 41–42: A divided kingdom is the division of Alexander the Great’s empire: originally partitioned among four generals, for our author’s history, the important part was the East: Judea was under (strong) Ptolemaic (Egyptian) control during 323–198 BCE, and then, until Maccabean rule in 163 BCE, under (brittle) Seleucid (Syrian–Greek) control. 43: In marriage (lit. “by human seed”), intermarriage between Ptolemaic and Seleucid dynasties in 252 and again in 194/93 BCE (see also 11.6n.,17) did not prevent conflict. 44: A kingdom that shall never be destroyed could refer to God’s direct rule or to Israel. Cf. 7.27, where it is the people Israel (“the Holy Ones”) who will possess the kingdom. 45: Cut from the mountain, compare 2.35, where the stone became a mountain. The image of Israel as a stone occurs in Isa 51.1 (cf. 28.16); Ps 118.22 (cited in reference to Jesus in Mt 21.42; Mk 12.10; Lk 20.17; 1 Pet 2.7). See also Zech 12.13.

2.46–49: Nebuchadnezzar’s affirmation of Daniel’s God, and Daniel’s promotion. 46: Worshiped, along with offerings of grain and incense, suggests that Nebuchadnezzar viewed Daniel as divine (see 3.5–7,10–12,14–

him. ⁴⁷The king said to Daniel, “Truly, your God is God of gods and Lord of kings and a revealer of mysteries, for you have been able to reveal this mystery!” ⁴⁸Then the king promoted Daniel, gave him many great gifts, and made him ruler over the whole province of Babylon and chief prefect over all the wise men of Babylon. ⁴⁹Daniel made a request of the king, and he appointed Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego over the affairs of the province of Babylon. But Daniel remained at the king’s court.

3 King Nebuchadnezzar made a golden statue whose height was sixty cubits and whose width was six cubits; he set it up on the plain of Dura in the province of Babylon. ²Then King Nebuchadnezzar sent for the satraps, the prefects, and the governors, the counselors, the treasurers, the justices, the magistrates, and all the officials of the provinces, to assemble and come to the dedication of the statue that King Nebuchadnezzar had set up. ³So the satraps, the prefects, and the governors, the counselors, the treasurers, the justices, the magistrates, and all the officials of the provinces, assembled for the dedication of the statue that King Nebuchadnezzar had set up. When they were standing before the statue that Nebuchadnezzar had set up, ⁴the herald proclaimed aloud, “You are commanded, O peoples, nations, and languages, ⁵that when you hear the sound of the horn, pipe, lyre, trigon, harp, drum, and entire musical ensemble, you are to fall down and worship the golden statue that King Nebuchadnezzar has set up. ⁶Whoever does not fall down and worship shall immediately be thrown into a furnace of blazing fire.” ⁷Therefore, as soon as all the peoples heard the sound of the horn, pipe, lyre, trigon, harp, drum, and entire musical ensemble, all the peoples, nations, and languages fell down and worshiped the golden statue that King Nebuchadnezzar had set up.

⁸Accordingly, at this time certain Chaldeans came forward and denounced the Jews. ⁹They said to King Nebuchadnezzar, “O king, live forever! ¹⁰You, O king, have made a decree, that everyone who hears the sound of the horn, pipe, lyre, trigon, harp, drum, and entire musical ensemble, shall fall down and worship the golden statue, ¹¹and whoever does not fall down and worship shall be thrown into a furnace of blazing fire. ¹²There are certain Jews whom you have appointed over the affairs of the province of Babylon: Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego. These pay no heed to you, O king. They do not serve your gods and they do not worship the golden statue that you have set up.”

¹³Then Nebuchadnezzar in furious rage commanded that Shadrach, Meshach, and 15,18,28; Isa 44.15–19; 46.6; the term is typically used in reference to the worship of idols). 47: Your God, Nebuchadnezzar respects Daniel’s God, but he is not a convert. 48: Made him ruler is reminiscent of Joseph (Gen 41.37–45; see also Esth 8.1–2). 49: Daniel’s concern for his colleagues anticipates 3.12.

3.1–7: The golden statue. 1: Even though ch 3 may originally have been an independent story (note Daniel’s absence), Nebuchadnezzar’s golden statue echoes the interpretation of the statue in the vision (2.38) that his kingship is the “head of gold.” Ironically, first the king worships Daniel and praises Daniel’s God (2.46); now he commands worship of an idol. The Greek historian Herodotus (fifth century BCE) mentions a golden statue of Zeus (Bel) in Babylon. Sixty cubits by 6 cubits (the Babylonians used a sexagesimal numerical system) is approximately 90 x 9 ft (30 x 3 m); ten times as high as wide, the statue was likely an obelisk or stele (if it could stand at all). The exaggerated dimensions suggest folktale style. Dura means “plain” or “fortress” and need not suggest a specific place. 2–3: Repetition of officers, a folkloric motif, indicates the (almost) universal acceptance of Nebuchadnezzar’s order. 5: The list of instruments, reprised in vv. 7,10,15, echoes the hyperbole. Several of the terms are Greek loanwords. Jews faithful to their Torah could not obey the command. 6: The furnace also functions as a symbol of testing and purifying (Ps 12.6; Prov 17.3; 27.21; Isa 48.10; Wis 3.6). The scenario anticipates the policies of Antiochus IV Epiphanes, one of the earliest instances of governmental persecution for refusing to worship the state’s god.

3.8–15: The youths accused. 8: Chaldeans, see 1.4n.,20n. Denounced (lit., “ate the pieces of”) indicates maliciousness and professional jealousy. In ch. 2, Daniel had saved their lives. 9: Live forever: see 2.4n. 10: The by-now humorous repetition decreases the threat of the story. 12: Appointed, see 2.49. Ethnic prejudice surfaces again in Esth 3.8. Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, see 1.6–7n. 13–15: Nebuchadnezzar’s questioning repeats

Abednego be brought in; so they brought those men before the king. ¹⁴ Nebuchadnezzar said to them, “Is it true, O Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, that you do not serve my gods and you do not worship the golden statue that I have set up? ¹⁵ Now if you are ready when you hear the sound of the horn, pipe, lyre, trigon, harp, drum, and entire musical ensemble to fall down and worship the statue that I have made, well and good. ³ But if you do not worship, you shall immediately be thrown into a furnace of blazing fire, and who is the god that will deliver you out of my hands?”

¹⁶ Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego answered the king, “O Nebuchadnezzar, we have no need to present a defense to you in this matter. ¹⁷ If our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the furnace of blazing fire and out of your hand, O king, let him deliver us. ^b ¹⁸ But if not, be it known to you, O king, that we will not serve your gods and we will not worship the golden statue that you have set up.”

¹⁹ Then Nebuchadnezzar was so filled with rage against Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego that his face was distorted. He ordered the furnace heated up seven times more than was customary, ²⁰ and ordered some of the strongest guards in his army to bind Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego and to throw them into the furnace of blazing fire. ²¹ So the men were bound, still wearing their tunics,^c their trousers,^c their hats, and their other garments, and they were thrown into the furnace of blazing fire. ²² Because the king’s command was urgent and the furnace was so overheated, the raging flames killed the men who lifted Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego. ²³ But the three men, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, fell down, bound, into the furnace of blazing fire.

²⁴ Then King Nebuchadnezzar was astonished and rose up quickly. He said to his counselors, “Was it not three men that we threw bound into the fire?” They answered the king, “True, O king.” ²⁵ He replied, “But I see four men unbound, walking in the middle of the fire, and they are not hurt; and the fourth has the appearance of a god.”^d ²⁶ Nebuchadnezzar then approached the door of the furnace of blazing fire and said, “Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, servants of the Most High God, come out! Come here!” So Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego came out from the fire. ²⁷ And the satraps, the prefects, the governors, and the king’s counselors gathered together and saw that the fire had not had any power over the bodies of those men; the hair of their heads was not singed, their tunics^c were not harmed, and not even the smell of fire came from them. ²⁸ Nebuchadnezzar said, “Blessed be the God the law, again. 15: Who is the god may indicate that this story did not originally follow ch 2, where the king acknowledges the power of Daniel’s God; given ch. 2, it shows that Nebuchadnezzar is at best capricious.

3.16–18: Resistance. 16: Defense (lit. “to answer, reply.”). The refusal to respond continues the themes of Jewish resistance and divine power. 17–18: Anticipating later martyrs, the youths assert their fidelity regardless of their fate.

3.19–27: The furnace. 19: Nebuchadnezzar’s response continues to indicate volatility. 21: Mention of clothing (the Aramaic has a rhythmic quality appropriate to folktales) foreshadows v. 27. 22: The king’s anger leads to his own soldiers’ deaths. 23: The Septuagint (LXX), Eastern Orthodox, and Roman Catholic Bibles insert here the Prayer of Azariah and the Song of the Three Jews; Protestant tradition places these texts in the Old Testament Apocrypha. 25: The king is first to see the mysterious fourth figure. Walking in the middle of the fire without burning evokes the image of the burning bush (Ex 3.2). Has the appearance of a god (lit. “son of God”) implies an angel or watcher (Gen 6.2,4; Job 1.6; 38.7; see also the “men” who aided Judas Maccabeus in 2 Macc 10.29–30, and Nebuchadnezzar’s comment in 28). 26: Most High God, Nebuchadnezzar answers the question he posed in v. 15. 3.28–30: Nebuchadnezzar’s acknowledgment. 28: Ironically, Nebuchadnezzar celebrates that the youths

They disobeyed the king's command and yielded up their bodies rather than serve and worship any god except their own God.²⁹ Therefore I make a decree: Any people, nation, or language that utters blasphemy against the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego shall be torn limb from limb, and their houses laid in ruins; for there is no other god who is able to deliver in this way."³⁰ Then the king promoted Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego in the province of Babylon.

the Chaldeans, and the diviners came in, and I told them the dream, but they could not tell me its interpretation.⁸ At last Daniel came in before me—he who was named Belteshazzar after the name of my god, and who is endowed with a spirit of the holy gods^c—and I told him the dream:⁹ “O Belteshazzar, chief of the magicians, I know that you are endowed with a spirit of the holy gods^c and that no mystery is too difficult for you. disobeyed the king's command. His reaction, similar to those of 2.47; 4.37; and 6.26–27, is, in the context of the book, only temporarily good news. 29: The historically improbable decree follows official form (see Ezra 6.6–12). 30: The three, fidelity rewarded (or perhaps restored to their earlier status, see 2.49), now disappear from the story.

4.1–37: Nebuchadnezzar's praise of God, composed as a letter to the Babylonian empire. 1: Throughout the earth, Nebuchadnezzar claims universal rule. 2: Most High God, see 3.26n. 2–3: Signs and wonders, popular description of God, e.g., 6.27; Ex 7.3; Deut 4.34; 6.22; 7.19; Neh 9.10; Ps 135.9; Jer 32.20–21; Heb 2.4. 3: The traditional doxology recalls the king's earlier confession (2.47; 3.28–29). Everlasting kingdom (see 7.27; Ps 145.13) contrasts Nebuchadnezzar's Babylon; his sovereignty, a frequent term in chs 1–7, contrasts with Nebuchadnezzar's removal from this throne (see 4.33).

4.4–18: The king's vision. Much of this chapter is written as if Nebuchadnezzar is telling the story, although in vv. 19–33 it switches from first-person to third-person narration. 5–6: The dream and the demand for interpretation recall ch 2. 7: As in ch 2, the non-Jewish courtiers cannot solve mysteries. 7: Chaldeans, see 1.4n., 20n. 8: Belteshazzar, see 2.26n. Here Nebuchadnezzar interprets the name as containing the name of the god Bel (i.e., Marduk). This and the reference to the holy gods contrast with the letter's praise of the “Most High God” (v. 2). Spirit of the holy gods, see also vv. 9,18; 5:11,14,20. 9: See 1.20; 2.4. Mystery, 1.18n. 10: A tree at the center of the earth evokes cross-cultural myths of the center of the world and also symbolizes the king's self-image as the one who provides food and shelter (4.22; see also Ezek 17; 31; Mt 13.32; Mk 4.32; Lk 13.19). 11: Reached to

¹³“I continued looking, in the visions of my head as I lay in bed, and there was a holy watcher, coming down from heaven. ¹⁴He cried aloud and said:

‘Cut down the tree and chop off its branches, strip off its foliage and scatter its fruit.

Let the animals flee from beneath it and the birds from its branches.

¹⁵But leave its stump and roots in the ground,
with a band of iron and bronze,
in the tender grass of the field.

Let him be bathed with the dew of heaven, and let his lot be with the animals of the field
in the grass of the earth.

¹⁶Let his mind be changed from that of a human,
and let the mind of an animal be given to him.

And let seven times pass over him.

¹⁷The sentence is rendered by decree of the watchers,
the decision is given by order of the holy ones,
in order that all who live may know that the Most High is sovereign over the kingdom of mortals;
he gives it to whom he will
and sets over it the lowliest of human beings.’

¹⁸“This is the dream that I, King Nebuchadnezzar, saw. Now you, Belteshazzar, declare the interpretation, since all the wise men of my kingdom are unable to tell me the interpretation. You are able, however, for you are endowed with a spirit of the holy gods.”^a ¹⁹Then Daniel, who was called Belteshazzar, was severely distressed for a while. His thoughts terrified him. The king said, “Belteshazzar, do not let the dream or the interpretation terrify you.” Belteshazzar answered, “My lord, may the dream be for those who hate you, and its interpretation for your enemies! ²⁰The tree that you saw, which grew great and strong, so that its top reached to heaven and was visible to the end of the whole earth, ²¹whose foliage was beautiful and its fruit abundant, and which provided food for all, under which animals of the field lived, and in whose branches the birds of the air had nests— ²²it is you, O king! You have grown great and strong. Your greatness has increased and reaches to heaven, and your sovereignty to the ends of the earth. ²³And whereas the king saw a holy watcher coming down from heaven and saying, ‘Cut down the tree and destroy it, but leave its stump and roots in the ground, with a band of iron and bronze, in the grass of the field; and let him be bathed with the dew of heaven, and let his lot be with the animals of the field, until seven times pass over him’— ²⁴this is the interpretation, O king, and it is a decree of the Most High that has come upon my lord the king: ²⁵You shall be driven away from human society, and your dwelling shall be with the wild animals. You shall be made to eat grass like oxen, you shall be bathed with the dew of heaven, and seven times shall pass over you, until you have learned that the Most High has sovereignty over the kingdom of mortals, and gives it to whom he will. ²⁶As it was commanded to leave the stump and roots of the tree, your kingdom shall be re-established for you from the time that you heaven suggests the tower of Babel (see 1.2n.). 13: Holy watcher (4.17,23; also 3.25n.; 8.13, Jubilees, and 1 Enoch) indicates an angel. 14: Animals and birds likely represent the peoples of the empire. 15: With let him the symbolism changes from tree to beast (in Hebrew, there is no neuter pronoun). 16: The king becomes insane. Seven times probably means seven years. 17: Watchers, see v. 13n.

4.19–27: Daniel’s second interpretation. 19: The story shifts to third-person narration. Whether Daniel is distressed because he is unsure of the interpretation, because he fears the king’s repercussions upon hearing it, or because he has genuine concern for the king is not immediately clear. 20–22: The repetition of the tree’s greatness may indicate either sympathy or satire. 22: For people symbolized by trees, see Jdg 9.8–15; Pss 1.3; 37.35; Jer 17.8. 23: Watcher, see v. 13n. 24: Most High, see 3.26n. 25: You have learned contrasts with v. 17, where the watchers state that all who live will learn. 26: Heaven as a circumlocution for God is common in the Deutero-learn that Heaven is sovereign.²⁷ Therefore, O king, may my counsel be acceptable to you: atone for^a your sins with righteousness, and your iniquities with mercy to the oppressed, so that your prosperity may be prolonged.”

²⁸ All this came upon King Nebuchadnezzar. ²⁹ At the end of twelve months he was walking on the roof of the royal palace of Babylon,³⁰ and the king said, “Is this not magnificent Babylon, which I have built as a royal capital by my mighty power and for my glorious majesty?” ³¹ While the words were still in the king’s mouth, a voice came from heaven: “O King Nebuchadnezzar, to you it is declared: The kingdom has departed from you! ³² You shall be driven away from human society, and your dwelling shall be with the animals of the field. You shall be made to eat grass like oxen, and seven times shall pass over you, until you have learned that the Most High has sovereignty over the kingdom of mortals and gives it to whom he will.”

³³ Immediately the sentence was fulfilled against Nebuchadnezzar. He was driven away from human society, ate grass like oxen, and his body was bathed with the dew of heaven, until his hair grew as long as eagles’ feathers and his nails became like birds’ claws.

³⁴ When that period was over, I, Nebuchadnezzar, lifted my eyes to heaven, and my reason returned to me.

I blessed the Most High, and praised and honored the one who lives forever.

For his sovereignty is an everlasting sovereignty,
and his kingdom endures from generation to generation.

³⁵ All the inhabitants of the earth are accounted as nothing, and he does what he wills with the host of heaven
and the inhabitants of the earth.

There is no one who can stay his hand or say to him, “What are you doing?”

³⁶ At that time my reason returned to me; and my majesty and splendor were restored to me for the glory of my kingdom. My counselors and my lords sought me out, I was re-established over my kingdom, and still more greatness was added to me. ³⁷ Now I, Nebuchadnezzar, praise and extol and honor the King of heaven, for all his works are truth,

and his ways are justice;
and he is able to bring low
those who walk in pride.

5 King Belshazzar made a great festival for a thousand of his lords, and he was drinking wine in the presence of the thousand.

canonical writings and the Gospel of Matthew. 27: Correct behavior, mercy, and charity atone for sins against humanity. Daniel couches the interpretation in terms that allay the harshness of the sentence.

4.28–33: Nebuchadnezzar’s punishment. 30: The king’s prideful statements serve as catalyst for his fall (see also Ezek 31.10). 31: The voice . . . from heaven, an increasingly common motif in the Second Temple period, can offer either good or distressing news (Mt 3.17; Mk 1.11; Lk 3.22; many instances in rabbinic texts). 32–33: Although no sources indicate the banishment of Nebuchadnezzar, the later Babylonian king Nabonidus inexplicably left Babylon to spend several years at Tema in north Arabia; his son, Belshazzar (see ch 5) served as regent. The “Prayer of Nabonidus” in the Dead Sea Scrolls records the king’s seven years of illness and his cure by a Jewish exorcist. 33: Nebuchadnezzar’s description may anticipate the humanlike beasts of Daniel’s apocalyptic visions (chs 7–12).

4.34–37: Restoration. With the completion of the term of punishment and the restoration of the Nebuchadnezzar’s sanity, the story resumes his first-person narration. Vv. 34–35 echo and expand upon the opening doxology (v. 3). See also 2.20–21; 6.26–27. This king’s affirmation does not influence his “son,” Belshazzar (5.2). 37: Bring low those who walk in pride may be ironic, given Nebuchadnezzar’s glorying in his restored status.

5.1–9: The handwriting on the wall. 1: Belshazzar was the son of Nabonidus, not of Nebuchadnezzar. He served as regent during Nabonidus’s absence (see 4.32–33n.). The banquet is a standard motif in Second Temple literature (e.g., Esther). Lacking a statue of Israel’s God to symbolize their conquest, the Babylonians took lem, so that the king and his lords, his wives, and his concubines might drink from them. ³ So they brought in the vessels of gold and silver^a that had been taken out of the temple, the house of God in Jerusalem, and the king and his lords, his wives, and his concubines drank from them. ⁴ They drank the wine and praised the gods of gold and silver, bronze, iron, wood, and stone.

¹⁰ The queen, when she heard the discussion of the king and his lords, came into the banqueting hall. The queen said, "O king, live forever! Do not let your thoughts terrify you or your face grow pale. ¹¹ There is a man in your kingdom who is endowed with a spirit of the holy gods.^b In the days of your father he was found to have enlightenment, understanding, and wisdom like the wisdom of the gods. Your father, King Nebuchadnezzar, made him chief of the magicians, enchanters, Chaldeans, and diviners,^c ¹² because an excellent spirit, knowledge, and understanding to interpret dreams, explain riddles, and solve problems were found in this Daniel, whom the king named Belteshazzar. Now let Daniel be called, and he will give the interpretation."

¹³ Then Daniel was brought in before the king. The king said to Daniel, "So you are Daniel, one of the exiles of Judah, whom my father the king brought from Judah? ¹⁴ I have heard of you that a spirit of the gods^d is in you, and that enlightenment, understanding, and excellent wisdom are found in you. ¹⁵ Now the wise men, the enchanters, have been brought in before me to read this writing and tell me its interpretation, but they were not able to give the interpretation of the matter. ¹⁶ But I have heard that you can give interpretations and solve problems. Now if you are able to read the writing and tell me its interpretation, you shall be clothed in purple, have a chain of gold around your neck, and rank third in the kingdom."

¹⁷ Then Daniel answered in the presence of the king, "Let your gifts be for yourself, or give your rewards to someone else! Nevertheless I will read the writing to the king and let him know the interpretation. ¹⁸ O king, the Most High God gave your father Nebuchadnezzar kingship, greatness, glory, and maj-ritual vessels (1.2; Ezra 5.14; 6.5). 4: The scene is one of sacrilegious debauchery; the Greek historians Herodotus and Xenophon describe such dissipation at the time of Babylon's fall. 5–6: Although the writing is visible to all, only Belshazzar is alarmed; cf. 3.25. 7: Like Nebuchadnezzar, Belshazzar summons Babylon's wise men; those familiar with the previous chapters can anticipate the magicians' failure and Daniel's success. Rank third: after the king and crown prince (see 2.48).

5.10–12: The queen's intervention. Like Ashpenaz (1.9) and Arioch (2.25), the queen—the only woman to speak in the book—recognizes Daniel's worth. The account may reflect knowledge of Nebuchadnezzar's wife who, according to Herodotus, had exceptional wisdom and political ability. She, as queen mother, knows of Daniel's abilities and rank, but Belshazzar does not (cf. Ex 1.8); Daniel, as representative of the Jews in exile, continually has to demonstrate the power of his God. 11: Holy gods, the queen does not, however, recognize Daniel's theological claims. Chaldeans, see 1.4n., 20n. 12: Belteshazzar, cf. 1.7; see 2.26n.

5.13–31: Deciphering the handwriting. 13: Reference to the exiles makes a fitting start to a chapter that concludes with the fall of Babylon (5.30). 14: Spirit of the gods shows Belshazzar's lack of familiarity with Daniel's faith (see v. 11). 17: Daniel disdains the offer, although later he appears to accept it (5.29). 18–21 recalls 4.30–37.

esty.¹⁹ And because of the greatness that he gave him, all peoples, nations, and languages trembled and feared before him. He killed those he wanted to kill, kept alive those he wanted to keep alive, honored those he wanted to honor, and degraded those he wanted to degrade.²⁰ But when his heart was lifted up and his spirit was hardened so that he acted proudly, he was deposed from his kingly throne, and his glory was stripped from him.²¹ He was driven from human society, and his mind was made like that of an animal. His dwelling was with the wild asses, he was fed grass like oxen, and his body was bathed with the dew of heaven, until he learned that the Most High God has sovereignty over the kingdom of mortals, and sets over it whomever he will.²² And you, Belshazzar his son, have not humbled your heart, even though you knew all this!²³ You have exalted yourself against the Lord of heaven! The vessels of his temple have been brought in before you, and you and your lords, your wives and your concubines have been drinking wine from them. You have praised the gods of silver and gold, of bronze, iron, wood, and stone, which do not see or hear or know; but the God in whose power is your very breath, and to whom belong all your ways, you have not honored.

²⁴ “So from his presence the hand was sent and this writing was inscribed.²⁵ And this is the writing that was inscribed: MENE, MENE, TEKEL, and PARSIN.²⁶ This is the interpretation of the matter: MENE, God has numbered the days of^a your kingdom and brought it to an end; ²⁷ TEKEL, you have been weighed on the scales and found wanting; ²⁸ PERES, ^b your kingdom is divided and given to the Medes and Persians.”

²⁹ Then Belshazzar gave the command, and Daniel was clothed in purple, a chain of gold was put around his neck, and a proclamation was made concerning him that he should rank third in the kingdom.

6 It pleased Darius to set over the kingdom one hundred twenty satraps, stationed throughout the whole kingdom,² and over them three presidents, including Daniel; to these the satraps gave account, so that the king might suffer no loss.³ Soon Daniel distinguished himself above all the other presidents and satraps because an excellent spirit was in him, and the king planned to appoint him over the whole kingdom.⁴ So the presidents and the satraps tried to find grounds for complaint against Daniel in connection with the kingdom. But they could find no grounds for complaint or any corruption, because he was faithful, and no negligence or corruption could be found in him.⁵ The men said, “We shall not find any ground for complaint against this Daniel unless we find it in connection with the law of his God.”

⁶ So the presidents and satraps conspired and came to the king and said to him, “O King Darius, live forever!⁷ All the presidents of 22: Belshazzar’s memory is selective, as was Nebuchadnezzar’s (ch 3). 25–28: The mysterious words are nouns that refer to various weights. Daniel will interpret them according to the related verbs. MENE (Heb “mina”) is a large weight (ca. 20 oz [5 kg]); the related verb means “to count” or “to number.” TEKEL (Heb “shekel”) is one-sixtieth of a mene; the related verb means “to weigh.” PARSIN is the plural of “peres,” which equals a half-shekel; the related verb means “to divide.” The interpretation does not explain why the first word (mene) is repeated or why the last (parsin) is plural. The weights, which match the descending values of the metals in 2.32, symbolize Nebuchadnezzar’s successors, from Belshazzar through the Medes and the Persians (see 2.39–44). 29: Belshazzar appears oblivious to the fateful prediction: did he think rewarding Daniel would forestall it? 31: No such person as Darius the Mede is known outside this biblical reference; later references in Jewish and Christian sources are dependent on Daniel’s account. It was Cyrus the Persian who overthrew the Neo-Babylonian empire in 539 BCE. Darius I, not a Mede but a Persian, ruled 522–486 BCE; he facilitated the rebuilding of Jerusalem (Ezra 6).

6.1–9: Persian plot against Daniel. 1: Darius, see 5.31n. 2: Like Joseph and Mordecai, Daniel advances in the foreign court; how Daniel impressed the Persian king is not recorded. 3: Daniel distinguished himself apparently by political acumen, not supernatural powers. 5: The first reference to Jewish law (Aram. “Dat”, not “Torah”)

the kingdom, the prefects and the satraps, the counselors and the governors are agreed that the king should establish an ordinance and enforce an interdict, that whoever prays to anyone, divine or human, for thirty days, except to you, O king, shall be thrown into a den of lions.⁸ Now, O king, establish the interdict and sign the document, so that it cannot be changed, according to the law of the Medes and the Persians, which cannot be revoked.”⁹ Therefore King Darius signed the document and interdict.

¹⁰ Although Daniel knew that the document had been signed, he continued to go to his house, which had windows in its upper room open toward Jerusalem, and to get down on his knees three times a day to pray to his God and praise him, just as he had done previously.¹¹ The conspirators came and found Daniel praying and seeking mercy before his God.¹² Then they approached the king and said concerning the interdict, “O king! Did you not sign an interdict, that anyone who prays to anyone, divine or human, within thirty days except to you, O king, shall be thrown into a den of lions?” The king answered, “The thing stands fast, according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which cannot be revoked.”¹³ Then they responded to the king, “Daniel, one of the exiles from Judah, pays no attention to you, O king, or to the interdict you have signed, but he is saying his prayers three times a day.”

¹⁴ When the king heard the charge, he was very much distressed. He was determined to save Daniel, and until the sun went down he made every effort to rescue him.¹⁵ Then the conspirators came to the king and said to him, “Know, O king, that it is a law of the Medes and Persians that no interdict or ordinance that the king establishes can be changed.”

¹⁶ Then the king gave the command, and Daniel was brought and thrown into the den of lions. The king said to Daniel, “May your God, whom you faithfully serve, deliver you!”

¹⁹ Then, at break of day, the king got up and hurried to the den of lions.²⁰ When he came near the den where Daniel was, he cried out anxiously to Daniel, “O Daniel, servant of the living God, has your God whom you faithfully serve been able to deliver you from the lions?”²¹ Daniel then said to the king, “O king, live forever!²² My God sent his angel and shut the lions’ mouths so that they would not hurt me, because I was found blameless before him; and also before you, O king, I have done no wrong.”²³ Then the king was exceedingly glad and commanded that Daniel be taken up out of the den. So Daniel was in the book of Daniel. 7: The plot resembles that of ch 3. 8–9: The plot of the book of Esther (1.19; 8.8) also relies on the unalterable law of the Medes and the Persians; it is unlikely, despite occasional ancient testimony, that Median and Persian law functioned in this manner. Like Ahasuerus in Esther, Darius acts, without thinking, on his courtiers’ advice. Historically, Persian rulers supported the various religious beliefs and practices of those under imperial rule.

6.10–17: Daniel’s defiance. 10: Windows . . . open indicates either happenstance or Daniel’s deliberate flouting of the edict (see Tob 2.8). Toward Jerusalem, the direction toward which Jews pray (1 Kings 8.35; 1 Esd 4.58). Three times a day for prayer was Jewish custom by early rabbinic (m. Ber. 4.5) and early Christian (Didache 8) times. 13: Exiles from Judah shows ethnic antagonism: the courtiers remind Darius that Daniel is not “one of them” (see 2.25; 5:13). 14: Sympathy for Darius may be compromised by his willingness to pronounce the edict that condemned Daniel (v. 9). 16: Darius prays for Daniel’s safety, but does not himself acknowledge a worship of Daniel’s God.

6.18–23: In the lions’ den (cf. Bel 31–42). 18–19: Darius appears more agitated than Daniel. 18: Fasting is a cross-cultural practice often accompanying supplicatory prayer and repentance. Ironically, his not eating mirrors what he hopes the lions are doing. 20: The king continues to highlight Daniel’s fidelity. 22: Sent his angel recalls the fourth man in the furnace (3.25). I have done no wrong, Daniel subtly faults the king for endangering an innocent person, even as he equates his blamelessness before God with his blamelessness before the king.

taken up out of the den, and no kind of harm was found on him, because he had trusted in his God.²⁴ The king gave a command, and those who had accused Daniel were brought and thrown into the den of lions—they, their children, and their wives. Before they reached the bottom of the den the lions overpowered them and broke all their bones in pieces.

²⁵ Then King Darius wrote to all peoples and nations of every language throughout the whole world: “May you have abundant prosperity!²⁶ I make a decree, that in all my royal dominion people should tremble and fear before the God of Daniel:

For he is the living God, enduring forever.

His kingdom shall never be destroyed, and his dominion has no end.

²⁷ He delivers and rescues, he works signs and wonders in heaven and on earth;

for he has saved Daniel from the power of the lions.”

²⁸ So this Daniel prospered during the reign of Darius and the reign of Cyrus the Persian.

7 In the first year of King Belshazzar of Babylon, Daniel had a dream and visions of his head as he lay in bed. Then he wrote down the dream:^a ² I,^b Daniel, saw in my vision by night the four winds of heaven stirring up the great sea,³ and four great beasts came up out of the sea, different from one another.⁴ The first was like a lion and had eagles’ wings. Then, as I watched, its wings were plucked off, and it was lifted up from the ground and made to stand on two feet like a human being; and a human mind was given to it.⁵ Another beast appeared, a second one, that looked like a bear. It was raised up on one side, had three tusks^c in its mouth among its teeth and was told, “Arise, devour many bodies!”⁶ After this, as I watched, another appeared, like a leopard. The beast had four wings of a bird on its back and four heads; and dominion was given to it.⁷ After this I saw in the visions by night a fourth beast, terrifying and dreadful and exceedingly strong. It had great iron teeth and was devouring, breaking in pieces, and stamping what was left with its feet. It was different from all the beasts that preceded it, and it had ten horns.⁸ I was considering the horns, when another horn appeared, a little one

6.24–28: Restitution. 24: Children . . . wives (see also Josh 7.24–26; Bel 21) indicate that family members suffer because of the misdeeds of the family leader. 25: The letter and doxology resemble 4.1–3, 34–37. 26: The king, ironically, issues another law mandating a particular form of worship. 28: Cyrus the Persian (ruled 590–530 BCE) promulgated the edict in 538 that permitted Judean exiles Babylon to return home (Ezra 1.1–4; 6.3–5; Isa 44.28; 45.1).

7.1–8: The first vision. Unlike Nebuchadnezzar’s dreams and Belshazzar’s visions, Daniel’s apocalyptic revelations focus less on the dreamer’s fate and more on international events. Also in contrast to the earlier scenes, Daniel is now himself in need of an interpreter. The history recorded in the visions suggests that they were composed sometime before 164 BCE, when Judas Maccabeus purified the Temple that Antiochus IV Epiphanes had profaned in 167. 1: The first year of King Belshazzar, 553 BCE (Belshazzar served then as co-regent with Nabonidus). 2: Daniel describes his dream in the first person. 3: The sea is associated with chaos and beasts (e.g., Isa 27.1; Job 9.13); four beasts symbolize kingdoms, Babylon, Media, Persia, and Greece (2.31–45; 7.17; Pss 68.30; 1 Enoch, and throughout the book of Revelation). 4: A lion, the kingdom of Babylon. Hybrid creatures are a standard motif in late prophetic and early apocalyptic literature (see e.g., Ezek 1.5–7). The beast like a human reverses the image of Nebuchadnezzar (4.33). Plucked wings indicates both loss of power and transition to human form. Human mind may reflect Nebuchadnezzar’s return to sanity in 4.34–35. 5: The bear represents the Medes (cf. Jer 51.11 on the Medes attacking Babylon). 6: The leopard is Persia. Four heads may anticipate the four Persian kings of 11.2. 7: The fourth beast is the Greek kingdom, in particular the Seleucid kingdom founded by Seleucus I, one of Alexander the Great’s generals, in Syria and Mesopotamia after Alexander’s death in 323 BCE. Different: because of its non-Mesopotamian origins and more extensive geographical spread. Stamping may suggest the elephant, part of the Greek war effort (1 Macc 1.17; 3.34; 6.28–47). Ten horns is a round number representing the kings of the Seleucid empire from Seleucus I until the time of Antiochus IV Epiphanes. 8: The coming up among them; to make room for it, three of the earlier horns were plucked up by the roots. There were eyes like human eyes in this horn, and a mouth speaking arrogantly.

⁹ As I watched,
thrones were set in place,
and an Ancient One^a took his throne,
his clothing was white as snow,
and the hair of his head like pure wool;
his throne was fiery flames,
and its wheels were burning fire.

¹⁰ A stream of fire issued and flowed out from his presence.
A thousand thousands served him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood attending him.

The court sat in judgment,
and the books were opened.

¹¹ I watched then because of the noise of the arrogant words that the horn was speaking. And as I watched, the beast was put to death, and its body destroyed and given over to be burned with fire. ¹² As for the rest of the beasts, their dominion was taken away, but their lives were prolonged for a season and a time. ¹³ As I watched in the night visions, I saw one like a human being^b coming with the clouds of heaven.

And he came to the Ancient One^c and was presented before him.

¹⁴ To him was given dominion and glory and kingship, that all peoples, nations, and languages should serve him.

His dominion is an everlasting dominion that shall not pass away, and his kingship is one that shall never be destroyed.

¹⁵ As for me, Daniel, my spirit was troubled within me,^d and the visions of my head terrified me. ¹⁶ I approached one of the attendants to ask him the truth concerning all this. So he said that he would disclose to me the interpretation of the matter: ¹⁷ “As for these four great beasts, four kings shall arise out of the earth. ¹⁸ But the holy ones of the Most High shall receive the kingdom and possess the kingdom forever—forever and ever.”

¹⁹ Then I desired to know the truth concerning the fourth beast, which was different from all the rest, exceedingly terrifying, with its teeth of iron and claws of bronze, and which devoured and broke in pieces, and stamped what was left with its feet;²⁰ and concerning the ten horns that were on its head, and concerning the other horn, which came up and to make room for which three of them fell out—little horn is Antiochus IV (8.9; 1 Macc 1.41–50), who attempted to outlaw Jewish practices. Three of the earlier horns, Antiochus IV was fourth in the line of succession, after his brother, Seleucus IV, and his brothers' sons, Antiochus and Demetrius. Seleucus was murdered by his prime minister, Heliodorus, and Demetrius was exiled to Rome. Antiochus IV was directly responsible only for the death of his nephew Antiochus, but the book of Daniel apparently holds him responsible for killing or displacing all three.

7.9–14: The heavenly throne room. See 1 Kings 22.19; Isa 6; Ezek 1.26–28; 1 Enoch 14. 9: Thrones, although other parts of the Hebrew Bible and other Jewish apocalypses refer to only a single throne in heaven, the multiple thrones of the court setting in Daniel 7 are reflected in early Christian texts (see e.g., Mt 19.28; Rev 20.4). Ancient One, lit. “Ancient of Days,” i.e., God. White clothing, Mt 28.3; Rev 3.5. Fiery flames, Ezek 1.4; wheels, Ezek 1.15–21; 10.2. 10: The books in which human deeds are recorded are commonly associated with the divine court (12.1n.; Isa 65.6; Mal 3.16; 1 Enoch 90.20, Rev 20.12). 12: Prolonged for a season and a time, the empires are stripped of power, but they are not destroyed. 13: One like a human being, also translated “son of man,” can be seen as the faithful community (a corporate symbol, for Daniel indicating faithful Jews), the angel Michael, Israel’s guardian (10.13,21; see also Rev 12); Gabriel (see 9.21), Judas Maccabeus, Daniel himself. The term “son of man” can also mean “human being” (Ezek 2.1; Job 25.6), here in opposition to the animalistic nature of the previous kingdoms. In the Synoptic Gospels, the term is Jesus’ preferred self-designation. 14: Cf. 4.3,34; 6.26.

7.15–28: The interpretation. 15: Spirit was troubled is a typical reaction to visions (2.1; 8.27; Gen 41.8); it is not clear whether Daniel has awakened or is still dreaming. 17: The four kings are the kingdoms of Babylon, Media, Persia, and Greece. 18: The holy ones are members of the heavenly court (e.g., Deut 33.2–3; Job 5.1; 15.15; Ps 89.5,7; Zech 14.5) as well as God’s people (e.g., Ps 16.3; 34.9; Wis 3.9) The term may here specifically refer to the horn that had eyes and a mouth that spoke arrogantly, and that seemed greater than the others.²¹ As I looked, this horn made war with the holy ones and was prevailing over them,²² until the Ancient One^a came; then judgment was given for the holy ones of the Most High, and the time arrived when the holy ones gained possession of the kingdom.

²³ This is what he said: “As for the fourth beast, there shall be a fourth kingdom on earth that shall be different from all the other kingdoms; it shall devour the whole earth, and trample it down, and break it to pieces.²⁴ As for the ten horns, out of this kingdom ten kings shall arise, and another shall arise after them. This one shall be different from the former ones, and shall put down three kings.²⁵ He shall speak words against the Most High, shall wear out the holy ones of the Most High, and shall attempt to change the sacred seasons and the law; and they shall be given into his power for a time, two times,^b and half a time.²⁶ Then the court shall sit in judgment, and his dominion shall be taken away, to be consumed and totally destroyed.²⁷ The kingship and dominion and the greatness of the kingdoms under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the holy ones of the Most High;

their kingdom shall be an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey them.”

²⁸ Here the account ends. As for me, Daniel, my thoughts greatly terrified me, and my face turned pale; but I kept the matter in my mind.

8 In the third year of the reign of King Belshazzar a vision appeared to me, Daniel, after the one that had appeared to me at first.² In the vision I was looking and saw myself in Susa the capital, in the province of Elam,^c and I was by the river Ulai.^d ³ I looked up and saw a ram standing beside the river.^e It had two horns. Both horns were long, but one was longer than the other, and the longer one came up second.⁴ I saw the ram charging westward and northward and southward. All beasts were powerless to withstand it, and no one could rescue from its power; it did as it pleased and became strong.

⁵ As I was watching, a male goat appeared from the west, coming across the face of the whole earth without touching the ground. The goat had a horn^f between its eyes.⁶ It came toward the ram with the two horns that I had seen standing beside the river,^e and it ran at it with savage force.⁷ I saw it

Jews persecuted by Antiochus. 22: The prediction anticipates the reversal of fortune for the persecuted faithful, just as the folktales of chs 1–6 depict. 23–25: The greater detail suggests a time closer to the author’s own. The fourth beast and the ten horns, see 7.7–8n. 25: Words against the Most High, Antiochus IV Epiphanes was the first Hellenistic king to use divine self-designations on coinage. Sacred seasons and the law are practices marking Jewish identity disrupted by Antiochus (1 Macc 1.45; 2 Macc 6.6). A time, two times, and half a time indicates three and a half years (see 4.36), approximately the time of Antiochus’s persecution. Three and a half is also half of seven, the perfect number. 28: Kept the matter in my mind, apocalyptic visions are often kept secret until an opportune time (2 Esd 14.45–46).

8.1–14: The second vision. With this chapter, the book of Daniel reverts from Aramaic to Hebrew. 1: The earlier vision is that of ch 7. 2: Susa, the royal city of Persia (Esth 1.2). River Ulai, a river near Susa; visionary experiences are occasionally associated with riverbank settings (Ezek 1.1). 3–4: Two horns are Media and Persia (see v. 20). The ram may be connected to an astrological symbol. 5: The goat may also be a zodiac sign; here it symbolizes Alexander the Great (see v. 21), whose empire originated west of Mesopotamia. Across . . . the whole approaching the ram. It was enraged against it and struck the ram, breaking its two horns. The ram did not have power to withstand it; it threw the ram down to the ground and trampled upon it, and there was no one who could rescue the ram from its power.⁸ Then the male goat grew exceedingly great; but at the height of its power, the great horn was broken, and in its place there came up four prominent horns toward the four winds of heaven.

⁹ Out of one of them came another^a horn, a little one, which grew exceedingly great toward the south, toward the east, and toward the beautiful land. ¹⁰ It grew as high as the host of heaven. It threw down to the earth some of the host and some of the stars, and trampled on them. ¹¹ Even against the prince of the host it acted arrogantly; it took the regular burnt offering away from him and overthrew the place of his sanctuary. ¹² Because of wickedness, the host was given over to it together with the regular burnt offering;^b it cast truth to the ground, and kept prospering in what it did. ¹³ Then I heard a holy one speaking, and another holy one said to the one that spoke, “For how long is this vision concerning the regular burnt offering, the transgression that makes desolate, and the giving over of the sanctuary and host to be trampled?”^b ¹⁴ And he answered him,^c

¹⁵ When I, Daniel, had seen the vision, I tried to understand it. Then someone appeared standing before me, having the appearance of a man,¹⁶ and I heard a human voice by the Ulai, calling, “Gabriel, help this man understand the vision.”¹⁷ So he came near where I stood; and when he came, I became frightened and fell prostrate. But he said to me, “Understand, O mortal,^d that the vision is for the time of the end.”

¹⁸ As he was speaking to me, I fell into a trance, face to the ground; then he touched me and set me on my feet. ¹⁹ He said, “Listen, and I will tell you what will take place later in the period of wrath; for it refers to the appointed time of the end. ²⁰ As for the ram that you saw with the two horns, these are the kings of Media and Persia. ²¹ The male goat^e is the king of Greece, and the great horn between its eyes is the first king. ²² As for the horn that was broken, in place of which four earth suggests Alexander’s swift eastern campaign. 8: Great horn was broken, Alexander died in 323 BCE. Four prominent horns are Alexander’s generals who divided his empire. 9: The little horn is, again (see 7.8), Antiochus IV Epiphanes. The beautiful land is Israel or, more specifically, Jerusalem (11.16,41; Jer 3.19; Ezek 20.6,15). 10–11: See Isa 14.12–16; Antiochus’s outrages have cosmic import. Host of heaven can refer to stars or to heavenly beings or to both. Dan 12.3 connects the heavenly luminaries with God’s faithful worshipers. Images of heavenly and human beings converge. For threw down some of the host, see Rev 12.4. 11: Prince of the host is probably Michael, serving as God’s representative; elsewhere prince designates angels (10.13,20–21). Took the . . . offering away, Antiochus and his supporters replaced the Temple’s offerings (Ex 29.38–42; Num 28–29; Ezra 3.5; Neh 10.34; Ezek 46.1–5) with sacrifices to Zeus (1 Macc 1.45,59; 2 Macc 6.2). 12: Truth or true religion is, for Daniel, worship of the God of Israel only. 13: Holy ones, see 7.18n. “How long” is a major question of both penitential and apocalyptic literature (Ps 6.3; 79.5; 80.4; 90.13; Isa 6.11; Jer 12.4; Zech 1.12). The transgression that makes desolate is likely the structure erected on the altar of burnt offering in the Temple (1 Macc 1.54; 2 Macc 6.2); the Heb term (“pesha’ shomem”) is a play on the expression “Baal Shamem,” or “lord of heaven,” an epithet of Zeus.

15–27: Gabriel’s interpretation. 15: Appearance of a man indicates an angel; see 7.13n. 16: Ulai, see v. 2n. Gabriel, whose name means “man of God” or “God is my hero/warrior,” serves as a divine messenger (Lk 1.19,26). 17: Fell prostrate, Daniel had not bowed to any Babylonian king or idol; the response is appropriate to an epiphany (10.9; Josh 5.14; Ezek 1.28; 3.23). Mortal, Heb “ben ’adam,” or “son of man” (this is not the same term used in 7.13). Time of the end indicates the final judgment, restitution of the faithful, and punishment of the wicked (see Hab 2.3). 18: Trance (lit. “deep sleep”) is the same term used for Adam’s (Gen 2.21) and Abraham’s (Gen 15.12) sleep. Touch conveys heavenly concern (10.10,16,18; Isa 6.7; Jer 1.9). Set me on my feet, see Ezek 2.1–2.

²⁷ So I, Daniel, was overcome and lay sick for some days; then I arose and went about the king’s business. But I was dismayed by the vision and did not understand it.

9 In the first year of Darius son of Ahasuerus, by birth a Mede, who became king over the realm of the Chaldeans—² in the first year of his reign, I, Daniel, perceived in the books the number of years that, according to the word of the LORD to the prophet Jeremiah, must be fulfilled for the devastation of Jerusalem, namely, seventy years.

³ Then I turned to the Lord God, to seek an answer by prayer and supplication with fasting and sackcloth and ashes. ⁴ I prayed to the LORD my God and made confession, saying, “Ah, Lord, great and awesome God, keeping covenant and steadfast love with those who love you and keep your commandments, ⁵ we have sinned and done wrong, acted wickedly and rebelled, turning aside from your commandments and ordinances. ⁶ We have not listened to your servants the prophets, who spoke in your name to our kings, our princes, and our ancestors, and to all the people of the land.

⁷ “Righteousness is on your side, O Lord, but open shame, as at this day, falls on us, the people of Judah, the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and all Israel, those who are near and those who are far away, in all the lands to which you have driven them, because of the treachery that they have committed against you. ⁸ Open shame, O LORD, falls on us, our kings, our officials, and our ancestors, because we have sinned against you. ⁹ To the Lord our God belong mercy and forgiveness, for we have rebelled against him, ¹⁰ and have not obeyed the voice of the LORD our God by following his laws, which he set before us by his servants the prophets.

The circumstances of Antiochus IV’s death are unclear. He died in Persia in late 164 BCE, either in the act of robbing a temple (so Polybius and 2 Macc 1.14–16) or of a sudden illness (so 1 Macc 6.1–17; 2 Macc 9.1–29). 26: See 7.28n.; Isa 29.11. 27: Cf. 7.28.

Jer 26.17–18; see also Tob 2.6n.); the reference is to Jer 25.11–12; 29.10–14. Devastation, Jerusalem was destroyed by the Babylonians in 586 BCE. 3: Fasting, sackcloth, and ashes are traditional indications of mourning and penance, including in perilous times (see 6.18n; 1 Kings 21.27; Isa 58.5; Ezra 8.21–23; Neh 9.1; Esth 4.1–4; 2 Macc 13.12; Jdt 4.9–11); fasting also serves as preparation for visionary experiences (Ex 34.28; 1 Kings 19.8). 4–19: The prayer is similar to other postexilic penitential prayers; cf. Ezra 9; Neh 9; Bar 1.15–3.8. Communal confession is typical of Jewish piety; even in cases where no sin is indicated, prayers begin with confession and repentance (see also 1 Kings 8.47; 2 Chr 6.37; Ps 106.6). 7: All Israel includes the ten tribes dispersed with the destruction of the northern kingdom of Israel by Assyria in 722 BCE. 10: Laws, the curse and the oath written in the law of Moses, the servant of God, have been poured out upon us, because we have sinned against you. ¹²He has confirmed his words, which he spoke against us and against our rulers, by bringing upon us a calamity so great that what has been done against Jerusalem has never before been done under the whole heaven. ¹³Just as it is written in the law of Moses, all this calamity has come upon us. We did not entreat the favor of the LORD our God, turning from our iniquities and reflecting on his^a fidelity. ¹⁴So the LORD kept watch over this calamity until he brought it upon us. Indeed, the LORD our God is right in all that he has done; for we have disobeyed his voice.

¹⁵“And now, O Lord our God, who brought your people out of the land of Egypt with a mighty hand and made your name renowned even to this day—we have sinned, we have done wickedly. ¹⁶O Lord, in view of all your righteous acts, let your anger and wrath, we pray, turn away from your city Jerusalem, your holy mountain; because of our sins and the iniquities of our ancestors, Jerusalem and your people have become a disgrace among all our neighbors. ¹⁷Now therefore, O our God, listen to the prayer of your servant and to his supplication, and for your own sake, Lord,^b let your face shine upon your desolated sanctuary.

¹⁸Incline your ear, O my God, and hear. Open your eyes and look at our desolation and the city that bears your name. We do not present our supplication before you on the ground of our righteousness, but on the ground of your great mercies. ¹⁹O Lord, hear; O Lord, forgive; O Lord, listen and act and do not delay! For your own sake, O my God, because your city and your people bear your name!”

²⁰While I was speaking, and was praying and confessing my sin and the sin of my people Israel, and presenting my supplication before the LORD my God on behalf of the holy mountain of my God—²¹while I was speaking in prayer, the man Gabriel, whom I had seen before in a vision, came to me in swift flight at the time of the evening sacrifice.

²²He came^c and said to me, “Daniel, I have now come out to give you wisdom and understanding. ²³At the beginning of your supplications a word went out, and I have come to declare it, for you are greatly beloved. So consider the word and understand the vision:

²⁴“Seventy weeks are decreed for your people and your holy city: to finish the transgression, to put an end to sin, and to atone for iniquity, to bring in everlasting righteousness, to seal both vision and prophet, and to anoint a most holy place.^d ²⁵Know therefore and understand: from the time that the word went out to restore and rebuild Jerusalem until the time of an anointed prince, there shall be seven weeks; and for sixty-two weeks it shall be built again with streets and moat, but in a troubled time. ²⁶After the sixty-two weeks, an anointed one shall be cut off and shall have nothing, and the troops of the prince who is to come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary. Its^e end shall come with a flood, and to the end there shall be war. Desolations are decreed. ²⁷He shall make a strong

10 In the third year of King Cyrus of Persia a word was revealed to Daniel, who was named Belteshazzar. The word was true, and it concerned a great conflict. He understood the word, having received understanding in the vision.

² At that time I, Daniel, had been mourning for three weeks. ³ I had eaten no rich food, no meat or wine had entered my mouth, and I had not anointed myself at all, for the full three weeks. ⁴ On the twenty-fourth day of the first month, as I was standing on the bank of the great river (that is, the Tigris), ⁵ I looked up and saw a man clothed in linen, with a belt of gold from Uphaz around his waist. ⁶ His body was like beryl, his face like lightning, his eyes like flaming torches, his arms and legs like the gleam of burnished bronze, and the sound of his words like the roar of a multitude. ⁷ I, Daniel, alone saw the vision; the people who were with me did not see the vision, though a great trembling fell upon them, and they fled and hid themselves. ⁸ So I was left alone to see this great vision. My strength left me, and my complexion grew deathly pale, and I retained no strength. ⁹ Then I heard the sound of his words; and when I heard the sound of his words, I fell into a trance, face to the ground.

¹⁰ But then a hand touched me and roused me to my hands and knees. ¹¹ He said to me,

“Daniel, greatly beloved, pay attention to the words that I am going to speak to you. Stand on your feet, for I have now been sent to you.” So while he was speaking this word to me, I stood up trembling. ¹² He said to me, “Do not fear, Daniel, for from the first day that you set your mind to gain understanding and to humble yourself before your God, your words have been heard, and I have come because of your words. ¹³ But the prince of the kingdom of Persia opposed me twenty-one days. So Michael, one of the chief princes, came to help me, and I left him there with the prince of the kingdom of Persia,^b ¹⁴ and have come to help you understand what is to happen to your people at the end of days. For there is a further vision for those days.”

¹⁵ While he was speaking these words to me, I turned my face toward the ground and was speechless. ¹⁶ Then one in human form touched my lips, and I opened my mouth to speak, and said to the one who stood before me, “My lord, because of the vision such pains have come upon me that I retain no strength. ¹⁷ How can my lord’s servant talk with my lord? For I am shaking,^c no strength remains in me, and no breath is left in me.”

¹⁸ Again one in human form touched me and strengthened me. ¹⁹ He said, “Do not fear, greatly beloved, you are safe. Be strong and courageous!” When he spoke to me, I was

10.1–9: Daniel’s visionary experience. The last three chapters of the book comprise a single vision. 1: Third year of King Cyrus is 536 BCE. Reference to Daniel’s Babylonian name (1.7; 2.24n.; 5.12) connects the apocalypse with the earlier tales. Word, accompanying the visual experience is auditory revelation. 3: Daniel’s regimen indicates mourning and repentance. 4: The dating indicates that Daniel fasted during the feast of Passover (first month in this book’s calendar is the spring month of Nisan). On the bank, see 8.2n. 5: Clothed in linen suggests both the Temple priesthood (Ex 28) and angelic messengers (see Ezek 9.2–7). The “man” is probably Gabriel (cf. 9.21). Uphaz, perhaps Ophir in Arabia (see 1 Kings 9.28). 6: The angel is described with elements that echo the divine glory in Ezek 1. 7: Alone saw the vision, a similar experience occurs to Saul (Paul) according to Acts 9.7.

10.10–21: Gabriel’s encouragement. 10: Touched, see 8.18n. 12: Do not fear is standard exhortation for those receiving angelic revelation (also v. 19). 13: War on earth is matched by war in heaven (a motif also found in the Dead Sea Scrolls and Rev 12); Michael is chief of the angelic princes (see Rev 12.7) and guardian of Israel (12.1). Prince of the kingdom of Persia is Persia’s patron angel; cf. Deut 32.8; Sir 17.17. 16: Human form, see 7.13n. Touching the lips recalls Isa 6.7; Jer 1.9. 17: Reluctance is a frequent response by individuals called to prophetic tasks (see

Now I must return to fight against the prince of Persia, and when I am through with him, the prince of Greece will come.²¹ But I am to tell you what is inscribed in the book of truth. There is no one with me who contends against these princes except Michael, your 11 prince.¹ As for me, in the first year of Darius the Mede, I stood up to support and strengthen him.

² “Now I will announce the truth to you. Three more kings shall arise in Persia. The fourth shall be far richer than all of them, and when he has become strong through his riches, he shall stir up all against the kingdom of Greece.³ Then a warrior king shall arise, who shall rule with great dominion and take action as he pleases.⁴ And while still rising in power, his kingdom shall be broken and divided toward the four winds of heaven, but not to his posterity, nor according to the dominion with which he ruled; for his kingdom shall be uprooted and go to others besides these.

¹⁰ “His sons shall wage war and assemble a multitude of great forces, which shall advance like a flood and pass through, and again shall carry the war as far as his fortress.¹¹ Moved with rage, the king of the south shall go out and do battle against the king of the north, who shall muster a great multitude, which shall, however, be defeated by his enemy.¹² When the multitude has been carried off, his heart shall be exalted, and he shall overthrow tens of thousands, but he shall not prevail.¹³ For the king of the north shall again raise a multitude, larger than the former, and after some years^a he shall advance with a great army and abundant supplies.

He shall devise plans against strongholds, but only for a time.²⁵ He shall stir up his power and determination against the king of the south with a great army, and the king of the south shall wage war with a much greater and stronger army. But he shall not succeed, for plots shall be devised against him²⁶ by those who eat of the royal rations. They shall break him, his army shall be swept away, and many shall fall slain.²⁷ The two kings, their minds bent on evil, shall sit at one table and exchange lies. HOSEA

NAME, AUTHORSHIP, DATE OF COMPOSITION, AND HISTORICAL CONTEXT

The book of Hosea consists of a narrative about the prophet and sayings attributed to him. Hosea began his career in the final days of Jeroboam II (1.1), whose long reign (788–747 BCE) capped a century of political stability and economic prosperity in the Northern Kingdom of Israel under the dynasty found by Jehu in 842. Jeroboam died in 747, two years before Tiglath-pileser III came to power in Assyria (745) and initiated a program of imperial expansion. A prolonged national crisis ensued, which ended with the demise of the Northern Kingdom. Israel flourished under the Assyrian onslaught. Of the six kings who reigned in the next two decades, four were assassinated as the nation veered between appeasement, at the cost of heavy tribute, and rebellion, seeking futile alliances with Syria and Egypt (see 2 Kings 14.23–17.41). When Hosea's prophetic career ended is uncertain, though his oracles appear to allude to events right up to the Assyrian siege of Samaria in 722 (13.10–11,16).

After the destruction of Samaria, Hosea's words were preserved and transmitted in the Southern Kingdom of Judah. Some or all of the references to Judah may have been added in this era as Hosea's words were reinterpreted to address an analogous situation there (e.g., 1.7; 3.5; 11.12). It is also possible, however, that Hosea himself, though a northern prophet, addressed Judah as well.

As a prophet of the Northern Kingdom, Hosea presents a unique perspective among the prophets as an Israelite native, not a Judahite like his near contemporary Amos, who viewed the events from the south. The text gives little information about the prophet himself. Indeed, the only personal detail is the name of his father, Beeri (1.1). Chapters 1–3 narrate Hosea's marriage to the adulteress Gomer and the birth of their three children, Jezreel, Lo-ruhamah, and Lo-ammi, but it is debatable whether one can deduce actual biographical facts from this description of family life.

CANONICAL STATUS AND LOCATION IN CANON

The book of Hosea stands first in that part of the latter prophets called the Book of the Twelve, also known as the Minor Prophets because of their relative brevity in comparison with Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel. Along with Amos, Hosea was the first of the “writing prophets,” those prophets whose speeches were collected and edited as literary documents.

CONTENTS AND STRUCTURE

The book consists primarily of speeches critiquing the political, social, and, above all, religious life of the Northern Kingdom of Israel in the final days before its conquest and destruction by the Assyrians in 722. Hosea often refers to the Northern Kingdom under the titles of “Ephraim,” its largest tribe, and “Samaria,” its capital (see 4.17n.). Over the course of three decades (ca. 750–720 BCE), Hosea interpreted the unfolding disaster as a divine punishment—the Assyrians were merely God's tool—for violation of the exclusive demands of the LORD. With frequent allusions to Israelite historical traditions, Hosea portrayed Israel's entire history as a spiritual decline from an ideal time, its “youth” in the period of the Exodus from Egypt (2.15; 11.1).

During this national crisis, Hosea issued an unrelenting critique of existing political and religious institutions. Through dynastic kingship, political alliances with other nations, and, above all, illicit religious practices, Israel had violated the divine claim upon it for exclusive dependence upon and worship of the LORD. As divine punishment, Israel would be stripped of political and religious institutions too corrupt to be reformed and its land left desolate and barren. Israel would, in essence, find itself again in the wilderness. The severity of the prophetic critique is juxtaposed with language of divine longing and compassion (11.1–11; 13.4–7). In the short term, Hosea presented the annihilation of the Northern Kingdom as inevitable. Drawing, however, on a pattern discerned in Israel's sacred traditions, Hosea ultimately offered hope. In this new wilderness, as in the Sinai desert, Israel would recognize its dependence on the LORD and be restored to a harmonious state with God and with nature (2.14–23).

Hosea is best known for his metaphors, drawn from the natural world, agriculture, and, especially, kinship structures: Israel as the LORD's wife, Israel as the LORD's son. These familial metaphors are introduced in two narrative sections about the prophet's own life at the beginning of the book (1.2–2.1; 3.1–5). The prophet's personal life is presented as a paradigm of the relationship between the LORD and Israel.

Insofar as these chapters construct a biographical story for prophetic purposes, it can be said that Hosea deals with Gomer as the LORD deals with Israel. Gomer is “a wife of whoredom” (1.2), best understood as “a promiscuous woman.” She bore three children, of whom Hosea was presumably not the father (2.4–5). After a period of marital separation, Hosea took her back (3.1–5). In a similar way, Israel, the LORD’s unfaithful wife, will be separated from her husband and home but, just as Hosea bought back Gomer (3.2), the LORD will restore Israel. Hosea’s image of Israel’s sexual misconduct may be more than symbolic (e.g., 4.13–19; 9.1). Canaanite religious practice may have included sexual rites in imitation of the gods, who, presumably, generated terrestrial fertility through sexual intercourse.

The book has two major sections, which appear to be roughly chronological. Chapters 1–3 contain the material about Hosea’s marriage and can be understood against the background of the last days of Jeroboam II, since 1.4 announces the demise of the Jehu dynasty of which Jeroboam was the final ruler. The second major section, chs 4–14, consists entirely of prophetic speeches that seem to allude to the chaotic days following the demise of the house of Jehu and the prolonged Assyria crisis. Boundaries between individual speech units in this second section are hard to discern. It seems to fall into two parts (chs 4–11; 12–14), rhetorically couched as legal indictments of Israel for breach of covenant (4.1; 12.2), and ending with images of restoration (11.1–11; 14.1–7).

1 The word of the LORD that came to Hosea son of Beeri, in the days of Kings Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah of Judah, and in the days of King Jeroboam son of Joash of Israel.

² When the LORD first spoke through Hosea, the LORD said to Hosea, “Go, take for yourself a wife of whoredom and have children of whoredom, for the land commits great whoredom by forsaking the LORD.” ³ So he went and took Gomer daughter of Diblaim, and she conceived and bore him a son.

⁴ And the LORD said to him, “Name him Jezreel;^a for in a little while I will punish the house of Jehu for the blood of Jezreel, and I will put an end to the kingdom of the house of Israel. ⁵ On that day I will break the bow of Israel in the valley of Jezreel.”

⁶ She conceived again and bore a daughter. Then the LORD said to him, “Name her Loruhamah,^b for I will no longer have pity on the house of Israel or forgive them. ⁷ But I will have pity on the house of Judah, and I will save them by the LORD their God; I will not

1.1: Superscription. Word of the LORD, the customary term for prophetic verbal revelation (Jer 18.18). For similar introductions to prophetic books, see Joel 1.1, Mic 1.1, Zeph 1.1, and Mal 1.1. Hosea (= Hoshea) is also the name for other persons in the Hebrew Bible (e.g., Num 13.8; 2 Kings 15.3; 1 Chr 27.20; Neh 10.23) and means “salvation” or “deliverance.” Days of Kings Uzziah . . . , these kings of Judah reigned in Jerusalem in the last half of the eighth century BCE (see 2 Kings 14.23–20.21). Uzziah was a contemporary of Jeroboam II, who ruled 788–747 in Samaria, the capital of the Northern Kingdom of Israel, and Ahaz was king in Judah when Samaria fell. Presumably Hosea prophesied late in Jeroboam’s reign and after his death.

1.2–3.5: Hosea’s family life as a symbolic vehicle for divine communication. The prophetic acts of Hosea, detailed in two sections (1.2–2.1; 3.1–5), exemplify God’s relationship with Israel in allegorical fashion. Between the narrative sections, a prophetic speech (2.2–2.3) indicts Israel for unfaithfulness and offers hope for restoration after a period of punishment.

1.2–2.1: Hosea’s marriage to Gomer, and the birth, naming, and renaming of their children as prophetic signs. The marital states of Jeremiah (Jer 16.1–2) and Ezekiel (Ezek 24) also took on prophetic significance; Isaiah gave children symbolic names (Isa 7.3, 10.14; 8.1.3). 1.2: Wife of whoredom, a promiscuous woman. Children of whoredom, children born of promiscuity. 4–8: Birth of three children, each with symbolic names. 4: Jezreel (“God sows”), the site where Jehu’s bloody coup d’etat began (2 Kings 9–10). House of Jehu, the Israelite dynasty founded by Jehu in 842 BCE extended for a century, ending with Jeroboam II. 6: Lo-ruhamah, “Not loved, not pitied”; cf. Ezek 16.4–5. 7: This amendment to the doom promised in v. 6 is likely added by a later Judean editor.

save them by bow, or by sword, or by war, or by horses, or by horsemen.”

⁸When she had weaned Lo-ruhamah, she conceived and bore a son. ⁹Then the LORD said, “Name him Lo-ammi,^a for you are not my people and I am not your God.”^b

¹⁰^cYet the number of the people of Israel shall be like the sand of the sea, which can be neither measured nor numbered; and in the place where it was said to them, “You are not my people,” it shall be said to them, “Children of the living God.” ¹¹The people of Judah and the people of Israel shall be gathered together, and they shall appoint for themselves one head; and they shall take possession of^d the land, for great shall be the day of Jezreel.

2^e Say to your brother,^f Ammi,^g and to your sister,^h Ruhamah.ⁱ

²Plead with your mother, plead—for she is not my wife, and expose her as in the day she was born,

and make her like a wilderness,
and turn her into a parched land,
and kill her with thirst.

⁴Upon her children also I will have no pity, because they are children of whoredom.

⁵For their mother has played the whore;

she who conceived them has acted shamefully.

For she said, “I will go after my lovers;
they give me my bread and my water, my wool and my flax, my oil and my drink.”

⁶Therefore I will hedge up her^j way with thorns;
and I will build a wall against her,
so that she cannot find her paths.

⁷She shall pursue her lovers, but not overtake them;
and she shall seek them,
but shall not find them.
Then she shall say, “I will go and return to my first husband, for it was better with me than than now.”

⁸She did not know that it was I who gave her the grain, the wine, and the oil, and who lavished upon her silver and gold that they used for Baal.

2.2–23: A prophetic speech based on the preceding sign-acts. Israel wrongly attributed its agricultural fertility to Baal, a Canaanite god. For this infidelity, the Lord first initiates divorce against Israel, the promiscuous wife, then promises a rebetrothal. The metaphor of adulterous marriage and violent punishment should be interpreted with caution. It is a literary device to be viewed within its historical context, where a culture of honor and shame was used to control women’s sexuality; it does not sanction domestic violence of any kind. 2: Plead with, take legal action against. 3: Ezekiel 16 expands this image. The covenant was first forged in the wilderness (Ex 19.1), though here “wilderness” is a symbol for barrenness and Israel’s infidelity. 4: No pity, a pun on Lo-ruhamah; see 1.6n. 5: My lovers, foreign gods. Wool and . . . flax, pastoral and agricultural products, respectively, used for clothing. 6: Sexual access will be prevented (see Song 8.9). 2.9–10: Nakedness, a metaphor for Israel’s unfaithfulness (see 1.3; Lam 1.8; Nah 3.5). 8: The Lord, not Baal, is Israel’s benefactor. 11: The seasonal agricultural festivals (Ex 34.21–24) and the customary occasions for worship (Num 29.6; Ex 20.8) were now diluted by elements of the worship of Baal. 13: Baals, manifestations of the god Baal at various shrines. Offered incense, incense itself was a lawful Israelite element of worship (Ex 30.7–8) but here, unlawfully, it is offered to other gods (cf. 1 Kings 22.44; Isa 65.3). Decked herself, cf. Isa 3.16–22. 14: Allure her, courtship language. The wilderness signifies Israel’s early years after the Exodus, remembered here, in terms of the marital metaphor, as a honeymoon (Jer 2.2). The wilderness can also be a place of judgment (Ezek 20.33–38). In both cases, the wilderness is a place for transformation. Speak tenderly, see Isa 40.2. 15: Achor, a site just east of the Dead Sea where Israel got into “trouble” (the meaning of “Achor”) soon after leaving the wilderness (Josh 7.22–26). 16: My Baal, in secular usage, “ba’al” could also mean “husband.” In this wordplay, Israel is to address the Lord as “husband” (Heb “‘ish”), not as “husband” (Heb “ba’al”). 17: Baals, see 2.13n. 18: Animals, birds . . . , creeping things, the phrases recall Gen 1.27–31 and suggest a return to a state of blessing. See also Lev 26.6. 20: You shall know, “knowledge” implies covenant faithfulness and, in terms of the marital metaphor employed, sexual intimacy. 21–23: A conclusion to chs 1–2: The renaming of the children (see 1.4,6,9n.; 2.1n.) follows the rebetrothal of the Lord and Israel. 21–22: Human faithfulness (or its lack) to the Lord has implications for the natural world. Jezreel, meaning “God sows,” another symbol of restoration; see 1.4n.; 1.11n. 3.1–5: The restoration of Hosea’s marriage. In a like manner, the Lord’s relationship to Israel will be restored. This section is in the first person while 1.2–2.1 was in the third. Gomer is not mentioned here by name. 1: Raisin cakes were associated with illicit worship (Isa 16.7; Jer 7.18; 44.19). 2: Shekel, ca. .4 oz (11.5 g); homer, about 230 l (6.5 bu). 4.1–14.9: The prophetic speeches of Hosea indict Israel for unfaithfulness and announce the divine judgment, while offering hope of eventual restoration. The boundaries between individual speech units in the remainder of the book are unclear. This may in part reflect the style of the prophet and may in part be due to later editorial rearrangement.

4.1–12.1: The Lord has an indictment against Israel. 4.1: Hear the word of the LORD, an introduction in the prophetic style, which serves both the immediate speech and the remainder of the book. Israel, the primary referent here is the Northern Kingdom (also known as Ephraim) but, like all of Hosea’s prophecies, after 722 the prophecy is transmitted in Judah; so the address is also to Israel in its broader sense as the people with whom God had made a covenant. Indictment is a legal term: On God’s behalf, the prophet files suit against the people for breach of covenant. Faithfulness, loyalty (steadfast love), and knowledge of God are major theological terms in Hosea (2.19–20; 4.6; 5.4.7; 6.3,6; 10.12; 11.3–4,12b; 12.6). 2: Swearing . . . five of the Ten Commandments referred to (Ex 20.7,13–16; Deut 5.11,17–20). 3: See 2.21n.

4.4–19: An indictment of corrupt religious practices. 4–8: The corruption issues from the priests. 4: Legally, there are no grounds for a counterclaim against God. Contend, contention, the same legal terminology translated in 4.1 as “indictment.” 5–6: The phrases destroy your mother and forget your children build on the

Though often used as a general term for the Northern Kingdom, its use here and Hosea's preference for it over Israel in the rest of the book could reflect a changed political situation. Israel gradually lost its territory in Transjordan, Galilee, and Jezreel in this period; in the end Ephraim was all that remained.

Ephraim’s whoredom is there, Israel is defiled.

¹¹ For you also, O Judah, a harvest is appointed.

When I would restore the fortunes of my
people,

7 ¹ when I would heal Israel,
the corruption of Ephraim is revealed,
and the wicked deeds of Samaria;
for they deal falsely,
the thief breaks in,
and the bandits raid outside.

² But they do not consider that I remember all their wickedness.
Now their deeds surround them,
they are before my face.

³ By their wickedness they make the king glad,
and the officials by their treachery.

failed rebellion (2 Kings 16.3). 14: Lion, see Job 10.16; Lam 3.10.

5.15–6.6: God punishes not to annihilate but in order to inspire repentance. This section is in the form of a dialogue. 6.1: God both punishes and heals; see Deut 32.39; Job 5.18. 6.2: The punishment is temporary. Two days . . . third day, idiomatic expression for a brief period of time. 3: Spring rains, the latter (March–April) rains (Deut 11.14). 4–6: A summary of the entire speech. 4: See the similar questions in 11.8. 6: God desires covenant loyalty, a persistent theme of the prophets (Am 5.22–24; Mic 6.6–8). Knowledge of God, see 2.20n.

6.7–11a: An unholy gazetteer. 7: At Adam, a town in central Transjordan, close to where the Israelites crossed the Jordan (Josh 3.16). 8: Men from Gilead participated in the assassination of King Pekahiah (2 Kings 15.25). 9: Shechem, a major Ephraimite town, 12 km (7 mi) southeast of Samaria. Their monstrous crime is unspecified, though it may involve mistreatment of pilgrims, indecent religious acts, or brutal opposition to prophetic activity. 10: Ephraim’s whoredom, see 4.11–12n.; 4.17.

6.11b–7.7: A corrupt people and government. The author uses the metaphor of an oven to describe the heated activity of Israel’s idolaters, the fervent celebration of the enthronement ritual, the hot anger of those who oppose the king, and the burning violence of assassination. 7.1: The theme of healing again (5.13; 6.1). Samaria, they are like a heated oven, whose baker does not need to stir the fire, from the kneading of the dough until it is leavened.

⁵ On the day of our king the officials became sick with the heat of wine; he stretched out his hand with mockers.

⁶ For they are kindled^a like an oven, their heart burns within them;
all night their anger smolders;
in the morning it blazes like a flaming fire.

⁷ All of them are hot as an oven, and they devour their rulers.
All their kings have fallen;
none of them calls upon me.

⁸ Ephraim mixes himself with the peoples;
Ephraim is a cake not turned.

⁹ Foreigners devour his strength,
but he does not know it;
gray hairs are sprinkled upon him,
but he does not know it.

¹⁰ Israel's pride testifies against^b him;
yet they do not return to the LORD their God,
or seek him, for all this.

¹¹ Ephraim has become like a dove, silly and without sense;
they call upon Egypt, they go to Assyria.

¹² As they go, I will cast my net over them;
I will bring them down like birds of the air;
I will discipline them according to the report made to their assembly.^c

¹³ Woe to them, for they have strayed from
me!

Destruction to them, for they have rebelled against me!

I would redeem them,
but they speak lies against me.

¹⁴ They do not cry to me from the heart, but they wail upon their beds;
they gash themselves for grain and wine;
they rebel against me.

¹⁵ It was I who trained and strengthened their arms,
yet they plot evil against me.

¹⁶ They turn to that which does not profit;^d
they have become like a defective bow;
their officials shall fall by the sword because of the rage of their tongue.
So much for their babbling in the land of Egypt.

8 Set the trumpet to your lips!
One like a vulture^e is over the house of
the LORD,
because they have broken my covenant,
and transgressed my law.

For the historical background, see 2 Kings 15.19–20; 17.3–4. 14: The contrast is between acceptable forms of prayer, crying to me from the heart, and those which were unacceptable, such as wailing upon their beds (Isa 57.8) and self-mutilation (they gash themselves) (Deut 14.1; 1 Kings 18.28). 15: Cf. 11.3–4. 16: Babbling, i.e., negotiations conducted in the Egyptian language.

35.14. Mourners’ bread was unclean because of association with the dead. 6: Memphis was the capital of Lower (northern) Egypt. Tents here probably refers to festival structures.

9.7–9: A response to the prophet’s critics. 7: Man of the spirit, that is, the prophet (see Isa 11.2; 61.1; Ezek 2.2; Mic 3.8). 8: For the prophet as sentinel who sees at a distance and announces the divine approach, see Isa 21.6; Jer 6.17; Ezek 3.16–21; 33.6–8. House of his God, either the region as a whole or a former sanctuary where the prophet is no longer welcome (see 9.4). 9: Gibeah, the infamous episode there and its aftermath are detailed in Judg 19–21.

9.10–11.11: Before and after. This section consists of a series of four metaphors (Israel as grapes in the wilderness, a luxuriant vine, a heifer trained, a beloved child) used to characterize the people’s former fidelity and health, and contrasted with their present corrupt state brought about by religious, social, and political misdeeds. As the first three metaphors unfold, the cumulative message appears to be that the covenant is irrevocably broken and Israel is to be abandoned (9.17; 10.10; 10.15). The fourth part, the culmination of the series and, for many, the culmination of the prophecies of Hosea, initially continues in this vein (11.1–7), but then dramatically shifts from an angry to a compassionate tone (11.8–11).

9.10–17: Israel, grapes in the wilderness found by God (v. 10), is now desiccated (v. 16). 10: Baal-peor, the site of an incident of grave disloyalty during the wilderness period (see Num 25.1–18). First fruit, a reference to Israel’s divine election in the wilderness (see Deut 32.10; Jer 2.2–3). 15: Gilgal, a venerable Israelite shrine near Jericho (e.g., Josh 4.20; 10.43; 1 Sam 7.16); condemned here as the site of illicit worship (4.15; 12.11; Am 4.4; 5.5). Also, at Gilgal the Lord reluctantly acceded to the people’s request for a king (1 Sam 10.14–11.25). Thing of shame, an epithet for Baal.

In contrast to the trees used in Canaanite worship (see 4.12n.), God's presence is everlasting, like the abundant foliage of an evergreen.

JOEL

NAME, AUTHORSHIP, AND DATE OF COMPOSITION

The book begins with a brief superscription stating that the word of the Lord came to Joel the son of Bethuel. No chronological formula is given to indicate the book's date, unlike the surrounding books of Hosea and Amos, which are both dated to the eighth century BCE. There is good reason to think that the book of Joel derives from a much later period, probably the Persian era (539–333 BCE), because (1) it refers to the Greeks (3.6); (2) it includes imagery attested elsewhere in late prophetic literature; (3) it alludes to other biblical texts, some of which were written in the late monarchic period (Obadiah) or the Persian period (Malachi); and (4) the name "Joel" is prominent in Persian-period biblical literature. Of the prophet himself nothing is known except his father's name.

LOCATION IN CANON

In the Masoretic Text (and in English translations that follow its order) Joel comes between two books attributed to much earlier prophets, Hosea and Amos. That may be due to two similar verses, Joel 3.16a and Am 1.2a. In the Septuagint (LXX), however, Joel is typically the fourth book of the Minor Prophets, after Hosea, Amos, and Micah.

STRUCTURE, CONTENTS, AND INTERPRETATION

The book of Joel describes a crisis in harrowing terms. The crisis and its resolution are reported in 1.1–2.27. Scholars, however, often attribute 2.28–3.21 to another author or authors. In this section, described as late prophetic or early apocalyptic literature, the world of ritual disappears and is replaced by the return of prophecy, cosmic symbolism, conflict with foreign nations, and images of fertility. These later verses also include more allusions to other biblical texts than 1.1–2.27.

The book offers multiple images of agricultural ruin and its impact on life in Judah. The prophet speaks of drought in the land (e.g., 1.10,12,17,20), and envisions a locust plague in the language of military attack. Locusts were known for their destructive potential to strip all vegetation from the countryside (see Ex 10.15) and are compared with military forces in other ancient Near Eastern literature.

Although the book's rhetoric of destruction is comparable to that found in other prophetic books, the poems or speeches are quite different. Rather than offering a critique of Israel's behavior, Joel summons the people to respond to the crisis by performing several rituals. Plural imperative verbs—fast, lament, wail, blow (the trumpet), put on sackcloth—are a hallmark of this summons.

The book has a distinctive theological position. Though Joel clearly thinks that God was the ultimate cause of the disaster (2.19), the prophet offers no reason for the deity's action. Hence, it is not clear that the crisis should be conceived as judgment for the people's prior misdeeds. Nonetheless, the book affirms that Israel's God is sovereign.

1 The word of the LORD that came to Joel son of Pethuel:

²Hear this, O elders,
give ear, all inhabitants of the land!
Has such a thing happened in your days,
or in the days of your ancestors?
³Tell your children of it, and let your children tell their
children,
and their children another generation.

⁴What the cutting locust left,
the swarming locust has eaten.
What the swarming locust left,
the hopping locust has eaten,
and what the hopping locust left,
the destroying locust has eaten.

⁵Wake up, you drunkards, and weep;
and wail, all you wine-drinkers,
over the sweet wine,
for it is cut off from your mouth.

⁶For a nation has invaded my land, powerful and innumerable;
its teeth are lions' teeth,
and it has the fangs of a lioness.

⁷It has laid waste my vines, and splintered my fig trees;

it has stripped off their bark and thrown
it down;
their branches have turned white.

⁸Lament like a virgin dressed in sackcloth
for the husband of her youth.

⁹The grain offering and the drink offering are cut off from the house of the LORD.

The priests mourn,
the ministers of the LORD.

¹⁰The fields are devastated, the ground mourns;
for the grain is destroyed,
the wine dries up,
the oil fails.

¹¹Be dismayed, you farmers, wail, you vinedressers,
over the wheat and the barley;
for the crops of the field are ruined.

¹²The vine withers,
the fig tree droops.
Pomegranate, palm, and apple—
all the trees of the field are dried up; surely, joy withers away
among the people.

1.1: Superscription. Unlike Hos 1.1 and Am 1.1, there is no reference to a king during whose reign Joel prophesied. This may suggest a date when Israel was no longer a monarchy.

1.2–2.17: Crisis and call to action. A series of staccato-like poems, some of which depict the crisis (e.g., 1.17–18), more of which call people to act (e.g., 1.14). 1.2–20: Different groups are commanded to undertake various rituals of lament and petition to the LORD. 2–3: The prophet strikes an intergenerational note, which involves both hearing and telling. Elders, probably village or regional officials (cf. Ezra 5.9; 6.8,14; 10.8,14), stand in parallel with the hyperbolic all inhabitants of the land. Ancestors, lit., “fathers.” The rhetorical question, which has an obvious negative answer, does not reveal the nature of such a thing. 4: Rather than different species, these nouns probably refer to the developmental stages of the locust. For Joel, the four forms represent four attacks on the vegetation (cf. Am 4.9). For other references to locust plagues see Ex 10.22; Pss 78.46; 105.34–35. 5–7: Drunkards may be too negative a translation. In these speeches Joel does not regularly indict Israelites, so here he may simply be referring to those who enjoy wine. Joel 3.18 promises the return of sweet wine. The admonition to wail may involve ritual lament, not simply crying, as in Jer 4.8. 6–7: The reference to my land (cf. 2.18; Lev 25.23) suggests that God is speaking. The poem offers the reason for the commands: a nation of vast numbers is ferocious; it is destroying Israel’s vines (note the earlier reference to wine) and fig trees, both of which must grow for a long time before they bear fruit. 8–10: Virgin may mean a young woman who is grief-stricken at the death of her husband. Again, the reason for the command follows the command itself, given to unidentified persons. Rituals at the temple—grain offering, drink offering—could not take place because wine, grain, and oil (cf. 2.19, which promises their return) were no longer available. 11–12: Now farmers must lament the demise of eight different harvests, divided into crops and trees. 11: Vinedresser, a person who prunes grape vines. 13–14: Priests (cf. 1.9–11) are now commanded to lament and put on sackcloth, which was worn during mourning rites (e.g., Am 8.10) and other difficult times (e.g., Ps 35.13); see 2 Sam 12.16 for passing the night in

¹³ Put on sackcloth and lament, you priests;
wail, you ministers of the altar.
Come, pass the night in sackcloth,
you ministers of my God!
Grain offering and drink offering are withheld from the house of your God.

¹⁴ Sanctify a fast,
call a solemn assembly.
Gather the elders
and all the inhabitants of the land to the house of the LORD your God, and cry out to the LORD.

¹⁵ Alas for the day!
For the day of the LORD is near,
and as destruction from the Almighty^a it comes.

¹⁶ Is not the food cut off before our eyes,
joy and gladness
from the house of our God?

¹⁷ The seed shrivels under the clods,^b
the storehouses are desolate;
the granaries are ruined because the grain has failed.

¹⁸ How the animals groan!
The herds of cattle wander about because there is no pasture for them;
even the flocks of sheep are dazed.^c

¹⁹ To you, O LORD, I cry.
For fire has devoured
the pastures of the wilderness, and flames have burned
all the trees of the field.

²⁰ Even the wild animals cry to you because the watercourses are dried up, and fire has devoured

the pastures of the wilderness.

2 Blow the trumpet in Zion;
sound the alarm on my holy mountain!
Let all the inhabitants of the land tremble, for the day of the LORD is coming, it is near—

² a day of darkness and gloom,
a day of clouds and thick darkness!
Like blackness spread upon the mountains a great and powerful army comes;
their like has never been from of old, nor will be again after them in ages to come.

and behind them a flame burns.
Before them the land is like the garden of but after them a desolate wilderness, and nothing escapes them.

⁴ They have the appearance of horses, and like war-horses they charge.

⁵ As with the rumbling of chariots, they leap on the tops of the mountains, like the crackling of a flame of fire devouring the stubble, like a powerful army
drawn up for battle.

all faces grow pale.^b

a comparable ritual. A fast could be a public event (cf. Zech 7.3–5; 8.18–19; Ezra 8.21–23; Neh 1.4–11). For a different perspective on a solemn assembly, see Am 5.21; Isa 1:13. Elders and all the inhabitants of the land echo 1.2. 15–20: These verses may be a single lament, spoken either by the prophet or the people (or their priests). The day of the LORD (see also 2.1,11,31; 3.14) symbolizes God's theophanic and judging presence (cf. Am 5.18; Ob 15; Zeph 1.7,14–15; Isa 13.6; Ezek 13.5). 16: A rhetorical question, with an obvious response. 18: Domestic animals also suffer. 20: Even the wild animals completes the picture of all life—plant and animal—suffering through the attack, fire, and drought.

2.1–17: Though similar to ch 1, these poems focus more on describing the calamity than commanding a response. 1–2: The day of the LORD . . . is near (see 1.15), even though catastrophe has already struck. Darkness is an anticipated feature of the day (see also Am 5.18; Zeph 1.15), highlighted in the advent of a great and powerful army. 3–4: The prophet depicts the scene before the onslaught (2.3,6,10), like the garden of Eden (see Gen 2.8–9; 13.10; Isa 51.3), which contrasts with the description of the devastation afterward, a desolate wilderness. 5–7:

⁷ Like warriors they charge, like soldiers they scale the wall.
Each keeps to its own course,
they do not swerve from^a their paths.

⁸ They do not jostle one another, each keeps to its own track;
they burst through the weapons and are not halted.

⁹ They leap upon the city,
they run upon the walls;
they climb up into the houses, they enter through the windows like a thief.

¹⁰ The earth quakes before them,
the heavens tremble.
The sun and the moon are darkened, and the stars withdraw their shining.

¹¹ The LORD utters his voice at the head of his army;
how vast is his host!
Numberless are those who obey his command.
Truly the day of the LORD is great;
terrible indeed—who can endure it?

¹² Yet even now, says the LORD, return to me with all your heart, with fasting, with weeping, and with mourning;

¹³ rend your hearts and not your clothing.

Return to the LORD, your God,
for he is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and abounding in steadfast love,
and relents from punishing.

¹⁴ Who knows whether he will not turn and relent,
and leave a blessing behind him,
a grain offering and a drink offering for the LORD, your God?

¹⁵ Blow the trumpet in Zion; sanctify a fast;
call a solemn assembly;
¹⁶ gather the people.

Sanctify the congregation;
assemble the aged;
gather the children,
even infants at the breast.

Let the bridegroom leave his room,
and the bride her canopy.

¹⁷ Between the vestibule and the altar let the priests, the ministers of the LORD, weep.

Let them say, “Spare your people, O LORD, and do not make your heritage a mockery,
a byword among the nations.
Why should it be said among the peoples,
‘Where is their God?’”

¹⁸ Then the LORD became jealous for his land, and had pity on his people.

¹⁹ In response to his people the LORD said:
I am sending you
grain, wine, and oil,
and you will be satisfied;
and I will no more make you a mockery among the nations.

^a Gk Syr Vg: Heb they do not take a pledge along

The similes like a powerful army and like warriors make it clear that locusts, not an army, are meant. 10–11: The earth quakes is typical of a theophany (e.g., Ps 77:18), as is the darkening of astral objects (cf. Isa 13:10). God is the general of his army, which may describe the locusts and thus explains why the locusts are related to the day of the LORD. 12–13: Language from ch 1 reappears, calling for a ritual response. The reference to heart reflects Deuteronomic idioms (Deut 10:16; 30:2). The characterization of the LORD in v. 13b appears elsewhere, though Joel omits mention of God’s judgment (see, e.g., Ex 34:6–7; Num 14:18). 14: Who knows . . ., cf. Jon 3:9. The LORD may leave an offering for himself. 15–16: Cf. 1.14. 17: Vestibule refers to the entry hall of the temple (see 1 Kings 6:3). The altar was in the temple courtyard. The priests, stationed between the altar and the vestibule, are to utter the prayer given to them by Joel. Cf. Ex 32:12; Deut 9:26–28 for similar logic.

2.18–27: The LORD responds. Since the deity responds, one may infer that the people, especially the priests, complied with Joel’s commands, though the book does not report the people’s actual response to Joel’s admonitions. 18–19: Jealous, better “zealous”; cf. Zech 1:14; Isa 9:7. God’s first concern, even before the people, was his land (see 1.6–7n.). Grain, wine, and oil mentioned as absent in 1.10. The reference to mockery among the nations

²⁰ I will remove the northern army far from you, and drive it into a parched and desolate land,
its front into the eastern sea,
and its rear into the western sea;
its stench and foul smell will rise up.
Surely he has done great things!

²¹ Do not fear, O soil;
be glad and rejoice,
for the LORD has done great things!

²² Do not fear, you animals of the field, for the pastures of the wilderness are green;
the tree bears its fruit,
the fig tree and vine give their full yield.

²³ O children of Zion, be glad and rejoice in the LORD your God;
for he has given the early rain^a for your vindication, he has poured down for you abundant rain,
the early and the later rain, as before.

²⁴ The threshing floors shall be full of grain,
the vats shall overflow with wine and oil.

²⁵ I will repay you for the years that the swarming locust has eaten, the hopper, the destroyer, and the cutter,
my great army, which I sent against you.

²⁶ You shall eat in plenty and be satisfied, and praise the name of the LORD your God, who has dealt wondrously with you.
And my people shall never again be put to shame.

²⁷ You shall know that I am in the midst of Israel, and that I, the LORD, am your God and there is no other.
And my people shall never again be put to shame.

²⁸^b Then afterward
I will pour out my spirit on all flesh;
your sons and your daughters shall prophesy,
your old men shall dream dreams,
and your young men shall see visions.

²⁹ Even on the male and female slaves,
in those days, I will pour out my spirit.

³⁰ I will show portents in the heavens and on the earth, blood and fire and columns of smoke. ³¹ The sun shall be turned to darkness, and the moon to blood, before the great and terrible day of the LORD comes. ³² Then everyone who calls on the name of the LORD shall be saved; for in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem there shall be those who escape, as the LORD has said, and among the survivors shall be those whom the LORD calls.

suggests that God responded directly to the prayer in 2.17. 20: Northern army is probably an allusion to the mythic enemy from the north (cf. Jer 1.13–15; 4.6; 6.1). Eastern sea, the Dead Sea; western sea, the Mediterranean. Stench and foul smell may reflect the plague traditions, cf. Ex 7.18; 8.14. 21: The land is now personified as soil. 22: The imagery represents a reversal of the earlier situation. Animals of the field will have pastureland (cf. 1.18), and fig tree and vine will bear fruit (cf. 1.12). 23: Abundant rain replaces the earlier drought (1.20). Children of Zion, cf. Ps 149.2. Human life focuses on Jerusalem. Early rain, in late fall; later rain, in early spring. 25: Repay often has legal connotations; cf. Ex 21.34. Years is much longer than the attack heretofore described. The four forms of locust appear here in a different order from that in 1.4. 26–27: The promise of restoration is confirmed by allusion to the covenantal relationship with the only true God; cf. Isa 45.5; 45.17.

2.28–3.21. A future of well-being for Israel. Poetic and prose oracles focusing on Israel and their human enemies. God will again bring victory that will result in marvelous fertility. 2.28–29: Pour out my spirit here implies enabling various forms of prophetic revelation (cf. Ezek 39.29). What had been limited to the house of David (Zech 12.10) or the prophets is now available to all Israel. Cf. Acts 2.16–21. 30–32: These verses are probably poetic. Portents are cosmic events. On the sky darkening, cf. Isa 13.10; 34.4; Jer 4.23; Ezek 32.7–8; Am 8.9. In Joel 2.10, the locusts had darkened the sky; now God is the cause. Calls on the name of the LORD, i.e., worships the LORD. Those who escape and survivors probably refer to those not killed in an eschatological battle; cf. Zech 14.16, which includes non-Israelites. 3.1–3: These verses are probably poetic. They depict an eschatological tradition that the LORD will judge the nations. 2: Valley of Jehoshaphat, probably not the Kidron Valley in Jerusalem, but a symbolic place, a plain broad enough for the nations to be gathered and defeated, though cf. 2 Chr 20.20–26. 3: On charges of enslavement, cf. 3.4–21: Punishment of Tyre, Sidon, Philistia: In the tradition of oracles against foreign nations, coastal territories are indicted. Verses 4–8 may refer to events dating to the mid-fourth century BCE, a time when these regions could have worked in concert. Mercantile activity pervades these verses, which probably interrupt an original oracle 3.1–3,9–13 (16). 5: According to 2 Kings 25.13–17, the Babylonians removed the gold from Jerusalem's Temple. 6: On sale of children to Greece, cf. Ezek 27.13. 7–8: Judah will require the coastal regions by selling their children to the Sabeans, or the land of Sheba, in the southern Arabian peninsula. 9–13: The oracle begun in vv. 1–3 resumes. Plural imperative verbs predominate in vv. 9–11, though speakers and audiences are ambiguous. The nations, or perhaps the divine council, are commanded to prepare for war. Verse 11b is directed to the LORD whereas in v. 12 the deity is speaking; v. 13 is addressed either to the divine council or to Israel. 12: Jehoshaphat is a wordplay on judge (Heb "shaphat"). 13: Images of fertility, as in ch 2, reappear. 14–21: A series of poetic fragments (vv. 14–15,16,17,18,19–21) now ensues. 14–15: The motif of darkening before the Day of the LORD appears echoes 2.30–31; cf. 2.1–2n. On a fountain and river flowing from the temple, see Ezek 47:1–12; Zech 14.8. Wadi Shittim, literally “Wadi of Acacias”; as with the valley of Jehoshaphat (v. 12), the location is unknown. It may symbolize fertility. 19–21: A final punitive oracle against Egypt and Edom (cf. Ob; Ps 137; Mal 1.3–4; Sir 50.26), an unusual combination of an empire and a small state. That the LORD dwells in or is located at Zion is an important motif near the end of the book (vv. 16,17,18,21).

AMOS

NAME, AUTHORSHIP, DATE OF COMPOSITION, AND HISTORICAL CONTEXT

The book of Amos is a compilation of sayings attributed to the prophet Amos, who was active in the first half of the eighth century BCE, during the long and peaceful reigns of Jeroboam II of Israel (788–747; Am 1.1) and Uzziah of Judah (785–733). In this period, Israel attained a height of territorial expansion and national prosperity never again reached. At the same time, this prosperity led to gross inequities between urban elites and the poor. Through manipulation of debt and credit, wealthy landowners amassed capital and estates at the expense of small farmers. The smallest debt served as the thin end of a wedge that lenders could use to separate farmers from their patrimonial farms and personal liberty.

Into this scene stepped Amos (of Tekoa, a small village in Judah), who was himself a farmer and herder, and was probably active during the decade 760–750 BCE. Amos denounced the society of the Northern Kingdom, Israel, in vivid language, bitterly describing the decadent opulence, immorality, and smug piety of elites who “trample the head of the poor into the dust of the earth” (2.7). Amos’s program, in contrast, called for “justice” and “righteousness” (5.7,24; 6.12), terms that connote social equality and concern for the disadvantaged (Isa 5.7; Mic 6.8).

The narrative about Amos’s encounter with Amaziah (7.1–7) and the superscription (1.1) yield the only portrait of the prophet. A native of the Southern Kingdom of Judah who raised livestock and tended fruit trees, Amos prophesied to and in the Northern Kingdom of Israel. At the royal sanctuary of Bethel (7.13), his bitter invective, voiced as divine word (“I hate, I despise your festivals,” 5.21) no doubt scandalized pilgrims from Samaria, capital of the Northern Kingdom. His confrontation with Amaziah remains one of the unforgettable scenes in biblical prophecy. Expelled from Bethel and commanded not to prophesy there again, Amos perhaps returned to Judah where he, or like-minded scribes, wrote down the essence of his public preaching in substantially its present form.

Although the reigns of Jeroboam II and Uzziah were relatively peaceful and prosperous in Israel and Judah, the region experienced calamitous upheaval shortly thereafter when Tiglath-pileser III assumed the throne in Assyria (745–727). He began the period of Assyria’s greatest expansion in the west, including conquering the smaller kingdoms of Syria-Palestine. His successors, Shalmaneser V (727–722) and Sargon II (722–705), invaded the Northern Kingdom and conquered Samaria in 722. Within a few decades of Amos’s prophetic activity, the Northern Kingdom saw devastation and destruction which made his foreboding words all the more sobering.

CANONICAL STATUS AND LOCATION IN CANON

Amos’s prophetic career was roughly contemporaneous with that of Hosea, though Amos probably preceded him. Chronologically, then, Amos inaugurated the era of classical prophecy. In some ancient manuscript traditions (the Septuagint [LXX], the ancient Greek translation of the Hebrew Bible), the book of Amos directly follows Hosea. The traditional arrangement of the Book of the Twelve in the Masoretic Text and in English translations, however, is based not solely on chronology but often on specific verbal similarities or catchwords that link the end of one book to the beginning of the next. Amos is linked to the preceding book of Joel by identical phrases (see Joel 3.16a and Am 1.2a) and to the following book of Obadiah by a similar subject (Edom in Am 9.12 and in Ob 1).

STRUCTURE, CONTENTS, AND GUIDE TO READING

The book of Amos has three major parts: chs 1–2 are presented as a single speech, an ethical tour of the region from the divine perspective, which climaxes in judgment on Israel itself; chs 3–6 are the least unified section, a collection of short prophetic sayings indicting Israel for sin and injustice; chs 7–9 contain the visions of Amos, as well as the Amaziah narrative (7.10–17) and a final speech of comfort (9.11–15) addressed not to Israel but to Judah. The best approach for readers is to follow the sequence of the book itself. The book contains a variety of material. Some of Amos’s sayings are presented as messenger speeches (“thus says the LORD”), others as visions (“This is what the LORD showed me”), especially in chs 7–9. Amos, in a legal style of indictment followed by punishment (“therefore . . .”), announced judgments (e.g., 1.3–2.16), delivered funeral orations (e.g., 5.1–2), and exhortations (e.g., 5.6). He rarely encouraged (but see 9.11–15 and the notes there). In addition to the above types of prophetic sayings, the book contains three fragments from a hymn (4.13; 5.8–9; 9.5–6) and one narrative about Amos's encounter with Amaziah, priest of the Northern Kingdom's royal sanctuary at Bethel (7.10–17).

INTERPRETATION

Against the background of Israelite tradition about “the Day of the LORD,” occasions celebrated from the past and eagerly anticipated in the future when the LORD dramatically intervenes in human affairs, Amos announced that such a day was imminent. This time, however, the fortified palaces and temples of Israel would be leveled along with those of Israel's rival nations (1.3–2.3) when God executed the divine version of “justice and righteousness.” Israel's covenant with God (3.2) did not absolve it from this ethical standard, which Amos, in so many words, universalized (9.7–8). Though Amos affirmed the special quality of God's relationship with Israel (9.8), he stressed that it entailed a special ethical responsibility (3.1). The agent of this divine punishment would be the Assyrian army (Isa 10.5–11). The frequent references to exile in Amos (e.g., 3.11; 6.7; 7.17) reflect a grim threat: the Assyrian imperial practice of deporting and transplanting conquered peoples.

Amos described himself as “a herdsman, and a dresser of sycamore trees” (7.14). The latter tree is not the same as a North American “sycamore” (Platanus occidentalis), but a type of wild fig tree (Ficus sycomorus). These wild figs were gathered by poor people. The small fruit of this tree was inferior to that from the domesticated fig tree (Ficus carica). By “dressing” or gashing the small fruit of this tree, Amos and his cohorts hastened their ripening. This single, vivid detail about Amos's background in 7.14 speaks volumes about the prophet's ethics and harsh tone. It explains his solidarity with the poor (2.6–7; 5.11; 8.4) who literally “scratched out” a living in rural Judah and Ephraim, desperate for any harvest, however sparse and bitter. As noted above, Amos rebuked far more often than he comforted. This arborist with his knife understood that pruning was required for revitalization and new growth. Amos lashed out at the elite's prosperity gained at the expense of the poor, upsetting their “baskets of summer fruit” (8.1–2).

The book of Amos begins and ends with references to an earthquake (1.1 and the images of shaking in 9.1–9). The exact year is unknown (760 has been proposed), but some archaeological evidence of a catastrophe exists. Did this earthquake, so severe that it was recalled centuries later (Zech 14.5), offer cosmic validation of Amos's preaching? One cannot know. Still, even today one can feel the aftershocks of Amos, the first in a brilliant succession of biblical prophets whose words, now preserved in written form, have left their indelible stamp on later thought about God and human history.

1.1: Superscription. Amos means “one supported” (by the Lord). Among the shepherds, the word translated “shepherds” probably denotes a herder or owner of large flocks rather than a hired worker; the same word is translated “sheepbreeder” in 2 Kings 3.4, its only other occurrence. See also 7.14–15. Tekoa was a town in Judah, ca. 16 km (10 mi) south of Jerusalem. He saw, see Nah 1.1; visions were common among prophets from Judah (e.g., Isaiah and Ezekiel). Uzziah reigned over the Southern Kingdom 785–733 BCE. Jeroboam II reigned over the Northern Kingdom 788–747. The earthquake, mentioned again in Zech 14.5, cannot be precisely dated.

1.2–2.16: A speech against the nations. A common feature of Israelite prophecy was the indictment of foreign nations, which implied the Lord’s universal sovereignty. In general, Amos indicts the neighboring peoples for ethical transgressions on the order of war crimes. The prophet condemns their actions not only against Israel and Judah, but against other neighboring peoples. Thus, the scope of God’s concern spans the larger international community. Near the end of this section, when Amos addresses Judah and Israel, the ethical standard is more exacting. There is another way to look at the indictments directed toward these foreign nations. All the nations discussed were either subject to or allies of the Davidic and Solomonic monarchy, and therefore bound by treaties to which the Lord would have been a witness and now was acting as enforcer of the treaty curses. 1.2: This introductory verse occurs in similar form in Joel 3.16 (cf. Jer 25.30). The LORD roars, Amos uses the image of God as lion again in 3.4,8. The sequence from Jerusalem . . . (to) Carmel traces the trajectory of the book as Amos, a southerner from the vicinity of Jerusalem, addresses the Northern Kingdom, whose northwest boundary was Mt. Carmel (see 9.3n.). 3,6,8, etc.: Thus says the LORD and the conclusion says the LORD are standard formulas identifying prophetic oracles. The idiom for three . . . and for four indicates “more than enough” (Prov 30.18; Job 33.14).

1.3–5: Against Damascus (cf. Isa 17.1–3; Jer 49.23–27; Zech 9.1–4). Damascus was the capital of Syria (Aram). They have threshed Gilead, Gilead was Israelite territory in northern Transjordan, particularly vulnerable to Syrian aggression (2 Kings 10.32–33); threshing was often used to symbolize martial brutality (Isa 41.15; Mic 4.13). Hazeal and Ben-hadad II were Syrian rulers (2 Kings 13.3). The Valley of Aven probably refers to the Beqa region between the Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon ranges. Beth-eden, known in Assyrian records as Bitidini, was a city-state on the Euphrates, between the Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon ranges. Kir is the place of Syrian origins (9.7) and exile (2 Kings 16.9); its precise location is unknown.

1.6–8: Against Philistia. Four cities of the Philistine pentapolis (1 Sam 6.17) on the southeast coast of the Mediterranean are condemned for their slave traffic with Edom (2 Chr 21.16–17; Joel 3.4–8; Zeph 2.4–7).

Chs 1–2: Places mentioned in the oracles against foreign nations.

⁸ I will cut off the inhabitants from Ashdod, and the one who holds the scepter from Ashkelon;
I will turn my hand against Ekron, and the remnant of the Philistines shall perish,
says the Lord God.

⁹ Thus says the LORD:
For three transgressions of Tyre, and for four, I will not revoke the punishment;^a
because they delivered entire communities over to Edom,
and did not remember the covenant of kinship.

¹⁰ So I will send a fire on the wall of Tyre, fire that shall devour its strongholds.

¹¹ Thus says the LORD:
For three transgressions of Edom,
and for four, I will not revoke the
punishment;^a
because he pursued his brother with the sword
and cast off all pity;
he maintained his anger perpetually,^b and kept his wrath^c forever.

¹² So I will send a fire on Teman, and it shall devour the strongholds of Bozrah.

1.9–10: Against Tyre (see Joel 3.4–8). Tyre was a Phoenician seaport north of Israel. Covenant of kinship (lit. “covenant of brothers”), cf. 1 Kings 5.12; 9.13.

1.11–12: Against Edom (Isa 34; Joel 3.19; Ezek 25.12). Edom, located south and east of the Dead Sea, was a perennial rival of neighboring Judah, especially in the exilic and postexilic era (Ps 137.7; Obadiah). The term his brother, i.e., Judah (Mal 1.2), draws on the ancient tradition of kinship between Jacob and Esau (Esau was “the father of Edom,” Gen 36.43) and also connotes a treaty relationship (see vv. 9–10n.). Teman, a synonym for Edom. Bozrah, modern Buseirah, 40 km (25 mi) south of the Dead Sea.

1.13–15: Against Ammon (Zeph 2.8–11), which is condemned for atrocities against Israelites to its immediate north, in Gilead. Rabbah, the Ammonite capital (modern Amman).

and for four, I will not revoke the punishment;^a because they have ripped open pregnant women in Gilead in order to enlarge their territory. ¹⁴ So I will kindle a fire against the wall of Rabbah, fire that shall devour its strongholds, with shouting on the day of battle, with a storm on the day of the whirlwind; ¹⁵ then their king shall go into exile, he and his officials together, says the LORD.

2 Thus says the LORD: For three transgressions of Moab, and for four, I will not revoke the punishment;^a because he burned to lime the bones of the king of Edom. ² So I will send a fire on Moab, and it shall devour the strongholds of Kerioth, and Moab shall die amid uproar, amid shouting and the sound of the trumpet; ³ I will cut off the ruler from its midst, and will kill all its officials with him, says the LORD.

⁴ Thus says the LORD: For three transgressions of Judah, and for four, I will not revoke the punishment;^a because they have rejected the law of the LORD, and have not kept his statutes, but they have been led astray by the same lies after which their ancestors walked. ⁵ So I will send a fire on Judah, and it shall devour the strongholds of Jerusalem.

⁶ Thus says the LORD: For three transgressions of Israel, and for four, I will not revoke the punishment;^a because they sell the righteous for silver, and the needy for a pair of sandals— ⁷ they who trample the head of the poor into the dust of the earth, and push the afflicted out of the way; father and son go in to the same girl, so that my holy name is profaned; ⁸ they lay themselves down beside every altar on garments taken in pledge; and in the house of their God they drink wine bought with fines they imposed.

2.1–3: Against Moab, Israel's neighbor and rival southeast of the Jordan (Isa 15.1–16.14). Burned to lime, for the practice of desecrating a corpse through disinterment and incineration, see 2 Kings 23.16–20; Isa 33.12. Kerioth, location uncertain; see Jer 48.24,41.

2.4–5: Against Judah. Because of similarities between its language and that of the Deuteronomistic Reform (e.g., 2 Kings 17.15) in the late seventh century, many scholars consider this oracle a later addition, but it is consistent with Amos's view that all nations stand accountable before God.

2.6–16: Against Israel. Amos's ethical tour finally reaches home, where it surely shocked its audience. Israel can refer both to the Northern Kingdom, as the counterpart of Judah (2.4), and to the entire people that God brought out of Egypt (see 2.10; 3.1). Using the same literary form, Amos shows that Israel stands under divine judgment too, for oppression of the poor and for immorality. 6: They sell the righteous . . . and the needy into debt slavery. 7: Same girl probably does not refer to ritual prostitutes but to young unmarried women who, like the “needy” and the poor, were being exploited. 8: Garments taken in pledge, see the prohibitions in Ex 22.25; Deut 24.17. The exploitation of the poor is especially odious when commodities gained unjustly, the above garments and wine, were paraded before the deity at the altar of the house of their God. 9: The Amorite . . . whose height, pre-Israelite inhabitants of Canaan such as the Amorites (see Ezek 16.3) were often depicted as gigantic (Num 13.32–33; Deut 1.28). 10: Deut 1.19–21. In contrast to the preceding indictments, the prophet invokes God's history with Israel as grounds for impending punishment. 11–12: Nazirites, consecrated individuals who undertook vows, including abstinence from wine; Num 6.2; Judg 13.5. 13: The entire Israelite army is defenseless: archers, infantry, and cavalry. 16: Naked, unarmed and exposed; cf. Isa 20.1–6.

3.1–6.14: Judgment speeches against Israel come in three sections, each with the same opening (3.1; 4.1; 5.1).

3.1–2: A chosen people are held to a higher standard. 2: You only have I known, knowledge here refers to a relationship through covenant. The phrase all the families of the earth recalls traditions about divine promises to Abram (Gen 12.3) and Moses (Ex 19.4–6; Deut 7.6).

3.3–8: A series of rhetorical questions, which permit only a single response, build to an inescapable conclusion in v. 8b: The call to prophecy, unsolicited, cannot be resisted (7.14–15). Furthermore, the self-evident truths of vv. 1–8a render the audience susceptible to a truth in 8b it would naturally resist: Amos speaks on behalf of the Lord. 4: A lion roar, see 1.2. 6: Trumpet, the shofar, the ram's horn. 7: His secret to his servants the prophets, for positive and negative illustrations of this principle, see, respectively, Gen 18.17–19 and 2 Kings 4.27; cf. 2 Kings 4.13. Because the phrase "his servants the prophets" is Deuteronomistic (see 2 Kings 21.10), and because the verse is in a different form, some scholars consider it a later addition (see 2.3–4n.).

the LORD,
those who store up violence and robbery in their strongholds.

¹¹ Therefore thus says the Lord God:
An adversary shall surround the land,

3.9–15: Neighboring nations are invited to witness the Lord’s complaint against the elites of Israelite society, who dwell in strongholds, massive fortified palaces. 9: Ashdod, a Philistine city on the Mediterranean coast; see 1.6–8. 11: God addresses Samaria directly and promises the coming of an adversary, though whether the figure is a divine or human agent of God’s judgment is difficult to say (cf. Isa 10.5; Jer 25.8; Lam 2.5). 12: As Amos, a pastoralist himself (7.14) knew, a shepherd was absolved of blame for loss of livestock if there were even small remains, legs, or a piece of an ear, of a predator’s attack. With sarcasm, Amos suggests that after the divine punishment, announced by the roar of a lion (1.2; 3.8), only scraps would remain from the palaces of Samaria. Thus, Israel’s remains do not signify the survival of a righteous remnant, but rather they justify God’s judgment, just as the remains of an animal’s carcass vindicate the shepherd (Ex 22.13). 14: Bethel was near the southern border of the Northern Kingdom, ca. 18 km (11 mi) north of Jerusalem. For Bethel as a shrine, see 1 Kings 12.25–30; for Amos and Bethel, see 4.4; 5.5–6; 7.10–13. The horns of the altar, the projections at the corners of an altar had special significance; see Ex 21.14; 1 Kings 2.28–34. 15: The Lord will raze the tokens of conspicuous Israelite consumption: the winter house, the summer house, and the houses decorated with carved ivory inlay, such as the royal palace in Samaria built by Ahab (1 Kings 22.39).

4.1–3: Israel’s luxurious excesses. Wealthy and greedy women of Samaria would be punished along with their husbands. 1: Cows of Bashan, is not necessarily a derogatory remark against the prosperous women who are identified with prized animal’s from Bashan, a fertile region in the northern Transjordan renowned for its cattle (Ps 22.12). However, the prophet suggests that the wealthy women make their husbands the instruments of their oppressive greed. 2: Hooks . . . fishhooks, the terms are obscure but perhaps refer to the practice of leading away prisoners with hooks through their noses, as depicted in ancient Near Eastern art (cf. Isa 37.29). 3: Straight ahead, with the city walls in ruins, the captives will be easily taken away.

4.4–5: Israel's piety is satirized. 4: Bethel, see 3.14n. Gilgal, a venerable Israelite shrine near Jericho (e.g., Josh 4.20; 10.43; 1 Sam 7.16), condemned by Amos (5.5) and his contemporary Hosea (Hos 4.15; 9.15; 12.11). The ritual practices listed here are prescribed elsewhere; for the morning sacrifice, see Ex 29.29; tithes, see Lev 27.30–32; Deut 14.28–29; thank offering of leavened bread, see Lev 7.13; freewill offerings, see Num 15.3. Note the association of tithes with Bethel in Gen 28.22.

4.6–13: Israel has ignored the divine warnings issued through plagues. These plagues typify the curses a treaty partner brought on itself through disobedience. Israel's covenantal documents contained such curses (Lev 26.14–39; Deut 28.15–68). 6: Cleanness of teeth, i.e., famine. 10: A pestilence after the manner of Egypt, Ex 9.3–7,15. The stench of unburied corpses, as in Isa 34.3. 11: The verb overthrew here could refer to an earthquake, as it seems to in Gen 19.25,29, in which the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah is described. 13: The first of three doxologies interspersed throughout Amos (5.8–9; 9.5–6). These hymn-like sections emphasize that the God Israel encounters in judgment is the creator.

so that destruction comes upon the fortress.

¹⁰They hate the one who reproveth in the gate, and they abhor the one who speaks the truth.

¹¹Therefore because you trample on the poor and take from them levies of grain, you have built houses of hewn stone,
but you shall not live in them;
you have planted pleasant vineyards,
but you shall not drink their wine.

¹²For I know how many are your transgressions, and how great are your sins—
you who afflict the righteous, who take a bribe, and push aside the needy in the gate.

¹³Therefore the prudent will keep silent in such a time;
for it is an evil time.

^a Heb adds to the house of Israel

5.1–3: Lament for Israel. Among the forms of prophetic speech was the lament; hearing one's own funeral speech delivered by a prophet must have had a sobering effect (cf. Jer 9.17–22).

5.4–7: A plea for repentance. Though the lament form was meant to convey a sense of inevitable judgment, there is yet time to seek the LORD and live, an exhortation to turn to God or abide by God's precepts (Ps 24.6; Prov 28.5; Isa 55.6). The prophet enjoins Israel to seek the Lord, not the sanctuaries of the Lord. 5: For Bethel and Gilgal, see 3.14n.; 4.4n. Beer-sheba, though in the Negeb to the far south, was a shrine associated with Israel's ancestors (Gen 21.25–31; 26.23; 46.1–4) and would have attracted pilgrims from the north. 6: House of Joseph, i.e., the Northern Kingdom. Its two main parts were Ephraim and Manasseh, named for the sons of Joseph (Gen 41.50–52; 48). 7: The dried leaves of wormwood were aromatic and bitter; here, injustice leads to bitterness (see 6.12).

5.8–9: The second doxology (see 4.13n.). 8: Pleiades and Orion also occur together in Job 9.9; 38.31. Though astral bodies could inspire illicit worship (e.g., 2 Kings 23.5), to the faithful they testified to God's power (e.g., Ps 8.3).

5.10–17: Amos condemns a corrupt legal system. 10–13: At the very site of legal proceedings, the city gate, the truth is rejected, the poor are plundered, and witnesses are bribed. See Prov 10.19. 11: A futility curse, in which the connections between actions and their expected effects are broken; cf. Deut 28.30–31, 38–46; Mic

¹⁴ Seek good and not evil, that you may live;
and so the LORD, the God of hosts, will be
with you,
just as you have said.

¹⁵ Hate evil and love good,
and establish justice in the gate;
it may be that the LORD, the God of hosts, will be gracious to the remnant of Joseph.

¹⁶ Therefore thus says the LORD, the God of hosts, the Lord:
In all the squares there shall be wailing;
and in all the streets they shall say, “Alas! alas!”

They shall call the farmers to mourning, and those skilled in lamentation, to wailing;

¹⁷ in all the vineyards there shall be wailing,
for I will pass through the midst of you,

says the LORD.

¹⁸ Alas for you who desire the day of the
LORD!
Why do you want the day of the LORD?
It is darkness, not light;
¹⁹ as if someone fled from a lion,
and was met by a bear;

or went into the house and rested a hand against the wall,
and was bitten by a snake.

²⁰ Is not the day of the LORD darkness, not
light,
and gloom with no brightness in it?

²¹ I hate, I despise your festivals, and I take no delight in your solemn assemblies.

²² Even though you offer me your burnt offerings and grain offerings,
I will not accept them;
and the offerings of well-being of your fatted animals
I will not look upon.

²³ Take away from me the noise of your songs;
I will not listen to the melody of your harps.

²⁴ But let justice roll down like waters, and righteousness like an ever-flowing stream.

²⁵ Did you bring to me sacrifices and offerings the forty years in the wilderness, O house of Israel? ²⁶ You shall take up Sakkuth your king, and Kaiwan your star-god, your images,^a which you made for yourselves; ²⁷ therefore I

6.14–15; Zeph 1.13. 12: Cf. 2.6–7. 14–15: Another plea for repentance; see vv. 4–7; Joseph, see 5.6n. 16–17: Staying with the images of village life and returning to the motif of lament (5.1–3), Amos depicts the divine punishment for injustice. 16: Skilled in lamentation, professional mourners; see Jer 9.17–21; Ezek 32.16; Eccl 12.5; 2 Chr 35.25.

5.18–6.14: A series of “woe” sayings (5.18–25; 6.1–3; 6.4–14) complete the section of judgment speeches.

5.18–20: The Day of the Lord, in which Israelites expected to be vindicated against their enemies, will be, as depicted already in 1.1–2.16, a day when Israel too receives its judgment. Amos’s profound reinterpretation of this popular concept is among his most significant contributions. See also Isa 13.6,9; Jer 46.10; Joel 2.1–2; Mal 4.5.

5.21–27: The Lord delights not in abundance of festivals and sacrifices but in justice and righteousness. V. 24 expresses a central message of the prophets; see also Mic 6.6–8. 21–23: The language is harsh. Festivals refers to the three pilgrimage feasts (Ex 23.14–17; 34.18,22–23; Deut 16.16), as does solemn assemblies (Lev 23.36; Deut 16.8). The sacrifices in v. 22 were prescribed; see, e.g., Lev 7.8–14. Songs is often used of hymns (see 8.3), such as the psalms (e.g., see title of Ps 120). For a similar view, see Isa 1.11–17. 24: An ever-flowing stream is a riverbed that never fails, as opposed to a wadi, common in Israel’s landscape, which had run-off water only in the rainy season. 25: As in Jeremiah (2.2–3) and Hosea (2.14–20; 9.10), the period in the wilderness after the Exodus is recalled as an ideal. Like Jer 7.21–23, the rhetorical question presumes that sacrifice was not a component of Israel’s religious system immediately after the Exodus. This is inconsistent with other biblical traditions (contrast Ex 20–Num 10). 26: Sakkuth and Kaiwan (Saturn) designate known Assyrian deities. Sakkuth may be the same as the “Succoth” whose cult the Babylonians established in Samaria after its fall (2 Kings 17.30). 27: Damascus, 1.3–5n.

6.1–7: An indictment of conspicuous consumption. 1: Amos targets elite classes of the capitals of both the South (Zion, i.e., Jerusalem) and the North (Mount Samaria). 2: Cf. Isa 10.9–11. Calneh and Hamath were prosperous cities of Syria, conquered by the Assyrians in 738 BCE; the allusion to Gath, the only Philistine city unmentioned in 1.6–8, could refer to its defeat at the hands of Syria (2 Kings 12.18) or Judah (2 Chr 26.6), or its conquest by the Assyrians in 711. 4: Beds of ivory, see 3.15n. Over 500 ivory fragments have been excavated from the site of Samaria. 5: David, 1 Sam 16.23; 1 Chr 23.5; Neh 12.36. 6–7: Joseph, see 5.6n. The elites of Samaria, accustomed to the choicest products, will be the first chosen for deportation by the Assyrians. 7: The revelry (Heb “marzeah”) was a social and funerary ritual banquet of Canaanite origin; cf. Jer 16.5.

6.8–14: Judgment on Israel. Jacob, here referring to the Northern Kingdom. The house of Israel, both as a sociopolitical body and as representative of its palatial strongholds, is doomed. 10: Burns the dead probably refers to practices employed to stop the spread of infection. In this extremity, the few survivors dare not mention the name of the LORD, out of fear of inviting their own destruction from a deity still intent on destruction. 12: Israel’s legal and moral machinations are a perversion bordering on the absurd. Wormwood, see 5.7n. 13: Lo-debar and Karnaim are two cities east of the Jordan recovered for Israel by Jeroboam II (2 Kings 14.25). The

7 This is what the Lord GOD showed me:
he was forming locusts at the time the latter growth began to sprout (it was the latter growth after the king's mowings). ²When they had finished eating the grass of the land, I said,
"O Lord GOD, forgive, I beg you!
How can Jacob stand?
He is so small!"
³The LORD relented concerning this;
"It shall not be," said the LORD.

⁴This is what the Lord GOD showed me:
the Lord GOD was calling for a shower of fire,^a and it devoured the great deep and was eating up the land. ⁵Then I said,
"O Lord God, cease, I beg you!
How can Jacob stand?
He is so small!"

⁶The LORD relented concerning this;
"This also shall not be," said the Lord
GOD.

⁷This is what he showed me: the Lord was standing beside a wall built with a plumb line, with a plumb line in his hand. ⁸And the LORD said to me, "Amos, what do you see?"
And I said, "A plumb line." Then the Lord said,
"See, I am setting a plumb line in the midst of my people Israel;
I will never again pass them by;
⁹the high places of Isaac shall be made desolate,
and the sanctuaries of Israel shall be
laid waste,
and I will rise against the house of Jeroboam with the sword."

verse puns on the names of the cities, which mean "No-thing" and "Horns [i.e., strength]," respectively. 14: An unnamed nation will be the instrument of God's judgement. From Lebo-hamath to the Wadi Arabah, the farthest limits of Israelite territory (see 2 Kings 14.25), from the Orontes Valley in Lebanon to the north to the Rift Valley in the southeast.

7:1–9:15: The visions of Amos. The final section of the book consists of accounts and interpretations of five visions (7:1–3; 7:4–6; 7:7–9; 8:1–3; 9:1–6), a biographical account about the prophet (7:10–17), and prophetic oracles (8.4–14; 9.5–15).

7:1–9: A series of three visions and attempted intercession. Amos acts as an intercessor on behalf of Israel (see Gen 18.17; Ex 32.7–14). Yet prophetic intercession, while effective in the short term, will ultimately not deter God from punishing sinful Israel.

7:1–3: Judgment by locusts (cf. Joel 1.2–7). 1: A locust plague at the time of the latter growth endangered the spring planting, just sprouting, after the harvest of the winter grains. 2: The prophet appeals to God's sense of proportion: Israel (Jacob) is so small and, by implication, God is so big (cf. Job 7.20). 3: The LORD relented, God's mind changed concerning the punishment, although forgiveness is not offered, as Amos requested (see also Ex 32.14; Joel 2.13; Jon 4.2).

7:4–6: Judgment by fire. 4: The great deep, the cosmic waters under the earth and over the heavens (see Gen 1.2).

7:7–9: Israel falls short. The plumb line (2 Kings 21.13–15), a device for determining the true vertical line of a structure, reveals that Israel's religious and political institutions do not measure up and will be destroyed; here the prophet offers no intercessory protest or plea. High places were open-air sanctuaries. Though acceptable in earlier eras, Amos and Hosea (10.8) condemned them as places of illicit worship. Isaac, a rare designation for the Northern Kingdom (see v. 16). House of Jeroboam, the royal dynasty of Jeroboam II (788–747 BCE).

7:10–17: Amos and Amaziah. This piece, a narrative illustration of 2.12 in the form of a dramatic encounter between the royal priest and the prophet, the classic outsider, is placed at this point in the book perhaps because its reference to King Jeroboam (v. 10) fits well next to the phrase "house of Jeroboam" (v. 9). Amaziah of the house of Israel; the land is not able to bear all his words. ¹¹For thus Amos has said, 'Jeroboam shall die by the sword, and Israel must go into exile away from his land.'

¹²And Amaziah said to Amos, "O seer, go, flee away to the land of Judah, earn your bread there, and prophesy there; ¹³but never again prophesy at Bethel, for it is the king's sanctuary, and it is a temple of the kingdom."

¹⁴Then Amos answered Amaziah, "I am^a no prophet, nor a prophet's son; but I am^a a herdsman, and a dresser of sycamore trees, ¹⁵and the LORD took me from following the flock, and the LORD said to me, 'Go, prophesy to my people Israel.'

¹⁶"Now therefore hear the word of the LORD. You say, 'Do not prophesy against Israel, and do not preach against the house of Isaac.'

¹⁷Therefore thus says the LORD: 'Your wife shall become a prostitute in the city, and your sons and your daughters shall fall by the sword, and your land shall be parceled out by line; you yourself shall die in an unclean land, and Israel shall surely go into exile away from its land.'"

8 This is what the Lord God showed me—a basket of summer fruit.^b ²He said, "Amos, what do you see?" And I said, "A basket of summer fruit."^b Then the LORD said to me, "The end^c has come upon my people Israel; I will never again pass them by. ³The songs of the temple^d shall become wailings in that day," says the Lord God; "the dead bodies shall be many, cast out in every place. Be silent!"

⁴Hear this, you that trample on the needy, and bring to ruin the poor of the land, ⁵saying, "When will the new moon be over so that we may sell grain; and the sabbath, so that we may offer wheat for sale?"

was the official priest of the royal shrine at Bethel (see 3.14n.). 10: Amos's prophecy equates to treason. 11: For thus Amos has said, Amaziah does not attribute the prophet's words to God. The first utterance Amaziah cites (Jeroboam shall die . . .) is the rough but not exact equivalent of 7.9; the second phrase (Israel must go . . .) of 4.2–3; 5.5, 26–27; 6.7; 9.4. 12: Earn your bread, lit. "eat bread." 14: Amos asserts that he is neither a professional prophet (1 Sam 9.6–10; Mic 3.5–8, 11) nor a member of a prophetic guild (2 Kings 2.3; 1 Sam 10.5; 1 Kings 22.6). Herdsman, of large cattle (cf. 1.1n.); the word occurs only here in the Bible. Dresser of sycamore trees, the biblical sycamore was a type of fig tree whose fruit was gashed with knives to induce ripening. 15: Cf. 2 Sam 7.8. 17: A dreadful string of curses: May your wife . . . become a prostitute; may others acquire title to your land, i.e., parcel it out with a measuring line. Israel shall surely go, Amos closes his response to Amaziah by repeating the latter's words from v. 11.

8.1–9.15: Further visions and oracles. The final two chapters of Amos have a similar outline: Both begin with visions (8.1–3; 9.1–6), followed by oracles with many literary parallels (compare 8.8 with 9.5; 8.9 with 9.11; 8.11 with 9.13).

8.1–3: Fourth vision. A basket of ripe summer fruit symbolizes the immediacy of Israel's end. Note the pun in Hebrew between summer fruit, "qayits," and end, "qets." 2: I will never again pass them by, God will no longer mitigate Israel's punishment, see 7.8. Contrast 5.17, where God's presence brings destruction. 3: Songs of the temple, see 5.21–23n. Wailings, see 5.16. Be silent, see 6.10.

8.4–14: Judgment speeches against Israel akin to those in 3.1–6.14. 4–6: Rapacious and fraudulent business practices victimize the poor. 5: The merchants are impatient for the holy days to pass so they can resume their fraudulent business (Lev 19.35–36; Deut 25.13–16). The new moon, see Num 29.6. Ephah small, sell less than the apparent volume; an ephah was ca. 23 l (.66 bu). Shekel great, overcharge; a shekel weighed ca. 11.5 gr (.4 oz). False

We will make the ephah small and the shekel great, and practice deceit with false balances, 6 buying the poor for silver and the needy for a pair of sandals, and selling the sweepings of the wheat.”

7 The LORD has sworn by the pride of Jacob:
Surely I will never forget any of their deeds.

8 Shall not the land tremble on this account, and everyone mourn who lives in it,
and all of it rise like the Nile, and be tossed about and sink again, like the Nile of Egypt?

9 On that day, says the Lord God,
I will make the sun go down at noon,
and darken the earth in broad daylight.

10 I will turn your feasts into mourning,
and all your songs into lamentation;
I will bring sackcloth on all loins,
and baldness on every head;
I will make it like the mourning for an only son,
and the end of it like a bitter day.

11 The time is surely coming, says the Lord
GOD,
when I will send a famine on the land;
not a famine of bread, or a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the LORD.

12 They shall wander from sea to sea,
and from north to east;

they shall run to and fro, seeking the word of the LORD,
but they shall not find it.

13 In that day the beautiful young women and the young men shall faint for thirst.

14 Those who swear by Ashimah of Samaria, and say, “As your god lives, O Dan,” and, “As the way of Beer-sheba lives”— they shall fall, and never rise again.

9 I saw the LORD standing beside^a the altar, and he said:
Strike the capitals until the thresholds shake,
and shatter them on the heads of all the people;^b and those who are left I will kill with the sword;
not one of them shall flee away,
not one of them shall escape.

2 Though they dig into Sheol, from there shall my hand take them;
though they climb up to heaven,
from there I will bring them down.

3 Though they hide themselves on the top of Carmel,
from there I will search out and take
them;

balances, scales rigged in the merchant's favor. 6: Buying the poor probably refers to outright slavery, as opposed to selling the righteous (2.6) into debt slavery. Sweepings of the wheat, they sell the chaff as wheat. 7: Pride of Jacob, may be an epithet for God (compare 1 Sam 15.29) or for Israel (see Ps 47.4). Here the term is ironic, for it is the sinful pride of Israel which prompts God's reproach (see 6.8; Jer 13.9; Hos 7.10). That God does not forget is often a comfort (see Deut 4.31; Ps 9.12; Isa 49.15), but here it brings judgment. 8: Like the Nile . . . tossed about and sink, the annual inundation of the Nile (9.5; Jer 46.7–8). 9–10: A solar eclipse portends divine punishment and elicits mourning rituals. Sackcloth and baldness were customary expressions of mourning associated with national disaster (e.g., Isa 22.12). An only son, Jer 6.26; Zech 12.10. 11–12: No longer will God's judgment come as a famine or drought (contrast 4.6), but rather as an absence of prophecy, thus extinguishing the intercessory role of prophets in times of turmoil. 14: Ashimah (or “guilt”) of Samaria could be a Syrian deity (2 Kings 17.30) or a disparaging reference (“the guilt”) to the practice of treating the cosmic Lord merely as the patron of a local shrine, whether in the center of Israel (Samaria), the farthest north (Dan), or the farthest south (Beer-sheba).

9.1–6: Fifth vision. For other appearances of the Lord at shrines, see 1 Sam 3.1–18; Isa 6.1–13. 1: Probably the altar at Bethel (3.14; 7.10) is intended. Capital, the top of a pillar. Threshold, the foundational slab of the doorposts. The entire structure, from ceiling to foundation, will shake; see Isa 6.4. 2: Sheol, the place of the dead (Job 10.19–22; Isa 14.11,15), which, Amos asserts, is within God's purview (Ps 139.7–12), though many feared it was not (e.g., Ps 6.6; 88.3–5). 3: Mount Carmel, which juts into the Mediterranean at the northwestern border of Israel, and though they hide from my sight at the bottom of the sea,

there I will command the sea-serpent,
and it shall bite them.

⁴ And though they go into captivity in front of their enemies, there I will command the sword, and it shall kill them;
and I will fix my eyes on them for harm and not for good.

⁵ The Lord, God of hosts,
he who touches the earth and it melts,
and all who live in it mourn,
and all of it rises like the Nile,

and founds his vault upon the earth;
who calls for the waters of the sea, and pours them out upon the surface of
the earth—
the LORD is his name.

⁷ Are you not like the Ethiopians^a to me,
O people of Israel? says the LORD.
Did I not bring Israel up from the land of Egypt,

The vault is another name for the celestial barrier thought to separate the earth from the cosmic waters (Gen 1.6–8; Prov 8.27).

9.7–10: Israel has no claim to special privilege. Amos refutes the idea that Israel’s relationship with God implies its superiority. This oracle suggests, positively, that God has enacted other exoduses at other times and places and, negatively, that Israel stands in judgment alongside the nations; see 3.2. 7: Like the Ethiopians, even distant Nubia is within God’s purview. Philistines from Caphtor (probably Crete) (Jer 47.4). Kir, see 1.5n. 8: House of Jacob, here referring to Judah. This exception to God’s judgment is likely a later addition. 9: Sieve, used to separate grain from stones picked up on the threshing room floor.

9.11–15: An oracle of restoration. Prophetic collections often end on a similar, hopeful note; many, as above, refer to that day (Hos 14.1–7; Joel 3.18–21; Mic 7.11–20; Zeph 3.14–20; Hag 2.20; Zech 14.6,20; Mal 14.1–5). 11: Booth of David, elsewhere in Amos, the fate of the Davidic dynasty, depicted here as in ruins, had not been a concern. This verse, at least, sounds like it stems from a later time, after the dynasty had fallen. The phrase “booth of David” suggests a more fragile structure than the more frequent “house of David” (cf. 2 Sam 7.11; Isa 1.8). 12: Edom was a traditional rival of Judah, not Israel, so this is further evidence that part or all of this final

OBADIAH

NAME, AUTHORSHIP, AND CANONICAL STATUS

The name Obadiah, which means “servant of Yah[weh],” was a common one in ancient Israel. Other Obadias are mentioned in the books of Kings, Chronicles, Ezra, and Nehemiah. Because it has little information in its superscription, the name for the introductory labels of prophetic books, the book of Obadiah is functionally anonymous.

Obadiah is the shortest book in the Hebrew Bible, containing only verse numbers. It appears here, as in the Masoretic Text, between Amos and Jonah, although some ancient manuscripts place Obadiah between Joel and Jonah.

CONTENTS AND DATE OF COMPOSITION

Despite our lack of information about this particular Obadiah, his family background, or when he lived, most interpreters link the contents of the book to events in the sixth century BCE. Obadiah single-mindedly announces God’s punishment on Edom, a nation east of Judah in Transjordan, for its mistreatment of Judah. The accusations leveled against Edom in vv. 10–14, that Edom stood aside while strangers attacked Jerusalem and even aided in the invasion of the city, are understood to refer to Edomite activity during the Babylonian destruction of Jerusalem in 586 BCE.

Other biblical books share Obadiah’s anger against Edom. Anti-Edomite oracles appear in Isa 34.5–8; 63.1–4; Ezek 25.12–13; 35.5–6,15; 36.5; Joel 3.19; and Jer 49.7–22, the language of which closely parallels parts of Obadiah. Like Obadiah, Ps 137.7 calls for revenge against Edom. Obadiah is distinctive, however, in claiming that Edom’s crimes are especially heinous because of the brotherhood between the nations: a brother should not do the things that Edom did to Judah. The tradition that Edom and Judah descend from the brothers Esau and Jacob is familiar to readers of Gen 25 and Mal 1.2–5, but only Obadiah uses the expectations of brotherhood to bolster criticism of Edom’s behavior in the sixth century.

Archaeology has shown that the Babylonian armies left their mark not only on Judah but also on Edom; both countries suffered loss of population and stability. In the sixth and fifth centuries BCE, territorial boundaries between Judah and Edom, as well as ethnic boundaries between their populations, seem to have been fluid. This may be the situation reflected in the closing verses of Obadiah, which not only promise that Judah will reclaim the Negeb (disputed territory in southern Judah) but also envision the enlargement of Judah’s borders in every direction. Hence, while many date Obadiah close to the traumatic events of 586, it instead may have been written in a later generation, as its author sought to establish Judah’s land claims by recalling Edom’s past crimes while appealing to the rhetoric of brotherhood.

¹The vision of Obadiah.

Thus says the Lord God concerning Edom:
We have heard a report from the LORD,
and a messenger has been sent among
the nations:

“Rise up! Let us rise against it for battle!”

²I will surely make you least among the
nations;
you shall be utterly despised.

³Your proud heart has deceived you, you that live in the clefts of the rock,^a whose dwelling is in the heights.

You say in your heart,
“Who will bring me down to the ground?”

⁴Though you soar aloft like the eagle, though your nest is set among the stars,
from there I will bring you down,
says the LORD.

⁵If thieves came to you,
if plunderers by night
—how you have been destroyed!— would they not steal only what they wanted?

If grape-gatherers came to you, would they not leave gleanings?

⁶How Esau has been pillaged, his treasures searched out!

⁷All your allies have deceived you,
they have driven you to the border;
your confederates have prevailed against you;
those who ate^b your bread have set a trap for you—

there is no understanding of it.

⁸On that day, says the LORD,
I will destroy the wise out of Edom, and understanding out of Mount Esau.

⁹Your warriors shall be shattered, O Teman, so that everyone from Mount Esau will be cut off.

¹⁰For the slaughter and violence done to your brother Jacob,
shame shall cover you,
and you shall be cut off forever.

¹¹On the day that you stood aside, on the day that strangers carried off his wealth,
and foreigners entered his gates and cast lots for Jerusalem, you too were like one of them.

^b Cn: Heb lacks those who ate

1a: Superscription. A distinctively prophetic term, vision also occurs in Isa 1.1 and Nah 1.1. It refers not to data simply registered by the eyes but rather to truth made known by God, as in Jer 23.16.

1b–4: Edom’s pending destruction. These verses closely parallel Jer 49.12–16, although in Jeremiah feminine forms are used to describe Edom. The theme of reversal runs throughout the book: Edom’s fortunes are about to change. 1b–2: Both other nations and God are described as rising up against Edom. 3: Prophetic books frequently condemn the proud, especially among the nations (Isa 10.12; 13.11,19; 16.6; Jer 48.29; Zeph 2.10; 9.6; Zech 10.11). 3–4: Clefts of the rock, the same Heb word means “rock” and Sela, an Edomite city probably to be identified with Umm el-Biyara, a site on a mountain within the later city of Petra; cf. Ps 137.9. The mountainous terrain of Edom, however, will offer no protection.

5–7: Edom at the hand of the nations. These verses imply that Edom’s former allies have already begun its devastation, as in Jer 49.9–10. 5: A difficult verse, suggesting that Edom’s loss is beyond that caused by simple thieves. Leave gleanings, see Deut 24.21. 6: Esau is described as Judah’s brother and the ancestor of the Edomites in Gen 25. 7: Edom’s former allies and confederates are not named.

8–9: Edom at the hand of God. God will complete Edom’s devastation on that day, a common prophetic term for the Day of the Lord. Phrases are shared with Jer 49.7 and 22. 9: Teman refers either to the northern region of Edom (as in Am 1.12) or to Edom as a whole.

10–14: Edom as treacherous brother. Edom’s actions are especially treacherous because Esau/Edom was the brother of Jacob/Judah. On the day appears nine times in this unit, apparently referring to the traumatic day of Jerusalem’s fall. The accusations against Edom increase—from standing aside, to gloating, to boasting, to looting, to physical acts against fleeing Judeans. Although the NRSV translates 12–14 as you should not have, the forms are Heb jussives: “may you not.” While Ps 137.7 also blames Edomites for rejoicing in Jerusalem’s destruction, 2 Kings 24.2 blames bands of Arameans, Moabites, and Ammonites for coming up against Jerusalem, with no mention of Edomites. Jeremiah 40.11 indicates that Judeans fleeing the Babylonians had escaped to Moab, Ammon, Edom and elsewhere. 11: Cast lots, see Joel 3.3.

¹² But you should not have gloated^a over^b your brother
 on the day of his misfortune;
 you should not have rejoiced over the people of Judah
 on the day of their ruin;
 you should not have boasted
 on the day of distress.

¹³ You should not have entered the gate of
 my people
 on the day of their calamity;
 you should not have joined in the gloating over Judah's^c disaster
 on the day of his calamity;
 you should not have looted his goods
 on the day of his calamity.

¹⁴ You should not have stood at the crossings to cut off his fugitives;
 you should not have handed over his survivors
 on the day of distress.

¹⁵ For the day of the LORD is near against all
 the nations.
 As you have done, it shall be done to you;
 your deeds shall return on your own head.

¹⁶ For as you have drunk on my holy mountain,
 all the nations around you shall drink;
 they shall drink and gulp down,^d and shall be as though they had never been.

¹⁷ But on Mount Zion there shall be those that escape,
 and it shall be holy;

and the house of Jacob shall take possession of those who dispossessed them.

¹⁸ The house of Jacob shall be a fire,
 the house of Joseph a flame,
 and the house of Esau stubble;
 they shall burn them and consume them, and there shall be no survivor of the house of Esau;
 for the LORD has spoken.

¹⁹ Those of the Negeb shall possess Mount Esau,
 and those of the Shephelah the land of the Philistines;
 they shall possess the land of Ephraim and the land of Samaria, and Benjamin shall possess Gilead.

²⁰ The exiles of the Israelites who are in Halah^e shall possess^f Phoenicia as far as Zarephath;
 and the exiles of Jerusalem who are in 15–18: The Day of the LORD. Edom's fate will be shared by all hostile nations, as they suffer a reversal of fates on the day that God acts to (re-)establish justice. 16: As in other prophetic books, retribution is depicted as drinking a cup of wrath (Isa 51.17,22; Jer 25.17; Hab 2.16; Zech 12.2). 17–18: The reversal of fates will benefit Judah, whose devastation will turn to preeminence. 17: Mount Zion, a synonym for Jerusalem, is contrasted with Mount Esau in v. 8. 18: The house of Jacob, here southern Israel, i.e., Judah. The house of Joseph is Israel, the northern kingdom destroyed in 722 BCE. As in Mal 4.1, the day of the LORD will burn the unrighteous like stubble.

19–21: Reclamation and expansion of territory. 19: Those in the Negeb, an arid region in southern Judah, will expand eastward to take Edom. Those in the Shephelah, the western foothills of Judah, will seize territory from the neighboring Philistines and then advance northward, first into the tribal territory of Ephraim and then further northward to Samaria. The southern Judean tribe of Benjamin will expand eastward across the Jordan River to take the land of Gilead. 20: Survivors of both the Assyrian destruction of the Northern Kingdom in the eighth century BCE and the Babylonian destruction of the Southern Kingdom in the sixth century BCE will return to aid in Judah's territorial expansion. Those exiled to the Assyrian territory of Halah (2 Kings 17.6) will take Zarephath in Phoenicia, territory never previously possessed by Israel. Those exiled by the Babylonians will return from Sepharad, location unknown, and possess the Negeb, mentioned at the beginning of the unit. 21: The concluding verse justifies Mount Zion's control of Mount Esau (see 17n.), under the auspices of Judah's God.

JONAH

NAME AND LOCATION IN CANON

The book of Jonah, a story about a prophet and not a collection of his prophecies, is atypical of the prophetic books. It is the fifth of the Minor Prophets in the Hebrew Bible; the book's placement following Amos and Obadiah is likely topical: both Amos and Obadiah contain prophecies concerning foreign nations, and Jonah relates another prophecy concerning foreigners, the people of Nineveh. In the Septuagint (LXX), Jonah is the sixth book (between Obadiah and Nahum), the same order as in the list of the twelve minor prophets in 2 Esd 1.38–40.

Jonah son of Amittai is mentioned in 2 Kings 14 as a prophet who prophesied in the Northern Kingdom of Israel in the days of the King Jeroboam II in the mid-eighth century BCE: “[Jeroboam] restored the border of Israel from Lebo-hamath as far as the Sea of the Arabah, according to the word of the LORD, the God of Israel, which he spoke by his servant Jonah son of Amittai, the prophet, who was from Gath-hepher. For the LORD saw the distress of Israel was very bitter; there was no one left, bond or free, and no one to help Israel. But the LORD had not said that he would blot out the name of Israel from under heaven, so he saved them by the hand of Jeroboam son of Joash” (vv. 25–27). Jonah is not mentioned again. The author of our book seems to have chosen Jonah as his protagonist since attributing the events to a prophet mentioned in Israel's history grants authenticity, and because the event described in Kings deals with God's compassion and mercy, the central theme of the book of Jonah: In Kings the Northern Kingdom is spared, while in Jonah, the Assyrian Empire, its enemy, is forgiven.

STRUCTURE

The book is in two parts, each with three scenes:

Chs 1–2	God's first call to Jonah
1.1–3	Jonah's commission and attempt to flee
1.4–16	The moral: one cannot flee from God
2.1–11	Jonah, in the fish, prays and is saved
Chs 3–4	God's second call to Jonah
3.1–4	Jonah's mission and its completion
3.5–10	The repentance of Nineveh and God's forgiveness
4.1–11	Jonah's prayer-complaint, and the moral he learns from God

The two parts are symmetrical: the opening command assigning both missions is almost identical; the formulation of Jonah's flight and that of the fulfillment of the second mission open with the same words, “Jonah set out” (1.3; 3.3); both second scenes features foreigners who are depicted favorably in contrast with Jonah; similar phrasing is used when the ship captain and the king of Nineveh express their belief in God when they are in danger, though unsure their belief will save them (1.6; 3.6–9); Jonah prays to God in both final scenes: in 2.2 in order to save himself, and in 4.2–3 to express frustration over God's saving the people of Nineveh.

AUTHORSHIP AND DATE

The book of Jonah was written by an unknown author. Its language places it in the Second Temple period, its vocabulary and syntax corresponding with those of the Bible's later books, Aramaic sources, and rabbinic literature. The book was apparently written after the destruction of the Assyrian capital of Nineveh in 612 BCE, since it refers to that city in the past tense (3.3), and the king is not called the “King of Assyria” but the “King of Nineveh” (3.6), an inappropriate title. The book should be dated no later than the third century BCE.

A late date is also suggested by Jonah's broad and sophisticated use of earlier biblical texts. The evil of the Ninevites and their punishment is contrasted with that of the inhabitants of Sodom (1.2; 3.4; 4.5; cf. Gen 18.20; 19.24), while Jonah appears as Abraham's opposite. In the story of Sodom, Abraham pleads with God to save the city for the sake of the few righteous people without expecting the city's repentance (Gen 18.22–33). Jonah, in contrast, flees, refusing to warn the Ninevites lest they repent and be saved. Jonah is also depicted as the opposite of Abraham's nephew Lot, who warned his sons-in-law of imminent destruction until being taken from Sodom by angels; Jonah's proclamation, "Forty days more and Nineveh shall be overthrown!" (3.4) is recited unwillingly, and then he even leaves the city to watch events unfold with complete lack of interest (4.5). Jonah is also contrasted with Moses, who was willing to die if God did not forgive the Israelites after they made the golden calf (Ex 32). Jonah's actions are also patterned after those of Elijah, who fled from Jezebel and his mission and asked to die (1 Kings 19). Jonah 4.2 appears to quote God's attributes (Ex 34.6–7) as they are presented in Joel 2.13. Jeremiah's prophecies (Jer 26.3; 36.7) echo in the words of the king of Nineveh who, with Jonah behaving as an anti-prophet, himself assumes the role of prophet and rouses his people to repent (3.8).

JONAH

INTERPRETATION AND GUIDE TO READING

Jonah is not a historical book in the sense of recalling events that actually occurred; its characters and setting provide the means for the writer to convey his message. Part of that message concerns the power of repentance. While not unimportant, however, repentance is not the book's central theme: were it so, the first three chapters would suffice, and Jonah's flight would be irrelevant. Instead, the book of Jonah revolves around the essence of prophecy. Jonah knows God's attributes, that he is "gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and abounding in steadfast love, and ready to relent from punishing" (4.2). He knows that God will relent from destroying Nineveh and he flees, certain that his prophecy of destruction will be proven false. Jonah represents the concept, expressed explicitly in Deut 18.21–22, that the single proof for a prophecy's truth is its realization. God seeks to teach Jonah values more lofty than a prophecy's realization or a prophet's reliability—the saving of God's creation when found worthy. The book therefore illustrates the position—voiced openly in Jer 28.9—that although a prophecy of peace must be fulfilled in order to prove that its deliverer is a true prophet, a prophecy of destruction is meant, from the outset, to educate and bring repentance. This holds true even for foreign nations: the prophecy of doom is a conditional prophecy that will come true only in the absence of repentance (Jer 18.7–8).

The book of Jonah is uncharacteristic, when compared to other writings in the prophetic tradition, in its use of humor or irony to make its point. Humorous qualities, such as exaggerated behavior (running away from God, 1.3); inappropriate actions (sleeping through a violent storm, 1.5); outlandish situations (offering a prayer of thanksgiving from inside a fish's belly, 2.1); ludicrous commands (animals must fast and wear sackcloth, 3.7–8); and emotions either contrary to expectation (anger at mercy, 4.1–2) or out of proportion (being angry enough to die because a plant has withered, 4.9) appear throughout the story. But all of these qualities serve to underline the book's themes.

The book has a role disproportionate to its size within religious tradition. Judaism, picking up on its theme of repentance, reads it liturgically on Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement. It is cited several times in the New Testament, where Jonah prefigures Jesus who spent "three days and three nights . . . in the heart of the earth" (Mt 12.40).

Yair Zakovitch

1 Now the word of the LORD came to Jonah son of Amittai, saying, ²“Go at once to Nineveh, that great city, and cry out against it; for their wickedness has come up before me.” ³But Jonah set out to flee to Tarshish from the presence of the LORD. He went down to Joppa and found a ship going to Tarshish; so he paid his fare and went on board, to go with them to Tarshish, away from the presence of the LORD.

⁴But the LORD hurled a great wind upon the sea, and such a mighty storm came upon the sea that the ship threatened to break up. ⁵Then the mariners were afraid, and each cried to his god. They threw the cargo that was in the ship into the sea, to lighten it for them. Jonah, meanwhile, had gone down into the hold of the ship and had lain down, and was fast asleep. ⁶The captain came and said to him, “What are you doing sound asleep? Get up, call on your god! Perhaps the god will spare us a thought so that we do not perish.”

⁷The sailors^a said to one another, “Come, let us cast lots, so that we may know on whose account this calamity has come upon us.” So they cast lots, and the lot fell on Jonah. ⁸Then they said to him, “Tell us why this calamity has come upon us. What is your occupation? Where do you come from? What is your country? And of what people are you?” ⁹“I am a Hebrew,” he replied. “I worship the LORD, the God of heaven, who made the sea and the dry land.” ¹⁰Then the men were even more afraid, and said to him, “What is this that you have done!” For the men knew that he was fleeing from the presence of the LORD, because he had told them so.

¹¹Then they said to him, “What shall we do to you, that the sea may quiet down for us?” For the sea was growing more and more tempestuous. ¹²He said to them, “Pick me up and throw me into the sea; then the sea will quiet down for you; for I know it is because of me that this great storm has come upon you.” ¹³Nevertheless the men rowed hard to bring the ship back to land, but they could not, for the sea grew more and more stormy against them. ¹⁴Then they cried out to the LORD, “Please, O LORD, we pray, do not let us perish on account of this man’s life. Do not make us guilty of innocent blood; for you, O LORD, have done as it pleased you.” ¹⁵So they picked Jonah up and threw him into the sea; and the sea ceased from its raging. ¹⁶Then the men feared the LORD even more, and they offered a sacrifice to the LORD and made vows.

¹⁷^bBut the LORD provided a large fish to swallow up Jonah; and Jonah was in

^a Heb They

^b Ch 2.1 in Heb

1–2: God’s first call to Jonah. 1.1–3: Jonah’s commission and attempt to flee. Neither what Jonah was commanded to say nor the reason for his flight is given. Jonah’s name, which means “dove, the son of truth,” may be symbolic. Joppa, modern Jaffa, is on the Mediterranean coast near Tel Aviv. Tarshish (Isa 23.1; Ezek 27.22,25) is probably Tarsus on the southeast coast of Turkey, or perhaps Tartessus in southwestern Spain, neither being in the direction of Nineveh. 4–16: The moral: one cannot flee from God. Jonah realizes the impossibility of flight—God, ruler of the seas, causes a great storm. The sailors, in their terror and awe, call to their gods for help, before turning to the practical matter of tossing the ship’s cargo into the sea, whereas Jonah continues to flee, this time escaping into sleep. Ironically the prophet takes no part in the attempted rescue, and the ship’s captain must rouse Jonah to call out to his God. 7: Using lots, a standard way of revealing the future in the ancient Near East, the sailors discover who is responsible; curious, they ask Jonah a series of questions. 9: Jonah’s answer reveals another irony: although he knew that God made the sea, Jonah fled to the sea to escape him. Jonah identifies himself as a Hebrew, a term typically used when speaking to non-Hebrews. The LORD, the God of heaven is a title found only in Second Temple biblical texts. 12: Despite Jonah’s words, the sailors’ compassion spurs them to try to reach shore; only after the futility of their rowing becomes apparent do they pray to Jonah’s God and throw him into the sea. 16: The section ends with the report of the sailors’ awe (“feared”; cf. vv. 5,10) for the Lord; their sacrifice and vows show their belief in him. 17: Jonah in the fish’s belly. Provided, the verb appears three more times in the story (4.6,7,8), always indicating a divine act that immediately affects Jonah’s situation. Three days and three nights, with no deliverance in sight. Jonah had avoided turning to God on the ship, but now he has no other choice.

2.1–11: Jonah, in the fish, prays and is saved. The psalm (like those in 1 Sam 2.1–10 and Isa 38.9–10) was incorporated into the story at a secondary stage. It is a psalm of thanksgiving and not a prayer for salvation, and the belly of the fish three days and three nights.

2 Then Jonah prayed to the LORD his God from the belly of the fish, ² saying, “I called to the LORD out of my distress, and he answered me; out of the belly of Sheol I cried, and you heard my voice. ³ You cast me into the deep, into the heart of the seas, and the flood surrounded me; all your waves and your billows passed over me. ⁴ Then I said, ‘I am driven away from your sight; how^a shall I look again upon your holy temple?’ ⁵ The waters closed in over me; the deep surrounded me; weeds were wrapped around my head ⁶ at the roots of the mountains. I went down to the land whose bars closed upon me forever; yet you brought up my life from the Pit, O LORD my God. ⁷ As my life was ebbing away, I remembered the LORD; and my prayer came to you, into your holy temple. ⁸ Those who worship vain idols forsake their true loyalty. ⁹ But I with the voice of thanksgiving will sacrifice to you;

what I have vowed I will pay.

Deliverance belongs to the LORD!”

¹⁰ Then the LORD spoke to the fish, and it spewed Jonah out upon the dry land.

3 The word of the LORD came to Jonah a second time, saying, ² “Get up, go to Nineveh, that great city, and proclaim to it the message that I tell you.” ³ So Jonah set out and went to Nineveh, according to the word of the LORD. Now Nineveh was an exceedingly large city, a three days’ walk across. ⁴ Jonah began to go into the city, going a day’s walk. And he cried out, “Forty days more, and Nineveh shall be overthrown!” ⁵ And the people of Nineveh believed God; they proclaimed a fast, and everyone, great and small, put on sackcloth.

⁶ When the news reached the king of Nineveh, he rose from his throne, removed his robe, covered himself with sackcloth, and sat in ashes. ⁷ Then he had a proclamation made in Nineveh: “By the decree of the king and his nobles: No human being or animal, no herd or flock, shall taste anything. They shall not feed, nor shall they drink water. ⁸ Human beings and animals shall be covered with sackcloth, and they shall cry mightily to God. All shall turn from their evil ways and from the violence that is in their hands. ⁹ Who knows? God may relent and change his mind; does not correspond exactly to the context, although one can find associative connections with Jonah’s situation. The image of the drowning poet reflects an ancient concept that the netherworld is found in the deep, at the roots of the mountains; its doors are bolted (v. 6) and none who enter will return. Despite the poet’s being in Sheol, God, in his holy temple, nevertheless hears his prayer (v. 7). 2: Sheol, the underworld, where all deceased go. 4: The wish to visit the temple, God’s home, is common in Psalms (e.g., 5.7). 9: Cf. 1.16. 10: God who made the sea and the dry land (1.9) returns Jonah from sea to the dry land. God speaks to the fish, not yet to Jonah directly. The term “spew” (literally, “vomit”) mocks Jonah.

3–4: God’s second call to Jonah. 3.1–10: Jonah’s mission and its completion. This time Jonah obeys. Before we hear of Jonah entering Nineveh, the storyteller dwells on Nineveh’s size, a significant detail in that all its inhabitants may perish. 3: A three days’ walk across, excavations have revealed a city three miles long and one and half miles wide; thus the description of its size is an exaggeration. Jonah’s proclamation, after walking only a third of the way in, is cursory, even omitting the preliminary “Thus said the LORD.” 4: Forty days is frequently a symbolic period of time in the Bible (e.g., Gen 8.6; Ex 24.18). 5–10: The Ninevites repent and God forgives. Despite Jonah’s brevity, the Ninevites believe in God and perform customs of mourning and repentance (cf. 2 Sam 3.31; Job 2.12; Dan 9.3). Even the animals repent! Faced with the prophet’s failure to fulfill his duties, the king functions as a prophet, calling out to his people to repent. 9: Cf. 1.6. These two foreigners understand that supplications before God may awaken his mercy, a notion tightly linked with the lesson the author wishes to impart. The Ninevites’ sincere repentance succeeds; God relents.

¹⁰When God saw what they did, how they turned from their evil ways, God changed his mind about the calamity that he had said he would bring upon them; and he did not do it.

4 But this was very displeasing to Jonah, and he became angry. ²He prayed to the LORD and said, “O LORD! Is not this what I said while I was still in my own country? That is why I fled to Tarshish at the beginning; for I knew that you are a gracious God and merciful, slow to anger, and abounding in steadfast love, and ready to relent from punishing. ³And now, O LORD, please take my life from me, for it is better for me to die than to live.” ⁴And the LORD said, “Is it right for you to be angry?” ⁵Then Jonah went out of the city and sat down east of the city, and made a booth for himself there. He sat under it in the shade, waiting to see what would become of the city.

⁶The LORD God appointed a bush,^a and made it come up over Jonah, to give shade over his head, to save him from his discomfort; so Jonah was very happy about the bush. ⁷But when dawn came up the next day, God appointed a worm that attacked the bush, so that it withered. ⁸When the sun rose, God prepared a sultry east wind, and the sun beat down on the head of Jonah so that he was faint and asked that he might die. He said, “It is better for me to die than to live.”

⁹But God said to Jonah, “Is it right for you to be angry about the bush?” And he said, “Yes, angry enough to die.” ¹⁰Then the LORD said, “You are concerned about the bush, for which you did not labor and which you did not grow; it came into being in a night and perished in a night. ¹¹And should I not be concerned about Nineveh, that great city, in which there are more than a hundred and twenty thousand persons who do not know their right hand from their left, and also many animals?”

4.1–11: Jonah's prayer-complaint, and the moral he learns from God. The foreigners fear the God of Israel, while Jonah, God's messenger, cannot accept God's actions and protests them. He is indignant that the Ninevites have been saved since his credibility is thereby questioned. 2–3: Jonah's second prayer to God is ironic: previously he asked for mercy for himself (2.2), now he resents the mercy shown toward the Ninevites. The prayer is in two parts: in v. 2 he provides his reasoning, in v. 3 he makes his request. 2: Jonah describes God's character with words taken from God's definition of his essence in Ex 34.6–7. Like other biblical texts (Pss 86.15; 103.8; 145.8; Neh 9.31; 2 Chr 30.9) that quote only the part about God's mercy (and not his severity—see Ex 34.7b), so also Jonah (cf. also Joel 2.13). Jonah objects to God's compassion, turning praise for God into condemnation. 3: An ironic reversal of 1 Kings 19.4, where Elijah offers legitimate reasons to die. 5: Such booths were constructed to guard the crop during harvest time. 11: The size of the city is again exaggerated. The book concludes with a question, suggesting that the reader must carefully ponder the nature of God.

MICAH

NAME, AUTHORSHIP, AND HISTORICAL CONTEXT

The book of Micah gives us little information about the prophet himself, for whom the book is named. According to 1.1, Micah prophesied in the days of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah whose reigns spanned 759–687 BCE. Possible allusions to the fall of Samaria, the capital of the Northern Kingdom of Israel, in 722 (1.6), and to the campaign of Sennacherib, the Assyrian king, in 701 (1.10–16), place the prophet in the final quarter of the eighth century. As such he was a younger contemporary of Isaiah of Jerusalem. Like Hosea, Amos, and especially Isaiah, Micah lived in a tumultuous era, whose events are recounted in 2 Kings 16–19.

LOCATION IN CANON

The prophet Micah was among the earliest of the Minor Prophets. In the organization of the Book of the Twelve, Micah follows Jonah, an arrangement apparently based on chronology since, according to 2 Kings 14.25, Jonah also lived in the eighth century. Micah is connected to the book of Nahum, which follows, by catchword; compare the final section of Micah (7.18–19) with the initial unit of Nahum (1.1–3).

STRUCTURE AND CONTENTS

The book may be divided into three sections: chs 1–3; 4–5; 6–7. Some scholars think that chs 1–3 form the oldest core of the book; it is characterized by the judgmental tone for which Micah was most famous (Jer 26.18). Chs 1–3 consist mainly of oracles of judgment; chs 4–5 of oracles of hope. The final section, chs 6–7, begins with judgment and moves to hope. This alternation between judgment and hope may conform to some pattern in Micah's preaching or it may be an organizing device of later editors. The book of Micah may also have material from subsequent periods (e.g., 4.10 speaks of the Babylonian exile; 7.11 seems to reflect the postexilic period). Further evidence of editorial activity is the close correspondence between Micah 4.1–5 and Isaiah 2.2–5.

INTERPRETATION

Micah offered a theological interpretation of the dizzying events near the end of the eighth century: the fall of Samaria, the expansion of Jerusalem fueled by emigrants from the north, and the international situation made unstable by an aggressive superpower, Assyria. Micah, from a small town southwest of Jerusalem, Moresheth-gath, had a populist message. He expressed disdain for the corruptions and pretensions of Jerusalem and its leaders. He recalled the traditions of early Israel (3.9–10; 6.3–5), and condemned religious practice unaccompanied by ethical performance (6.6–8).

While Amos and Hosea condemned the high places, provincial shrines where the proper worship of the LORD was diluted by illicit elements, Micah called Jerusalem itself a high place (1.5) and announced its destruction (3.12), for which he was long remembered (see Jer 26.18). At the same time, Micah never lost faith in the future. The middle section of the book, chs 4–5, contains images of a restored and glorious Zion to which the nations make pilgrimage, and of an ideal king (5.2–5).

It is instructive to see how Micah's rural background shaped his populist vision of the ideal king, or "messiah." Isaiah, Micah's contemporary, used the birth of a royal child (Hezekiah, son of Ahaz, was probably intended) in the Judahite capital of Jerusalem as a symbol of hope (Isa 7.10–14). Micah affirmed the Davidic lineage of the ideal king by tracing his roots to Bethlehem (5.2), David's home village (1 Sam 17.12), but also reminded his audience that their greatest king once did and will again emerge from "one of the little clans of Judah" (5.2).

1 The word of the LORD that came to Micah of Moresheth in the days of Kings Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah of Judah, which he saw concerning Samaria and Jerusalem.

² Hear, you peoples, all of you;
listen, O earth, and all that is in it;
and let the Lord God be a witness against
you,
the Lord from his holy temple.

³ For lo, the LORD is coming out of his place,
and will come down and tread upon the high places of the earth.

⁴ Then the mountains will melt under him and the valleys will burst open,
like wax near the fire,

like waters poured down a steep place.

⁵ All this is for the transgression of Jacob and for the sins of the house of Israel.

What is the transgression of Jacob?
Is it not Samaria?

And what is the high place^a of Judah?
Is it not Jerusalem?

⁶ Therefore I will make Samaria a heap in the open country,
a place for planting vineyards.

I will pour down her stones into the valley, and uncover her foundations.

⁷ All her images shall be beaten to pieces, all her wages shall be burned with fire,
and all her idols I will lay waste;
for as the wages of a prostitute she gathered them,
and as the wages of a prostitute they shall again be used.

⁸ For this I will lament and wail;
I will go barefoot and naked;
I will make lamentation like the jackals,
and mourning like the ostriches.

⁹ For her wound^b is incurable.
It has come to Judah;
it has reached to the gate of my people,
to Jerusalem.

¹⁰ Tell it not in Gath, weep not at all;
in Beth-leaphrah
roll yourselves in the dust.

¹¹ Pass on your way, inhabitants of Shaphir,
in nakedness and shame;
the inhabitants of Zaanan
do not come forth;

1.1: Superscription. Among the Minor Prophets, this superscription is closest in form to those for Hosea (1.1), Amos (1.1), and Zephaniah (1.1). Micah is a short form of the name Micaiah (1 Kings 22), which means, “Who is like Yahweh?” Moresheth, a small town in southwest Judah (cf. 1.14), probably Tell el-Judeidah, 37 km (23 mi) southwest of Jerusalem. Which he saw, Judean prophecy often had a visionary quality (e.g., Isa 1.1; Ezek 1.1.; Am 1.1; Ob 1; Nah 1.1; Hab 1.1). Jotham reigned from ca. 759 to 743 BCE; Ahaz from 743/735 to 727/715; Hezekiah from 727/715 to 698/687 (the data are inconsistent for the reigns of Ahaz and Hezekiah).

1.2–3.12: Speeches condemning Judean society and its leaders. This collection of speeches begins with an indictment of Samaria, capital of the Northern Kingdom, and ends with an indictment of Jerusalem, capital of the Southern Kingdom. This first major section of Micah is dominated by judgment speeches.

1.2–7: The coming of the Lord. In grand style, the Lord descends from heaven to punish Samaria. This oracle is to be dated before 722 BCE, when Samaria fell to the Assyrians. 2: Cf. Isa 1.2; Hab 2.20; and 1 Kings 22.28b. 3–4: Judg 5.4; Ps 68.8; 97.1–5; Isa 26.21. 5: Jacob, poetic synonym for Israel; cf. Gen 32.28. High place usually designates an open-air shrine, but seems to refer here to the Solomonic Temple. 7: This destruction of images is consistent with Deuteronomical law (Deut 7.25; 12.3). The phrase wages of a prostitute recalls the imagery of Hosea (Hos 2.2–13).

1.8–16: A lament for Samaria, and Jerusalem too. 8: Barefoot . . . naked, conventional mourning behavior (2 Sam 15.30; Ezek 24.17,23), employed for effect by Micah’s contemporary Isaiah (Isa 20.2). Jackals and ostriches, associated with desolation because they frequented ruins and produced eerie howls or cries; see also Job 30.29; Isa 34.13.

1.10–16: These towns in southwestern Judah lay along the path of the Assyrian king Sennacherib’s campaign in 701 (2 Kings 18–19; Isa 36–37), although the specific locations of several are unknown. There is a pun in virtually every verse of this section, lost in translation. For the flavor in Hebrew, consider v. 12: “the inhabitants of

¹²For the inhabitants of Maroth wait anxiously for good, yet disaster has come down from the LORD to the gate of Jerusalem.

¹³Harness the steeds to the chariots, inhabitants of Lachish;
it was the beginning of sin
to daughter Zion,
for in you were found
the transgressions of Israel.

¹⁴Therefore you shall give parting gifts to Moresheth-gath;
the houses of Achzib shall be a deception to the kings of Israel.

¹⁵I will again bring a conqueror upon you, inhabitants of Mareshah;
the glory of Israel
shall come to Adullam.

¹⁶Make yourselves bald and cut off your hair
for your pampered children;
make yourselves as bald as the eagle,
for they have gone from you into exile.

2 Alas for those who devise wickedness and evil deeds^a on their beds!
When the morning dawns, they perform it, because it is in their power.

²They covet fields, and seize them;
houses, and take them away;
they oppress householder and house,
people and their inheritance.

³Therefore thus says the LORD:
Now, I am devising against this family an evil
from which you cannot remove your necks;

and you shall not walk haughtily,
for it will be an evil time.

⁴On that day they shall take up a taunt song against you,
and wail with bitter lamentation,
and say, “We are utterly ruined;
the LORD^b alters the inheritance of my
people;

how he removes it from me!
Among our captors^c he parcels out our fields.”

⁵Therefore you will have no one to cast the line by lot
in the assembly of the LORD.

⁶“Do not preach”—thus they preach—“one should not preach of such things;
disgrace will not overtake us.”

⁷Should this be said, O house of Jacob?
Is the LORD’s patience exhausted?
Are these his doings?

Do not my words do good to one who walks uprightly?

⁸But you rise up against my people^d as an enemy;
you strip the robe from the peaceful,^e from those who pass by trustingly with no thought of war.

⁹The women of my people you drive out from their pleasant houses;
from their young children you take away my glory forever.

It depicts the grief of parents bereft of exiled children. The eagle, more exactly, the griffon-vulture.

2.1–5: The Lord will punish the land barons. 1–2: Ps 36.4; Isa 5.8–12; 32.7. Micah condemns the injustice and inhumanity of creditors who, through manipulation of credit and courts, foreclose on family farms. 4: Taunt song, cf. Num 21.27–30; Isa 23.15–16; Hab 2.6. 5: Cast the line by lot, on a piece of land, thus acquiring title to it (Josh 18.6–10; Ps 16.6).

2.6–11: The prophet responds to criticism. Micah, like other prophets (Isa 30.10; Jer 5.31; Am 2.12), realizes his uncompromising message is not one his audience wants to hear.

¹⁰ Arise and go;
 for this is no place to rest, because of uncleanness that destroys with a grievous destruction.^a ¹¹ If someone were to go about uttering empty falsehoods, saying, “I will preach to you of wine and strong drink,”
 such a one would be the preacher for this people!

¹² I will surely gather all of you, O Jacob,
 I will gather the survivors of Israel;
 I will set them together like sheep in a fold,
 like a flock in its pasture;
 it will resound with people.
¹³ The one who breaks out will go up before
 them;
 they will break through and pass the gate,
 going out by it.
 Their king will pass on before them,
 the LORD at their head.

3 And I said:
 Listen, you heads of Jacob and rulers of the house of Israel!
 Should you not know justice?— ² you who hate the good and love the evil,
 who tear the skin off my people,^b and the flesh off their bones; ³ who eat the flesh of my people, flay their skin off them,
 break their bones in pieces, and chop them up like meat^c in a kettle,
 like flesh in a caldron.

⁴ Then they will cry to the LORD,
 but he will not answer them;
 he will hide his face from them at that time,
 because they have acted wickedly.

⁵ Thus says the LORD concerning the prophets
 who lead my people astray, who cry “Peace”
 when they have something to eat, but declare war against those who put nothing into their mouths.
⁶ Therefore it shall be night to you, without vision,
 and darkness to you, without revelation.

The sun shall go down upon the prophets,
 and the day shall be black over them;
⁷ the seers shall be disgraced, and the diviners put to shame;
 they shall all cover their lips,
 for there is no answer from God.
⁸ But as for me, I am filled with power, with the spirit of the LORD, and with justice and might,
 to declare to Jacob his transgression and to Israel his sin.

⁹ Hear this, you rulers of the house of Jacob
 and chiefs of the house of Israel, who abhor justice
 and pervert all equity, ¹⁰ who build Zion with blood and Jerusalem with wrong!

2.12–13: A shift to an oracle of encouragement. Against the background of exile, whether in 722 or 587, this oracle counters despair with images of the Lord as shepherd (v. 12) and victorious king (v. 13). 13: The one who breaks out: i.e., the Lord; see Ex 19.22; 2 Sam 5.20; 6.8.

3.1–4: The Lord will punish the judicial leaders. Corrupt judges are described as cannibals; Ezekiel also used this image (Ezek 11.5–12; 24.1–14). 1: Listen, lit. “Hear,” as in 1.1; 3.9; 6.1; 6.9b, a common introduction to Micah’s oracles. 2: For comparison, Isa 5.20; for contrast, Am 5.15. 4: Futile cry to the LORD (i.e., prayer), cf. Isa 1.15.

3.5–8: The Lord will punish the religious leaders. Micah’s rival prophets are crowd pleasers (see also 2.11), inspired on commission (v. 5); by contrast, see Micah’s source of inspiration in v. 8. 6: A time without vision, 1 Sam 3.1. 7: Seers, see 1 Sam 9.9. Cover their lips, a sign of mourning (Lev 13.45; Ezek 24.17,22). 8: Filled . . . with the spirit, Isa 11.2; 61.1–3; Ezek 2.2.

This parallel reveals a key strategy of the preexilic Judean prophets: The fall of Samaria served as an example to Judah. 12: This prophecy was quoted at the trial of Jeremiah (Jer 26.18).

4.1–5.15: Speeches promising divine restoration and exaltation of the people Israel and the city Jerusalem. A series of poems depicts an ideal age (“that day”) when God reigns, Israel triumphs, and the nations are judged. Some scholars date this section to the exilic or postexilic period (see 4.10n.). Alternately, possible allusions to the Babylonian exile (e.g., 4.6,10) could stem from editors who recast Micah’s oracles for a later audience.

4.1–8: The ideal age is depicted in three poems, the first of which (vv. 1–4) is nearly identical to Isaiah 2.2–4. 1–2: There is a universal pilgrimage to Mt. Zion, to which cosmic significance is ascribed here as the mountain of the Lord’s house. 1: Highest of the mountains, claims for Mt. Zion’s height (Ps 48.3; Ezek 40.2) were symbolic, not topographic. 2: Instruction, Heb “torah.” 3–4: A classic articulation of the Israelite prophetic ideal: peace and a social equality rooted in family ownership of land. 3: Swords into plowshares (or “plowpoints,” a stick with a small metal point), i.e., the transition from war to peace, as the militia man converts to farmer. For the opposite movement, see Joel 3.10. 4: Zech 3.10; 1 Kings 4.25; 2 Kings 18.31 = Isa 36.16. 5: Like its similarly worded parallel in Isa 2.5, this verse may have been read antiphonally, as an “Amen” to the visionary speech of 4.1–4 (= Isa 2.2–4). 6–7: Cf. Zeph 3.19–20. 8: Tower of the flock, an old epithet for Jerusalem (see “tower of Eder” in Gen

There are frequent shifts of speakers here, from the Lord (v. 1) to the prophet (v. 2) and back to the Lord (vv. 3–5), to a spokesperson for the community (vv. 6–7) and back to the prophet (v. 8), who delivers the punchline, the epitome of the entire Israelite prophetic tradition. 1–2: The audience, in the style

NAHUM

NAME AND CANONICAL STATUS

The name Nahum derives from the Hebrew word for “comfort.” It may be a shortened form of Nehemiah—“God has comforted.”

The book is the seventh of the twelve Minor Prophets (see the Introduction to the Prophetic Books). In the books of Hosea, Amos, and Micah, those prophets devote much attention to explaining that Israel and Judah fell because of the people’s sin. The next three books of the collection, begun by Nahum, explain God’s sovereignty over the nations through which God carried out that punishment. Nahum insists that God will soon punish Nineveh, the capital of the Assyrian empire in the eighth century BCE. The Assyrians are infamous to the biblical writers for their destruction of the Northern Kingdom of Israel in 722 BCE, and even after Assyria passed from world dominance, it remained a symbol for brutal imperial control, as seen in works of the Hellenistic period such as the books of Judith and Tobit. Following Nahum, Habakkuk pointedly calls for God’s action against the Babylonians, and Zephaniah joins oracles against Judah with oracles against the nations and offers a glimmer of hope for both.

DATE OF COMPOSITION

Nahum was written sometime after the fall of the Egyptian city of Thebes (mentioned in Nah 3.8) in 663 BCE. Because it looks forward to the fall of Nineveh, accomplished by a coalition of Babylonians and Medes in 612 BCE, the book is often dated to just before that major event. Recent interpretation of the prophetic books, however, suggests that they provide retrospective interpretations of Israel’s history, so the book could date after 612 BCE. To readers aware that Nineveh had indeed fallen, Nahum would reveal not only God’s powerful hand in international affairs but also the role of prophets in preparing each generation for events to come.

CONTENTS AND INTERPRETATION

A common genre within the prophetic books is the “oracle against the nations,” which pronounces God’s judgment on those other than Israel or Judah. While Isaiah, Jeremiah, Zephaniah, and others outline God’s displeasure at multiple nations, Nahum focuses on only one: Assyria.

Throughout Nahum, God is cast as a mighty warrior whose armies violently defeat the foe. After an opening depiction of God as a cosmic power in ch 1, the book turns in chs 2 and 3 to vivid images of Nineveh in the midst of siege and defeat. The images of warfare are stark and disturbing: captive slave women beat their breasts (2.7), dead bodies fill Nineveh’s streets (3.3), and Nineveh itself is portrayed as a woman who is sexually assaulted by God (3.5–7). The author shows no pity for Nineveh or its inhabitants, instead delighting in its overthrow and claiming that all nations do the same (3.19).

For this reason, many readers condemn the book and contrast it negatively with the book of Jonah, which insists that God cares about the Ninevites and which describes the Assyrians as repenting. The difference between the books, however, may be due less to different ancient assessments of the Assyrians than to the different messages the books proclaim. While Jonah demonstrates the depths of divine mercy by showing stereotypically evil Ninevites in the act of repentance, Nahum establishes the sovereignty of God over all tyrants by showing powerful Nineveh in defeat. The power of God is good news for Judah, as seen especially in Nah 1 where God’s anger is presented as an act of care for Judah: God will serve as a stronghold to those who seek divine refuge (1.7), caring enough about their affliction to become angry on their behalf.

Reading Nahum raises issues that are disturbingly contemporary, such as justice, violence, revenge, and women as symbols of evil. Although the question that ends the book is rhetorical, perhaps Nahum leaves its readers with a more serious quandary: how can one appreciate Nahum’s call for justice without embracing its celebration of violence?

1 An oracle concerning Nineveh. The book of the vision of Nahum of Elkosh.

² A jealous and avenging God is the LORD, the LORD is avenging and wrathful; the LORD takes vengeance on his adversaries and rages against his enemies.

³ The LORD is slow to anger but great in power, and the LORD will by no means clear the guilty.

His way is in whirlwind and storm, and the clouds are the dust of his feet.

⁴ He rebukes the sea and makes it dry, and he dries up all the rivers;

Bashan and Carmel wither, and the bloom of Lebanon fades.

⁵ The mountains quake before him, and the hills melt; the earth heaves before him, the world and all who live in it.

⁶ Who can stand before his indignation? Who can endure the heat of his anger? His wrath is poured out like fire, and by him the rocks are broken in pieces.

⁷ The LORD is good, a stronghold in a day of trouble; he protects those who take refuge in him, ⁸ even in a rushing flood. He will make a full end of his adversaries,^a and will pursue his enemies into darkness.

⁹ Why do you plot against the LORD? He will make an end; no adversary will rise up twice.

¹⁰ Like thorns they are entangled, like drunkards they are drunk; they are consumed like dry straw.

¹¹ From you one has gone out who plots evil against the LORD, one who counsels wickedness.

¹² Thus says the LORD, "Though they are at full strength and many,^b they will be cut off and pass away. Though I have afflicted you,

I will afflict you no more.

¹³ And now I will break off his yoke from you and snap the bonds that bind you."

^b Meaning of Heb uncertain

1.1: Superscription. Like other prophetic books, Nahum begins with a description of its contents. Oracle also begins prophetic collections in Isa 13; Hab 1; Zech 9; 12; and Mal 1. Although other prophetic books mention the writing of prophecy, Nahum is the only one explicitly called a book; the Hebrew term refers to anything that is written and may refer to a scroll. Vision in the Hebrew Bible refers almost exclusively to prophecy; seeing is linked with the reception of prophecy in the superscriptions of Amos, Micah, and Habakkuk. The location of Elkosh is unknown.

1.2–8: Establishing God's power. Before addressing the specific issue of Nineveh, the book seeks to establish God's power and might. These verses form a partial acrostic; that is, most lines in vv. 2–8 begin with successive letters of the first half of Hebrew alphabet. 2–3a: First, God's attributes are named and God's character established: God is jealous for God's people and does not ignore wrongdoing. This version of Israel's familiar confession of faith (see Ex 34.6; Jon 4.2; Ps 86.15; etc.) highlights vengeance, the deity's willingness and power to right wrongs. 3b–5: God's appearance on earth, the divine theophany, is as an angry, cosmic warrior (cf. 2 Sam 22.8–16 = Ps 18.7–15; Ps 29; Hab 3.3–12). 4: The language may allude to ancient Near Eastern cosmologies, in which the deities "River" and "Sea" were defeated by a more powerful god (see also Hab 3; Ps 74.13). Bashan in northern Transjordan, Carmel on Israel's northern Mediterranean coast, and Lebanon are areas known for agricultural fertility; God is powerful enough to dry them up. 5: God's appearance shakes mountains (Judg 5.5; Ps 18.7; Isa 64.1). 6–8: As expressed in the first of several rhetorical questions in the book, no one who opposes this God can stand, while no one who seeks divine refuge will suffer. In biblical Hebrew as in English, anger is associated with heat (e.g., Ex 32.22; Judg 6.39; Jer 7.20; 17.4).

1.9–15: God's power turned against Nineveh. The shift in addressee to you marks a move from the general description of divine power to its specific application. The gender and identity of you, however, change in the course of the unit: the feminine you in 1.9–13 and 15 likely refers to Judah, and the masculine you in 1.14 likely is the king of Assyria. Many of the references in these verses, such as to the one who plots evil (v. 11), are unclear.

¹⁴The LORD has commanded concerning you:
 “Your name shall be perpetuated no longer;
 from the house of your gods I will cut off the carved image and the cast image. I will make your grave, for you are worthless.”

¹⁵^aLook! On the mountains the feet of one who brings good tidings, who proclaims peace!
 Celebrate your festivals, O Judah, fulfill your vows, for never again shall the wicked invade you;
 they are utterly cut off.

2 A shatterer^b has come up against you.
 Guard the ramparts;
 watch the road;
 gird your loins;
 collect all your strength.

² (For the LORD is restoring the majesty of Jacob, as well as the majesty of Israel, though ravagers have ravaged them and ruined their branches.)

³The shields of his warriors are red;
 his soldiers are clothed in crimson.

⁴The chariots race madly through the streets, they rush to and fro through the squares;
 their appearance is like torches, they dart like lightning.

12: While acknowledging a role in Judah's oppression, God promises that its salvation has begun. 13: His yoke, the political oppression of the king of Assyria, is about to break. 14: Threats against the king of Assyria include loss of reputation, religious practice, and life itself. The king is worthless or, in Hebrew, a “trifling.” 15: A messenger brings the good news of the imminent death of the enemy to Judah, who can now celebrate its own religious traditions. One who brings good tidings, see 2 Sam 18.27,31; Isa 40.9; 41.27; 52.7. Fulfill your vows, presumably vows made to God during the oppression in hope of deliverance.

2.1–13: The siege of Nineveh. A vivid description of the divine warrior's battle against the city of Nineveh. 1: You is a feminine form, likely Nineveh. Here, as later in the book, the call for Nineveh to protect itself is sarcastic. Shatterer, “scatterer” in Hebrew (see translation note a), may be God, who leads warriors against Nineveh (vv. 3–6). A form of this word is used for the divine warrior's activity in Hab 3.14 and Isa 24.1. 2: Parenthetical reminder that Nineveh's downfall avenges the devastation of the Northern Kingdom of Israel (722 BCE), whose ancestor is Jacob. 3–6: Descriptive language and active verbs create arresting images of God's invading army. 5: He likely is the king of Assyria, who tries in vain to defend the city by bolstering its walls. 6–8a: The actual fall of the city is depicted with water imagery, conventional imagery found in other ancient Near Eastern documents and in Jer 51. 6: The river gates, Nineveh was situated on the east bank of the Tigris River, whose tributary, the Khosr, flowed through the city, so it is possible that actual flooding occurred during the attack; see v. 8. 7: The description of the mourning of the slave women adds poignancy to the scene; in Hebrew the sound of the words mimics mourning. 8b–10: The NRSV has added quotation marks to highlight the writer's attempt to reproduce the shouts of the warriors. Incomplete sentences give a breathless feeling to the chaotic scene. 10a: The first three words begin with the same letter in English, as the translators attempt to mirror the alliteration found in the Hebrew version of the phrase. 11–13: The author begins a taunt of the Assyrian king by comparing him to a lion, an animal frequently associated with the Assyrian empire in its own art. Although the king (lion) has provided much wealth (prey) for his citizens (his whelps), God will cut off both. The you of v.13 is feminine, turning the taunt to Nineveh herself. The verse ties together previous parts of Nahum: the description of chariots in 2.4, the analogy of the den of the lion in 2.11–12, and the reference to a messenger in 1.15: while a messenger brought good news to Judah, now the messengers of the Assyrians are cut off.

3.1–19: Further taunts against feminine Nineveh and the Assyrian king. Nahum’s personification of Nineveh as a woman, begun in the previous chapter, turns derogatory, as the city is envisioned as a prostitute who is taunted as well as assaulted. 1–3: The absence of verbs creates a montage of horrific images of the city’s destruction. 1: Ah is an exclamation calling attention to woman Nineveh. City of bloodshed, similar language is used for Israel, Judah, and Jerusalem in Ezek 7.23; 9.9; and for Babylon in Hab 2.12. 4–7: The punishment of the prostitute Nineveh begins. 4: While the Hebrew term for prostitute can refer to one who receives money for sex acts, it also is used in the Bible to refer to promiscuity and unfaithfulness (Deut 22.21; 31.16; Ezek 23.3; Hos 4.13–14). Here the term may function as a slur against the city rather than a description of its activities. Nineveh’s control over and appeal to other nations is attributed to sorcery and seduction. 5: God will personally take action against Nineveh. The uncovering of nakedness is a matter of shame (Gen 9.22–23; Lev 18–20; Isa 47.3; Lam 1.8; Hab 2.15) and is often a prelude to sexual violation (Jer 13.22). 6: Nineveh’s nakedness will be made into a spectacle, as is the punished woman in Hos 2.10. 7: The absence of comforters for Nineveh is ironic, given that “Nahum” derives from the word for “comfort.” The image of Nineveh as a devastated woman finds a parallel in the depiction of Jerusalem in the book of Lamentations.

8–13: Nineveh is threatened with the same fate that befell Thebes, the most important city in southern Egypt, which was conquered by the Assyrians in 663 BCE. 8: The threat starts in the form of a rhetorical question, one of many in the book. 9–10: Thebes' sea defenses and her allies Ethiopia, Put, and the Libyans could not protect her. Just as she went into exile and her infants were dashed in pieces (see Isa 13.16; Ps 137.9), so Nineveh will suffer. 11: Military defeat is often described as stumbling as though drunken (Isa 51.22; Jer 25.16,27; 51.3). 13: Nineveh's troops are taunted as being as weak as women, language also used in Assyrian documents to describe defeated soldiers. Gates may be an allusion to female genitals (as also perhaps in Isa 3.26): Nineveh is open to violation. 14–17: The call for Nineveh to fortify itself for battle is sarcastic, as in 2.1: the city's fate is sealed. Locust imagery is used in several ways in these verses: Nineveh will be devoured as by the locust (v. 15a), even should its warriors multiply like locusts (v. 15b), and those charged with protecting the city are as undependable as swarms of locusts (v. 17). 16–17: Merchants may allude to Assyria's economic power in the ancient world. Merchants, guards, and scribes, each a part of a thriving society, all abandon Nineveh. 18–19: Shepherd imagery dominates the final taunt of the king of Assyria. Ironically, the one who was once called the "lion" (2.11–12) is here described as having incompetent shepherds, a common designation for leaders or nobles (Jer 3.15; 10.21; 25.35; Ezek 34.2–12). 19: All nations are described as celebrating the Assyrian king's defeat because of Nineveh's endless cruelty. A final rhetorical question ends this book, a feature shared with the book of Jonah, also concerned with Nineveh.

HABAKKUK

LOCATION IN CANON, AUTHORSHIP, AND LITERARY HISTORY

Habakkuk is the eighth of the twelve Minor Prophets (see Introduction to the Prophetic Books). Despite the book's first-person style, we know nothing about Habakkuk as a person. The superscription, the opening introductory title of a prophetic collection, only provides a label for the book. Unlike the complex superscriptions of Isaiah, Jeremiah, Amos, and Micah, the opening of Habakkuk does not give the prophet's family, location, or time period.

The prophet does appear as a character in later Jewish and Christian literature. In the Addition to Daniel known as Bel and the Dragon in the Apocrypha, Habakkuk is transported by an angel to feed Daniel in the lions' den (Bel 33–39). Other traditions locate him in the times of Manasseh or Jeremiah and Ezekiel, in the seventh and early sixth centuries BCE. A commentary on Habakkuk from Qumran, called a "pesher" for its style of applying the biblical text directly to events of the writer's own day, provides not only an early copy of the text itself but also a glimpse of how Habakkuk's words resonated with a later generation.

CONTENT AND LITERARY STYLE

Habakkuk complains about the violence of the Babylonians, called the Chaldeans in 1.6. Their empire came to power in the seventh century BCE after defeating the Assyrians. As described in 1 Kings 23–25, Babylonia soon dominated Judah's political life and in 586 BCE destroyed its independent existence as a state: Babylonian armies burned the Temple in Jerusalem and exiled many of the population.

Other prophetic collections such as Isa 14.3–23 and Jer 50–51 pronounce God's judgment on Babylon for its cruelty. While Habakkuk's anti-Babylonian rhetoric is similar, even sharing some vocabulary with Jeremiah, its literary style is different. The core of the book takes the form of alternating speeches of the prophet and God (1.2–17 and 2.1–20). In each case, the prophet voices the community's complaint in the first person, granting it immediacy and poignancy. God's ensuing speech does not directly answer the prophet but rather raises new issues for consideration. The book ends with the speech of the prophet, cast as a prayer for God to act as a warrior on behalf of the people. The divine warrior who was depicted as marching to right wrongs in Nah 1 is entreated here to return and save again.

DATE OF COMPOSITION

Because of its anti-Babylonian theme, the book is often dated to the late seventh century BCE, the height of Babylonian power. A key issue of interpretation, however, is whether the prophet's initial complaint in 1.2–4 concerns the Babylonians themselves or rather another enemy that will itself be conquered by the even more brutal Babylonians. Is God's rousing of the Babylonians in 1.5–11 offered as an answer to the prophet's complaint about someone else, or is it instead God's agreement about the nature of the Babylonians? The accusations in 1.4 of injustice and the perversion of the law could describe wrongdoing in a variety of contexts, including within Judah itself. These ambiguities, as well as the generic language of the book, rule out certainty in dating, yet the same features contribute to the book's ability to resonate in multiple times and places.

INTERPRETATION

A classic question in monotheistic traditions is why, if God is just and caring, do believers suffer? While the book of Job pointedly raises this question on behalf of an individual, the book of Habakkuk complains about the suffering of the community as a whole at the hand of tyrants. Nowhere does the book attempt to solve the problem of God's apparent injustice. Instead, it models the legitimacy of human protest as well as the power of trusting in God's power even when it is not apparent.

1 The oracle that the prophet Habakkuk saw.

² O LORD, how long shall I cry for help, and you will not listen?

Or cry to you “Violence!”
and you will not save?

³ Why do you make me see wrongdoing and look at trouble?

Destruction and violence are before me;
strife and contention arise.

⁴ So the law becomes slack and justice never prevails.
The wicked surround the righteous—therefore judgment comes forth perverted.

⁵ Look at the nations, and see!
Be astonished! Be astounded!
For a work is being done in your days that you would not believe if you were told.

⁶ For I am rousing the Chaldeans, that fierce and impetuous nation, who march through the breadth of the earth to seize dwellings not their own.

⁷ Dread and fearsome are they;
their justice and dignity proceed from themselves.

⁸ Their horses are swifter than leopards,
more menacing than wolves at dusk;
their horses charge.

Their horsemen come from far away;
they fly like an eagle swift to devour.

⁹ They all come for violence, with faces pressing^a forward;
they gather captives like sand.

¹⁰ At kings they scoff, and of rulers they make sport.
They laugh at every fortress,
and heap up earth to take it.

¹¹ Then they sweep by like the wind;
they transgress and become guilty;
their own might is their god!

¹² Are you not from of old,
O LORD my God, my Holy One?
You^b shall not die.

O LORD, you have marked them for
judgment;
and you, O Rock, have established them for punishment.

^a Meaning of Heb uncertain

^b Ancient Heb tradition: MT We

1.1: Superscription. Like Nahum, which precedes it in the canon, the book of Habakkuk is called an oracle; Nahum is also called a vision, deriving from the same Hebrew verbal root as saw (cf. also Isa 1.1; Am 1.1). The book calls Habakkuk a prophet here and in 3.1. The superscription provides no family, geographical, or chronological information.

1.2–17: First interaction between the prophet and God. 2–4: The prophet speaks. While it is common for prophetic books to begin with the prophet speaking for God, Habakkuk pointedly begins with the prophet speaking to God, complaining about injustice. As in psalms of lament, how long introduces complaint and petition (Ps 6.3; 13.1; 35.17; 74.10; 79.5). Although he speaks in the first person, the prophet seems to speak for the community as a whole. The complaint that the wicked surround the righteous will be repeated in 1.13. 3: Jer 20.8. 4: The law becomes slack, this could refer to the reign of Jehoiakim (608–598 BCE), when the reforms of his father Josiah languished (2 Kings 23.35–37; cf. Jer 2.8). The law (Heb “torah”) formed the basis of Josiah’s reforms. 5–11: God speaks. Rather than directly answering the prophet’s questions, God addresses the community as a whole (you is plural), explaining that God is rousing the Chaldeans (the Neo-Babylonian empire, ca. 612–539 BCE); although they are fierce, they are being sent by God. The NRSV refers throughout this unit to they, but the Hebrew alternates between singular and plural references to the enemy. In response to the prophet’s complaint of violence in 1.2, God explains that the Babylonians come for violence, and the complaint about the lack of justice in 1.4 is countered with the acknowledgment that the Babylonians make their own justice. God’s words intensify rather than satisfy the prophet’s claims. 12–17: The prophet speaks. Having received no answer to his complaints, the prophet again appeals to God to save. 12–13: As in numerous psalms, the prophet appeals to God’s goodness and constancy as the basis for his request: why, if God is good, does God not act? 12: From of old, Ps 74.12. As the note to the translation footnote explains, the Masoretic Text likely changed the original reading of You to We in order to avoid the possibility of suggesting that God could die. The metaphor of God as Rock appears frequently in the Bible (e.g., Deut 32.4; 2 Sam 23.3; Pss 18.2; 62.2,6–7; Isa 30.29). The claim that the ¹³Your eyes are too pure to behold evil, and you cannot look on wrongdoing;

why do you look on the treacherous, and are silent when the wicked swallow those more righteous than they?

¹⁴You have made people like the fish of the like crawling things that have no ruler.

¹⁵The enemy^a brings all of them up with a hook;
he drags them out with his net,
he gathers them in his seine;
so he rejoices and exults.

¹⁶Therefore he sacrifices to his net and makes offerings to his seine;
for by them his portion is lavish,
and his food is rich.

¹⁷Is he then to keep on emptying his net,
and destroying nations without mercy?

2 I will stand at my watchpost, and station myself on the rampart;

my complaint.

²Then the LORD answered me and said:
Write the vision;
make it plain on tablets,
so that a runner may read it.

³For there is still a vision for the appointed
time;

it speaks of the end, and does not lie.
If it seems to tarry, wait for it;
it will surely come, it will not delay.

⁴Look at the proud!
Their spirit is not right in them,
but the righteous live by their faith.^c

⁵Moreover, wealth^d is treacherous;
the arrogant do not endure.
They open their throats wide as Sheol;
like Death they never have enough.
They gather all nations for themselves, and collect all peoples as their own.

and, with mocking riddles, say about them, “Alas for you who heap up what is not your

How long will you load yourselves with goods taken in pledge?

⁷Will not your own creditors suddenly rise,

wicked oppress the righteous repeats the prophet's initial complaint in 1.4. 14–17: People, Heb “‘adam,” the word used in Gen 1 to describe all humanity. There humanity was given dominion over the fish of the sea and crawling things (Gen 1.26,28); now the people have become fish in the net of the enemy. 16: The enemy even treats his power, his net, as his god.

2.1–20: Second interaction between the prophet and God. 1: The image of the prophet is that of a sentinel posted on the city walls, awaiting God's reply (cf. Isa 21.6–12; 62.7; Ezek 3.17; 33.7; Hos 9.8). 2: God's reply will be a vision, from the same Hebrew word as “saw” in the book's superscription (1.1). It will be made plain to all, written largely enough that a running messenger can read it. 3–5: All three verses constitute God's reply: the prophet is told to trust that an answer will come, despite its apparent delay. 4: Although Rom 1.17; Gal 3.11; and Heb 10.38–39 draw heavily on this verse to prioritize faith over works, the Heb word is better understood as “faithfulness.” Like the previous verse and 3.16, it stresses that the one who patiently awaits God's response will be rewarded. 5: The proud of v. 4 are here linked with wealth and the arrogant. Sheol, the abode of the dead. In ancient Israelite and Canaanite literature death and the underworld are often depicted as an open mouth with an insatiable appetite; see Isa 5.14; Prov 30.15–16. 6–20: God's extended response, in five taunts. Continuing the condemnation of pride and wealth are five taunts, each marked by alas (6b–8,9–11,12–14,15–17,18–19). The condemnation of rapaciousness, arrogance, and violence matches the description of Babylon in 1.6–11. 6–8: The first taunt condemns the voracious appetite of the Babylonians. Common to prophetic literature is the affirmation that the evil will suffer the same pains they inflicted on others (Ob 15). 6b: Alas, a term often used in funeral laments (1 Kings 13.30; Jer 22.18). 9–11: Like Ob 3–4, the second taunt chastises the arrogance of the proud in setting their nest high; their very houses will rise up against them. 12–14: The third taunt contrasts the aspirations of the peoples and the power of God. 14: Isa 11.9. 15–17: The fourth taunt insists that Babylon’s fortunes will be reversed, using the imagery of drinking: she (Babylon) who made others drink of her wrath will herself drink God’s cup of punishment (Jer 25.15–27; 51.7). Throughout the prophetic books, the punished suffer shame and nakedness (Jer 13.26; Ezek 7.18; Nah 3.5; Ob 10). 17: Isa 14.8; 37.24 suggest that both Assyrian and Babylonian kings cut down the famous cedars of Lebanon; this verse suggests that the animals themselves will take revenge. Bloodshed and violence were mentioned earlier in 2.8. 18–20: The fifth taunt differs from the others: alas does not begin the unit, and the theme of idolatry is introduced for the first time since 1.16. Isa 40.18–20; 44.9–20 also lampoon the making of an idol. 20: Ps 11.4; Zeph 1.7; Zech 2.13.

3.1–19: The prayer of the prophet, in the form of a divine warrior hymn. The prophet, unsatisfied with God’s previous responses, turns from complaint to petition. He invokes the biblical memory that God once marched as a divine warrior to vindicate the people (Nah 1; Ex 15; Deut 33; Isa 13) as the basis for his request that God march again to establish justice. 1: The book’s second superscription (see also 1.1) not only marks this chapter as a prayer but also provides instruction for its musical performance. The singular form of Shigionoth appears in the superscription to Ps 7; its meaning is unknown. Other musical notations end vv. 3,9,13, and the book as a whole. They may indicate that, like the Psalms, Hab 3 originally was a musical composition, or perhaps that the chapter was written in the style of a musical composition. 2: The prophet makes his opening petition for God to revive God's saving work in our own time and show mercy. 3–15: A vision of the divine warrior. Although in Hebrew the verb tenses are ambiguous, the NRSV has rendered them in the past tense to underscore that the vision is a memory of how God acted in the past, particularly in delivering the Israelites from Egyptian bondage. 3: As in Deut 33.2 and Judg 5.4, the divine warrior began his march from Teman (synonymous with Edom, as in Ob 9) and Paran, areas in Transjordan associated with God's dramatic deliverance of the Israelites from Egypt. 3: Selah, here as in vv. 9 and 13, is a notation common to Psalms; its meaning is unclear, although it may indicate a musical pause. 4–11: The description of God's dominance over mountains, rivers, etc., has strong mythical connotations and may allude to the cosmologies of other ancient Near Eastern cultures, in which River and Sea were deities defeated by a more powerful god (see translation notes a and b). Parallels are found in Pss 74.12–15; 89.9–10. The shaking of mountains is a common divine warrior motif (Judg 5.5; Ps 18.7; Isa 64.1). Throughout these verses, the warrior's scope is cosmic, as God brandishes chariots, bow, arrows, and spear while subduing all the earth. 5: Pestilence and plague are pictured as divine attendants; cf. Ps 79.49. Plague (Heb "Resheph") is a well-attested deity in nonbiblical sources. 7: Although the location of Cushan is unknown, it is here linked with Midian, another area connected with the Transjordanian wanderings of the Israelites. 10–11: These and other verses are difficult to translate. Mountains . . . writhed, a common image in depictions of theophanies (divine appearances); cf. Pss 29.5–8; 114.3–7. 12: As in Nah 1, God's anger is understood to be a positive force for action against injustice. 15: Further echoes of God's deliverance of the Israelites at the Red Sea (see Ex 15). 16–19a: The prophet's response to the vision. 16: After hearing a recital of the divine warrior's power, the prophet is awestruck, and is now able to trust that God will indeed act again. He has received the vision promised by God in 2.3 and can wait quietly (2.20; see also 2.4n.) for the day of calamity for his enemies. 17–19: Although God's saving acts are not yet evident and the people and its land continue to suffer, the vision has allowed the prophet to trust in God's saving power. The book closes with a psalmlike affirmation that God is the prophet's strength (Ps 118.14) and makes his feet like the feet of a deer (Ps 18.33 = 2 Sam 22.34). 19: The concluding instruction to the music leader to accompany the text with stringed instruments (see Pss 4; 6; 45; 54; 55; etc.) reinforces the psalmlike style of the chapter.

ZEPHANIAH

NAME, CANONICAL LOCATION, AND DATE OF COMPOSITION

Zephaniah is the ninth of the twelve Minor Prophets (see Introduction to Prophetic Literature). The book's superscription, its introductory title, provides more detailed information than do those of Nahum and Habakkuk, the two books that precede it in the canon.

After listing a four-generation genealogy, the superscription links the prophet (whose name means "the LORD has hidden" or "the LORD has stored up") with the reign of the Judean king Josiah. Second Kings 22–23 lauds Josiah as one of Judah's great religious reformers; before his death in 609 BCE, he removed foreign images from the Temple in Jerusalem, centralized worship practices, and established for Judah a degree of political independence from the Assyrian empire. Second Kings 16–23 also traces the close tie between worship practices and politics in this period. Submission to the Assyrians meant the inclusion of their religious statuary in the Temple (2 Kings 16.18), while resistance to Assyrian power both by Josiah and by his predecessor Hezekiah (see 1.1n.) was bolstered by the removal of such images. Resonating strongly with the narratives in 2 Kings, Zephaniah blames Judeans for mixing worship of the LORD with the worship of other deities (1.4–5) and accuses the royal court of dressing in foreign attire (1.8–9).

While the literary setting of the book in the seventh century BCE is obvious, the book may actually have been composed or at least substantially edited at a later date. The concluding promise of salvation for daughter Jerusalem (3.14–20), for example, reflects an exilic or postexilic perspective in its concern with the return of exiles to the city.

CONTENTS

Zephaniah is a typical prophetic book. It opens with a dramatic announcement of the Day of the LORD, prophetic language for a time in which God will act decisively to (re-)establish justice (Joel 1.15; 3.14; Am 5.18; Ob 15; Zech 12.4). It pairs oracles against foreign nations (cf. Isa 13–23; Jer 46–51; Ezek 25–32; Am 1.3–2.3) with oracles against Judah (cf. Isa 3; 5; Jer 1; 3; Am 2; Mic 2), accusing Judah of idolatry and injustice (cf. Isa 5.7; Jer 2.28; 11.13) and the nations of arrogance (cf. Isa 16.6; Jer 48.29; Zech 10.11). Zephaniah also ends with an announcement of salvation to daughter Jerusalem, similar to those found in other prophetic books (e.g., Mic 4; Zech 2; 9).

INTERPRETATION

The book's powerful language for divine judgment captivated the imagination of later interpreters. The Dies Irae ("day of wrath"), a thirteenth-century Christian hymn long included in the Mass for the Dead, derives from the Latin translation of the harrowing Day of the LORD imagery in ch 1. The Apocalypse of Zephaniah, a Jewish document usually dated between 100 BCE and 70 CE, describes the prophet's tour of hell as well as his brief visit to heaven. "Shoah," the Hebrew word for ruin in 1.15, is now a designation for the devastation of European Jewry known as the Holocaust.

1.1: Superscription. Cushi may be either a name or an ethnic designation, Ethiopian (see 2.12 and 3.10). Gedaliah and Amariah are otherwise unknown, although the names also appear in postexilic books. If Hezekiah is the eighth-century reformer King Hezekiah (727/715–698/687 BCE; 2 Kings 18), then Zephaniah would be a member of the royal family. The unusually long genealogy suggests this may have been the case. Josiah (640–609 BCE) was also a reformer (2 Kings 22–23), although his father Amon had sacrificed to carved images (2 Chr 33.22).

1.2–18: The Coming Day of the LORD. 2–3: Punishment is announced first against everything from the face of the earth. The language echoes that used in Gen 1 to describe creation and in Gen 6.7; 7.4; and 8.8 to describe God's punishment through the Flood. 4–5: God's focus turns to Judah, whose inhabitants are charged with combining worship of the LORD with worship of other deities such as the Canaanite god Baal, the astral deities known as the host of the heavens, and the Ammonite god Milcom. These charges, as well as the term for idolatrous priests, fit well with the accounts of Manasseh's idolatry in 2 Kings 21 and Josiah's reforms in 2 Kings 23; see also Jer 19.13; 32.29. 7–18: The Day of the LORD (Joel 1.15; 3.14; Am 5.18; Ob 15; Zech 12.4). 7–13: First outlined are the implications of the Day for Judah. 7: Be silent, cf. Hab 2.20. Judah is described as an animal sacrificed by God to serve his guests. 8–13: A listing of Judah's crimes. 8–9: The linkage between adoption of foreign attire with leaping over the threshold, likely a non-Judean religious custom (cf. 1 Sam 5.5), connects political assimilation with idolatry. 10–11: The Fish Gate (Neh 3.3; 12.39), the Second Quarter (2 Kings 22.14), and the Mortar (unidentified) likely all refer to wealthy districts in Jerusalem, where traders work. 12–13: Every one of the wealthy in these districts will be searched out and punished. Mal 2.17), their labor will not be successful (see Deut 28.30–31 and cf. Isa 65.21). 14–18: The chapter ends as it began, with attention on all the inhabitants of the earth. As elsewhere in the prophets, the Day is one of divine wrath (Isa 13.9) from which silver and gold provide no protection (Ezek 7.19). 15: Am 5.18–20.

2.1–3: Call to repentance. Although the Day of the LORD seems inevitable, Judah's repentance may yet stave off destruction. 1: The shameless nation likely is Judah. 3: As in Joel 2.14 and Jon 3.8–9, the prophet underscores that some could perhaps survive if they seek righteousness (Isa 51.1).

2.4–15: Judgment on the nations. The call for Judah to repent shifts to promises that Judah's enemies will be destroyed and that Judeans will possess their land. Throughout, the threats employ language common to ancient Near Eastern curses against those who break the terms of a treaty. 4: Gaza, Ashkelon, Ashdod, and Ekron are four of the five major cities of the Philistines (Josh 13.3). who ruled the area along the Mediterranean seacoast. In Hebrew, the cities are characterized as female. 8–11: Threats against Moab and the Ammonites, two of Judah’s eastern neighbors, are common in prophetic literature (Jer 48–49; Ezek 25; Am 1–2), as is the use of Sodom and Gomorrah to connote total annihilation (Gen 19; Isa 1.9; 13.19; Jer 23.14; 50.4). 9: Remnant and survivors may reflect the situation of the Babylonian exile. 12: The brief mention of the Ethiopians (Heb “Cush,” see 1.1n.) seems out of place. 13–15: Assyria, with its capital Nineveh, receives the greatest condemnation. While the translation of the animal vocabulary is difficult, the threat that a city become the lair for wild animals was common in the ancient world (Isa 13.19–22; 24.11–15), as was cursing by hissing and shaking the fist (Jer 19.8; 49.17; Lam 2.15).

2.11,12,17), highly negative terms in prophetic books. My holy mountain, Mount Zion, site of the temple. 12–13: As in 2.7,9, this verse envisions salvation not for all of Judah but only for a remnant. The humble, those urged in 2.3 to seek righteousness, will survive. Their peaceful state will be like that of guarded sheep.

3.14–20: Salvation of daughter Jerusalem. The feminine characterization of Jerusalem expands to its depiction as a daughter, a designation of the city used throughout the prophets to underscore its vulnerability and utter dependency on God. The masculine characterization of God is essential to this unit as well: God is a virile king and warrior (cf. Ex 15.3) about to rescue daughter Zion (Zech 2.10–11; 9.9–10). 14: Zion, Israel, and Jerusalem seem to be used interchangeably. 15–17: The presence of God as strong king and warrior means that daughter Jerusalem does not need to fear or grow weak. 16: Cf. Isa 41.10,13; 43.1,5. 17–18: The Hebrew is obscure; see textual notes. 17: God the warrior will sing and rejoice, just as Jerusalem was called to do in 3.14. 18–20: I will remove disaster from you, contrasting with the beginning of the book, 1.2–3. The deep concern for the ingathering of exiles likely reflects postexilic sentiments, indicating either that these verses were later added to an Assyrian-period book or that the book itself was written in the postexilic period as a retrospective look at the time of King Josiah. The language is highly reminiscent of the promises made to Jerusalem in Zech 1–2, as well those made to daughter Zion in Mic 4.6–7, which also envisions the return of the lame and the outcast (the same Heb word is translated as “those who were cast off” in Mic 4.7).

HAGGAI

NAME, AUTHORSHIP, AND CANONICAL STATUS

The book offers no biographical information about Haggai, the prophet for whom the book is named. The name Haggai is related to the Hebrew word for festival (hag), perhaps indicating that he was born on a feast day. Some scholars have suggested that he had not been in exile. The book reports Haggai's prophetic activity during a brief period of less than four months. For Haggai as one of the twelve Minor Prophets, see the Introduction to the Prophetic Books (p. 961).

DATE AND HISTORICAL CONTEXT

The chronological formula with which the book begins (and which then reappears in 1.15b–2.1) is similar in style to those found in other books, e.g., 2 Kings 3.1; Hos 1.1; Am 1.1. The book of Haggai, however, records events after the destruction of the kingdom of Judah in 586 BCE and so has no native king to whom to refer (cf. Esth 3.7; Dan 7.1; 8.1; 9.1; 10.1; 11.1). Instead, Haggai is dated to the reign of a Persian ruler, Darius I. Although Cyrus, an earlier Persian king, had been remembered by one Israelite author as a "messiah" (Isa 45.1), Darius was the king during whose reign (522–486 BCE) the Temple in Jerusalem, which had to be rebuilt after the Neo-Babylonians destroyed it in 586 (see 2 Kings 26.8–21), was dedicated (515). This event inaugurates what biblical scholars refer to as the Second Temple period. Early in Darius's reign, several Persian colonies revolted, most notably Egypt, in response to which the empire launched both military and administrative campaigns to restore regional security. It was therefore in his interest to have a politically stable Syria-Palestine from which to move toward Egypt.

Because the book does not mention the completion of the Temple in 515 BCE, it was probably written before that event.

STRUCTURE, CONTENT, AND INTERPRETATION

Though many English translations construe the book as prose, substantial portions may be poetic, e.g., 1.4–9. The book presents a brief apologetic, historical narrative, focused on the rebuilding of the Temple, and in four dated oracles, on Haggai's role in persuading the community to complete that project. Haggai interpreted the plight of those in Yehud (the name given to the territory around Jerusalem by the Persians, formerly Judah) in light of the Temple, which was still in ruins. The book's final oracle broaches another issue, the royal prerogatives of Zerubbabel, heir to the Davidic throne. Haggai apparently addressed both the community's leaders—Joshua (high priest) and Zerubbabel (governor)—and the community directly.

GUIDE TO READING

Since this short book is arranged in chronological order, it can easily be read at one sitting, providing a contemporaneous perspective on the reconstruction of the Temple, as do chs 1–8 of the book of Zechariah that follows.

David L. Petersen

1 In the second year of King Darius, in the sixth month, on the first day of the month, the word of the LORD came by the prophet Haggai to Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to Joshua son of Jehozadak, the high priest: ² Thus says the LORD of hosts: These people say the time has not yet come to rebuild the LORD's house. ³ Then the word of the LORD came by the prophet Haggai, saying: ⁴ Is it a time for you yourselves to live in your paneled houses, while this house lies in ruins? ⁵ Now therefore thus says the LORD of hosts: Consider how you have fared. ⁶ You have sown much, and harvested little; you eat, but you never have enough; you drink, but you never have your fill; you clothe yourselves, but no one is warm; and you that earn wages earn wages to put them into a bag with holes.

⁷ Thus says the LORD of hosts: Consider how you have fared. ⁸ Go up to the hills and bring wood and build the house, so that I may take pleasure in it and be honored, says the LORD. ⁹ You have looked for much, and lo, it came to little; and when you brought it home, I blew it away. Why? says the LORD of hosts. Because my house lies in ruins, while all of you hurry off to your own houses. ¹⁰ Therefore the heavens above you have withheld the dew, and the earth has withheld its produce. ¹¹ And I have called for a drought on the land and the hills, on the grain, the new wine, the oil, on what the soil produces, on human beings and animals, and on all their labors.

¹² Then Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, and Joshua son of Jehozadak, the high priest, with all the remnant of the people, obeyed the voice of the LORD their God, and the words of the prophet Haggai, as the LORD their God had sent him; and the people feared the LORD. ¹³ Then Haggai, the messenger of the LORD, spoke to the people with the LORD's message, saying, I am with you, says the LORD. ¹⁴ And the LORD stirred up the spirit of Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and the spirit of Joshua son of Jehozadak, the high priest, and the spirit of all the remnant of the people; and they came and worked on

1.1–11: Haggai indicts the people. 1: The second year, 520 BCE. The sixth month, Elul (August–September). The first day of the month was a time for special rituals; the date is ironic, since the place where such rituals took place is in ruins. Zerubbabel (1 Chr 3.19; Ezra 2.2; 3.2,8; 5.2; Neh 12.1; Zech 4.6–10), the grandson of Jehoiachin (2 Kings 24.8–17; 1 Chr 3.16–19), and thus a descendant of David. Joshua, Zech 3.1–10; 6.11 (= Jeshua in Ezra 2–5). Addressing the two together suggests that Yehud was led by both political and religious leaders. 2: For reasons unknown, the community has resisted rebuilding the Temple. 3–5: Even though Zerubbabel and Joshua had been addressed previously, Haggai appears to speak directly to the community. 4: Haggai charges the people not only with not building the Temple but also with living in lavish, i.e., paneled, houses. (Solomon's palace was paneled with cedar, 1 Kings 7.7.) The issue of time (vv. 2,4) is important. Haggai's rhetorical question receives no direct answer, but the answer is obviously "no." 5: Consider, literally, "set to your hearts," a phrase that will recur (1.7; 2.15,18). 6: Haggai analyzes the status quo, using imagery drawn from futility curses; cf. Deut 28.38; Hos 4.10. Such misfortune stands in marked contrast with the luxurious houses in which the people live. 7–11: A call to action. 7: Consider, see 1.5n. 8: Haggai's central admonition: build the Temple. 9–11: These verses are built around a wordplay: as long as the Temple is in ruins (Heb "hāreb"), the people will suffer drought ("hōreb"). 9: The prophet returns to the language of futility curses, though now explicitly identifying the LORD as the one who has caused such futility—I blew it away.

1.12–15a: The people respond. Unlike many earlier prophets, Haggai is successful in his admonitions. 12: All the remnant of the people suggests that Zerubbabel and Joshua had moved the people to obey. Remnant is ambiguous, perhaps referring to a group smaller than the preexilic population, or perhaps specifying those who had returned from exile. 13: Haggai is labeled the messenger of the LORD, a logical though unusual label for a prophet; cf. 2 Chr 35.15–16. The word messenger offers a wordplay on message. I am with you often occurs in oracles of salvation (e.g., Isa 41.10; 43.5). 14: A new perspective on the people's obedience (v. 12), which is due to the LORD's stirring up the spirit of both the leaders and the people. 15: The sixth month, Elul (August–September). The date seems out of place, since such dates elsewhere in the book occur at the beginning of an oracle. Three weeks have elapsed since Haggai initially addressed the governor and high priest.

1.15b–2.9: The Temple will be filled with splendor. Contrary to current experience, the LORD promises that this Temple will be even more glorious than the earlier one. 1.15b–2.1: The twenty-fourth day of . . . the sixth the house of the LORD of hosts, their God,¹⁵ on the twenty-fourth day of the month, in the sixth month. In the second year of King Darius,¹ in the seventh month, on the twenty-first day of the month, the word of the LORD came by the prophet Haggai, saying:² Speak now to Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to Joshua son of Jehozadak, the high priest, and to the remnant of the people, and say,³ Who is left among you that saw this house in its former glory? How does it look to you now? Is it not in your sight as nothing? ⁴ Yet now take courage, O Zerubbabel, says the LORD; take courage, O Joshua, son of Jehozadak, the high priest; take courage, all you people of the land, says the LORD; work, for I am with you, says the LORD of hosts,⁵ according to the promise that I made you when you came out of Egypt. My spirit abides among you; do not fear. ⁶ For thus says the LORD of hosts: Once again, in a little while, I will shake the heavens and the earth and the sea and the dry land;⁷ and I will shake all the nations, so that the treasure of all nations shall come, and I will fill this house with splendor, says the LORD of hosts. ⁸ The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, says the LORD of hosts. ⁹ The latter splendor of this house shall be greater than the former, says the LORD of hosts; and in this place I will give prosperity, says the LORD of hosts.

¹⁰ On the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month, in the second year of Darius, the word of the LORD came by the prophet Haggai, saying: ¹¹ Thus says the LORD of hosts: Ask the priests for a ruling: ¹² If one carries consecrated meat in the fold of one's garment, and with the fold touches bread, or stew, or wine, or oil, or any kind of food, does it become holy? The priests answered, "No." ¹³ Then Haggai said, "If one who is unclean by contact with a dead body touches any of these, does it become unclean?" The priests answered, "Yes, it becomes unclean." ¹⁴ Haggai then said, So is it with this people, month, more than three weeks since construction began. The seventh month, Tishri (September–October). Haggai is commanded to address the community and its leaders. On this date, the community would have been celebrating the feast of booths (Lev 23.33–36,39–42). 2.3: As was the case in v. 4, Haggai poses questions, the last two of which are rhetorical. The first question indicates that at least some of those present had seen the First Temple before it was destroyed in 586 BCE (cf. Ezra 3.12–13). They would have had to have been more than seventy years old to remember the First Temple. 4: Take courage, cf. Zech 8.9,13,22–23, where the same Hebrew word occurs. In 1 Chr 28.10,20, David delivers a similar exhortation to Solomon, builder of the First Temple. People of the land probably refers to the same group known earlier as the remnant of the people, although some scholars have suggested that the former phrase refers to a rural population that did not go into exile. I am with you, see 1.13n. 5: The Hebrew is difficult, reading literally, "The matter that I covenanted with you when you came out of Egypt." Haggai is clearly alluding to the Exodus and Sinai experiences, and claiming that God's covenant is still in force. The notion of God's spirit residing among the people is unusual. However, God could not be present as before, since the Temple had not yet been rebuilt.

2.6–9: An oracle announcing theophanic splendor. 6: God will now act on behalf of the Temple. Once again, in a little while is difficult in Hebrew, literally, "yet one, and it is only a little one." References to such shaking of the cosmos often occur in eschatological literature (e.g., v. 21; Isa 13.13; Joel 3.16; Heb 12.26). Here the very fabric of the universe quakes, not just mountains. This description of the universe—heavens, earth, sea, dry land—echoes that in Gen 1. 7: Splendor refers to precious objects (see Hos 13.15; 2 Chr 32.27), which means that Haggai anticipates new ritual vessels will be provided for the Temple, the old ones having been plundered by the Neo-Babylonians (cf. 2 Kings 24.13). 8: On silver and gold, cf. Zech 6.9–15, where they are products of fund-raising. 9: Prosperity, Heb "shalom." The rebuilt Temple will engender well-being in Yehud, reversing the conditions described in 1.6,9.

2.10–14: The community is unclean. 10: December 18, 520 BCE, two months since the oracle promising splendor. The word of the LORD comes literally "to" Haggai, not "by" as was the case in 1.3 and 2.1; i.e., this is a private oracle. 11: Literally, "Ask the priests for a torah." Priests were responsible for determining whether something or someone was holy or common, clean or unclean (Lev 10.10–11; Deut 33.10). Unlike the priests indicted in Ezek 22.26, those whom Haggai consults give proper responses. 12–13: Two cases, one involving something holy, another involving something unclean, demonstrate the supremely contagious quality of the and with this nation before me, says the LORD; and so with every work of their hands; and what they offer there is unclean. ¹⁵ But now, consider what will come to pass from this day on. Before a stone was placed upon a stone in the LORD's temple, ¹⁶ how did you fare?^a When one came to a heap of twenty measures, there were but ten; when one came to the wine vat to draw fifty measures, there were but twenty. ¹⁷ I struck you and all the products of your toil with blight and mildew and hail; yet you did not return to me, says the LORD. ¹⁸ Consider from this day on, from the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month. Since the day that the foundation of the LORD's temple was laid, consider: ¹⁹ Is there any seed left in the barn? Do the vine, the fig tree, the pomegranate, and the olive tree still yield nothing? From this day on I will bless you.

²⁰ The word of the LORD came a second time to Haggai on the twenty-fourth day of the month. ²¹ Speak to Zerubbabel, governor of Judah, saying, I am about to shake the heavens and the earth, ²² and to overthrow the throne of kingdoms; I am about to destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the nations, and overthrow the chariots and their riders; and the horses and their riders shall fall, every one by the sword of a comrade. ²³ On that day, says the LORD of hosts, I will take you, O Zerubbabel my servant, son of Shealtiel, says the LORD, and make you like a signet ring; for I have chosen you, says the LORD of hosts.

^a Gk: Heb since they were latter. Corpse uncleanness is especially difficult to remove (Num 19). 14: Haggai focuses on what they offer there as unclean. Sacrifices presented at the altar and the Temple, which was under construction, are unclean, presumably because the Temple itself has not yet been officially rededicated. The unclean Temple is analogous to a corpse in its ability to defile.

2.15–19: The Temple is rededicated. Since 2:20 refers to a second word of the LORD on the twenty-fourth day, 2.15–19 are part of the first word, which begins at 2.10. 15–17: The repetition of consider in this oracle mirrors the twofold use in 1.5,7. Haggai appeals to past agricultural disaster, comparable to that depicted in 1.6,10–11. 18: This day almost certainly refers to the day on which the Temple's foundation stone was relaid (cf. Zech 4.9; Ezra 3.10–11). Even though the Temple will not be completed and rededicated until 515 BCE, the Temple has now been purified. 19: Haggai's questions (cf. the use of questions in 1.4; 2.3,16) affirms that seeds will be planted and that vines and trees will yield fruit. Prior agricultural disaster will give way to fertility. The final words are literally "I will bless," the implication being that the "shalom" foreseen in 2.9 will include both the people and the land.

2.20–23: Zerubbabel, my servant and signet ring. On that same twenty-fourth day, a second oracle focuses on Zerubbabel. 21: The diction of "shaking" the nations resumes that in 2.6. 22: God will destroy unnamed nations. The language is allusive, e.g., chariots and their riders echoes Jer 51.21, overthrow Gen 19.25, sword of a comrade Judg 7.22. 23: On that day, a phrase routinely used to depict the eschatological "day of the LORD." Son of Shealtiel means that Zerubbabel stands in the Davidic line, the grandson of Jehoiachin, Judah's last reigning king. The diction of choosing (God "chose" David, Ps 78.70), servant (the Davidic king can be so labeled, 2 Sam 7.5), and signet ring (Jer 22.24) all suggest that Haggai thinks Zerubbabel will achieve royal status. Zerubbabel's fate, however, is unknown.

ZECHARIAH

NAME, AUTHORSHIP, AND CANONICAL STATUS

The name of the book derives from the prophet Zechariah, a contemporary of the prophet Haggai. Both prophesied in the early days of the restoration, when both returning exiles and those who had never left joined together to rebuild Judahite society. Although the book provides no biographical information, Zechariah is mentioned, along with Haggai, in Ezra 5:1 and 6:14. The book of Zechariah, however, is made up of diverse literature, deriving from different historical periods, and only the material in chs 1–8 pertains to the historical Zechariah. For Zechariah as one of the twelve Minor Prophets, see the Introduction to the Prophetic Books, p. 961.

DATE AND HISTORICAL CONTEXT

Chapters 1–8, often known as First Zechariah, include three chronological formulae (1:1,7; 7:1), which report that Zechariah was active between October and November in 520 BCE and December 7, 518 BCE. As with Haggai, Zechariah's work is dated early in the reign of the Persian emperor Darius I (522–486 BCE) and before the rededication of the Temple in 515. Though Haggai interacted with individuals also mentioned by Zechariah and both were active during 520 BCE, neither prophet refers to the other, although “the prophets” to whom Zechariah refers in 8:9 may include Haggai. Ezra 5:1 speaks of them as active together. Chapters 9–14, sometimes referred to as Deutero-Zechariah, stem from a later time, which is difficult to determine for at least two reasons. First, there are no explicit chronological formulas nor direct references to named individuals or recognizable historical events. Second, chs 9–14 are themselves heterogeneous. Zechariah 9:1 and 12:1 introduce two collections with comparable formulas: “The word of the LORD.” The collections differ so much that it is unlikely they derive from the same time. Reference to Greece (9:13) may suggest that this section dates to the Hellenistic period, when Greece ruled Syria-Palestine. However, archaeology has shown that Greek imports were present in the Levant well before then.

STRUCTURE, CONTENTS, AND INTERPRETATION

In the month just before Haggai reported that the Temple foundation stone had been laid (Hag 2:10), Zechariah first speaks (Zech 1–8). Unlike Haggai, he is not overtly concerned with the rebuilding of the Temple, though he does refer to the Temple foundation stone ceremony (8:9). His message is broader, including both moral discourse and visionary rhetoric. As a result, Zech 1–8 is more literarily diverse than Haggai, including both oracles and vision reports. Haggai offers none of the latter. The oracles are themselves different. Some recapitulate rhetoric known from earlier prophets to whom he refers in general terms (1:5–6; 7:12); some encourage the people to return to the land (2:6–13); others offer ethical admonition (e.g., 7:8–10); still others announce a glorious future for Zion (8:1–7). Haggai's oracles sound similar to the one in 8:12.

The eight vision reports in chs 1–6 are truly distinctive. Other prophetic books include vision reports (e.g., Amos, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel) but none includes such a high proportion of them. In earlier visions, prophets apparently understood what they perceived. This changes with Zechariah. As prophet, he receives the visions, but he understands them only when they are interpreted by “the angel of the LORD” (e.g., Zech 1:9–10, literally “the LORD's messenger”). This situation will recur in later apocalyptic visions, e.g., Dan 7. Further, as was the case with Amos, the vision reports in Zech 1–6 constitute a carefully structured series. The first and last visions offer scenes populated by multicolored horses, whereas the central visions in chs 4 and 5 highlight the figures important to Yehud's polity, the high priest Joshua and the governor Zerubbabel. Zechariah's visions move beyond ordinary reality. They are filled with movement and color. Moreover, they span “the whole earth” (1:11). These visions explain the ways in which God is working providentially on behalf of the newly restored community.

The latter part of the book (Zech 9–14) has a less carefully worked-out structure. Two collections of prophetic sayings (chs 9–11 and 12–14) are introduced by the heading “An Oracle. The word of the LORD,” as is the collection represented by Malachi, which follows. Chapters 9–11 are largely concerned with aspects of the victories of the LORD as Divine Warrior. The collection in chs 12–14 has a related focus on the imminent “day of the LORD” and is characterized by the repeated phrase “on that day.”

GUIDE TO READING

The book of Zechariah is best read in conjunction with the books that precede and follow it: chs 1–8 in conjunction with Haggai, and chs 9–14 with Malachi. In terms of the development of apocalyptic literature in the Bible, Zechariah stands between Ezekiel (e.g., chs 38–39) and Daniel (chs 7–12).

1 In the eighth month, in the second year of Darius, the word of the LORD came to the prophet Zechariah son of Berechiah son of Iddo, saying: ²The LORD was very angry with your ancestors. ³Therefore say to them, Thus says the LORD of hosts: Return to me, says the LORD of hosts, and I will return to you, says the LORD of hosts. ⁴Do not be like your ancestors, to whom the former prophets proclaimed, “Thus says the LORD of hosts, Return from your evil ways and from your evil deeds.” But they did not hear or heed me, says the LORD. ⁵Your ancestors, where are they? And the prophets, do they live forever? ⁶But my words and my statutes, which I commanded my servants the prophets, did they not overtake your ancestors? So they repented and said, “The LORD of hosts has dealt with us according to our ways and deeds, just as he planned to do.”

⁷On the twenty-fourth day of the eleventh month, the month of Shebat, in the second year of Darius, the word of the LORD came to the prophet Zechariah son of Berechiah son of Iddo; and Zechariah^a said, ⁸In the night I saw a man riding on a red horse! He was standing among the myrtle trees in the glen; and behind him were red, sorrel, and white horses. ⁹Then I said, “What are these, my lord?” The angel who talked with me said to me, “I will show you what they are.” ¹⁰So the man who was standing among the myrtle trees answered, “They are those whom the LORD has sent to patrol the earth.” ¹¹Then they spoke to the angel of the LORD who was standing among the myrtle trees, “We have patrolled the earth, and lo, the whole earth remains at peace.” ¹²Then the angel of the LORD said, “O LORD of hosts, how long will you withhold mercy from Jerusalem and the cities of Judah, with which you have been angry these seventy years?” ¹³Then the LORD replied with gracious and comforting words to the angel who talked with me. ¹⁴So the angel who talked with me said to me, Proclaim this message: Thus says the LORD of hosts; I am very jealous for Jerusalem and for Zion. ¹⁵And I am extremely angry with the nations that are at ease; for while I was only a little angry, they made the disaster worse. ¹⁶Therefore, thus says the LORD, I have returned to Jerusalem with compassion; my house shall be built in it, says the LORD of hosts, and the

1.1–8.23: Oracles and visions attributed to Zechariah ben Berechiah. This first major division of the book has three parts, each introduced by a date formula (1.1; 1.7; 7.1).

1.1–6: Prologue. 1: The eighth month, in the second year, Marheshvan (October–November), 520 BCE. Darius I, king of Persia, 522–486 BCE. A Zechariah son of Iddo, mentioned in Neh 12:16, belongs to a priestly lineage. Zechariah means “God remembered,” which symbolizes God’s remembering of the people, an important theme of the book. 2–6: An unusual oracle, which reflects on past prophetic admonitions and the ancestors’ responses. Return/repent (Heb “shub,” translated both ways) is the key word, appearing four times. For earlier prophetic calls to return, see, e.g., Joel 2.12; Jer 18.11; Ezek 33.11. 3: On mutual return, cf. Joel 2.12–14; Mal 3.7. 6: Though the ancestors did not initially return, they finally repented, which sets the stage for a glorious future.

1.7–17: The first vision: divine horsemen patrol the earth. 7: The eleventh month . . . Shebat, January–February; the year is 519 BCE. 8: Glen, or “cosmic deep”; cf. Mic 7.19. 9–12: A quiet scene in which horses graze, symbolizing peace over all the earth, elicits a protest by the angel. 10: Patrol the earth, cf. Job 1.7; 2.2. 12: How long regularly occurs in laments, e.g., Pss 6.4; 79.5. Seventy years also appears in Zech 7.4. The phrase is used in both biblical (e.g., Jer 25.11; Isa 23.15) and other ancient texts to refer to an unfortunate period of time. 13–17: The LORD expresses anger at the nations and promises that both Temple and cities will be rebuilt. 16: The measuring line, indicating new construction; (see 2.1–5; Jer 31.38–39; cf. Mic 2.4–5; Am 7.17).

measuring line shall be stretched out over Jerusalem.¹⁷ Proclaim further: Thus says the LORD of hosts: My cities shall again overflow with prosperity; the LORD will again comfort Zion and again choose Jerusalem.

¹⁸ ^a And I looked up and saw four horns. ¹⁹ I asked the angel who talked with me, “What are these?” And he answered me, “These are the horns that have scattered Judah, Israel, and Jerusalem.” ²⁰ Then the LORD showed me four blacksmiths. ²¹ And I asked, “What are they coming to do?” He answered, “These are the horns that scattered Judah, so that no head could be raised; but these have come to terrify them, to strike down the horns of the nations that lifted up their horns against the land of Judah to scatter its people.”^b

² ^c I looked up and saw a man with a measuring line in his hand. ² Then I asked, “Where are you going?” He answered me, “To measure Jerusalem, to see what is its width and what is its length.” ³ Then the angel who talked with me came forward, and another angel came forward to meet him, ⁴ and said to him, “Run, say to that young man: Jerusalem shall be inhabited like villages without walls, because of the multitude of people and animals in it. ⁵ For I will be a wall of fire all around it, says the LORD, and I will be the glory within it.”

⁶ Up, up! Flee from the land of the north, says the LORD; for I have spread you abroad like the four winds of heaven, says the LORD. ⁷ Up! Escape to Zion, you that live with daughter Babylon. ⁸ For thus said the LORD of hosts (after his glory^d sent me) regarding the nations that plundered you: Truly, one who touches you touches the apple of my eye.^e ⁹ See now, I am going to raise^f my hand against them, and they shall become plunder for their own slaves. Then you will know that the LORD of hosts has sent me. ¹⁰ Sing and rejoice, O daughter Zion! For lo, I will come and dwell in your midst, says the LORD. ¹¹ Many nations shall join themselves to the LORD on that day, and shall be my people; and I will dwell in your midst. And you shall know that the LORD of hosts has sent me to you. ¹² The LORD will inherit Judah as his portion in the holy land, and will again choose Jerusalem.

1.18–21: The second vision: four horns and four smiths. 18: The four horns are ambiguous. They may refer to two pairs of animal horns, to horned helmets, or, most likely, to the four corners of a stone altar (cf. Ex 27.2; 38.2; Ezek 43.15). They are then interpreted as the totality of nations that destroyed Israel. 19: Horns elsewhere can symbolize nations (e.g., Deut 33.17 [the horns of a bull]; Jer 48.25; Dan 8.8). 20: Blacksmiths, the Hebrew word can refer to an artisan who works with wood, stone, or metal. 21: These have come probably refers to the artisans who will destroy the horns of the nations. Such artisans are elsewhere depicted as punitive agents (Ezek 21.31, “those skillful to destroy”). The world at peace in the first vision will now be disrupted.

2.1–5: The third vision: a surveyor measures Jerusalem. 1: A measuring line, see 1.16n. Such a line was used to determine divisions within a particular territory as in Ezek 40.3, a text that also foresees the rebuilding of Jerusalem and the Temple, using the categories of width and length. 2: Zechariah’s questions presume that, in this vision, he understands what he sees. 4: Restoration focuses on Jerusalem, not the Temple, as was the case in Ezekiel. Here the absence of walls stands in stark contrast with the walls described in Ezek 40. Jerusalem’s walls were eventually rebuilt (Neh 2.17–6.15). 5: Wall of fire, the Persian capital Pasargadae stood without walls and was surrounded by fire altars. God as glory will be located within the fiery circumference; cf. Ezek 43.2, 4.

2.6–13: Admonitions and promises. 6–7: Up, Up, lit. “Woe, Woe,” though here simply calling attention to what is being said; cf. Isa 1.24; Jer 27.6. The land of the north, the place where Israelites are in exile and from which they will return, so Jer 3.18; 16.15; 23.8; 31.8. Daughter Babylon, cf. Jer 50.42; 51.33; Ps 137.8. 8a: Literally, “after glory sent me to the nations.” Cf. vv. 9, 11, which also report that the LORD sent me. 8b: Apple of my eye refers to the pupil. 9: My hand, another bodily metaphor of the deity. Only when the nations are plundered will Israelites know that the LORD sent Zechariah. 10: Sing and rejoice, cf. Isa 12.6; Zeph 3.14–15. In all three texts, the command to sing accompanies the presence of the God in your midst. 11: On join themselves to the LORD, cf. 8.20–23; Isa 56.6–7. 12: Holy land does not occur elsewhere in the Hebrew Bible, but see Wis 12.3; 2 Macc 1.7.

¹³ Be silent, all people, before the LORD; for he has roused himself from his holy dwelling.

3 Then he showed me the high priest Joshua standing before the angel of the LORD, and Satan^a standing at his right hand to accuse him. ² And the LORD said to Satan, ^a “The LORD rebuke you, O Satan!^a The LORD who has chosen Jerusalem rebuke you! Is not this man a brand plucked from the fire?” ³ Now Joshua was dressed with filthy clothes as he stood before the angel. ⁴ The angel said to those who were standing before him, “Take off his filthy clothes.” And to him he said, “See, I have taken your guilt away from you, and I will clothe you with festal apparel.” ⁵ And I said, “Let them put a clean turban on his head.” So they put a clean turban on his head and clothed him with the apparel; and the angel of the LORD was standing by.

⁶ Then the angel of the LORD assured Joshua, saying ⁷ “Thus says the LORD of hosts: If you will walk in my ways and keep my requirements, then you shall rule my house and have charge of my courts, and I will give you the right of access among those who are standing here. ⁸ Now listen, Joshua, high priest, you and your colleagues who sit before you! For they are an omen of things to come: I am going to bring my servant the Branch.

⁹ For on the stone that I have set before Joshua, on a single stone with seven facets, I will engrave its inscription, says the LORD of hosts, and I will remove the guilt of this land in a single day. ¹⁰ On that day, says the LORD of hosts, you shall invite each other to come under your vine and fig tree.”

4 The angel who talked with me came again, and wakened me, as one is wakened from sleep. ² He said to me, “What do you see?” And I said, “I see a lampstand all of gold, with a bowl on the top of it; there are seven lamps on it, with seven lips on each of the lamps that are on the top of it. ³ And by it there are two olive trees, one on the right of the bowl and the other on its left.” ⁴ I said to the angel who talked with me, “What are these, my lord?” ⁵ Then the angel who talked with me answered me, “Do you not know what these are?” I said, “No, my lord.” ⁶ He Zechariah emphasizes the sacred character of the land of Israel. 13: Be silent, cf. Hab 2.20; Zeph 1.7. Sacrifices at the Temple were conducted in silence. All people is consistent with v. 11. Holy dwelling can refer to either the earthly temple (Ps 26.8) or the heavenly abode (Deut 26.15).

3.1–10: The fourth vision: Joshua and the satan. This vision differs from the prior three: Zechariah is shown something—he does not just see it; the usual question is missing; and no clarification is offered. 1: The angel of the LORD is not an interpreter but a character in the vision, along with Joshua, the high priest (cf. Hag 1.1;2.2) and “the satan,” on whom see textual note a. This figure functions as the prosecuting attorney in the divine council; cf. Ps 109.6; 1 Chr 21.1 (only in this text does Satan appear as a name); Job 1–2. 2: The accuser is rebuked, apparently for having charged Joshua improperly. 3: The high priest is ritually unclean. 4: Festal apparel (cf. Isa 3.22) symbolizes the cleansing of the high priest. 5: And I said should read with LXX (Septuagint), “and he said.” Zechariah is not an actor in the vision. Turban, the traditional headgear of the high priest, although not the same Hebrew word as in Lev 8.9. 6–7: Admonitions of both general and specific sort; keep my requirements refers to priestly responsibilities (Num 3; Ezek 44). Those standing here belong to the divine council, to which Joshua is promised access. 8–10: The Branch, (cf. Isa 11.1; Jer 23.5; 33.15) refers to a member of the royal family of David, probably Zerubbabel, the governor (Hag 1.1; 2.20–23). Stone . . . with . . . facets, probably the engraved gold plaque on the high priest’s headdress (Ex 28.36–38); it signifies the ability of the high priest to remove guilt. 10: Under your vine and fig tree, see 1 Kings 4.25; Mic 4.4.

4.1–14: The fifth vision: a lampstand and two olive trees. 1–6a: The angel roused Zechariah, whereupon he reported yet another vision. This vision builds on the previous one, since it alludes to Joshua. 2: Lampstand (Heb “menorah”) has a round bowl at the top with seven indentations for wicks; see Ex 25.31–40. Ceramic lampstands of this type have been discovered by archaeologists. 3: Olive trees may be related to the olive oil that fueled the lamp. 6b–10a: A distinct oracle. 6b–7: An unnamed person is addressed as O great mountain and compared to Zerubbabel. The obvious candidate is the recently purified Joshua. Zerubbabel will achieve high status as the one who lays the foundation—the top stone—of the Temple. The ritual of temple rededication involved reussaid to me, “This is the word of the LORD to Zerubbabel: Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, says the LORD of hosts. ⁷ What are you, O great mountain? Before Zerubbabel you shall become a plain; and he shall bring out the top stone amid shouts of ‘Grace, grace to it!’”

⁸ Moreover the word of the LORD came to me, saying, ⁹ “The hands of Zerubbabel have laid the foundation of this house; his hands shall also complete it. Then you will know that the LORD of hosts has sent me to you.

¹⁰ For whoever has despised the day of small things shall rejoice, and shall see the plummet in the hand of Zerubbabel.

“These seven are the eyes of the LORD, which range through the whole earth.”

¹¹ Then I said to him, “What are these two olive trees on the right and the left of the lampstand?” ¹² And a second time I said to him, “What are these two branches of the olive trees, which pour out the oil^a through the two golden pipes?” ¹³ He said to me, “Do you not know what these are?” I said, “No, my lord.” ¹⁴ Then he said, “These are the two anointed ones who stand by the Lord of the whole earth.”

5 Again I looked up and saw a flying scroll. ² And he said to me, “What do you see?” I answered, “I see a flying scroll; its length is twenty cubits, and its width ten cubits.”

³ Then he said to me, “This is the curse that goes out over the face of the whole land; for everyone who steals shall be cut off according to the writing on one side, and everyone who swears falsely^b shall be cut off according to the writing on the other side. ⁴ I have sent it out, says the LORD of hosts, and it shall enter the house of the thief, and the house of anyone who swears falsely by my name; and it shall abide in that house and consume it, both timber and stones.”

⁵ Then the angel who talked with me came forward and said to me, “Look up and see what this is that is coming out.” ⁶ I said, “What is it?” He said, “This is a basket^c coming out.” And he said, “This is their iniquity^d in all the land.” ⁷ Then a leaden cover was lifted, and there was a woman sitting in ing a stone from the previous temple. 8–10a: A second oracle, referring to the previous ritual, again highlights the role Zerubbabel will have in the reconstruction of the Temple. Kings were known as temple builders. 10a: The day of small things, cf. Ezra 3.11. Plummet emphasizes Zerubbabel’s role as builder. 10b–14: The vision and its interpretation resume. 10b: Eyes of the LORD, cf. 2 Chr 16.9, where the eyes represent divine benevolence. 11–14: The two olive trees symbolize the two anointed ones, lit. “the two sons of the oil.” The word “anoint” is not present in Hebrew, nor is the typical word for olive oil that is used in anointing. This oil was used both for food and for fueling such lamps. These two “sons” almost certainly refer to Joshua and Zerubbabel, who now stand in close relationship to the LORD, symbolized by the lamp. Zechariah envisions a government in which power is shared between the priest and the descendant of David.

5.1–4: The sixth vision: a flying scroll. 1–2: The scroll is apparently unrolled, rather like a flying carpet, and long, almost 30 ft (9 m). This scroll has a proportion of 2:1, more like a carpet than a document; the Qumran Isaiah scroll is about 24 ft (7.3 m) long and 11 in (30 cm) wide, a proportion of 24:1. 3: The curse probably refers to the curses found in God’s covenant with Israel (cf. Deut 29.11,13,18), curses that were written down on a scroll (cf. 2 Chr 34.24; Dan 9.11). The whole land, a phrase used through Zech 1–8 (1.11; 4.10b; 5.6; 6.5). Steals. . . swears falsely echoes, although does not quote exactly, the Decalogue (Ex 20.7,15,16). Scrolls were rarely written on both sides. 4: Destruction of houses is a typical punishment (Hab 3.13b; Dan 2.5; 3.29; Ezra 6.11). Oddly, the perpetrators are not punished. The flying scroll symbolizes the administration of the LORD’s covenant-based justice throughout the world.

5.5–11: The seventh vision: a woman in a basket. 5–6: This vision is so bizarre that, unlike the other visions, Zechariah cannot name or describe what he sees; only the angel can do so. 6: Basket, Heb “ephah,” which was a unit of measure, roughly two-thirds of a bushel (23 liters). Such an amount of grain or flour might have been held in a container made of textile, ceramic, or metal. Iniquity, see textual note d, the same word for evil that appeared in 3.4. The referent of their is unclear, though it may refer to Judeans, whose iniquity is being removed. 7–8: An incongruous image, particularly since an “ephah” could not hold a human. This “ephah” was made of a the basket!^a ⁸ And he said, “This is Wickedness.” So he thrust her back into the basket,^a and pressed the leaden weight down on its mouth. ⁹ Then I looked up and saw two women coming forward. The wind was in their wings; they had wings like the wings of a stork, and they lifted up the basket^a between earth and sky. ¹⁰ Then I said to the angel who talked with me, “Where are they taking the basket?”^a ¹¹ He said to me, “To the land of Shinar, to build a house for it; and when this is prepared, they will set the basket^a down there on its base.”

6 And again I looked up and saw four chariots coming out from between two mountains—mountains of bronze. ² The first chariot had red horses, the second chariot black horses, ³ the third chariot white horses, and the fourth chariot dappled gray^b horses. ⁴ Then I said to the angel who talked with me, “What are these, my lord?” ⁵ The angel answered me, “These are the four winds^c of heaven going out, after presenting themselves before the Lord of all the earth. ⁶ The chariot with the black horses goes toward the north country, the white ones go toward the west country,^d and the dappled ones go toward the south country.” ⁷ When the steeds came out, they were impatient to get off and patrol the earth. And he said, “Go, patrol the earth.” So they patrolled the earth. ⁸ Then he cried out to me, “Lo, those who go toward the north country have set my spirit at rest in the north country.”

⁹ The word of the LORD came to me: ¹⁰ Collect silver and gold^e from the exiles—from Heldai, Tobijah, and Jedaiah—who have arrived from Babylon; and go the same day to the house of Josiah son of Zephaniah. ¹¹ Take the silver and gold and make a crown,^f and set it on the head of the high priest Joshua son of Jehozadak; ¹² say to him: Thus says the LORD of hosts: Here is a man whose name is Branch: for he shall branch out in his place, and he shall build the temple of the LORD. ¹³ It is he that shall build the temple of the LORD; he shall bear royal honor, and shall sit upon his throne and rule. hard substance due to its lead lid. The entire image is thought to symbolize Wickedness. 9–11: Gender continues to play a prominent role in this vision. Two women with wings, not cherubim, which were male. Stork, an unclean bird (Lev 11.19), and hence, in this simile, well suited to remove iniquity/wickedness. The land of Shinar, Babylon (Gen 10.10; 11.2; Dan 1.2; Josh 7.21). Isaiah 11.11 understands Shinar to be a place for exile and a place from which those exiled will return. Judeans are coming from Babylon; Wickedness is going to Babylon. Build a house . . . its base, the Babylonians, who will build a shrine for and permanently install Wickedness, will be polluted by the gesture that purifies Judah.

6.1–8: The eighth vision: four chariots. 1–3: A vision that like the first includes horses of many colors. The geographic setting is similar to that of the Mesopotamian sun god’s appearance between two mountains. Here, chariots, rather than the sun, come out (a verb elsewhere used of the sun), with no explicit reference to charioteers. Chariots represent military might and dominion (cf. Hag 2.22), and could symbolize God’s martial presence (Isa 66.15–16; Ps 68.17). 5–6: That they go out in four directions (cf. Jer 49.36; Ezek 37.9; Dan 11.4) means that the LORD’s military might will be present everywhere with the winds as the deity’s agents; cf. Ps 104.4. Four winds are present in Zech 2.6. Presented themselves, cf. Job 1.6; 2.1. 7: Patrol, see 1.7n. 8: The north country, the land to which Judeans had been exiled; cf. 2.6. My spirit, the same Hebrew word as “wind” in v. 5. The Hebrew verb “go out” appears seven times in this vision report (vv. 1,5,6 [three times],7,8). The vision concludes with the deity having fulfilled the threats of the first and second visions (1.15, 21).

6.9–15: Wealth and coronation. Two oracles, one embedded in another, 6.9–11,14 and 6.12–13. 9–10: The exiles, i.e., those who have returned from Mesopotamia. The three individuals are otherwise unknown. Zephaniah, father of Josiah may be the priest of 2 Kings 25.18, who was taken into exile. 11: Literally “crowns,” one of which was intended for Joshua. 12–13: Branch in 3.8 and here refers to David’s descendant Zerubbabel as is clear from his role as builder of the Temple. The oracle alludes to the diarchy envisioned in the fifth vision, though here the Branch appears to have a higher status than the priest. 14: Hebrew reads “crowns.” Memorial in the temple may shall be a priest by his throne, with peaceful understanding between the two of them.

¹⁴ And the crown^a shall be in the care of Heldai,^b Tobijah, Jedaiah, and Josiah^c son of Zephaniah, as a memorial in the temple of the LORD.

¹⁵ Those who are far off shall come and help to build the temple of the LORD; and you shall know that the LORD of hosts has sent me to you. This will happen if you diligently obey the voice of the LORD your God.

7 In the fourth year of King Darius, the word of the LORD came to Zechariah on the fourth day of the ninth month, which is Chislev. ² Now the people of Bethel had sent Sharezer and Regem-melech and their men, to entreat the favor of the LORD, ³ and to ask the priests of the house of the LORD of hosts and the prophets, “Should I mourn and practice abstinence in the fifth month, as I have done for so many years?” ⁴ Then the word of the LORD of hosts came to me: ⁵ Say to all the people of the land and the priests: When you fasted and lamented in the fifth month and in the seventh, for these seventy years, was it for me that you fasted? ⁶ And when you eat and when you drink, do you not eat and drink only for yourselves? ⁷ Were not these the words that the LORD proclaimed by the former prophets, when Jerusalem was inhabited and in prosperity, along with the towns around it, and when the Negeb and the Shephelah were inhabited?

⁸ The word of the LORD came to Zechariah, saying: ⁹ Thus says the LORD of hosts: Render true judgments, show kindness and mercy to one another; ¹⁰ do not oppress the widow, the orphan, the alien, or the poor; and do not devise evil in your hearts against one another. ¹¹ But they refused to listen, and turned a stubborn shoulder, and stopped their ears in order not to hear. ¹² They made their hearts adamant in order not to hear the law and the words that the LORD of hosts had sent by his spirit through the former prophets. Therefore great wrath came from the LORD of hosts.

¹³ Just as, when I^d called, they would not hear, so, when they called, I would not hear, says the LORD of hosts, ¹⁴ and I scattered them with a whirlwind among all the nations that they had not known. Thus the land they left was desolate, so that no one went to and fro, and a pleasant land was made desolate.

8 The word of the LORD of hosts came to me, saying: ² Thus says the LORD of hosts: I am jealous for Zion with great jealousy, and I am jealous for her with great wrath. ³ Thus says the LORD: I will return to Zion, and will mean that the three donors are remembered for their gift at the Temple. 15: A general comment about the help that those who return from exile would offer. You shall know . . . sent me, cf. 2.9.

7:1–8:23: Oracles. 7:1–7: A question answered by questions. 1: December 7, 518 BCE., a date that introduces a miscellany of oracles. Two years after reporting visions (1.1), Zechariah now offers oracles. 2: A delegation from Bethel travels the ca. 11 mi (17 km) south to Jerusalem for two reasons. Entreat the favor of the LORD means to seek help in a time of difficulty (so Ex 32.11; 1 Kings 13.6; 2 Kings 13.4; Jer 26.19; Ps 119.58). 3: The question reflects a ritual commemorating the destruction of the Temple, which occurred in the fifth month. Gedaliah the governor was murdered in the seventh (2 Kings 25.8–9,25). It is possible to read the rest of the oracles in chs 7–8 as a response to this question. A definitive answer appears in 8.19. 4–6: Zechariah addresses not only the delegation but also the priests whom they have come to consult. Zechariah again alludes to the words of former prophets (cf. 1.4,6) and poses three questions. In the first, he suggests that the rite has been only for yourselves. On inappropriate and appropriate fasting, see Isa 58.4b–5; Joel 2.12–13. Zechariah charges the people with both ineffectual fasting and feasting. 7: The Negeb and the Shephelah, the southern and western regions of Judah.

7:8–14: Oracle and historical reprise. 9–10: Having referred to former prophets in v. 7, Zechariah now quotes what they said. For comparable admonitions and prohibitions, see Jer 7.5–6; 22.3; Mic 6.8. 11–12: Language about adamant hearts was also used about Pharaoh (Ex 7.14). 13–14: To not hear was reciprocal (cf. Ezek 8.18b; Jer 11.11b). The whirlwind, often a punitive agent, e.g., Jer 23.19).

8.1–23: Ten oracles of restoration (vv. 1–2; 3; 4–5; 6; 7–8; 9–13; 14–17; 18–19; 20–22; 23). 1–2: Language of jealousy reprises 1.14; cf. Ezek 36.6b. 3: This oracle echoes 1.14, with dwell referring to the Temple. The faith-

dwell in the midst of Jerusalem; Jerusalem shall be called the faithful city, and the mountain of the LORD of hosts shall be called the holy mountain. ⁴ Thus says the LORD of hosts: Old men and old women shall again sit in the streets of Jerusalem, each with staff in hand because of their great age. ⁵ And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in its streets. ⁶ Thus says the LORD of hosts: Even though it seems impossible to the remnant of this people in these days, should it also seem impossible to me, says the LORD of hosts? ⁷ Thus says the LORD of hosts: I will save my people from the east country and from the west country; ⁸ and I will bring them to live in Jerusalem. They shall be my people and I will be their God, in faithfulness and in righteousness.

⁹ Thus says the LORD of hosts: Let your hands be strong—you that have recently been hearing these words from the mouths of the prophets who were present when the foundation was laid for the rebuilding of the temple, the house of the LORD of hosts. ¹⁰ For before those days there were no wages for people or for animals, nor was there any safety from the foe for those who went out or came in, and I set them all against one another. ¹¹ But now I will not deal with the remnant of this people as in the former days, says the LORD of hosts. ¹² For there shall be a sowing of peace; the vine shall yield its fruit, the ground shall give its produce, and the skies shall give their dew; and I will cause the remnant of this people to possess all these things.

¹³ Just as you have been a cursing among the nations, O house of Judah and house of Israel, so I will save you and you shall be a blessing. Do not be afraid, but let your hands be strong.

¹⁴ For thus says the LORD of hosts: Just as I purposed to bring disaster upon you, when your ancestors provoked me to wrath, and I did not relent, says the LORD of hosts, ¹⁵ so again I have purposed in these days to do good to Jerusalem and to the house of Judah; do not be afraid. ¹⁶ These are the things that you shall do: Speak the truth to one another, render in your gates judgments that are true and make for peace, ¹⁷ do not devise evil in your hearts against one another, and love no false oath; for all these are things that I hate, says the LORD.

¹⁸ The word of the LORD of hosts came to me, saying: ¹⁹ Thus says the LORD of hosts: The fast of the fourth month, and the fast of the fifth, and the fast of the seventh, and the fast of the tenth, shall be seasons of joy and gladness, and cheerful festivals for the house of Judah: therefore love truth and peace.

²⁰ Thus says the LORD of hosts: Peoples shall yet come, the inhabitants of many cities; ²¹ the inhabitants of one city shall go to another, saying, “Come, let us go to entreat the favor of the LORD, and to seek the LORD of hosts; I myself am going.” ²² Many peoples and strong nations shall come to seek the LORD of hosts in Jerusalem, and to entreat the favor of the LORD. ²³ Thus says the LORD of hosts: In those days ten men from nations of every language shall take hold of a Jew, ful city, a new name for Jerusalem; cf. Isa 62.4; Jer 33.16; Ezek 48.35. On holy mountain, see Joel 3.17; Isa 52.1. 4–5: This oracle continues to portray prosperity in an urban setting, including multiple generations of both genders, on which see Jer 30.18–21. 6: This oracle highlights the key word “impossibility” (cf. Ps 139.4), just as v. 2 focused on “jealousy.” 7–8: On saving from, see Jer 30.10–11; Isa 43.5–6. The covenantal relationship is reaffirmed (cf. Ex 6.7). 9–13: This oracle begins with an admonition, not just a promise. 9: An allusion to the ceremony reflected in 4.9; Hag 2.15,18. 10: A lamentable state portrayed similarly in Hag 1.6. 11–13: On remnant, see 8.6; Hag 1.12,14. Peace, Heb “shalom,” which is described using fertility imagery, cf. Hag 1.10; Joel 3.18. Cursing/blessing draws on covenantal traditions, e.g., Deut 28. 14–17: The LORD promises a time of benevolence (do . . . good to Jerusalem); then turns to admonitions comparable to those in 7.9–10. Legal proceedings were conducted in city gates (Deut 21.19; Ruth 4.1). 18–19: This oracle responds to the question posed in 7.3. All prior rituals of fasting are to become occasions for feasting. The fourth month was when the Babylonians breached the walls of Jerusalem, and the tenth when they began their siege (2 Kings 25.1–4; Jer 39.2; 52.4–7). For the fifth and seventh months, see 7.3n. Again, a promise is juxtaposed with an admonition. 20–22: A pilgrimage of foreign nations to Jerusalem; cf. 14.16; Isa 2.2–4; 60.1–3; 66.18–21. 23: On the cloak, see Hag 2.12.

An Oracle.

The word of the LORD is against the land of Hadrach
and will rest upon Damascus.

For to the LORD belongs the capital^a of Aram,^b

as do all the tribes of Israel;

²Hamath also, which borders on it, Tyre and Sidon, though they are very wise.

³Tyre has built itself a rampart, and heaped up silver like dust,
and gold like the dirt of the streets.

⁴But now, the Lord will strip it of its possessions
and hurl its wealth into the sea, and it shall be devoured by fire.

⁵Ashkelon shall see it and be afraid;
Gaza too, and shall writhe in anguish; Ekron also, because its hopes are withered.

The king shall perish from Gaza;
Ashkelon shall be uninhabited;

⁶a mongrel people shall settle in Ashdod, and I will make an end of the pride of Philistia.

⁷I will take away its blood from its mouth, and its abominations from between its teeth;

it too shall be a remnant for our God;
it shall be like a clan in Judah,
and Ekron shall be like the Jebusites.

⁸Then I will encamp at my house as a guard, so that no one shall march to and fro;
no oppressor shall again overrun them,
for now I have seen with my own eyes.

⁹Rejoice greatly, O daughter Zion!
Shout aloud, O daughter Jerusalem!
Lo, your king comes to you;
triumphant and victorious is he,
humble and riding on a donkey,
on a colt, the foal of a donkey.

¹⁰He^c will cut off the chariot from Ephraim and the war-horse from Jerusalem;
and the battle bow shall be cut off, and he shall command peace to the
nations;
his dominion shall be from sea to sea, and from the River to the ends of the earth.

¹¹As for you also, because of the blood of my covenant with you,

9.1–11.17: The first “Oracle.” “An oracle. The word of the LORD” also appears in Zech 12.1; and Mal 1.1., suggesting that three “oracles” have been appended to Zechariah 1–8. 9.1–8: An oracle of woe against foreign nations and of protection for the Temple. The places named are all within Syria-Palestine. The initial sites are in the north; they subsequently move to the west and then south. 1: Hadrach, Hatarikka in Neo-Assyrian texts, refers to a place in northern Syria. As is common in prophetic texts, the LORD controls land beyond the boundaries of Israel. 2: Tyre and Sidon, Phoenician port cities, attested in earlier oracles against the nations (e.g., Isa 23; Ezek 26–28) and also important mercantile centers in the Persian period (Ezra 3.7; Neh 13.16). 4: The LORD now acts as divine warrior. 5–6: The sites are sometimes personified—see, afraid, writhe. Verses 5–6 highlight Philistine cities. 7–8: God now speaks in the first person, promising to remove abominations (cf. Lev 7.21; 11.10–12) from Philistia’s mouth, so that the Philistines will observe Jewish dietary laws (cf. Gen 9.4; Lev 11.2–47; Deut 14.3–21). Jebusites, pre-Israelite inhabitants of Jerusalem; see Josh 15.63; 2 Sam 5.6–9; 1 Chr 11.4–9. 8: Encamp, an unusual word to depict God’s presence at the Temple. It continues the military tone of the poem, with the LORD as guard (lit. “as a garrison”).

9.9–17: God’s sovereign rule. A series of poetic vignettes about God as king. 9–10: The king welcomed. 9: Personified Jerusalem is admonished to sing for joy; cf. Ps 32.11; 47.1. On daughter Zion/Jerusalem, see Lam 1.6; Zeph 3.14–15; Zech 2.13. On a donkey, on a colt, i.e., on one animal described in two parallel poetic lines; cf. Mt 21.2–7, which understands there are to be two animals. The River probably refers to the Euphrates. The demilitarized dominion described here is similar to Mic 4.3; Isa 2.4. 11–13: Oracle advocating return and preparation for battle. 11: You is feminine singular, referring still to daughter Zion. Blood of my covenant echoes Ex 24.8, the Sinai

I will set your prisoners free from the waterless pit.
¹²Return to your stronghold, O prisoners of hope; today I declare that I will restore to you double.
¹³For I have bent Judah as my bow; I have made Ephraim its arrow. I will arouse your sons, O Zion, against your sons, O Greece, and wield you like a warrior's sword.
¹⁴Then the LORD will appear over them, and his arrow go forth like lightning; the Lord GOD will sound the trumpet and march forth in the whirlwinds of the south.
¹⁵The LORD of hosts will protect them, and they shall devour and tread down the slingers;^a they shall drink their blood^b like wine, and be full like a bowl, drenched like the corners of the altar.
¹⁶On that day the LORD their God will save them for they are the flock of his people; for like the jewels of a crown they shall shine on his land.
¹⁷For what goodness and beauty are his! Grain shall make the young men flourish, and new wine the young women.

10 Ask rain from the LORD in the season of the spring rain, from the LORD who makes the storm clouds, who gives showers of rain to you,^c the vegetation in the field to everyone.

²For the teraphim^d utter nonsense, and the diviners see lies; the dreamers tell false dreams, and give empty consolation. Therefore the people wander like sheep; they suffer for lack of a shepherd.

³My anger is hot against the shepherds, and I will punish the leaders;^e for the LORD of hosts cares for his flock, the house of Judah, and will make them like his proud warhorse.

⁴Out of them shall come the cornerstone, out of them the tent peg, out of them the battle bow, out of them every commander.

⁵Together they shall be like warriors in battle, trampling the foe in the mud of the streets; they shall fight, for the LORD is with them, and they shall put to shame the riders on horses.

⁶I will strengthen the house of Judah, and I will save the house of Joseph. I will bring them back because I have compassion on them, and they shall be as though I had not rejected them; for I am the LORD their God and I will answer them.

covenant. 13: Martial imagery returns, with Judah and Ephraim, the preexilic Southern and Northern Kingdoms, as weapons. Greece, along with Joel 3.6, is the earliest reference in the Bible to this enemy of the Persians. 14–15: Prophetic poem about the battle. 14: A military theophany. On a march . . . of the south, cf. Judg 5.4. 15: Typical of holy war, the divine warrior will fight and Israel will reap the benefits of victory, here described in graphic imagery, which also alludes to the Temple—bowl (Ex 27.3), altar (Ex 27.2). 16–17: The LORD as royal shepherd conveyed using the metaphor of a flock and a simile of jewelry. Grain/new wine symbolize fertility; cf. Hag 2.19.

10.1–12: The LORD, the militant shepherd. A poem that offers critique and solace. 1: God is affirmed as the source of fertility. 2: Three forms of divination are condemned. Teraphim, divinatory figurines often critiqued in the Bible (e.g., so Ezek 21.21). 3–5: God will turn the house of Judah into a military force. 3: Shepherds, i.e., rulers. Leaders, lit. “he-goats” (textual note e; Isa 14.9). 6: God speaks, reiterating the diction of save (9.16) and return (bring back; 9.12). Cf. Isa 54.8. The Northern Kingdom of Israel, the house of Joseph (called

⁷Then the people of Ephraim shall become like warriors, and their hearts shall be glad as with wine.

Their children shall see it and rejoice, their hearts shall exult in the LORD.

⁸I will signal for them and gather them in,
for I have redeemed them,
and they shall be as numerous as they were before.

⁹Though I scattered them among the nations, yet in far countries they shall remember me,
and they shall rear their children and return.

¹⁰I will bring them home from the land of Egypt, and gather them from Assyria;
I will bring them to the land of Gilead and to Lebanon, until there is no room for them.

¹¹They^a shall pass through the sea of distress, and the waves of the sea shall be struck down,
and all the depths of the Nile dried up.
The pride of Assyria shall be laid low,
and the scepter of Egypt shall depart.

¹²I will make them strong in the LORD, and they shall walk in his name,
says the LORD.

11 Open your doors, O Lebanon, so that fire may devour your cedars!

²Wail, O cypress, for the cedar has fallen,
for the glorious trees are ruined!

Wail, oaks of Bashan,
for the thick forest has been felled!

³Listen, the wail of the shepherds, for their glory is despoiled!
Listen, the roar of the lions,
for the thickets of the Jordan are destroyed!

⁴Thus said the LORD my God: Be a shepherd of the flock doomed to slaughter.

⁵Those who buy them kill them and go unpunished; and those who sell them say, “Blessed be the LORD, for I have become rich”; and their own shepherds have no pity on them. ⁶For I will no longer have pity on the inhabitants of the earth, says the LORD. I will cause them, every one, to fall each into the hand of a neighbor, and each into the hand of the king; and they shall devastate the earth, and I will deliver no one from their hand.

⁷So, on behalf of the sheep merchants, I became the shepherd of the flock doomed to slaughter. I took two staves; one I named Favor, the other I named Unity, and I tended the sheep. ⁸In one month I disposed of the three shepherds, for I had become impatient with them, and they also detested me. ⁹So I said, “I will not be your shepherd. What is to die, let it die; what is to be destroyed, let it be destroyed; and let those that are left devour the flesh of one another!” ¹⁰I took my staff Favor and broke it, annulling the covenant that I had made with all the peoples. ¹¹So it was annulled on that day, and the sheep merchants, who were watching me, knew that it was the word of the LORD. ¹²I then said to them, “If it seems right to you, give “Ephraim” in v. 7), will be saved along with Judah; cf. 9.13; Ezek 37.15–28. 7: Wine making the heart glad symbolizes a good future; cf. Eccl 9.7; Ps 104.15. 8–12: An oracle focusing on gathering and return from exile; cf. Isa 43.1–7,14–21; Jer 23.3. 10–11: On the flight to Egypt, see Jer 43. With part of Israel in Egypt, a new Exodus can take place. 10: Gilead, northern Transjordan. Lebanon, the mountainous region north of Israel, famous for its forests (see 11.1).

11.1–3: Taunt against Israel’s northern neighbors. In this ironic taunt, the region is personified and characterized by three trees, two of which are fabled—cedars of Lebanon (Ezek 31.3) and oaks of Bashan (Ezek 27.6), which was in northern Transjordan. Shepherds and lions probably symbolize communal leaders. The destruction will affect foliage as far away as the Jordan Valley.

11.4–17: Shepherding a flock. Diverse oracles and reports, all using the metaphor of a shepherd for the community’s leader; cf. 13.7–9. 4–6: An unnamed person, perhaps the prophet Zechariah, is charged to lead the community, which is doomed. 7–14: The symbolic action is reported by the individual who wields and then me my wages; but if not, keep them.” So they weighed out as my wages thirty shekels of silver.¹³ Then the LORD said to me, “Throw it into the treasury”^a—this lordly price at which I was valued by them. So I took the thirty shekels of silver and threw them into the treasury^a in the house of the LORD.¹⁴ Then I broke my second staff Unity, annulling the family ties between Judah and Israel.

¹⁵ Then the LORD said to me: Take once more the implements of a worthless shepherd.¹⁶ For I am now raising up in the land a shepherd who does not care for the perishing, or seek the wandering,^b or heal the maimed, or nourish the healthy,^c but devours the flesh of the fat ones, tearing off even their hoofs.

¹⁷ Oh, my worthless shepherd, who deserts the flock!
May the sword strike his arm and his right eye!
Let his arm be completely withered,
his right eye utterly blinded!

An Oracle.

The word of the LORD concerning Israel: Thus says the LORD, who stretched out the heavens and founded the earth and formed the human spirit within:² See, I am about to make Jerusalem a cup of reeling for all the surrounding peoples; it will be against Judah also in the siege against Jerusalem.³ On that day I will make Jerusalem a heavy stone for all the peoples; all who lift it shall grievously hurt themselves. And all the nations of the earth shall come together against it.⁴ On that day, says the LORD, I will strike every horse with panic, and its rider with madness. But on the house of Judah I will keep a watchful eye, when I strike every horse of the peoples with blindness.⁵ Then the clans of Judah shall say to themselves, “The inhabitants of Jerusalem have strength through the LORD of hosts, their God.”

⁶ On that day I will make the clans of Judah like a blazing pot on a pile of wood, like a flaming torch among sheaves; and they shall devour to the right and to the left all the surrounding peoples, while Jerusalem shall again be inhabited in its place, in Jerusalem.

⁷ And the LORD will give victory to the tents of Judah first, that the glory of the house of David and the glory of the inhabitants of Jerusalem may not be exalted over that of Judah.⁸ On that day the LORD will shield the inhabitants of Jerusalem so that the feeblest among them on that day shall be like David, and the house of David shall be like God, like the angel of the LORD, at their head.⁹ And on that day I will seek to destroy all the nations that come against Jerusalem.

¹⁰ And I will pour out a spirit of compassion and supplication on the house of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, so that, when they look on the one^d whom they have pierced, they shall mourn for him, as one mourns for an only child, and weep bitterly over him, as one weeps over a firstborn.¹¹ On that day the mourning in Jerusalem will be as great as the mourning for Hadad-rimmon destroys two shepherd’s staffs, symbolizing the end of a covenantal relationship. 12–13: Thirty shekels of silver: Ex 21.32 stipulates this amount as restitution for a slave gored by an ox. Other ancient texts understand this to be a trifling amount of money; cf. Mt 26.15; 27.3–10. Lordly price is ironic. 15–16: The deity commands a second symbolic action, again involving a shepherd’s implements. 17: Woe oracle against the community’s leader.

12.1–14.21: The second “Oracle.” See 9.1–11.17n. Divine oracles and prophetic sayings about the imminent day of the LORD, referred to as “that day.” 12.1–9: Through a word . . . concerning Israel, vv. 2–9 highlight the destruction of foreign nations, as did 9.1–8. The God who creates (v. 1; cf. Job 9.8; Isa 42.5; Jer 10.12) can also destroy. There will be conflict between Israel and the nations and even within Judah (v. 2). 2: Cup of reeling, cf. Ps 75.8; Isa 51.17–23; Jer 25.15–18. 4: Madness and blindness, curses in Deut 28.28–29. 7–8: David’s lineage continues to be a source of hope. 10–14: The tone shifts to that of lamentation. 10: The one . . . pierced, cf. 13.3. The referent is unclear but the Hebrew suggests it is the LORD; cf. Jn 19.37, which identifies it with Jesus. 11–14: Lamentation over the one pierced. 11: Hadad-rimmon is, according to 2 Chr 35.20–25, the site for mourning over Josiah’s death. It is also the name of a Syrian storm god, also known as Baal, whose seasonal disappearance in the plain of Megiddo. ¹²The land shall mourn, each family by itself; the family of the house of David by itself, and their wives by themselves; the family of the house of Nathan by itself, and their wives by themselves; ¹³the family of the house of Levi by itself, and their wives by themselves; the family of the Shimeites by itself, and their wives by themselves; ¹⁴and all the families that are left, each by itself, and their wives by themselves.

13 On that day a fountain shall be opened for the house of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, to cleanse them from sin and impurity.

²On that day, says the LORD of hosts, I will cut off the names of the idols from the land, so that they shall be remembered no more; and also I will remove from the land the prophets and the unclean spirit. ³And if any prophets appear again, their fathers and mothers who bore them will say to them, “You shall not live, for you speak lies in the name of the LORD”; and their fathers and their mothers who bore them shall pierce them through when they prophesy. ⁴On that day the prophets will be ashamed, every one, of their visions when they prophesy; they will not put on a hairy mantle in order to deceive, ⁵but each of them will say, “I am no prophet, I am a tiller of the soil; for the land has been my possession^a since my youth.” ⁶And if anyone asks them, “What are these wounds on your chest?”^b the answer will be “The wounds I received in the house of my friends.”

⁷“Awake, O sword, against my shepherd, against the man who is my associate,” says the LORD of hosts.

Strike the shepherd, that the sheep may be scattered;

I will turn my hand against the little ones.

⁸In the whole land, says the LORD, two-thirds shall be cut off and perish, and one-third shall be left alive.

⁹And I will put this third into the fire, refine them as one refines silver, and test them as gold is tested.

They will call on my name, and I will answer them.

I will say, “They are my people”; and they will say, “The LORD is our God.”

14 See, a day is coming for the LORD, when the plunder taken from you will be divided in your midst. ²For I will gather all the nations against Jerusalem to battle, and the city shall be taken and the houses looted and the women raped; half the city shall go into exile, but the rest of the people shall not be cut off from the city. ³Then the LORD will go forth and fight against those nations as when he fights on a day of battle. ⁴On that day his feet shall stand on the Mount of Olives, which lies before Jerusalem on the east; and the Mount of Olives shall be split in two from east to west by a very wide valley; so that one half of the Mount shall withdraw was mourned in the agriculturally fertile area around Megiddo; see 2 Kings 5.18. 12–14: Their wives, on women’s lamentation, see 2 Chr 35.25; Jer 9.17,20. The lamentation will involve the land and all the families, not just the families named. The families are those of the house of David (1 Chr 14.14 reports that David bore Nathan) and the house of Levi (Shimei was a grandson of Levi, 1 Chr 6.16–17). 13.1: Those who might have incurred corpse defilement during mourning will be cleansed by water from a fountain. On purification from such uncleanness, see Num 19. The fountain may be related to the motif of a river flowing from the Temple; cf. Zech 14.8; Ps 46.4 Ezek 47.1–12; Joel 3.18. 2–6: Prophecy is viewed as negatively as idolatry, subject to punishment by death. Unlike the rebellious son, whom parents are to bring before the legal assembly (Deut 21.18–21), parents here can kill their prophetic offspring immediately. 4–6: Hairy mantle, a garment, as in Gen 25.25, that symbolizes deception. I am no prophet quotes Am 7.14. Prophetic wounds, cf. 1 Kings 18.28.

13.7–9: A personified sword. A poem using imagery similar to 11.17. The fractional destruction is similar to that in Ezek 5.1–12. 8: On imagery of refining, see Isa 1.25–26; Mal 3.2–4. 9: My people . . . our God expresses the covenantal relationship (cf. Ex 6.7; Hos 2.23).

⁵ And you shall flee by the valley of the LORD's mountain,^a for the valley between the mountains shall reach to Azal;^b and you shall flee as you fled from the earthquake in the days of King Uzziah of Judah. Then the LORD my God will come, and all the holy ones with him.

⁶ On that day there shall not be^c either cold or frost.^d ⁷ And there shall be continuous day (it is known to the LORD), not day and not night, for at evening time there shall be light.

⁸ On that day living waters shall flow out from Jerusalem, half of them to the eastern sea and half of them to the western sea; it shall continue in summer as in winter.

⁹ And the LORD will become king over all the earth; on that day the LORD will be one and his name one.

¹² This shall be the plague with which the LORD will strike all the peoples that wage war against Jerusalem: their flesh shall rot while they are still on their feet; their eyes shall rot in their sockets, and their tongues shall rot in their mouths. ¹³ On that day a great panic from the LORD shall fall on them, so that each will seize the hand of a neighbor, and the hand of the one will be raised against the hand of the other; ¹⁴ even Judah will fight at Jerusalem. And the wealth of all the surrounding nations shall be collected—gold, silver, and garments in great abundance.

¹⁵ And a plague like this plague shall fall on the horses, the mules, the camels, the donkeys, and whatever animals may be in those camps.

¹⁶ Then all who survive of the nations that have come against Jerusalem shall go up year after year to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, and to keep the festival of booths.^e ¹⁷ If any of the families of the earth do not go up to Jerusalem to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, there will be no rain upon them.

¹⁸ And if the family of Egypt do not go up and present themselves, then on them shall^f come the plague that the LORD inflicts on the nations that do not go up to keep the festival of booths.^e ¹⁹ Such shall be the punishment of Egypt and the punishment of all the nations that do not go up to keep the festival of booths.^e

²⁰ On that day there shall be inscribed on the bells of the horses, "Holy to the LORD." And the cooking pots in the house of the LORD shall be as holy as^g the bowls in front of the altar; ²¹ and every cooking pot in Jerusalem and Judah shall be sacred to the LORD of hosts, so that all who sacrifice may come and use them to boil the flesh of the sacrifice. And there shall no longer be traders^h in the house of the LORD of hosts on that day.

MALACHI

NAME, AUTHORSHIP, AND CANONICAL STATUS

Unlike the other compositions in the Book of the Twelve (the “Minor Prophets”), Malachi may not be named for a prophet. Malachi means literally “my messenger,” and there is good reason not to construe the word in 1.1 as a proper name, especially since the name does not appear elsewhere in the Bible. The Septuagint (LXX) does not translate it as a name, and in fact the same word appears in Mal 3.1, where it is simply translated as “my messenger.”

The book begins in similar fashion to Zech 9.1 and 12.1, suggesting that three collections (Zech 9–12; 12–14; and Malachi) were appended to Zech 1–8. An interest in creating a collection of twelve prophetic books may have resulted in the identification of Malachi as a separate book.

DATE OF COMPOSITION AND HISTORICAL CONTEXT

Scholars generally agree that the book of Malachi dates to the period after the rededication of the Temple in Jerusalem in 515 BCE. Reference to a governor (1.8), and not a king, clearly points to the postexilic era. The book may have been composed in Judah prior to the time that Ezra and Nehemiah were active, i.e., in the early decades of the fifth century BCE. Problems that Malachi addresses, such as tithing, are also attested in the book of Ezra–Nehemiah (Neh 13.5,12), suggesting that these three books date to roughly the same period. The book knows a number of earlier biblical traditions, particularly those in Deuteronomy and in ritual texts.

STRUCTURE, CONTENTS, AND INTERPRETATION

Malachi includes a distinctive form of literature, often characterized as a disputation. This genre has striking similarities to Greek diatribes. There are six such rhetorical units (1.2–5; 1.6.–2.9; 2.10–16; 2.17–3.5; 3.6–12; 3.13–4.3). In all of them, two parties—God and some group—engage in a stylized dialogue. All six units include questions, posed sometimes by the deity, other times by the people. Moreover, each disputation quotes the LORD’s opponents. What the people say often seems outlandish, e.g., “All who do evil are good in the sight of the LORD, and he delights in them” (2.17) or “It is vain to serve God” (3.14).

The book addresses numerous topics: the permanence of the LORD’s care for Israel, the need to venerate the LORD alone, the importance of tithing and justice, and hope for those who fear the LORD. Two topics are particularly prominent—the international scope of God’s reign, and the ritual world of the Temple.

In the Hebrew Bible, Malachi ends the Book of the Twelve and the entire division of the canon called the Prophets. In Christian Bibles, it ends the Old Testament; its final words about Elijah as messenger are interpreted in the Gospels as referring to John the Baptist (Mt 14.10; Lk 1.17).

1 An oracle. The word of the LORD to Israel by Malachi.^a

² I have loved you, says the LORD. But you say, “How have you loved us?” Is not Esau Jacob’s brother? says the LORD. Yet I have loved Jacob ³ but I have hated Esau; I have made his hill country a desolation and his heritage a desert for jackals. ⁴ If Edom says, “We are shattered but we will rebuild the ruins,” the LORD of hosts says: They may build, but I will tear down, until they are called the wicked country, the people with whom the LORD is angry forever. ⁵ Your own eyes shall see this, and you shall say, “Great is the LORD beyond the borders of Israel!”

⁶ A son honors his father, and servants their master. If then I am a father, where is the honor due me? And if I am a master, where is the respect due me? says the LORD of hosts to you, O priests, who despise my name. You say, “How have we despised your name?” ⁷ By offering polluted food on my altar. And you say, “How have we polluted it?”^b By thinking that the LORD’s table may be despised. ⁸ When you offer blind animals in sacrifice, is that not wrong? And when you offer those that are lame or sick, is that not wrong? Try presenting that to your governor; will he be pleased with you or show you favor? says the LORD of hosts. ⁹ And now implore the favor of God, that he may be gracious to us. The fault is yours. Will he show favor to any of you? says the LORD of hosts. ¹⁰ Oh, that someone among you would shut the temple^c doors, so that you would not kindle fire on my altar in vain! I have no pleasure in you, says the LORD of hosts, and I will not accept an offering from your hands. ¹¹ For from the rising of the sun to its setting my name is great among the nations, and in every place incense is offered to my name, and a pure offering; for my name is great among the nations, says the LORD of hosts. ¹² But you profane it when you say that the Lord’s table is polluted, and the food for it^d may be despised. ¹³ “What a weariness this is,” you say, and you sniff at me,^e says the LORD of hosts. You bring what has been taken by violence or is lame or sick, and this you bring as your offering! Shall I accept that from your hand? says the LORD. ¹⁴ Cursed be the cheat

1.1: Superscription. This verse begins in the same way as Zech 9.1 and Zech 12.1. Here the oracle (lit., “burden”) is directed to Israel. Malachi, literally, “my messenger.”

1.2–5: The God who loves and hates. God demonstrates love for Israel (Jacob) by hating Edom (Esau; see Gen 25.19–24; 36.1). Enmity toward Edom runs deep in the Hebrew Bible; see especially Obadiah (cf. Isa 34.5–17; Isa 63.1; Jer 49.7–22; Ezek 25.12–14; 35.1–15; Ps 137.7). Still, Israel’s God was remembered as having given Edom its land (see Deut 2.4–5). 3: Such destruction may be related to Nabonidus’s campaign against Edom in 552 BCE. 5: Great is the LORD, similar claims are made about God in Pss 35.27; 40.16; 70.4; 96.4, which emphasize the power of the divine king. The international significance of Israel’s God is reiterated in 1.11,14.

1.6–2.9: Concerning priests and Levites. The longest of the disputations deals with the priesthood. 6: The notion of honoring a parent is embedded in the Decalogue (Ex 20.12) and in proverbial literature (Prov 13.1; 19.26). To despise my name strikes at the heart of Israel’s religious life since the Temple is “the place that the LORD your God will choose as a dwelling for his name” (Deut 12.11). 7: Polluted food, an unusual phrase to describe unacceptable offerings. The word for “pollute” or “defile” is used in Ezra 2 of unacceptable priests (Ezra 2.62). 8: Blind, lame, and sick animals were not acceptable as sacrifices (Deut 15.19–23; Lev 22.18–25). The prophet offers an ironic admonition, Try presenting that . . . 9: And now implore the favor of God, an ironic call to worship placed in the mouths of the priests, which may echo the priestly blessing of Num 6.24–26. 10: Doors, see textual note c. On the doors of the Temple, see 1 Kings 6.31; Ps 100.4; the Levites were doorkeepers at the Temple (Ezra 2.42; Neh 11.19). It is unclear whether altar refers to the altar of burnt offering or the incense altar. 11: Using solar imagery (cf. 4.2), the prophet testifies to the vast territory in which the LORD is worshiped. Whether or not appropriate ritual is taking place at the Jerusalem Temple, the LORD’s name is being venerated appropriately among the nations, including Jews in the Diaspora. 14:

who has a male in the flock and vows to give it, and yet sacrifices to the Lord what is blemished; for I am a great King, says the LORD of hosts, and my name is revered among the nations.

2 And now, O priests, this command is for you. ²If you will not listen, if you will not lay it to heart to give glory to my name, says the LORD of hosts, then I will send the curse on you and I will curse your blessings; indeed I have already cursed them,^a because you do not lay it to heart. ³I will rebuke your offspring, and spread dung on your faces, the dung of your offerings, and I will put you out of my presence.^b

⁴Know, then, that I have sent this command to you, that my covenant with Levi may hold, says the LORD of hosts. ⁵My covenant with him was a covenant of life and well-being, which I gave him; this called for reverence, and he revered me and stood in awe of my name. ⁶True instruction was in his mouth, and no wrong was found on his lips. He walked with me in integrity and uprightness, and he turned many from iniquity. ⁷For the lips of a priest should guard knowledge, and people should seek instruction from his mouth, for he is the messenger of the LORD of hosts. ⁸But you have turned aside from the way; you have caused many to stumble by your instruction; you have corrupted the covenant of Levi, says the LORD of hosts, ⁹and so I make you despised and abased before all the people, inasmuch as you have not kept my ways but have shown partiality in your instruction.

¹⁰Have we not all one father? Has not one God created us? Why then are we faithless to one another, profaning the covenant of our ancestors? ¹¹Judah has been faithless, and abomination has been committed in Israel and in Jerusalem; for Judah has profaned the sanctuary of the LORD, which he loves, and has married the daughter of a foreign god. ¹²May the LORD cut off from the tents of Jacob

Curse replaces the earlier style of questions (cf. the curses in Deut 27:15–16). On pledging something good to sacrifice and then replacing it with something inferior, see Lev 27:9–11. It appears that both worshiper and priest would suffer a curse. On the LORD as great King, see Pss 96:10; 97:1; 99:1. 2:1–3: Admonition and threat to the priests. 1: This command echoes language found in Deuteronomy (e.g. 27:1; 30:11). 2: Veneration of the LORD's name is also at issue in Mal 1.6,11,14; 2.5; and the language of curse continues that of 1.14. Your blessings probably refers to the blessings that priests dispense (Num 6.23–27). 3: Offspring implies the priestly lineage of Aaron, who were promised a covenant of peace (Num 25.12–13). Dung, either excrement or intestinal contents normally burned outside the Temple compound (Ex 29.14; Lev 4.11; 8.17; 16.27; Num 19.5). Smearing dung on the face of a priest would require the removal of that unclean priest from the Temple. 4–9: The language of covenant and commandment continues, though now focusing on the Levites, whose status was below that of the priests who traced their ancestry back to Aaron. 4–5: Levi, the third son of Jacob and ancestor of all priests (Gen 29.34). Jer 33.21 refers to a covenant with Levi; Deut 33.9 affirms the covenantal fidelity of the Levites. Well-being or “peace,” (Heb “shalom”), is associated with the covenant with Phinehas in Num 25.12. 6: Instruction, (Heb “torah”). Deut 33.10 characterizes Levites as responsible for teaching God's torah. To “walk” describes a proper covenantal relationship in Deuteronomy (10.12; 13.5). 7: The language becomes prescriptive, though continuing to emphasize instruction. Messenger of the Lord, a phrase used of Haggai (Hag 1.13; see also Gen 19.1; 21.17). That Levi, personifying a group, would be so characterized underscores the high status priests receive here. 8: You probably refers to the priests, indicted earlier in this disputation. The metaphor of walking (v. 6) continues here with turning aside from the way. 9: The punishment is consistent with 2.2–3. Neh 13.19–20 may provide a context for understanding these charges. Nehemiah acted against those who had “defiled the priesthood, and the covenant of the priesthood and the Levites” (Neh 13.29).

2.10–16: Religious fidelity. Focus on covenant continues, but now between God and all Israel. Familial imagery is important. 10: For a similar question, see Deut 32.6. On God as one, see Deut 6.4. Covenant of our ancestors (cf. Deut 4.3–31; 29.24–25; Jer 34.13–14, all referring to the Sinai covenant). 11: Abomination, a religious sin. The sanctuary of the Lord, literally, “the holiness of Yahweh,” which may refer to the Temple (Pss 63.2; 68.22). Daughter of a foreign god may refer to veneration of a goddess such as Asherah or, less likely, marriage to a

¹³ And this you do as well: You cover the LORD's altar with tears, with weeping and groaning because he no longer regards the offering or accepts it with favor at your hand.

¹⁴ You ask, "Why does he not?" ⁵ Then I will draw near to you for judgment; I will be swift to bear witness against the sorcerers, against the adulterers, against those who swear falsely, against those who oppress the hired workers in their wages, the widow and the orphan, against those who thrust aside the alien, and do not fear me, says the LORD of hosts.

To cut off as a punishment, see Pss 12.3; 109.15. Tents of Jacob, see Jer 30.18. 13: Weeping at the Temple may refer to foreign rituals similar to those described in Ezek 8.14. 14: The identity of the characters is ambiguous. If you is Judah, then the wife by covenant would be the LORD. On marriage as a covenant, see also Ezek 16.8; Prov 2.17. 15: Family symbolism continues with reference to offspring. 15b–16: These verses, perhaps by another author, refer to human divorce; the issue is now marriage within the community, not idolatry as in vv. 10–14. Although Deut 24.1–4 permits divorce, it is likened to violence that the LORD hates.

2.17–3.5: Theodicy and theophany. The prospect of judgment brought by both a messenger and the LORD. 17: The people are quoted three times. The second quotation ("Everyone who does evil . . .") reverses the usual biblical view about God and evildoers (cf. Deut 18.12; 25.16). Where is the God of justice? echoes language in psalms of lament, e.g., Pss 22.1; 89.49. 3.1–5: These verses focus on an expected messenger and what he will do. 1: My messenger, Heb. "mal'aki" (Eng. "Malachi"). This verse echoes Ex 23.20, "Behold, I send my messenger before you to guard your way" (cf. also Isa 40.3, "prepare the way of the LORD"). The messenger is apparently a forerunner of the Lord. The messenger of the covenant may be the same individual as my messenger. The epilogue in 4.5–6 identifies the messenger as the prophet Elijah. In the New Testament the messenger is identified as John the Baptist (Mt 11.10; Mk 1.2; Lk 1.17,76; 7.27). 2–3: Metallurgy and the manufacture of textiles provide metaphors for purification. Fullers' soap, whitening and cleansing agent used in the processing of textiles. The descendants of Levi (see 2.4) become important again, though here as officiating priests, not teachers. 5: All the infractions also appear in Deuteronomy, especially 24.14–17, which refers to the wage earner, sojourner, widow, and orphan (cf. also Zech 7.9–10).

3.6–12: Tithes, curses, and blessings. A disputation that addresses the responsibility of the entire community to bring tithes. 6: Children of Jacob symbolize the unchanging commitment of the deity to Israel, as

⁷ Ever since the days of your ancestors you have turned aside from my statutes and have not kept them. Return to me, and I will return to you, says the LORD of hosts. But you say, “How shall we return?”

⁸ Will anyone rob God? Yet you are robbing me! But you say, “How are we robbing you?” In your tithes and offerings! ⁹ You are cursed with a curse, for you are robbing me—the whole nation of you! ¹⁰ Bring the full tithe into the storehouse, so that there may be food in my house, and thus put me to the test, says the LORD of hosts; see if I will not open the windows of heaven for you and pour down for you an overflowing blessing. ¹¹ I will rebuke the locust^a for you, so that it will not destroy the produce of your soil; and your vine in the field shall not be barren, says the LORD of hosts. ¹² Then all nations will count you happy, for you will be a land of delight, says the LORD of hosts.

¹³ You have spoken harsh words against me, says the LORD. Yet you say, “How have we spoken against you?” ¹⁴ You have said, “It is vain to serve God. What do we profit by keeping his command or by going about as mourners before the LORD of hosts? ¹⁵ Now we count the arrogant happy; evildoers not only prosper, but when they put God to the test they escape.”

¹⁶ Then those who revered the LORD spoke with one another. The LORD took note and listened, and a book of remembrance was written before him of those who revered the LORD and thought on his name. ¹⁷ They shall be mine, says the LORD of hosts, my special possession on the day when I act, and I will spare them as parents spare their children who serve them. ¹⁸ Then once more you shall see the difference between the righteous and the wicked, between one who serves God and one who does not serve him.

4^b See, the day is coming, burning like an oven, when all the arrogant and all evildoers will be stubble; the day that comes shall burn them up, says the LORD of hosts, so that it will leave them neither root nor branch. ² But for you who revere my name the sun of righteousness shall rise, with healing in its wings. You shall go out leaping like calves from the stall. ³ And you shall tread down the wicked, for they will be ashes under the soles of your feet, on the day when I act, says the LORD of hosts.

Num 18.21–32 allocates the tithe to the Levites (cf. Deut 14.22–29). The tithe was a matter of concern during the Persian period, see Neh 10.35,37–40 (cf. 12.44; 13.5). The people’s testing of the LORD is attested elsewhere only in 3.15 and Ps 95.9, where it is an accusation. Here it is a challenge, and the LORD promises to pass the test and provide rain, which will create agricultural bounty. 11–12: Locust, literally, “devourer,” which could refer to flies (Ps 78.45) or worms (Deut 28.39) as well as locusts (Joel 1.4). Deut 28.10–12 reflects a similar notion of rain, abundant harvest, and recognition by other peoples.

3.13–4.3: Those who fear the LORD’s name. This diatribe differs strikingly from the preceding ones by introducing a distinct group, “those who revered the LORD” (v. 16). 13: The LORD’s charge could now refer to everything that the people have been quoted as saying throughout the book. 14–15: The people raise the issue of theodicy. Unlike those who venerate God, evildoers . . . prosper, even after they put God to the test (cf. 2.17; 3.10). The LORD offers no response to this charge; dialogue ceases. 16: On such God-fearers, see Pss 15.4; 22.23. Some psalms associate God-fearers with priestly houses; Ps 135.20 identifies them as the house of Levi, which has been prominent in Malachi. Book of remembrance (cf. Ps 139.16; Dan.10.21; Rev 13.8). In Ex 19.5, all Israel is God’s special possession; here only a portion of Israel, the God-fearers, receives that honor. 17–18: God will spare those who serve him, those who are righteous. Some will not be spared. The language of parents and children recurs in the book’s final verse. 4.1: The day is the day of the LORD. Unlike the fire in 3.2–3, the oven will destroy, not purify. Cf. Isa 6.13 for the imagery of stubble consumed by fire. 2: Sun of righteousness alludes to the winged sun disk, which symbolized divine beneficence and protection in both Mesopotamia and Egypt.

4.4–6: An epilogue, drawing on diverse biblical texts (Mal 1.6; Joel 2.31; 2 Kgs 2), that integrates the book of Malachi with individuals (Moses and Elijah) mentioned elsewhere in the Bible. 4: Teaching (Heb “torah”) of

INTRODUCTION TO THE APOCRYPHAL/ DEUTEROCANONICAL BOOKS

DEFINITIONS

The apocryphal/Deuterocanonical books are those works that were included in the Septuagint (the ancient Greek translation of the Hebrew Bible, referred to as LXX) or in the Old Latin and Vulgate translations, but are not included in the Hebrew text that forms both the canon for Judaism and the Protestant Old Testament. All of these works, whether they are individual books or additions to the Hebrew texts of Esther and Daniel, have been regarded as canonical by one or more Christian communities, but not by all. (The exception is 4 Macc, which appears only in an appendix to the Greek Bible.)

“Apocrypha” means “hidden things,” but it is not clear why the term was chosen to describe these books. In antiquity “hidden books” sometimes referred to books that were restricted because they contained mysterious or esoteric teaching, too profound to be communicated to any except the initiated (see 2 Esd 14.45–46). Some early Christian writers used the term to describe works they considered to be spurious or heretical. But neither usage aptly describes the set of books that now goes by this name. The use of the term to refer to this group of books can be traced to the Christian scholar Jerome at the turn of the fifth century ce. It serves to distinguish them from books of the Christian Old Testament that are also found in the Jewish canon.

“Deuterocanonical,” along with its coordinate term “protocanonical,” is used in Roman Catholic tradition to describe the status of the two groups of books of the Old Testament. The “protocanon” consists of the books of the Hebrew Bible, concerning which there was no debate as to their canonical status. The “Deuterocanon” refers to those additional books whose canonical status was reaffirmed at a later date. This distinction, introduced by Sixtus of Sienna in 1566, acknowledges the differences between the two categories while making clear that Roman Catholics accept as fully canonical those books and parts of books that Protestants call the Apocrypha (except the Prayer of Manasseh, Psalm 151, 3 and 4 Maccabees, and 1 and 2 Esdras, which both groups regard as apocryphal). Thus, although the terms “Deuterocanonical” and “Apocryphal” can describe the same collections of writings, they clearly indicate the difference in status of the writings among different groups. In the NRSV translation, subheadings in the table of contents for these books, and in the text itself, explain the differing canonical status of various writings.

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC, ORTHODOX, AND PROTESTANT CANONS OF THE OLD TESTAMENT

Toward the end of the fourth century ce, Pope Damasus commissioned Jerome, the most learned Christian biblical scholar of his day, to prepare a standard Latin version of the scriptures (the translation that was to become known as the Latin Vulgate). In the Old Testament Jerome followed the Hebrew canon; though he also translated the apocryphal books, he called attention to their distinct status in prefaces. Subsequent copyists of the Latin Bible, however, did not always include Jerome’s prefaces, and during the medieval period the Western Church generally regarded these books as scripture, without differentiation. After the Protestant reformers had denied the canonical status of these books, in 1546 the Council of Trent decreed that the canon of the Old Testament includes them (with the exceptions listed earlier). Subsequent editions of the Latin Vulgate text, officially approved by the Roman Catholic Church, placed these books within the Christian sequence of the Old Testament books. Thus Tobit and Judith come after Nehemiah; the Wisdom of Solomon and Ecclesiasticus (Sirach) come after the Song of Solomon; Baruch (with the Letter of Jeremiah as ch 6) comes after Lamentations; and 1 and 2 Maccabees conclude the books of the Old Testament. Esther is given in its longer (Greek) form rather than in the version based solely on the Hebrew text; the Prayer of Azariah and Song of the Three Jews appear as vv. 24–90 of ch 3 of Daniel, and the stories of Susanna and Bel and the Dragon as chs 13 and 14 of Daniel. An appendix after the New Testament contains the Prayer of Manasseh and 1 and 2 Esdras, without implying canonical status.

The Eastern Orthodox Churches recognize several other books as authoritative. Editions of the Old Testament approved by the Holy Synod of the Greek Orthodox Church contain, besides the Roman Catholic Deuterocanonical books, 1 Esdras, Psalm 151, the Prayer of Manasseh, and 3 Maccabees, while 4 Maccabees appears in an appendix. Slavonic Bibles approved by the Russian Orthodox Church contain, besides the Deuterocanonical books, 1 and 2 Esdras (called 2 and 3 Esdras), Psalm 151, and 3 Maccabees.

Protestant Bibles have followed the Hebrew canon, though in a different order. The disputed books, if they are included at all, have generally been placed in a separate section, usually bound between the Old and New Testaments, but occasionally placed after the close of the New Testament.

Here is a list of the Apocryphal/Deuterocanonical books in the order in which they are found in this Bible, showing which religious communities accept them as scripture:

THE STATUS OF THE APOCRYPHAL/DEUTEROCANONICAL BOOKS IN CHRISTIANITY

During the first centuries of the Common Era, early Christian theologians (most of whom knew no Hebrew) quoted, in Greek, passages both from books in the Hebrew canon and from these additional works without making any distinction between them. Such citations were usually preceded by a word or phrase making it clear that the writer regarded the text being cited as canonical. During this time, only a few thinkers investigated the Jewish canon or distinguished between, for instance, the Hebrew text of Daniel and the addition of the story of Susanna in the Greek version.

By the fourth century, theologians in the Eastern (Greek) churches had begun to recognize a distinction between the books in the Hebrew canon and the rest, though they continued to cite all of them as scripture. During the following centuries the matter was debated and, consequently, practice varied in the East, but at the Synod of Jerusalem in 1672 (which expressed the Orthodox churches' reaction to the Protestant Reformation), Tobit, Judith, Ecclesiasticus (Sirach), Wisdom, Additions to Daniel, and 1 and 2 Maccabees were expressly designated as canonical.

In the Western (Latin) church, on the other hand, though there was some variety of opinion, in general theologians regarded these books as canonical. More than one local synodical council (e.g., Hippo, 393, and Carthage, 397 and 419) justified and authorized their use as scripture. The so-called Decretum Gelasianum, a Latin document probably dating to the sixth century, contains lists of the books to be read as scripture and of books to be avoided as apocryphal. The former list, which is not present in all the manuscripts, includes among the biblical books Tobit, Judith, Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus (Sirach), and 1 and 2 Maccabees.

Occasionally, however, theologians questioned the status of these books. Jerome, near the end of the fourth century, thought that books not in the Hebrew canon should be designated as apocryphal, and other thinkers, though always a minority, followed his view, at least theoretically. Toward the close of the fourteenth century John Wycliffe and his disciples produced the first English version of the Bible. This translation of the Latin Vulgate included all of the disputed books, with the exception of 2 Esdras. In the Prologue to the Old Testament, however, it makes a distinction between the books of the Hebrew canon, listed there, and the others which, the writer says, “shall be set among apocrypha, that is, without authority of belief.” In the books of Esther and Daniel, the translators included a rendering of Jerome’s notes calling the reader’s attention to the additions.

At the time of the Reformation, Protestant thinkers came to the conclusion fairly early that they would need to determine which books were authoritative for the establishment of doctrine and which were not. For instance, disputes over the doctrine of purgatory and of the usefulness of prayers and masses for the dead involved the authority of 2 Maccabees, which contains what was held to be scriptural warrant for them (12.43–45). The first extensive Protestant discussion of the canon was Andreas Bodenstein’s treatise De Canonicis Scripturis Libellus (1520). Bodenstein (or Carlstadt, after his place of birth) distinguished the books of the Hebrew Bible from the books of the Apocrypha, classifying the Apocrypha into two divisions. Concerning Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus (Sirach), Judith, Tobit, and 1 and 2 Maccabees, he says, “These are Apocrypha, that is, are outside the Hebrew canon; yet they are holy writings” (sect. 114). He continues:

What they contain is not to be despised at once; still it is not right that Christians should relieve, much less slake, their thirst with them. . . . Before all things the best books must be read, that is, those that are canonical beyond all controversy; afterwards, if one has the time, it is allowed to peruse the controverted books, provided that you have the set purpose of comparing and collating the non-canonical books with those which are truly canonical (sect. 118).

The second group, 1 and 2 Esdras, Baruch, Prayer of Manasseh, and the Additions to Daniel, he declared without worth.

The first Bible in a modern vernacular language to segregate the apocryphal books from the others was the Dutch Bible published by Jacob van Liesveldt in 1526 at Antwerp. After Malachi there follows a section embodying the Apocrypha titled “The books which are not in the canon, that is to say, which one does not find among the Jews in the Hebrew.”

The first edition of the Swiss-German Bible was published in six volumes (Zurich, 1527–29), the fifth of which contains the Apocrypha. The title page of this volume states, “These are the books which are not reckoned as biblical by the ancients, nor are found among the Hebrews.” A one-volume edition of the Zurich Bible, which appeared in 1530, contains the apocryphal books grouped together after the New Testament. One Swiss reformer, Oecolampadius, declared in 1530: “We do not despise Judith, Tobit, Ecclesiasticus, Baruch, the last two books of Esdras, the three books of Maccabees, the Additions to Daniel; but we do not allow them divine authority with the others.”

In reaction to Protestant criticism of the disputed books, in 1546 the Council of Trent gave what is regarded by Roman Catholics as the definitive declaration on the canon of the scriptures. After enumerating the books, which in the Old Testament include Tobit, Judith, Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus (Sirach), Baruch, and the two books of Maccabees, the decree pronounces an anathema upon anyone who “does not accept as sacred and canonical the aforesaid books in their entirety and with all their parts, as they have been accustomed to be read in the Catholic Church and as they are contained in the old Latin Vulgate Edition” (trans. H. J. Schroeder). The reference to “books in their entirety and with all their parts” is intended to cover the Letter of Jeremiah as ch 6 of Baruch, the Additions to Esther, and the chapters in Daniel including the Prayer of Azariah, the Song of the Three Jews, Susanna, and Bel and the Dragon. It is noteworthy, however, that the Prayer of Manasseh and 1 and 2 Esdras, although included in some manuscripts of the Latin Vulgate, were denied canonical status by the Council of Trent. In the official edition of the Vulgate, published in 1592, these three are printed as an appendix after the New Testament, “lest they should perish altogether.”

In England, even though Protestants were unanimous in declaring that the apocryphal books were not to be used to establish any doctrine, differences arose as to the proper use and place of noncanonical books. A milder view prevailed in the Church of England, and the lectionary attached to the Book of Common Prayer, from 1549 on, has always contained prescribed lessons from the Apocrypha. In addition, portions of the Song of the Three Jews are used as a canticle, or song of praise, alongside selected Psalms in the service of Morning Prayer. In reply to those who urged the discontinuance of reading lessons from apocryphal books, as being inconsistent with the sufficiency of scripture, the bishops at the Savoy Conference, held in 1661, replied that the same objection could be raised against the preaching of sermons, and that it was much to be desired that all sermons should give as useful instruction as did the chapters selected from the Apocrypha.

The Puritans took a stricter view, and some Geneva Bibles, printed in 1599 mainly in the Low Countries, excluded the Apocrypha. The omission of the Apocrypha was presumably due to those responsible for binding the copies, since the titles of the apocryphal books occur in the table of contents. During subsequent centuries Bibles that lacked the books of the Apocrypha came to outnumber those that included them, and soon it became difficult to obtain ordinary editions of the King James Version containing the Apocrypha.

THE HISTORICAL BACKGROUND TO THE APOCRYPHAL/DEUTEROCANONICAL BOOKS

With the destruction of Jerusalem and the Temple by the Babylonians under Nebuchadnezzar in 586 BCE, and the subsequent exile of many Judeans to Babylon, the history of Israel underwent a decisive break. Henceforth there would always be Jewish communities outside the land of Israel (the Diaspora), and even after the Persian king Cyrus allowed the exiles to return in 538 BCE, large communities flourished in Babylon and elsewhere.

For two centuries the Persians controlled the Near East. The rebuilt Temple became the institutional focus of the province of Judah. Although details are uncertain, this era probably saw important work on the editing of the Pentateuch and the prophetic writings, as well as the composition of other literature. The Persian period came to an end when Alexander the Great completed a series of conquests that put him in control of the former Persian empire, including Egypt. When Alexander died in 323, his empire was divided among his warring generals, and two of them—Seleucus, king of Syria, and Ptolemy, king of Egypt—and their successors fought over the territory of Judah, which fell first under Ptolemaic and then Seleucid dynastic control. Despite the political changes, however, the overall cultural influence remained: This was the era of the triumph of Hellenistic culture, including the use of the Greek language as the standard for the whole empire.

There had already been, in the Hebrew Bible, contention about such issues as intermarriage (Ezra 9:1–10:44; Neh 13:23–31). Now, with large numbers of Jews living outside the land as minorities within much larger and more dominant cultures, this issue and those of other religious observances came to be much more important. Stories of faithfully observant Jews among non-Jewish populations (Tobit, 3 Macc) were joined by expanded versions of books that strengthened this point (Greek Esther, the Prayer of Azariah, and Song of the Three Jews in ch 3 of Daniel).

Jews both in the Diaspora and in Judah appropriated many elements of Hellenistic culture, usually without incident. During the second century BCE, however, an attempt to establish Hellenistic educational and civic institutions in Jerusalem created a crisis when the persons involved bribed King Antiochus IV Epiphanes (175–164) to appoint Hellenizing high priests (Jason and Menelaus) and funds were taken from the Temple itself to pay the king. In response to the ensuing violence, Antiochus invaded Jerusalem in 169; in 167 he effectively outlawed the Jewish religion, making the teaching of the Torah a crime and establishing polytheistic worship in the Temple. This final provocation led to the ultimately successful Jewish revolt under the Hasmonean family, led by Mattathias and his five sons, one of whom, Judas, was known as Maccabeus, “the hammer.” The revolt and the subsequent establishment of a Jewish government (which took more than twenty years to accomplish) are therefore referred to as Maccabean. This rule lasted for eighty years, until (because of constant power struggles among the various factions of Jews) the Romans were able to intervene and take direct control of the territory in 63 BCE.

KINDS OF LITERATURE IN THE APOCRYPHAL/DEUTEROCANONICAL BOOKS

The Apocryphal/Deuterocanonical books contain several different literary genres, including histories, historical fiction, wisdom, devotional writings, letters, and an apocalypse. Though several of the books combine more than one of these genres, most of the books can be classified as predominantly one type or another. Thus 1 Esdras, 1 Maccabees, and in a certain sense, 2 Maccabees are histories. First Esdras summarizes 2 Chr 35:1–36:23 and reproduces all of Ezra and Neh 7:38–8:12. Only 1 Esd 3:1–5:6 is a significant addition. First Maccabees recounts the history of the Seleucid persecutions and the rebellion and rise of the Maccabees. Second Maccabees, with its bombastic rhetoric and abundant use of invectives against the Seleucid tyrants and Hellenizing Jews, is an example of a popular Hellenistic genre, the “pathetic history,” which uses highly charged language, exhortation, exaggeration, and other methods to stimulate the imaginations and emotions (“pathos”) of readers. Third Maccabees is misleadingly named: It actually has nothing to do with the Maccabean period or the Seleucid dynasty, but deals with a period a half-century earlier and concerns the sufferings of the Jewish community in Egypt under the Ptolemaic rulers. It is a religious novel, written in Greek by an Alexandrian Jew sometime after 30 BCE. Using legendary elements, it tells three stories of conflict between Ptolemy IV (221–204) and the Jewish community in Egypt. The most dramatic section (5:1–6:21) describes Ptolemy’s scheme to martyr the Jews: They were to be herded into an arena near Alexandria to be trampled under the feet of five hundred intoxicated elephants. The king’s plan was finally foiled when angelic intervention terrorized those supervising the persecutions and also frightened the elephants into turning upon the Egyptian soldiers.

Fourth Maccabees is not a historical narrative but rather a Greek philosophical treatise addressed to Jews on the supremacy of reason over the passions of body and soul. In the form of a Stoic diatribe, or popular address, it uses narratives of exemplary behavior, and the conversations and arguments of characters in the narratives, to explore philosophical issues. The author begins with a theoretical exposition of his theme, which he then illustrates at length with examples of the martyrs drawn from 2 Maccabees, who preferred death to committing apostasy. The book was probably written by a Hellenistic Jew before 70 CE. In early Christianity the Maccabean martyrs were venerated as saints and eventually accorded a yearly festival in the ecclesiastical calendar (August 1).

Judith, Tobit, Susanna, and Bel and the Dragon are short historical fictions written to convey a moral point, as well as to entertain. Except for Judith, which is set in Judah, the rest are sometimes referred to as “Diaspora novels” since they are all set in the Jewish Diaspora of Mesopotamia. Yet they differ from one another in other respects. Like the canonical stories of Daniel 1–6, Bel and the Dragon is a court tale, in which the hero’s relationship with the king and other members of the court provides the conflict of the plot. The motif of the lion’s den, which occurs in Daniel 6, also occurs in the story of the dragon. In contrast to the earlier Daniel tales, however, Bel and the Dragon is preoccupied with the theme of the exposure of idols as false gods and their priests as fraudulent (see also the Letter of Jeremiah). Bel and the Dragon and Susanna are sometimes referred to as ancient examples of the detective story. Whereas Daniel functioned as an interpreter of dreams and visions in Daniel 1–6, in these stories Daniel uses cleverness and logical deduction to uncover deception.

Although Tobit, like Daniel, is presented as a court official of a Mesopotamian king, the story is concerned with personal and family affairs, not a rivalry at court. Thematically, Tobit may be compared with the prose story of Job, since it concerns the suffering of the righteous (both Tobit and his daughter-in-law Sarah). The book of Tobit is distinguished by the use of various folktale motifs (e.g., the motifs of the grateful dead, the angel in disguise, the dangerous bride, and the demon lover), and by its references to Ahikar, the hero of a non-Jewish folktale from Mesopotamia.

Judith might seem to bear comparison with 1 and 2 Maccabees, since it concerns a threat to the people from a foreign army. But whereas 1 and 2 Maccabees are histories, the fictional nature of Judith is evident from the story’s flagrant historical inaccuracies, such as describing Nebuchadnezzar as king of Assyria and the invasion as taking place after the people’s return from exile. A better comparison might be between Judith and Esther. Though set in Judah rather than the Diaspora, Judith, like Esther, tells how a courageous Jewish woman saves her people from enemies bent on destroying them.

Didactic literature is represented in the Apocrypha by the two treatises on wisdom: the Wisdom of Solomon, and the Wisdom of Jesus son of Sirach (also known as Ecclesiasticus). Sirach, which was originally composed in Hebrew ca. 180 BCE, shows particularly close connections with the style and content of the book of Proverbs in the Hebrew Bible, from which it is a natural development. The Wisdom of Solomon, by contrast, contains no proverbial material, such as characterizes the Hebrew wisdom tradition. It does, however, share with Proverbs and Sirach an interest in the figure of wisdom personified as a woman. What makes the Wisdom of Solomon distinctive is the strong influence of Greek literary styles and philosophical ideas. Thus, it comes from the Greek-speaking Diaspora, most probably from Alexandria in Egypt.

The Prayer of Manasseh is a hymnic lament of great feeling and literary skill. The Prayer of Azariah and the Song of the Three Jews are both modeled on psalms that are liturgical in form. In addition to the 150 psalms comprising the book of Psalms in the Hebrew Bible, during the Hellenistic and Roman periods such hymns were composed in Hebrew and in other languages; there are a number of such compositions in the Dead Sea Scrolls. Another, which celebrates the prowess of young David in slaying Goliath, is appended (as Ps 151) to the book of Psalms in Greek manuscripts.

The Hebrew Bible contains no books that are in the form of a letter, although letters or excerpts from letters occur at various places. There are decrees (Ezra 1.1–6), diplomatic correspondence (1 Kings 5.2–6), royal commands (2 Sam 11.14–15), even forgeries (1 Kings 21.8–10), but all are used to advance the narratives in which they occur, or explain incidents that follow, so it is unclear how representative they are. Twenty-one of the twenty-seven books of the New Testament are in the form of letters, but some (for instance, Hebrews) are more like sermons than letters. The Letter of Jeremiah, which dates from the Hellenistic period, may have provided later, Christian writers with an example of how this literary form could be used for religious purposes, combining theological content with a direct personal approach.

Finally, 2 Esdras, a book that purports to reveal the future, belongs to the genre of apocalypse, a word that literally means “an unveiling.” Like the last six chapters of Daniel in the Hebrew Bible and the book of Revelation in the New Testament, which also are apocalypses, 2 Esdras uses metaphoric language, symbolic numbers, and angelic messengers who reveal hidden information.

Despite this diversity of genres, most of which parallel or are developed from similar ones in the Hebrew Bible, there is no correlative to classical prophecy. Even within the prophetic books of the Hebrew Bible, apocalyptic elements had already begun to supplant strict prophecy (for instance, Isa chs 24–27; Ezek chs 38–39; Joel ch 2; Zech chs 9–14). This absence perhaps supports the view of the late first-century CE historian Josephus (Ag. Ap. 1.8), that “the exact succession of the prophets” had been broken after the Persian period; a similar idea is found in later rabbinic literature. Sometimes there is a direct statement that “prophets ceased to appear” (1 Macc 9.27); at other times the writers express the hope that prophecy might one day return (1 Macc 4.46; 14.41). When a writer imitates prophetic style, as in the book of Baruch, he repeats with slight modifications the language of the older prophets. But the introductory phrase, “Thus says the Lord,” which occurs so frequently in the prophetic literature of the Hebrew Bible, is absent from the Apocryphal/Deuterocanonical Books.

THE APOCRYPHAL/DEUTEROCANONICAL BOOKS WITHIN JUDAISM

All of the writings in the Apocryphal/Deuterocanonical books are Jewish in origin, but it is not clear that they were collected by any particular community of Jews. Some of them (for instance, Sirach) were quoted by rabbis, but for others no evidence exists that they were regarded as central to the Jewish community at any point. Some (Tobit, parts of Sirach, the Letter of Jeremiah, and Psalm 151) are among the Dead Sea Scrolls, and were therefore presumably of importance to the Essene community there, but whether or not they were considered canonical is not clear.

Nevertheless, influences from some of these works are apparent within Judaism. As mentioned above, rabbinic literature quotes and appropriates sayings from Sirach. The martyrdom of the woman and her seven sons (2 Macc 7.1–42; 4 Macc 8.3–18.24) is recounted in several places (Lam. Rab. 1.50; b. Git. 57b; Seder Eliyahu R. 29).

First and Second Maccabees (1 Macc 4.36–59; 2 Macc 10.1–8) provide the original accounts of the purification of the Temple in 164 BCE, which is commemorated in the festival of Hanukkah. The Talmudic legend (b. Shabb. 21b) that oil in the Temple, though only enough for one day nevertheless burned for eight—the supposed reason for the eight-day length of the observance—is not found in the books of Maccabees. Judith was, during the Middle Ages, associated with Hanukkah as well, on the grounds that both had to do with rallying an oppressed Jewish population to overthrow a threatening or occupying power.

Both Tobit and 2 Esdras influenced later Jewish literature and were popular during the Middle Ages. Baruch may have been read in synagogues at one time (see Bar 1.14), and Baruch himself, and therefore his writing, were regarded in some rabbinic writings as sharing Jeremiah’s prophetic status (Sifre Num. 78; Seder Olam R. 20; b. B. Bat. 14b; Jer. Sot. 9.12). Susanna’s story is recounted in the Babylonian Talmud (b. San. 93a).

The sense of a canon of scripture emerged only gradually in Judaism. During the time in which the Apocryphal/Deuterocanonical books were composed, the Torah (Pentateuch), the Prophets, and possibly the book of Psalms were considered authoritative. Many other writings, both those now in the Jewish canon and additional ones, were widely popular but did not have the status of scripture. A sense of a closed set of authoritative books emerged only in the first century CE, and even then there was some uncertainty about its extent. Josephus, however, says that “there are not with us myriads of books, discordant and discrepant, but only twenty-two, comprising the history of all time, which are justly accredited” (*Ag. Ap.*1.43).

Even if these additional writings were not considered scripture, they were often read and cited. Josephus himself makes use of 1 Esdras, 1 Maccabees, and the additions to Esther. Early rabbinic literature, however, makes no mention of any of these books except for Sirach, which is frequently quoted. The rabbis were, however, aware of the festival of Hanukkah, which is described in 1 and 2 Maccabees. During the Middle Ages, Jews became reacquainted with some of the Apocryphal/Deuterocanonical works from Christian sources and retranslated Tobit and Judith into Hebrew. The entire Apocrypha/Deuterocanon was translated into Hebrew in the early sixteenth century.

NEW TESTAMENT USES OF THE APOCRYPHAL/DEUTEROCANONICAL BOOKS

None of the books of the New Testament quotes directly from any Apocryphal book, in contrast to the frequent quotation of the thirty-nine books in the Hebrew Bible. Several New Testament writers, however, do allude to one or more apocryphal books. For example, what seem to be literary echoes from the Wisdom of Solomon are present in Paul’s Letter to the Romans (compare Rom 1.20–29 with Wis 13.5,8; 14.24,27; and Rom 9.20–23 with Wis 12.12,20; 15.7) and in his correspondence with the Corinthians (compare 2 Cor 5.1,4 with Wis 9.15). The short Letter of James, a typical bit of “wisdom literature” in the New Testament, contains allusions not only to the book of Proverbs in the Hebrew Bible but to gnomic sayings in Sirach as well (compare Jas 1.19 with Sir 5.11; and Jas 1.13 with Sir 15.11–12).

THE FURTHER INFLUENCE OF THE APOCRYPHAL/DEUTEROCANONICAL BOOKS

The influence of the Apocrypha has been widespread, inspiring homilies, meditations, and liturgical forms, and providing subjects for poets, dramatists, composers, and artists. Some common expressions and proverbs have come from the Apocrypha. The sayings, “A good name endures forever” and “You can’t touch pitch without being defiled,” are derived from Sir 41.13 and 13.1. The affirmation in 1 Esd 4.41, “Great is Truth, and mighty above all things” (King James Version), or its Latin form, Magna est veritas et praevalet, has been used as a motto or maxim in a wide variety of contexts.

The importance of these books extends to the information they supply concerning the development of Jewish life and thought just prior to the beginning of the Common Era. The stirring political fortunes of the Jews in the time of the Maccabees; the rise of what has been called normative Judaism, and the emergence of the sects of the Pharisees and the Sadducees; the lush growth of popular belief in the activities of angels and demons, and the use of magic to drive away malevolent influences; the first reflections on “original sin” and its relation to the “evil inclination” present in every person; the blossoming of apocalyptic hopes relating to the messiah, the resurrection of the body, and the vindication of the righteous—all these and many other topics are to be found in the Apocryphal/Deuterocanonical books.

(a) The books and parts of books from Tobit through 2 Maccabees are recognized as Deuterocanonical Scripture by the Roman Catholic, Greek, and Russian Orthodox Churches.

TOBIT

NAME AND CANONICAL STATUS

The book is named for its principal character, Tobit. The name is the Greek form of Hebrew Tobi, meaning “my good,” possibly an abbreviation for Tobiah, “Yahweh is my good,” or Tobiel, “God is my good.” The book is not included in the Protestant or Jewish canons, but it is canonical in the Roman Catholic and Orthodox Churches. The Anglican Church and some other communions also recognize Tobit as Scripture for the purpose of edification but not for doctrine.

AUTHORSHIP, TEXT, AND DATE OF COMPOSITION

The author of the book is unknown. Although the original language was likely Aramaic, only fragments of that text have survived. The translation below is based on the Greek text of Codex Sinaiticus; other versions include two additional Greek recensions, the Old Latin, Jerome’s Vulgate, a medieval Aramaic rendering, Coptic, Syriac, Ethiopic, and Armenian. Fragments in both Hebrew and Aramaic were found among the Dead Sea Scrolls. The book likely dates to sometime in the third or possibly early second century BCE; its place of composition remains unknown, with plausible suggestions including the eastern Diaspora, Egypt, and Israel.

CONTENTS AND STRUCTURE

After the Assyrian conquest of the Northern Kingdom of Israel in 722 BCE, Tobit, his wife Anna, and his son Tobias were exiled from their home in Galilee to Assyria. There Tobit, like Joseph (in Gen 39–50), Mordecai (in the book of Esther), and Daniel (in the book of Daniel), found himself in the service of a foreign ruler, as an officer in the court of the Assyrian king Shalmaneser. This pious Israelite too was tested: Shalmaneser’s successor removed Tobit from his official position and then persecuted him for his insistence on burying the unattended corpses of his fellow Jews. One evening, following yet another burial, Tobit was blinded by a bird with unfortunate aim. Dependent on others, including his wife, for economic support, and following an argument with her in which she questioned the value of his piety, Tobit prayed for death. At the same time his relative Sarah was also praying for death. The demon Asmodeus, who was in love with her, had killed each of her seven successive grooms on their wedding nights. To resolve these improbable situations, the angel Raphael, in disguise as Tobias’s traveling companion, escorts the young man first to Media to exorcise the demon and marry Sarah and then back to Nineveh to cure Tobit.

The complex plot is tied together by the parallel situations of Tobit and Sarah, prayers of praise and references to almsgiving, and frequent supernatural events. Its humorous aspects—from the angel in disguise to the attack of a magical fish—make the stories of Tobit and Sarah almost farcical and so prevent the book from becoming tragic or maudlin. Readers familiar with biblical literature will recognize familiar motifs and themes in the narrative: wisdom sayings; the antipathy between the matriarch Sarah and her slave Hagar (Gen 16; 21); the search for a bride for Isaac (Gen 24); the successes and trials of the Jew in the royal court; the problems of life in the Diaspora; Job’s trials; the role of angels; the centrality of Jerusalem; the fulfillment of prophecy; and, especially, the importance of charity. The numerous personal prayers, similar to those found in the stories of Judith, Daniel (including the Additions), the Greek Additions to Esther, and elsewhere in postexilic Jewish literature, emphasize the universal authority and righteousness of God.

INTERPRETATION AND GUIDE TO READING

Combining ethical exhortation and prayers with broad humor, a rollicking plot, and vivid characters, the book of Tobit is both entertaining and edifying. It offers to a Diaspora community guidelines on how to preserve their identity, to historians indirect information about the postexilic period, and to theologians a view of a God who tests the faithful, responds to prayers, and redeems the covenant community.

The book of Tobit is also replete with information concerning family life, travel, burial and eating customs, gender roles, and medicine. These matters testify to the author’s interest in providing guidance for life in Diaspora: Where Temple sacrifice is unavailable and the people are scattered, the story insists that Jews maintain their identity not only through piety and practice but also through strong bonds between parents and children, between husbands and wives, and with family members and fellow Jews. To preserve the community, Tobit insists that his son imitate Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, who “took wives from among their kindred” (4.12–13).

The book also has connections to well-known folktale motifs, including the dangerous bride, the monster in the nuptial chamber, the supernatural being in disguise, the miraculous animal, and the grateful dead. Specifically mentioned are the characters of an Assyrian official Ahikar and his nephew, from a story well known in antiquity; there may also be hints of Homer’s Odyssey and Sophocles’s Antigone.

1 This book tells the story of Tobit son of Tobiel son of Hananiel son of Aduel son of Gabael son of Raphael son of Raguel of the descendants^a of Asiel, of the tribe of Naphtali, ² who in the days of King Shalmaneser^b of the Assyrians was taken into captivity from Thisbe, which is to the south of Kedesh Naphtali in Upper Galilee, above Asher toward the west, and north of Phogor.

³I, Tobit, walked in the ways of truth and righteousness all the days of my life. I performed many acts of charity for my kindred and my people who had gone with me in exile to Nineveh in the land of the Assyrians. ⁴When I was in my own country, in the land of Israel, while I was still a young man, the whole tribe of my ancestor Naphtali deserted the house of David and Jerusalem. This city had been chosen from among all the tribes of Israel, where all the tribes of Israel should offer sacrifice and where the temple, the dwelling of God, had been consecrated and established for all generations forever.

⁵All my kindred and our ancestral house of Naphtali sacrificed to the calf^c that King Jeroboam of Israel had erected in Dan and on all the mountains of Galilee. ⁶But I alone went often to Jerusalem for the festivals, as it is prescribed for all Israel by an everlasting decree. I would hurry off to Jerusalem with the first fruits of the crops and the firstlings of the flock, the tithes of the cattle, and the first shearings of the sheep. ⁷I would give these to the priests, the sons of Aaron, at the altar; likewise the tenth of the grain, wine, olive oil, pomegranates, figs, and the rest of the fruits to the sons of Levi who ministered

1.1–2: Exilic context. The superscription establishes Tobit’s location and genealogy. 1: Tobiel, “God is my good”; Hananiel, “God has shown mercy”; the names of his family members have the suffix el, meaning “God.” Genealogy becomes increasingly important in Second Temple Judaism (see Ezra 2; 8.1–20; Neh 7.5–73; 11.1–12.26; Jdt 8; Mt 1; Lk 3). 2: Shalmaneser V, ruled 727–722 BCE. Shalmaneser’s predecessor, Tiglath-pileser III (ruled 745–727) deported the Naphtalites to Assyria (2 Kings 15.29); in 722 Sargon of Assyria, Shalmaneser’s brother and successor, conquered Samaria, Israel’s capital and resettled substantial portions of the population (2 Kings 17.1–6). Kedesh, in northern Galilee, defeated by Joshua (Josh 12.22; 19.37), was the home of Deborah’s general Barak (Judg 4.6) and site of a Maccabean victory (1 Macc 11.63,73). Asher may be a Greek spelling of Hazor, ca. 6 mi (10 km) south-southeast of Kedesh. Thisbe and Phogor have not been identified.

1.3–9: Tobit’s background. 3–4: Tobit, who speaks in the first person in 1.3–3.1, consistently emphasizes his own righteousness despite Israel’s apostasy. Walking in the ways of truth and righteousness is a prominent motif of the Israelite wisdom tradition (see Prov 2.7–9; 4.11). 3: Nineveh, the capital of Assyria. 4: Tobit’s life span, ranging from before 928 to after 722 BCE (but see 14.2), indicates the tale’s fictional nature (the book of Judith similarly displays chronological fiction). Naphtali was one of the ten northern tribes that rebelled in 928 BCE against the dynasty founded by David (1 Kings 12.19–20); Tobit nevertheless consistently expresses concern for Jerusalem, the capital of the Southern Kingdom of Judah. 5: Calf, 1 Kings 12.28–29; Dan is northeast of Kedesh (see 1.2n.). 6: Participation in the pilgrimage festivals (Deut 12.11) of Booths (Sukkot), Passover (Pesach), and Weeks (Shavuot/Pentecost) entailed the giving of first fruits (Deut 26.1–11), firstlings (Ex 13.12), tithes of the cattle (Lev 27.32), and first shearings of the sheep (Deut 18.4). The extent of Tobit’s pilgrimages and sacrificial activity emphasizes his faithfulness to the Torah, in contrast to his kin. 7–8: For tithing of produce, see Lev 27.30; Deut at Jerusalem. Also for six years I would save up a second tenth in money and go and distribute it in Jerusalem.⁸ A third tenth^a I would give to the orphans and widows and to the converts who had attached themselves to Israel. I would bring it and give it to them in the third year, and we would eat it according to the ordinance decreed concerning it in the law of Moses and according to the instructions of Deborah, the mother of my father Tobiel,^b for my father had died and left me an orphan.⁹ When I became a man I married a woman,^c a member of our own family, and by her I became the father of a son whom I named Tobias.

¹⁰ After I was carried away captive to Assyria and came as a captive to Nineveh, everyone of my kindred and my people ate the food of the Gentiles,¹¹ but I kept myself from eating the food of the Gentiles.¹² Because I was mindful of God with all my heart,¹³ the Most High gave me favor and good

14.22. For the distribution of tithes to Levites, orphans, and widows, see Deut 14.27–29. 8: Deborah indicates women's roles in religious education (see Prov 1.8; Sir 3.2); the name may have some connection to Kedesh and Naphtali (Judg 4–5; Tob 1.2n.). 9: Endogamy, i.e., marriage within the kinship group, is a major theme (3.17; 4.12–13; 6.11–12; 7.10–11; cf. Gen 11.29; 24.3–4; 27.46–28.2; Deut 7.3–4; Ezra 9–10; Neh 10.28–30; but contrast the marriages of Ruth and Esther). Inter-marriage became a particularly acute issue in the Diaspora.

1.10–22: Early captivity. The setting and Tobit's initial political success resemble that of Dan 1–6. Like Daniel and his companions (Dan 1.8–20), Esther (Add Esth 14.17), and Judith (Jdt 12.1–3), Tobit follows Jewish dietary laws (e.g., Lev 11.1–47; Deut 14.3–21). 13: Tobit regards his political office as steward as a reward for righteous-standing with Shalmaneser,^a and I used to buy everything he needed.¹⁴ Until his death I used to go into Media, and buy for him there. While in the country of Media I left bags of silver worth ten talents in trust with Gabael, the brother of Gabri.¹⁵ But when Shalmaneser^a died, and his son Sennacherib reigned in his place, the highways into Media became unsafe and I could no longer go there.

¹⁶In the days of Shalmaneser^a I performed many acts of charity to my kindred, those of my tribe.¹⁷ I would give my food to the hungry and my clothing to the naked; and if I saw the dead body of any of my people thrown out behind the wall of Nineveh, I would bury it.¹⁸ I also buried any whom King Sennacherib put to death when he came fleeing from Judea in those days of judgment that the king of heaven executed upon him because of his blasphemies. For in his anger he put to death many Israelites; but I would secretly remove the bodies and bury them. So when Sennacherib looked for them he could not find them.¹⁹ Then one of the Ninevites went and informed the king about me, that I was burying them; so I hid myself. But when I realized that the king knew about me and that I was being searched for to be put to death, I was afraid and ran away.²⁰ Then all my property was confiscated; nothing was left to me that was not taken into the royal treasury except my wife Anna and my son Tobias.

²¹But not forty^b days passed before two of Sennacherib's^c sons killed him, and they fled to the mountains of Ararat, and his son Esarhaddon^d reigned after him. He appointed Ahikar, the son of my brother Hanael^e over all the accounts of his kingdom, and he had authority over the entire administration.

²²Ahikar interceded for me, and I returned to Nineveh. Now Ahikar was chief cup-bearer, keeper of the signet, and in charge of administration of the accounts under King Sennacherib of Assyria; so Esar-haddon^d reappointed him. He was my nephew and so a close relative.

2 Then during the reign of Esar-haddon^d I returned home, and my wife Anna and my son Tobias were restored to me. At our festival of Pentecost, which is the sacred festival of weeks, a good dinner was prepared for me and I reclined to eat.² When the table was set for me and an abundance of food placed before me, I said to my son Tobias, "Go, my child, and bring whatever poor person you may find of our people among the exiles in Nineveh, who is wholeheartedly mindful of God,^f and he shall eat together with me. I will wait for you, until you come back."³ So Tobias went to look for some poor person of our people. When he had returned he said, "Father!" And I replied, "Here I am, my child."

ness; later events temporarily question such justice. Shalmaneser, see 1.2n. 14: Media (northern Iran) is east of Assyria; on Israelites exiled there, see 2 Kings 17.6. Ten talents is approximately 750 lb (350 kg). 15: Sargon II (ruled 721–705 BCE), not Shalmaneser, was Sennacherib's father (see 1.2n., 18–20n.). Similar historical inaccuracies mark the opening of the book of Judith. 16–17: Tobit continues his earlier charitable works (1.3). Burying corpses is his principal sign of righteousness (1.18–20; 2.3–8; 4.3–4; 6.15; 14.10–133); their unburied presence indicates Assyria's brutality (Deut 28.26; 1 Kings 14.11; 21.24; Jer 7.33; Ezek 29.5), for even executed criminals deserved proper burial (Deut 21.22–23). Nineveh, see 1.3n. 18: Sennacherib (ruled 705–681) succeeded his father Sargon II in 705 BCE. Fleeing . . . in those days of judgment, a reference to the defeat of Sennacherib by divine intervention; see 2 Kings 19.35–36. 19: Like Sophocles's Antigone, Tobit is threatened with death for burying the executed; cf. 2 Sam 21.8–14. 20: Like Daniel and his companions (Dan 3; 6), Tobit is persecuted for practicing Jewish piety. 21: Killed him, see 2 Kings 19.37. Esar-haddon reigned 681–669 BCE. 21–22: Ahikar is a well-known figure in Semitic stories; a copy of the Aramaic book of Ahikar, dating to the early fifth century BCE, was found among a cache of papyri from a Jewish colony in Elephantine in southern Egypt. Ahikar's relationship to Tobit, noted only in this book, enhances Tobit's status. Ahikar's own story is summarized in 14.10; cf. 2.10; 11.18.

2.1–10: Tobit's blindness. Tobit's charity toward others results in his being blinded. 1: Pentecost, the spring harvest of Weeks, also known as Shavuot (Lev 23.15–21; Deut 16.9–12; 2 Chr 8.13). 2: Tobit consistently demon-

Then he went on to say, “Look, father, one of our own people has been murdered and thrown into the market place, and now he lies there strangled.”⁴ Then I sprang up, left the dinner before even tasting it, and removed the body^a from the square^b and laid it^a in one of the rooms until sunset when I might bury it.⁵ When I returned, I washed myself and ate my food in sorrow.⁶ Then I remembered the prophecy of Amos, how he said against Bethel,^c

“Your festivals shall be turned into mourning, and all your songs into lamentation.”
And I wept.

⁷ When the sun had set, I went and dug a grave and buried him.⁸ And my neighbors laughed and said, “Is he still not afraid? He has already been hunted down to be put to death for doing this, and he ran away; yet here he is again burying the dead!”⁹ That same night I washed myself and went into my courtyard and slept by the wall of the courtyard; and my face was uncovered because of the heat.¹⁰ I did not know that there were sparrows on the wall; their fresh droppings fell into my eyes and produced white films. I went to physicians to be healed, but the more they treated me with ointments the more my vision was obscured by the white films, until I became completely blind. For four years I remained unable to see. All my kindred were sorry for me, and Ahikar took care of me for two years before he went to Elymais.

¹¹ At that time, also, my wife Anna earned money at women’s work.¹² She used to send what she made to the owners and they would pay wages to her. One day, the seventh of Dystrus, when she cut off a piece she had woven and sent it to the owners, they paid her full wages and also gave her a young goat for a meal.¹³ When she returned to me, the goat began to bleat. So I called her and said, “Where did you get this goat? It is surely not stolen, is it? Return it to the owners; for we have no right to eat anything stolen.”¹⁴ But she said to me, “It was given to me as a gift in addition to my wages.” But I did not believe her, and told her to return it to the owners. I became flushed with anger against her over this. Then she replied to me, “Where are your acts of charity? Where are your righteous deeds? These things are known about you!”^d

3 Then with much grief and anguish of heart I wept, and with groaning began to pray:

² “You are righteous, O Lord, and all your deeds are just;
all your ways are mercy and truth;
you judge the world.”^e strates charity toward his people in exile (4.7–11,16). 5: Washed, Num 19.11–13 commands washing as purification after contact with a corpse. 6: Amos 8.10, one of the few scriptural citations in the book and another sign of composition in the Second Temple period. 9: It is unclear why Tobit sleeps outside, especially since after moving the corpse he did return home to eat dinner (v. 5). If the concern is for ritual purity following contact with a corpse, see Num 19.11–22. A similar connection of dinner and gravedigging, but with humorous overtones, appears in 8.9–11. 10: Droppings, Tobit is blinded in an ignominious and perhaps farcical manner. Ahikar, see 1.21–22n. Elymais, earlier Elam, a region in northwestern Persia.

2.11–14: The argument. Now dependent on others, Tobit becomes increasingly despondent. 11: Women’s work is weaving (cf. Prov 31.13,24); Tobit’s earlier source of income, aside from investments, is unmentioned. 12: At this verse and at 2.15–16, the Vulgate adds a comparison of Tobit to Job and thus an implied comparison of Anna to Job’s wife. Dystrus, the fifth month in the Macedonian calendar (February/March), corresponding to the Jewish month of Shebat. The use of the Macedonian name is an indication of the Hellenistic date of Tobit. 13: The outburst nuances Tobit’s claims of righteousness and may also reflect his feeling of dishonor in being supported by a woman (Sir 25.22). 14: Like Job’s wife (Job 2.9), Anna questions the relationship between righteous deeds and a good life.

3.1–6: Tobit’s prayer. The fight, coupled with Anna’s observations about justice, not Tobit’s blindness, causes him to seek death. Personal prayer is a major motif of this book (3.11–15; 8.4–8,15–17; 13.1–17) as well as

³ And now, O Lord, remember me and look favorably upon me.
Do not punish me for my sins and for my unwitting offenses and those that my ancestors committed before you.

They sinned against you,
⁴ and disobeyed your commandments.
So you gave us over to plunder, exile, and
death,
to become the talk, the byword, and an object of reproach
among all the nations among whom you have dispersed us.

⁵ And now your many judgments are true in exacting penalty from me for my sins.
For we have not kept your commandments and have not walked in accordance with truth before you.

⁶ So now deal with me as you will;
command my spirit to be taken from
me,
so that I may be released from the face of the earth and become dust.
For it is better for me to die than to live, because I have had to listen to undeserved insults,
and great is the sorrow within me.
Command, O Lord, that I be released from this distress;
release me to go to the eternal home,
and do not, O Lord, turn your face away from me.

For it is better for me to die than to see so much distress in my life and to listen to insults.”

⁷ On the same day, at Ecbatana in Media, it also happened that Sarah, the daughter of Raguel, was reproached by one of her father's maids. ⁸ For she had been married to seven husbands, and the wicked demon Asmodeus had killed each of them before they had been with her as is customary for wives. So the maid said to her, “You are the one who kills^a your husbands! See, you have already been married to seven husbands and have not borne the name of^b a single one of them.
⁹ Why do you beat us? Because your husbands are dead? Go with them! May we never see a son or daughter of yours!”

¹⁰ On that day she was grieved in spirit and wept. When she had gone up to her father's upper room, she intended to hang herself. But she thought it over and said, “Never shall they reproach my father, saying to him, ‘You had only one beloved daughter but she hanged herself because of her distress.’ And I shall bring my father in his old age down in sorrow to Hades. It is better for me not to hang myself, but to pray the Lord that I may die and not listen to these reproaches anymore.”

in Hellenistic Jewish literature in general (see Jdt 9; Esth 14.1–9; Song of Thr; Sus; 1 Macc 7.37–38). 3–4: Tobit admits his own sin and the sin of his ancestors (see Ex 20.5–6). The theology, which posits that plunder, exile, and death are occasioned by sin, is complicated by the plot, in which the righteous Tobit and Sarah suffer. Attribution of the exile to the people's sin is a common biblical idea. 6: Command my spirit to be taken from me, Moses (Num 11.15), Elijah (1 Kings 19.4), and Jonah (Jon 4.8) similarly pray for release from suffering. Undeserved insults were directed at Tobit by his neighbors (2.8); Tobit does not reflect upon his undeserved insult to Anna. To become dust evokes Gen 3.19. The request for death is reminiscent of Job 3; cf. Jer 20.14–18. The eternal home likely refers not to immortality of the soul or eternal life, but either to the grave (see Job 34.15; Ps 104.29) or to Sheol, the realm of the dead (see Job 7.9–10; 14.10–13).

3.7–15: Sarah's plight and prayer. The scene shifts to Ecbatana in Media (modern Hamadan, in Iran), ca. 325 mi (525 km) east-southeast of Nineveh, and the narration shifts from first to third person as, on the same day, Sarah's plight parallels that of Tobit. 7: Reproached, like Sarah of Gen 16.4–6, this Sarah also has no children and abuses her tormentor. 8: The earliest literary mention of Asmodeus; his name derives from either the Persian expression “aeshma Daeva” meaning “demon of wrath,” or Heb “shamad,” meaning “to destroy.” 10: Sarah intended to hang herself, but concern for her father prevents suicide. The Bible does not condemn those who commit suicide (e.g. Saul [1 Sam 31.4–5], Ahithophel [2 Sam 17.23], Zimri [1 Kings 16.18], Razis [2 Macc 14.41–46]), but suicide is implicitly forbidden in Gen 9.4–6 and Ex 20.13. Hades, for this text the Greek equivalent of Sheol, the abode of the dead. Like Tobit, Sarah seeks to escape a woman's reproaches. 11: Hands outstretched is a com-

¹¹ At that same time, with hands outstretched toward the window, she prayed and said, “Blessed are you, merciful God!

Blessed is your name forever;
let all your works praise you forever.

¹² And now, Lord,^a I turn my face to you, and raise my eyes toward you.

¹³ Command that I be released from the earth and not listen to such reproaches any more.

¹⁴ You know, O Master, that I am innocent of any defilement with a man,

¹⁵ and that I have not disgraced my name or the name of my father in the land of my exile.

I am my father’s only child;
he has no other child to be his heir;
and he has no close relative or other kindred
for whom I should keep myself as wife.
Already seven husbands of mine have died.
Why should I still live?

But if it is not pleasing to you, O Lord, to take my life,
hear me in my disgrace.”

¹⁶ At that very moment, the prayers of both of them were heard in the glorious presence of God. ¹⁷ So Raphael was sent to heal both of them: Tobit, by removing the white films from his eyes, so that he might see God’s light with his eyes; and Sarah, daughter of Raguel, by giving her in marriage to Tobias son of Tobit, and by setting her free from the wicked demon Asmodeus. For Tobias was entitled to have her before all others who had desired to marry her. At the same time that Tobit returned from the courtyard into his house, Sarah daughter of Raguel came down from her upper room.

4 That same day Tobit remembered the money that he had left in trust with Gabael at Rages in Media,² and he said to himself, “Now I have asked for death. Why do I not call my son Tobias and explain to him about the money before I die?”³ Then he called his son Tobias, and when he came to him he said, “My son, when I die,^b give me a proper burial. Honor your mother and do not abandon her all the days of her life. Do whatever pleases her, and do not grieve her in anything.”⁴ Remember her, my son, because she faced many dangers for you while you were in her womb. And when she dies, bury her beside me in the same grave.

⁵ “Revere the Lord all your days, my son, and refuse to sin or to transgress his commandments. Live uprightly all the days of

mon posture for prayer (Ezra 9.5; Dan 6.10). Blessed are you is the traditional opening of Jewish prayers (8.5,15; Jdt 13.17). 13–15: Sarah more quickly than Tobit pleads for death, though, unlike Tobit, she adds only if death is pleasing to God; in contrast to Tobit, she does not confess sins but instead protests her innocence. 14–15: Women’s chastity and honor are also prominent themes in the books of Judith and Susanna. A close relative suggests levirate law (Deut 25.5–10); Sarah is not aware that another relative and thus a potential husband, Tobias, exists.

3.16–17: Divine response. The fates of the supplicants are intertwined by Raphael’s dual mission. 16: Seven angels stand in the glorious presence of God to express human prayers and fulfill God’s replies (see 12.15n.). 17: Raphael’s name means “God has healed.” Entitled, by being a near relation (6.12; see 3.14–15n.). The style shifts to third-person narration.

4.1–13: Tobit’s advice on the family. Tobit offers a “testament” or “farewell discourse,” a common literary genre in biblical texts (Gen 48–49 [Jacob]; the book of Deuteronomy [Moses]; Josh 22–24 [Joshua]; 1 Chr 28–29 [David]) as well as in Hellenistic writings (1 Enoch 81; Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs), in which a father offers his children ethical advice and prophetic insight. Chapter 14 provides a second example. 1: Money, see 1.14. Rages is just east of modern Teheran. 3: Burial, Tobit asks for what he provided others (on this familial responsibility, see also Lk 9.59). Honoring one’s mother is commanded in the Decalogue (Ex 20.12; Deut 5.16; see also Prov 23.22; Sir 3.12–15; 7.27–28). 6–7: Tobit’s circumstances (temporarily) conflict with the comments typical and do not let your eye begrudge the gift when you make it. Do not turn your face away from anyone who is poor, and the face of God will not be turned away from you.⁸ If you have many possessions, make your gift from them in proportion; if few, do not be afraid to give according to the little you have.⁹ So you will be laying up a good treasure for yourself against the day of necessity.¹⁰ For almsgiving delivers from death and keeps you from going into the Darkness.¹¹ Indeed, almsgiving, for all who practice it, is an excellent offering in the presence of the Most High.

¹²“Beware, my son, of every kind of fornication. First of all, marry a woman from among the descendants of your ancestors; do not marry a foreign woman, who is not of your father’s tribe; for we are the descendants of the prophets. Remember, my son, that Noah, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, our ancestors of old, all took wives from among their kindred. They were blessed in their children, and their posterity will inherit the land.¹³ So now, my son, love your kindred, and in your heart do not disdain your kindred, the sons and daughters of your people, by refusing to take a wife for yourself from among them. For in pride there is ruin and great confusion. And in idleness there is loss and dire poverty, because idleness is the mother of famine.

¹⁴“Do not keep over until the next day the wages of those who work for you, but pay them at once. If you serve God you will receive payment. Watch yourself, my son, in everything you do, and discipline yourself in all your conduct.¹⁵ And what you hate, do not do to anyone. Do not drink wine to excess or let drunkenness go with you on your way.¹⁶ Give some of your food to the hungry, and some of your clothing to the naked. Give all your surplus as alms, and do not let your eye begrudge your giving of alms.¹⁷ Place your bread on the grave of the righteous, but give none to sinners.¹⁸ Seek advice from every wise person and do not despise any useful counsel.¹⁹ At all times bless the Lord God, and ask him that your ways may be made straight and that all your paths and plans may prosper. For none of the nations has understanding, but the Lord himself will give them good counsel; but if he chooses otherwise, he casts down to deepest Hades. So now, my child, remember these commandments, and do not let them be erased from your heart.

²⁰“And now, my son, let me explain to you that I left ten talents of silver in trust with Gabael son of Gabrias, at Rages in Media.

of wisdom literature (e.g., Prov 10.27–30). 8: Giving what one can is a prominent motif in Jewish-Hellenistic (Testament of Issachar), early Christian (Lk 21.1–4; 2 Cor 8.12), and rabbinic (b. Git. 7a) writing. 10: Delivers from death probably suggests a long life, not an eternal one. Darkness, that is, the grave. 11: Almsgiving is consistently emphasized (12.8–9; 14.10–11; see also Lev 23.22; Ps 112.9; Prov 14.21,31; Isa 58.6–8; Sir 3.30–31; 34.18–35.4). 12–13: Consistent with the instructions of wisdom literature (Prov 5.20; 6.24), Tobit warns about the evils of sexual sin and foreign women. Fornication refers to any intercourse outside of marriage. On endogamy, see 1.9n. Genesis does not record the ancestry of Noah’s wife, though Jubilees (4.33), an early Second Temple text, does. The reference to pride suggests Prov 16.18.

4.14–19: Popular wisdom. Following instructions on marriage, Tobit returns to the conventional advice begun in 4.5–10. 14: Do not keep over, see Lev 19.13; Deut 24.15. 15: The “golden rule” appears throughout ancient writing (Ahikar; Mt 7.12; Lk 6.31; b. Shabb. 31a). On drunkenness, see Prov 23.29–35; Sir 31.25–30; Tobit’s point is not abstinence but avoiding excess. 16: Alms, see v. 11n. 17: The grave of the righteous may refer to food given to mourners (see Ps 106.28) or to meals offered to the dead. The Tale of Ahikar (see 1.21–22n.) mentions this latter forbidden (Deut 26.14) and decried (Sir 30.18) practice. 19: Ways . . . made straight, see Prov 3.6; 11.5; Ps 5.8; Isa 45.13. The view that none of the nations has understanding (see Deut 32.28) comports with the condition of exile. Hades, see 3.10n.

4.20–5.3: Obtaining funds left in trust. Tobias is to obtain wealth from righteousness and, more directly, from his father’s banked funds. The fear of God is a common theme in wisdom literature (see Prov 1.7; 10.27; 15.16; 22.4). 4.20: Ten talents, see 1.14n. 5.1–2: Tobias’s positive response echoes Ex 19.8; Ruth 3.5. However, like Moses (Ex 3), he also questions his commission.

5 Then Tobias answered his father Tobit, “I will do everything that you have commanded me, father;² but how can I obtain the money^a from him, since he does not know me and I do not know him? What evidence^b am I to give him so that he will recognize and trust me, and give me the money? Also, I do not know the roads to Media, or how to get there.”³ Then Tobit answered his son Tobias, “He gave me his bond and I gave him my bond. I^c divided his in two; we each took one part, and I put one with the money. And now twenty years have passed since I left this money in trust. So now, my son, find yourself a trustworthy man to go with you, and we will pay him wages until you return. But get back the money from Gabael.”^d

⁴ So Tobias went out to look for a man to go with him to Media, someone who was acquainted with the way. He went out and found the angel Raphael standing in front of him; but he did not perceive that he was an angel of God. ⁵ Tobias^e said to him, “Where do you come from, young man?” “From your kindred, the Israelites,” he replied, “and I have come here to work.” Then Tobias^f said to him, “Do you know the way to go to Media?” ⁶ “Yes,” he replied, “I have been there many times; I am acquainted with it and know all the roads. I have often traveled to Media, and would stay with our kinsman Gabael who lives in Rages of Media. It is a journey of two days from Ecbatana to Rages; for it lies in a mountainous area, while Ecbatana is in the middle of the plain.” ⁷ Then Tobias said to him, “Wait for me, young man, until I go in and tell my father; for I do need you to travel with me, and I will pay you your wages.” ⁸ He replied, “All right, I will wait; but do not take too long.”

⁹ So Tobias^f went in to tell his father Tobit and said to him, “I have just found a man who is one of our own Israelite kindred!” He replied, “Call the man in, my son, so that I may learn about his family and to what tribe he belongs, and whether he is trustworthy enough to go with you.”

¹⁰ Then Tobias went out and called him, and said, “Young man, my father is calling for you.” So he went in to him, and Tobit greeted him first. He replied, “Joyous greetings to you!” But Tobit retorted, “What joy is left for me any more? I am a man without eyesight; I cannot see the light of heaven, but I lie in darkness like the dead who no longer see the light. Although still alive, I am among the dead. I hear people but I cannot see them.” But the young man^f said, “Take courage; the time is near for God to heal you; take courage.” Then Tobit said to him, “My son Tobias wishes to go to Media. Can you accompany him and guide him? I will pay your wages, brother.” He answered, “I can go with him and I know all the roads, for I have often gone to Media and have crossed all its plains, and I am familiar with its mountains and all of its roads.”

¹¹ Then Tobit^f said to him, “Brother, of what family are you and from what tribe? Tell me, brother.” ¹² He replied, “Why do you need to know my tribe?” But Tobit^f said, “I want to be sure, brother, whose son you are and what your name is.” ¹³ He replied, “I am Azariah, the son of the great Hananiah, one of your

5.4–17: Raphael’s disguise. Disguised heavenly beings are a stock motif in folklore (as in The Odyssey, in which Athena accompanies Telemachus), and angelic appearances are frequent in biblical stories (e.g., Gen 18.1–15; Judg 13). That readers know more than Tobit and his family adds to the entertainment of the tale. 4: Standing in front of him, the immediacy of the angel’s appearance suggests the miraculous. Raphael, see 3.17n. 5: Young man: Tobias better fits this description; the humor of mistaken identities continues. 6: Two days: Rages is 185 mi (300 km) from Ecbatana; this journey would take far longer for anyone other than an angel. Ecbatana is not in the middle of a plain, but in the mountains; the story is as loose with geographical as with chronological and historical details (see 1.4n.; 1.15n.). 10: Having prayed for death (3.6), Tobit perceives himself as among the dead. The reference to divine healing recalls Raphael’s name (see 3.17n.). 11–12: The angel appears to be reluctant to reveal his family and tribe. 13: The pseudonyms point to Raphael’s roles: Azariah is Hebrew for “God relatives.”¹⁴ Then Tobit said to him, “Welcome! God save you, brother. Do not feel bitter toward me, brother, because I wanted to be sure about your ancestry. It turns out that you are a kinsman, and of good and noble lineage. For I knew Hananiah and Nathan,^a the two sons of Shemeliah,^b and they used to go with me to Jerusalem and worshiped with me there, and were not led astray. Your kindred are good people; you come of good stock. Hearty welcome!”

¹⁵ Then he added, “I will pay you a drachma a day as wages, as well as expenses for yourself and my son. So go with my son,¹⁶ and^c I will add something to your wages.” Raphael^d answered, “I will go with him; so do not fear. We shall leave in good health and return to you in good health, because the way is safe.”¹⁷ So Tobit^e said to him, “Blessings be upon you, brother.”

Then he called his son and said to him, “Son, prepare supplies for the journey and set out with your brother. May God in heaven bring you safely there and return you in good health to me; and may his angel, my son, accompany you both for your safety.”

Before he went out to start his journey, he kissed his father and mother. Tobit then said to him, “Have a safe journey.”

¹⁸ But his mother^f began to weep, and said to Tobit, “Why is it that you have sent my child away? Is he not the staff of our hand as he goes in and out before us? ¹⁹ Do not heap money upon money, but let it be a ransom for our child. ²⁰ For the life that is given to us by the Lord is enough for us.”

²¹ Tobit^d said to her, “Do not worry; our child will leave in good health and return to us in good health. Your eyes will see him on the day when he returns to you in good health. Say no more! Do not fear for them, my sister. ²² For a good angel will accompany him; his journey will be successful, and 6 he will come back in good health.” ¹ So she stopped weeping.

The young man went out and the angel went with him;² and the dog came out with him and went along with them. So they both journeyed along, and when the first night overtook them they camped by the Tigris river. ³ Then the young man went down to wash his feet in the Tigris river. Suddenly a large fish leaped up from the water and tried to swallow the young man’s foot, and he cried out. ⁴ But the angel said to the young man, “Catch hold of the fish and hang on to it!” So the young man grasped the fish and drew it up on the land. ⁵ Then the angel said to him, “Cut open the fish and take out its gall, heart, and liver. Keep them with you, but throw away the intestines. For its gall, heart, and liver are useful as medicine.” ⁶ So after cutting open has helped”; Hananiah means “God is merciful.” 14: Reference to the righteous sons of Shemeliah belies Tobit’s claim (1.5–6) that he alone was faithful. 15: Tobit’s financial arrangements are generous. 17: Tobit’s prayer for angelic accompaniment (also 5.22) is already answered, adding an ironic note to the scene. Tobias’s journey will resemble earlier quests for brides, although he does not yet know this (cf. Gen 24.40).

5.18–6.1a: Anna’s lament. The couple alternate between practical observations and theological reflection (cf. 10.1–7). 18: My child, Anna’s maternal worry is palpable. The staff of our hand, a reliable person upon whom they can lean (see 2 Kings 18.21). 19: Ransom suggests that Gabael should keep the funds as though they were ransom for Tobias. 21: My sister, a term of affection for a lover or spouse (see Song 4.9,10). 22: A good angel does accompany Tobias, although Tobit does not know this.

6.1b–9: Dangerous journey. Still disguised, Raphael will protect Tobias from dangerous fish and provide instruction for protection against lecherous demons. 2: The dog (see also 11.4) adds an intimate touch and may suggest Odysseus’s faithful pet (Odyssey 17.289–327). The Tigris is west of Nineveh; the geography remains fanciful. 3: The unexpected large fish may be a parody of the Jonah story (Jon 1.7), in which a large fish swallows someone heading eventually toward Nineveh. 5: Raphael’s instructions are consistent with ancient medical texts that provide instructions for the use of fish organs. Gall, i.e., bile, is a bitter digestive juice recognized as the fish the young man gathered together the gall, heart, and liver; then he roasted and ate some of the fish, and kept some to be salted.

The two continued on their way together until they were near Media.^a ⁷ Then the young man questioned the angel and said to him, “Brother Azariah, what medicinal value is there in the fish’s heart and liver, and in the gall?” ⁸ He replied, “As for the fish’s heart and liver, you must burn them to make a smoke in the presence of a man or woman afflicted by a demon or evil spirit, and every affliction will flee away and never remain with that person any longer. ⁹ And as for the gall, anoint a person’s eyes where white films have appeared on them; blow upon them, upon the white films, and the eyes^b will be healed.”

¹⁰ When he entered Media and already was approaching Ecbatana,^c ¹¹ Raphael said to the young man, “Brother Tobias.” “Here I am,” he answered. Then Raphael^d said to him, “We must stay this night in the home of Raguel. He is your relative, and he has a daughter named Sarah. ¹² He has no male heir and no daughter except Sarah only, and you, as next of kin to her, have before all other men a hereditary claim on her. Also it is right for you to inherit her father’s possessions. Moreover, the girl is sensible, brave, and very beautiful, and her father is a good man.” ¹³ He continued, “You have every right to take her in marriage. So listen to me, brother; tonight I will speak to her father about the girl, so that we may take her to be your bride. When we return from Rages we will celebrate her marriage. For I know that Raguel can by no means keep her from you or promise her to another man without incurring the penalty of death according to the decree of the book of Moses. Indeed he knows that you, rather than any other man, are entitled to marry his daughter. So now listen to me, brother, and tonight we shall speak concerning the girl and arrange her engagement to you. And when we return from Rages we will take her and bring her back with us to your house.”

¹⁴ Then Tobias said in answer to Raphael, “Brother Azariah, I have heard that she already has been married to seven husbands and that they died in the bridal chamber. On the night when they went in to her, they would die. I have heard people saying that it was a demon that killed them. ¹⁵ It does not harm her, but it kills anyone who desires to approach her. So now, since I am the only son my father has, I am afraid that I may die and bring my father’s and mother’s life down to their grave, grieving for me—and they have no other son to bury them.”

¹⁶ But Raphael^d said to him, “Do you not remember your father’s orders when he commanded you to take a wife from your father’s house? Now listen to me, brother, and say no more about this demon. Take her. I know that this very night she will be given to you in marriage. ¹⁷ When you enter the bridal chamber, take some of the fish’s liver and heart, and put them on the embers of the incense. An odor will be given off; ¹⁸ the demon will smell it and flee, and will never be seen near her any more. Now when you are having medicinal properties. 6: No reference is made to the angel’s eating (see Judg. 13.16). 8: To make a smoke, or to fumigate, was a standard means for healing and exorcising demons. Explicit reference to a woman foreshadows Sarah’s role.

6.10–18: Prenuptial instructions. Raphael now reveals the additional purpose of their journey; knowing Sarah’s past luck with marriages, Tobias is understandably reluctant but quickly warms to the prospect of marrying her. 12: No male heir, although Israelite inheritance laws were patrilineal, brotherless daughters could inherit if they married within the tribe (Num 27.1–11; 36.1–13). Next of kin refers to levirate law (3.14–15n.); by marrying Sarah, Tobias will obtain Raguel’s estate. 13: Penalty of death: no such law exists. 14–15: Tobias’s hesitancy—he mentions the death of Sarah’s husbands four times in vv. 14–15—increases the tension; his fear is not primarily for his own life, but for the grief his death will cause his parents (see 3.10). 16: Raphael eases Tobias’s fear by repeating his concern for his parents, but changing his focus. 17: On fumigating as an exorcism technique, see 6.8n. 18: Raphael’s advice, coupled with the announcement that the match was made in heaven and that Sarah is Tobias’s relative, both calms the young man’s fears and prompts his love.

about to go to bed with her, both of you must first stand up and pray, imploring the Lord of heaven that mercy and safety may be granted to you. Do not be afraid, for she was set apart for you before the world was made. You will save her, and she will go with you. I presume that you will have children by her, and they will be as brothers to you. Now say no more!" When Tobias heard the words of Raphael and learned that she was his kinswoman,^a related through his father's lineage, he loved her very much, and his heart was drawn to her.

7 Now when they^b entered Ecbatana, Tobias^c said to him, "Brother Azariah, take me straight to our brother Raguel." So he took him to Raguel's house, where they found him sitting beside the courtyard door. They greeted him first, and he replied, "Joyous greetings, brothers; welcome and good health!" Then he brought them into his house.² He said to his wife Edna, "How much the young man resembles my kinsman Tobit!"³ Then Edna questioned them, saying, "Where are you from, brothers?" They answered, "We belong to the descendants of Naphtali who are exiles in Nineveh."⁴ She said to them, "Do you know our kinsman Tobit?" And they replied, "Yes, we know him." Then she asked them, "Is he^d in good health?"⁵ They replied, "He is alive and in good health." And Tobias added, "He is my father!"⁶ At that Raguel jumped up and kissed him and wept.⁷ He also spoke to him as follows, "Blessings on you, my child, son of a good and noble father!^e O most miserable of calamities that such an upright and beneficent man has become blind!" He then embraced his kinsman Tobias and wept.⁸ His wife Edna also wept for him, and their daughter Sarah likewise wept.⁹ Then Raguel^c slaughtered a ram from the flock and received them very warmly.

When they had bathed and washed themselves and had reclined to dine, Tobias said to Raphael, "Brother Azariah, ask Raguel to give me my kinswoman^a Sarah."¹⁰ But Raguel overheard it and said to the lad, "Eat and drink, and be merry tonight. For no one except you, brother, has the right to marry my daughter Sarah. Likewise I am not at liberty to give her to any other man than yourself, because you are my nearest relative. But let me explain to you the true situation more fully, my child."¹¹ I have given her to seven men of our kinsmen, and all died on the night when they went in to her. But now, my child, eat and drink, and the Lord will act on behalf of you both." But Tobias said, "I will neither eat nor drink anything until you settle the things that pertain to me." So Raguel said, "I will do so. She is given to you in accordance with the decree in the book of Moses, and it has been decreed from heaven that she be given to you. Take your kinswoman;^a from now on you are her brother and she is your sister. She is given to you from today and forever. May the Lord of heaven, my child, guide and prosper you both this night and grant you mercy and peace."¹² Then Raguel summoned his daughter Sarah. When she came to him he took her by the hand and

7:1–16: Tobit and Sarah marry. Raguel and Edna's welcome repeats the themes of family connections. 1: Raguel's name is connected to Reuel, Moses' father-in-law (Ex 2.18; Num 10.29); the name is also shared with an archangel in Enoch 20.4. Ecbatana, see 5.6n. 3: Edna asks the more pertinent questions; the scene echoes Gen 28.1–5. 5: Tobias does not mention his father's illness. 7: The source of Raguel's knowledge of Tobit's blindness is not cited. 9: Bathed and washed and reclined to dine indicate common customs of hospitality, cf. Gen 18.1–8; Lk 7.44–46. 10–11: The juxtaposition of death threats and joyous feasting is humorous; not every groom would appreciate Sarah's true situation. Raguel must follow the decree in the book of Moses regarding the rightful spouse for Sarah (see 3.14–15n.), but he is also concerned about the fate of her husbands. I will neither eat nor drink, Tobias begins to take charge of his fate. Sister, see 5.21n. 12–15: The decree is Num 36.8; Raguel repeats the idea (6.18) that Sarah is Tobias's divinely appointed wife. 12: Raguel summoned his daughter because neither she nor gave her to Tobias,³ saying, “Take her to be your wife in accordance with the law and decree written in the book of Moses. Take her and bring her safely to your father. And may the God of heaven prosper your journey with his peace.”¹³ Then he called her mother and told her to bring writing material; and he wrote out a copy of a marriage contract, to the effect that he gave her to him as wife according to the decree of the law of Moses.¹⁴ Then they began to eat and drink.

¹⁵ Raguel called his wife Edna and said to her, “Sister, get the other room ready, and take her there.”¹⁶ So she went and made the bed in the room as he had told her, and brought Sarah^b there. She wept for her daughter.^b Then, wiping away the tears,^c she said to her, “Take courage, my daughter; the Lord of heaven grant you joy^d in place of your sorrow. Take courage, my daughter.” Then she went out.

8 When they had finished eating and drinking they wanted to retire; so they took the young man and brought him into the bedroom.² Then Tobias remembered the words of Raphael, and he took the fish’s liver and heart out of the bag where he had them and put them on the embers of the incense.³ The odor of the fish so repelled the demon that he fled to the remotest parts^e of Egypt. But Raphael followed him, and at once bound him there hand and foot.

⁴ When the parents^f had gone out and shut the door of the room, Tobias got out of bed and said to Sarah,^b “Sister, get up, and let us pray and implore our Lord that he grant us mercy and safety.”⁵ So she got up, and they began to pray and implore that they might be kept safe. Tobias^g began by saying, “Blessed are you, O God of our ancestors, and blessed is your name in all generations forever.

Let the heavens and the whole creation bless you forever.

⁶ You made Adam, and for him you made his wife Eve as a helper and support.

From the two of them the human race has sprung.

You said, ‘It is not good that the man should be alone;

let us make a helper for him like himself.’

⁷ I now am taking this kinswoman of mine, not because of lust, but with sincerity.

Grant that she and I may find mercy and that we may grow old together.”

⁸ And they both said, “Amen, Amen.”⁹ Then they went to sleep for the night.

her mother participated in the original conversation about her fate; the match is arranged by the men. 13: The Jewish marriage contract (Heb “ketubah”) protects the wife’s financial interests; this is the first recorded literary reference to this well-known practice; the earliest preserved example of a ketubah, dating to ca. 440 BCE, comes from the Jewish colony at Elephantine in Egypt. 16: Edna’s emotions encompass both fear and hope; she exhorts her daughter to courage, as Raphael had exhorted Tobias (6.18).

8.1–9a: Asmodeus is exorcised. Raphael’s advice proves sound as the demon is exorcised, and the couple offers a prayer of thanksgiving. 2: The words of Raphael, 6.8. 3: Repelled the demon, see 6.8n. Bound, since binding restrains demons (see 1 Enoch 10.4). 4–5: The couple’s praying contrasts with both Raguel’s grave-digging (8.9–11) and the descriptions of ardent love-making found in non-Jewish Hellenistic romances. Sister, see 5.21n. 5–7: Prayers are frequently attributed to characters in Second Temple Jewish literature (Jdt 9; Add Est 13; 14; Sus; Song of Three). 5: Blessed are you, see 3.11n. God of our ancestors, see Ex 3.13; Deut 4.1. 6: Adam and Eve, one of the earliest biblical references to these figures outside of Genesis. You said, introducing a quotation of Gen 2.18. 7: Not because of lust, chastity is a popular theme in Jewish-Hellenistic literature; see also 3.14–15n. 8: The text, discreetly, does not note when the marriage was consummated. Amen, Amen are Sarah’s only words aside from her prayer (3.11–15).

8.9b–18: Raguel’s fears are assuaged. 9–10: Raguel’s morbid planning contrasts with Tobias’s piety; unlike

But Raguel arose and called his servants to him, and they went and dug a grave,¹⁰ for he said, “It is possible that he will die and we will become an object of ridicule and derision.”¹¹ When they had finished digging the grave, Raguel went into his house and called his wife,¹² saying, “Send one of the maids and have her go in to see if he is alive. But if he is dead, let us bury him without anyone knowing it.”¹³ So they sent the maid, lit a lamp, and opened the door; and she went in and found them sound asleep together.¹⁴ Then the maid came out and informed them that he was alive and that nothing was wrong.¹⁵ So they blessed the God of heaven, and Raguel¹⁶ said, “Blessed are you, O God, with every pure blessing;

let all your chosen ones bless you.^b
Let them bless you forever.

¹⁶ Blessed are you because you have made me glad.

It has not turned out as I expected, but you have dealt with us according to your great mercy.

¹⁷ Blessed are you because you had compassion on two only children.

Be merciful to them, O Master, and keep them safe;

bring their lives to fulfillment in happiness and mercy.”

¹⁸ Then he ordered his servants to fill in the grave before daybreak.

¹⁹ After this he asked his wife to bake many loaves of bread; and he went out to the herd and brought two steers and four rams and ordered them to be slaughtered. So they began to make preparations.²⁰ Then he called for Tobias and swore on oath to him in these words:^c “You shall not leave here for fourteen days, but shall stay here eating and drinking with me; and you shall cheer up my daughter, who has been depressed.²¹ Take at once half of what I own and return in safety to your father; the other half will be yours when my wife and I die. Take courage, my child. I am your father and Edna is your mother, and we belong to you as well as to your wife^d now and forever. Take courage, my child.”

9 Then Tobias called Raphael and said to him,² “Brother Azariah, take four servants and two camels with you and travel to Rages. Go to the home of Gabael, give him the bond, get the money, and then bring him with you to the wedding celebration.⁴ For you know that my father must be counting the days, and if I delay even one day I will upset him very much.³ You are witness to the oath Raguel has sworn, and I cannot violate his oath.”^e So Raphael with the four servants and two camels went to Rages in Media and stayed with Gabael. Raphael^f gave him the bond and informed him that Tobit’s son Tobias had married and was inviting him to the wedding celebration. So Gabael⁹ got up and counted out to him the money bags, with their seals intact; then they loaded

Tobit, Raguel prepares a grave before finding a corpse. 10: Ridicule and derision, Raguel fears for his reputation, not his daughter’s happiness or his son-in-law’s life; Sarah had already become an object of derision (3.7–9). 12: Without anyone knowing ignores Azariah/Raphael, the servants, and the concerns of Tobit and Anna. 15–17: The prayer continues Raguel’s wry perspective: he praises God for his own good fortune before mentioning the mercy extended to the couple.

8.19–9.6: The wedding celebrated and tasks fulfilled. 8.20: Fourteen days, often seen as twice as long as a usual wedding celebration. Depressed either because of past deaths or the prospect of leaving her home. 21: Take courage is what Edna advised Sarah (7.16), but under much different circumstances. The language of father and mother together with promises of inheritance suggests an adoption formula (see 10.12). 9.1: Tobias now commands Raphael to obtain Tobit’s money from Gabael; no longer the youth, he has become an adult. 4: I will upset him, as demonstrated in 10.1–3. 5: Rages, see 4.1n. 6: Gabael’s blessing indicates that the two families are regarded as one.

them on the camels.³ ⁶In the morning they both got up early and went to the wedding celebration. When they came into Raguel's house they found Tobias reclining at table. He sprang up and greeted Gabael,^b who wept and blessed him with the words, "Good and noble son of a father good and noble, upright and generous! May the Lord grant the blessing of heaven to you and your wife, and to your wife's father and mother. Blessed be God, for I see in Tobias the very image of my cousin Tobit."

10 Now, day by day, Tobit kept counting how many days Tobias^c would need for going and for returning. And when the days had passed and his son did not appear,² he said, "Is it possible that he has been detained? Or that Gabael has died, and there is no one to give him the money?"³ And he began to worry.⁴ His wife Anna said, "My child has perished and is no longer among the living." And she began to weep and mourn for her son, saying,⁵ "Woe to me, my child, the light of my eyes, that I let you make the journey."⁶ But Tobit kept saying to her, "Be quiet and stop worrying, my dear;^d he is all right. Probably something unexpected has happened there. The man who went with him is trustworthy and is one of our own kin. Do not grieve for him, my dear;^d he will soon be here."⁷ She answered him, "Be quiet yourself! Stop trying to deceive me! My child has perished." She would rush out every day and watch the road her son had taken, and would heed no one.^e When the sun had set she would go in and mourn and weep all night long, getting no sleep at all.

Now when the fourteen days of the wedding celebration had ended that Raguel had sworn to observe for his daughter, Tobias came to him and said, "Send me back, for I know that my father and mother do not believe that they will see me again. So I beg of you, father, to let me go so that I may return to my own father. I have already explained to you how I left him."⁸ But Raguel said to Tobias, "Stay, my child, stay with me; I will send messengers to your father Tobit and they will inform him about you."⁹ But he said, "No! I beg you to send me back to my father."¹⁰ So Raguel promptly gave Tobias his wife Sarah, as well as half of all his property: male and female slaves, oxen and sheep, donkeys and camels, clothing, money, and household goods.¹¹ Then he saw them safely off; he embraced Tobias^b and said, "Farewell, my child; have a safe journey. The Lord of heaven prosper you and your wife Sarah, and may I see children of yours before I die."¹² Then he kissed his daughter Sarah and said to her, "My daughter, honor your father-in-law and your mother-in-law,^f since from now on they are as much your parents as those who gave you birth. Go in peace, daughter, and may I hear a good report about you as long as I live." Then he bade them farewell and let 10.1–7a: Anxiety at home. Tobit and Anna's concerns contrast with the celebration in Media. 1: And when the days had passed, the two-week wedding celebrations, unknown to Tobit and Anna, extended the time of Tobias's absence long past what was required for the journey. 5: Light of my eyes, perhaps a veiled reference to Tobit's blindness, recalls his words to Anna in 5.21. I let you make the journey, rather than again blaming Tobit (see 5.18), Anna suggests she had the power to prevent Tobias from leaving. 6: In comforting Anna (cf. 5.21), Tobit masks his own fears. 7: Unlike 5.21, here Anna does not heed Tobit's command to silence. Despite insisting that her child has perished, she continues to watch for him.

10.7b–13: Return to Nineveh. The couple's leave-taking is much less fraught with worry—and advice—than the parallel scene of 5.17–22. Tobias is mindful that his parents are likely worried (10.1–7a). 8: Raguel desires his new son remain with him, but filial duty prompts Tobias to leave. 10: Sarah's substantial dowry is part of the inheritance Tobias will receive (6.12). 12: Honor your father-in-law and your mother-in-law extends the Decalogue's commandment (see 4.3n.). Child and dear brother intensifies the familial connection; more than just a marriage, the couple's relationship is the merging of two families. To see children, this prayer will be granted, as Raphael had remarked to Tobias (6.18). Do nothing to grieve her, the mother is vigilant for her daughter's happiness; the them go. Then Edna said to Tobias, “My child and dear brother, the Lord of heaven bring you back safely, and may I live long enough to see children of you and of my daughter Sarah before I die. In the sight of the Lord I entrust my daughter to you; do nothing to grieve her all the days of your life. Go in peace, my child. From now on I am your mother and Sarah is your beloved wife.^a May we all prosper together all the days of our lives.” Then she kissed them both and saw them safely off.¹³ Tobias parted from Raguel with happiness and joy, praising the Lord of heaven and earth, King over all, because he had made his journey a success. Finally, he blessed Raguel and his wife Edna, and said, “I have been commanded by the Lord to honor you all the days of my life.”^b 11 When they came near to Kaserin, which is opposite Nineveh, Raphael said,² “You are aware of how we left your father.³ Let us run ahead of your wife and prepare the house while they are still on the way.”⁴ As they went on together Raphael^c said to him, “Have the gall ready.” And the dog^d went along behind them.

⁵ Meanwhile Anna sat looking intently down the road by which her son would come.⁶ When she caught sight of him coming, she said to his father, “Look, your son is coming, and the man who went with him!”

⁷ Raphael said to Tobias, before he had approached his father, “I know that his eyes will be opened.⁸ Smear the gall of the fish on his eyes; the medicine will make the white films shrink and peel off from his eyes, and your father will regain his sight and see the light.”

⁹ Then Anna ran up to her son and threw her arms around him, saying, “Now that I have seen you, my child, I am ready to die.” And she wept.¹⁰ Then Tobit got up and came stumbling out through the courtyard door. Tobias went up to him,¹¹ with the gall of the fish in his hand, and holding him firmly, he blew into his eyes, saying, “Take courage, father.” With this he applied the medicine on his eyes,¹² and it made them smart.^b¹³ Next, with both his hands he peeled off the white films from the corners of his eyes. Then Tobit^c saw his son and^e threw his arms around him,¹⁴ and he wept and said to him, “I see you, my son, the light of my eyes!” Then he said, “Blessed be God,

and blessed be his great name,
and blessed be all his holy angels.
May his holy name be blessed^f throughout all the ages.

¹⁵ Though he afflicted me, he has had mercy upon me.^g
Now I see my son Tobias!”

So Tobit went in rejoicing and praising God at the top of his voice. Tobias reported to his father that his journey had been successful, that he had brought the money, that he had married Raguel’s daughter Sarah, and that she was, indeed, on her way there, very near to the gate of Nineveh.

¹⁶ Then Tobit, rejoicing and praising God, went out to meet his daughter-in-law at the gate of Nineveh. When the people of Nineveh saw him coming, walking along in full vigor and with no one leading him, they were reader may recall the grief Tobit’s insults brought Anna (2.11–14). 13: Tobias confirms his bond with his in-laws; Sarah remains silent.

When Tobit met Sarah the wife of his son Tobias, he blessed her saying, “Come in, my daughter, and welcome. Blessed be your God who has brought you to us, my daughter. Blessed be your father and your mother, blessed be my son Tobias, and blessed be you, my daughter. Come in now to your home, and welcome, with blessing and joy. Come in, my daughter.” So on that day there was rejoicing among all the Jews who were in Nineveh. ¹⁸ Ahikar and his nephew Nadab were also present to share Tobit’s joy. With merriment they celebrated Tobias’s wedding feast for seven days, and many gifts were given to him.^a 12 When the wedding celebration was ended, Tobit called his son Tobias and said to him, “My child, see to paying the wages of the man who went with you, and give him a bonus as well.” ² He replied, “Father, how much shall I pay him? It would do no harm to give him half of the possessions brought back with me. ³ For he has led me back to you safely, he cured my wife, he brought the money back with me, and he healed you. How much extra shall I give him as a bonus?” ⁴ Tobit said, “He deserves, my child, to receive half of all that he brought back.” ⁵ So Tobias^b called him and said, “Take for your wages half of all that you brought back, and farewell.”

⁶ Then Raphael^b called the two of them privately and said to them, “Bless God and acknowledge him in the presence of all the living for the good things he has done for you. Bless and sing praise to his name. With fitting honor declare to all people the deeds^c of God. Do not be slow to acknowledge him.

¹¹ “I will now declare the whole truth to you and will conceal nothing from you. Already I have declared it to you when I said, ‘It is good to conceal the secret of a king, but to reveal with due honor the works of God.’ ¹² So now when you and Sarah prayed, it was I who brought and read^f the record of your prayer before the glory of the Lord, and likewise whenever you would bury the dead. ¹³ And that time when you did not hesitate to get up and leave your dinner to go and bury the dead, ¹⁴ I was sent to you to test you. 12.1–22: Raphael’s revelations. Bringing the major plot lines to a conclusion, Raphael explains his role in testing Tobit and exhorts Tobit and his son to good deeds and piety. 2: How much shall I pay him? The fee had been determined, but not the amount of the bonus (5.15–16). Half of the possessions is one-quarter of Raguel’s estate plus half the loan. The generosity is consistent with Tobit’s insistence on almsgiving. 6: Declare to all people expresses a universalistic impulse (13.3–4,11; 14.6–7). 7: Secret of a king anticipates Raphael’s revelation in v. 11 and recalls Tobit’s position at court (1.13–14); indeed, Tobit reveals no court secrets. To acknowledge, as Tobit had done in 11.17. 7b–10: Proverbial sayings continue the emphasis on charitable deeds (4.6–11); for fasting, which becomes increasingly important in the postexilic period, see also 1 Macc 3.44–48; Esth 4.1–3,15; Mt 6.16–18; almsgiving, see 4.11n. 12–13: The angelic task of conveying prayers and good deeds is mentioned in other Second Temple Jewish literature, such as 1 Enoch. 14: To test indicates that Tobit’s blindness and his subsequent trials resulted from God’s active effort (Gen 22.1–22; Job 1–2); unmentioned is whether Sarah’s trials were ¹⁶ The two of them were shaken; they fell face down, for they were afraid. ¹⁷ But he said to them, “Do not be afraid; peace be with you. Bless God forevermore. ¹⁸ As for me, when I was with you, I was not acting on my own will, but by the will of God. Bless him each and every day; sing his praises. ¹⁹ Although you were watching me, I really did not eat or drink anything—but what you saw was a vision. ²⁰ So now get up from the ground,^a and acknowledge God. See, I am ascending to him who sent me. Write down all these things that have happened to you.” And he ascended. ²¹ Then they stood up, and could see him no more. ²² They kept blessing God and singing his praises, and they acknowledged God for these marvelous deeds of his, when an angel of God had appeared to them.

Mt 5.3–11; Lk 6.20–22. 16–17: For similar views of Jerusalem’s restoration, see Isa 54.11–14; Rev 21.9–27.

14.2–11a: Tobit’s testament. Tobit’s second testament (see 4.1–13n.) confirms his earlier insistence that piety will ultimately be rewarded. 2: Giving alms and blessing God are the two major exhortations made throughout years old when he lost his eyesight, and after regaining it he lived in prosperity, giving alms and continually blessing God and acknowledging God's majesty.

³When he was about to die, he called his son Tobias and the seven sons of Tobias^a and gave this command: "My son, take your children ⁴and hurry off to Media, for I believe the word of God that Nahum spoke about Nineveh, that all these things will take place and overtake Assyria and Nineveh. Indeed, everything that was spoken by the prophets of Israel, whom God sent, will occur. None of all their words will fail, but all will come true at their appointed times. So it will be safer in Media than in Assyria and Babylon. For I know and believe that whatever God has said will be fulfilled and will come true; not a single word of the prophecies will fail. All of our kindred, inhabitants of the land of Israel, will be scattered and taken as captives from the good land; and the whole land of Israel will be desolate, even Samaria and Jerusalem will be desolate. And the temple of God in it will be burned to the ground, and it will be desolate for a while."^b

⁵"But God will again have mercy on them, and God will bring them back into the land of Israel; and they will rebuild the temple of God, but not like the first one until the period when the times of fulfillment shall come. After this they all will return from their exile and will rebuild Jerusalem in splendor; and in it the temple of God will be rebuilt, just as the prophets of Israel have said concerning it. ⁶Then the nations in the whole world will all be converted and worship God in truth. They will all abandon their idols, which deceitfully have led them into their error;⁷ and in righteousness they will praise the eternal God. All the Israelites who are saved in those days and are truly mindful of God will be gathered together; they will go to Jerusalem and live in safety forever in the land of Abraham, and it will be given over to them. Those who sincerely love God will rejoice, but those who commit sin and injustice will vanish from all the earth."^{8,9} So now, my children, I command you, serve God faithfully and do what is pleasing in his sight. Your children are also to be commanded to do what is right and to give alms, and to be mindful of God and to bless his name at all times with sincerity and with all their strength. So now, my son, leave Nineveh; do not remain here. ¹⁰On whatever day you bury your mother beside me, do not stay overnight within the confines of the city. For I see that there is much wickedness within it, and that much deceit is practiced within it, while the people are without shame. See, my son, what Nadab did to Ahikar who had reared him. Was he not, while still alive, brought down into the earth? For God repaid him to his face for this shameful treatment. Ahikar came out into the light, but Nadab went into the eternal darkness, because he tried to kill Ahikar. Because he gave alms, Ahikar^c escaped the fatal trap that Nadab had set for him, but Nadab fell into it himself, and was destroyed. ¹¹So now, my children, see what almsgiving accomplishes, and what The prophet Nahum predicted the destruction of Assyria and Nineveh; Babylon conquered Nineveh in 612 BCE (see v. 15; 13.12n.). 5–7: With the restoration that began with the edict of Cyrus of Persia in 538 BCE, the hymn shifts to a vision of the splendid future of a renewed Jerusalem, glorified temple, return of the exiles (13.5n.), conversion of the Gentiles to the worship of the God of Israel, and elimination of sin. 10: Recognizing that Anna will outlive him, Tobit insists his son provide for her in life and in death; reference to burial, now after a long life, contrasts positively with Tobit's interring of unburied corpses. Nadab did to Ahikar: see 1.21–22n. JUDITH

NAME, DATE OF COMPOSITION, AND CANONICAL STATUS

The book of Judith, which is named for its spirited heroine, is an entertaining narrative that has engaged Jewish and Christian imaginations for centuries and in many different ways. In Jewish tradition Judith was a heroine who protected her people, while in Christian tradition Judith has represented various virtues, such as chastity slaying lust. It was probably composed in Hebrew near the end of the second century BCE in the aftermath of the Maccabean Revolt, which it appears to idealize. No Hebrew manuscript survives, probably because the book was not accorded canonical status in Judaism, but the book was preserved in the Christian tradition in Greek, Latin, and other translations. It is considered canonical in Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox churches, and as part of the Apocrypha by Protestants.

GENRE, STRUCTURE, AND INTERPRETATION

Although the book of Judith came to be considered historical, it was composed as a fictional novella, much like other Hebrew stories with a central female protagonist, such as Esther, Tobit, and Susanna, as well as the apocryphal story of Joseph and Aseneth, and many Greek novels. The book's fictional nature is evident from its blending of history and fiction, beginning in the very first verse, and is too prevalent thereafter to be considered as the result of mere historical mistakes. Thus, the great villain is “Nebuchadnezzar, who ruled over the Assyrians” (1.1), yet the historical Nebuchadnezzar was the famous king of the Babylonians. Other details are also patently unbelievable, such as fictional place names, the immense size of armies and fortifications, the dating of events, and the actions of the Assyrian general Holofernes. Like the books of Jonah and Job and the more contemporary novellas, Judith would not have been taken to be a factual account even at the time of its composition. With its blend of fiction and ancient history, it should also be read in light of historical events at the time it was written. The “Assyrian” Nebuchadnezzar may be a cipher or coded name for the Syrian Antiochus IV Epiphanes, who had also tried to enforce a foreign religion on Israel. The Maccabees, like Judith, showed strength of resolve and won their freedom. Judith later recounts that Israel had destroyed the cults of those on the land (8.18–20), and this also recalls contemporary history, because the successors of the Maccabees destroyed the Samaritan temple on Mount Gerizim.

The book of Judith entertains and instructs by combining irony and humor, bombast and fascinating detail, sexual suggestiveness and pious self-denial bordering on asceticism, outrageous reversals of the period's gender roles and conservative religious values, escapism, and celebration of military success. Moreover, the plot's careful structure and the commanding figure of Judith herself make this a compelling tale. The story has two parts or acts of approximately equal length. Chapters 1–7 describe the rise of the threat to Israel, led by the evil king Nebuchadnezzar of the Assyrians and his sycophantic general Holofernes. This first part concludes as Holofernes' world-wide campaign has converged at the mountain pass where Judith's village, Bethulia, is located. The second part, chs 8–16, introduces Judith and depicts her heroic actions to save her people. Each of the two parts has a clear chiasmic pattern in which the order of events is reversed at a central moment in the narrative (abcc'b'a).

Part II (8.1–16.25)

- A. Introduction of Judith (8.1–8)
- B. Judith plans to save Israel (8.9–10.8)
 - C. Judith and her maid leave Bethulia (10.9–10)
 - D. Judith beheads Holofernes (10.11–13.10a)
 - C.' Judith and her maid return to Bethulia (13.10b–11)
- B.' Judith plans the destruction of Israel's enemy (13.12–16.20)
- A.' Conclusion about Judith (16.21–25)

Part I, although at times tedious in its description of the military developments, develops important themes by alternating battles with reflections and rousing action with rest. In contrast, the second half is devoted mainly to Judith's strength of character and the beheading scene, which is told quickly. Perhaps such terseness implies that the original audience would have known the story, but the artistry lies in describing not what will happen but how it will happen. Furthermore, that the scene is told quickly does not imply insignificance. On the contrary, its importance is evident in its position at the center of the story's second act. Other paired figures and expressions also contribute to the story's structure: Nebuchadnezzar and God each have a "general," Holofernes and Judith respectively, and each of them has a servant, Bagoas and Judith's maid.

The character of Judith is also larger than life, and she has won a place in Jewish and Christian lore, art, poetry, and drama. Her name, which means "Jewish woman," is the feminine form of Yehudi and suggests that she represents the heroic spirit of the Jewish people. Because of her unswerving religious devotion, she is able to step outside of her widow's role, dress and act in a sexually provocative manner, lie to the opposing general Holofernes, seduce him, and behead him, all without a moment of self-doubt. Yet the book does not undermine accepted social conventions, for in the end Judith returns to her life as an exemplary pious widow. Thus, like many comedies, the book of Judith allows for a release of social tensions, explores transgressions of everyday rules, and then reconstitutes society on acceptable lines.

The book constantly echoes biblical narratives, most notably the assassination of Sisera by Jael in Judg 4–5 and the revenge of Simeon and Levi on Shechem after the rape of Dinah in Gen 34. Judith's deliverance of her people from danger makes her like the judges of Israel. She echoes Moses, too, as when she responds to murmuring over water and the testing of God (8.9–27), and when her hand is likened to the hand of Moses (8.33; 13.14; cf. Ex 14.21). The story also recalls folk traditions about male heroes, but adds humor and irony by making the hero a pious widow who transgresses the social restrictions of her gender in order to save her people and defend her God. Although some modern interpreters have questioned Judith's morality, in the ancient world Judith was always remembered positively as a heroine of the faith.

1 It was the twelfth year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, who ruled over the Assyrians in the great city of Nineveh. In those days Arphaxad ruled over the Medes in Ecbatana. ²He built walls around Ecbatana with hewn stones three cubits thick and six cubits long; he made the walls seventy cubits high and fifty cubits wide. ³At its gates he raised towers one hundred cubits high and sixty cubits wide at the foundations. ⁴He made its gates seventy cubits high and forty cubits wide to allow his armies to march out in force and his infantry to form their ranks. ⁵Then King Nebuchadnezzar made war against King Arphaxad in the great plain that is on the borders of Ragau. ⁶There rallied to him all the people of the hill country and all those who lived along the Euphrates, the Tigris, and the Hydaspes, and, on the plain, Arioch, king of the Elymeans. Thus, many nations joined the forces of the Chaldeans.^a

⁷Then Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Assyrians, sent messengers to all who lived in Persia and to all who lived in the west, those who lived in Cilicia and Damascus, Lebanon and Antilebanon, and all who lived along the seacoast,⁸ and those among the nations of Carmel and Gilead, and Upper Galilee and the great plain of Esdraelon,⁹ and all who were in Samaria and its towns, and beyond the Jordan as far as Jerusalem and Bethany and Chelous and Kadesh and the river of Egypt, and Tahpanhes and Raamses and the whole land of Goshen,¹⁰ even beyond Tanis and Memphis, and all who lived in Egypt as far as the borders of Ethiopia. ¹¹But all who lived in the whole region disregarded the summons of Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Assyrians, and refused to join him in the war; for they were not afraid of him, but regarded him as only one man.^b So they sent back his messengers empty-handed and in disgrace.

¹²Then Nebuchadnezzar became very angry with this whole region, and swore by his throne and kingdom that he would take revenge on the whole territory of Cilicia and Damascus and Syria, that he would kill with his sword also all the inhabitants of the land of Moab, and the people of Ammon, and all Judea, and every one in Egypt, as far as the coasts of the two seas.

1.1–7.32: Part I: A great empire rises up to attack Israel and other nations.

1.1–6: Nebuchadnezzar is introduced and declares war on Arphaxad, king of Media. 1: The dating of events in the reign of the great king is typical of histories, but although Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon had defeated the southern half of Israel (Judah) in 586 BCE (see 2 Kings 25.1–21) and the Assyrians had defeated the northern half of Israel in 722 BCE (see 2 Kings 17.5–6), the combination Nebuchadnezzar of the Assyrians is fictitious—yet it combines both bitter associations. There is also no known king of the Medes named Arphaxad. 2–4: The massive fortifications of Arphaxad’s capital Ecbatana, in northwestern Iran, are unrealistic: walls seventy cubits high and fifty cubits wide would measure 105 ft (32 m) by 75 ft (23 m). By beginning with the might and grandeur of Arphaxad, the threat of Nebuchadnezzar is made even more dramatic. 5–6: Although many of the place names in the book of Judith are well known, others are fictitious or unknown; together they give the impression that the entire world is involved. What seems repetitive to the modern reader serves to evoke the extent of the campaign. 6: Euphrates, Tigris, the principal rivers of Mesopotamia. Chaldeans is another name for Babylonians, reflecting the author’s fictitious merging of the Assyrians and Babylonians for the purposes of the story.

1.7–11: Many nations rebuff Nebuchadnezzar’s call to ally with him. Nebuchadnezzar’s messengers move from east to west, through modern Iran, Syria, southern Turkey, Lebanon, Jordan, Palestine, Israel, and into Egypt. But all the nations reject his summons; he is nothing more than one man (v. 11). This judgment will be tested. 8: Esdraelon (older Jezeel), the great plain from Mount Carmel to the Jordan Valley. 9: Samaria and Jerusalem are mentioned only in passing; at this point there is a world-wide focus, which will first narrow to the area of Syria-Palestine, then to Samaria and Judea, and finally to the tiny mountain village of Bethulia (4.6). (See map on p. 1394.)

1.12–16: Nebuchadnezzar vows to destroy the western nations and easily defeats Arphaxad without their aid. 12: Nebuchadnezzar swears to destroy the nations that figure so prominently in the Bible: Damascus, Syria, Moab, Ammon, Egypt; Judith and a small band of Jews will deliver all of the biblical lands. The two seas are pos-

in battle, overthrowing the whole army of Arphaxad and all his cavalry and all his chariots. ¹⁴ Thus he took possession of his towns and came to Ecbatana, captured its towers, plundered its markets, and turned its glory into disgrace. ¹⁵ He captured Arphaxad in the mountains of Ragau and struck him down with his spears, thus destroying him once and for all. ¹⁶ Then he returned to Nineveh, he and all his combined forces, a vast body of troops; and there he and his forces rested and feasted for one hundred twenty days.

2 In the eighteenth year, on the twenty-second day of the first month, there was talk in the palace of Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Assyrians, about carrying out his revenge on the whole region, just as he had said.

² He summoned all his ministers and all his nobles and set before them his secret plan and recounted fully, with his own lips, all the wickedness of the region. ³ ³ They decided that every one who had not obeyed his command should be destroyed.

⁴ When he had completed his plan, Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Assyrians, called Holofernes, the chief general of his army, second only to himself, and said to him, ⁵ “Thus says the Great King, the lord of the whole earth: Leave my presence and take with you men confident in their strength, one hundred twenty thousand foot soldiers and twelve thousand cavalry. ⁶ March out against all the land to the west, because they disobeyed my orders. ⁷ Tell them to prepare earth and water, for I am coming against them in my anger, and will cover the whole face of the earth with the feet of my troops, to whom I will hand them over to be plundered. ⁸ Their wounded shall fill their ravines and gullies, and the swelling river shall be filled with their dead. ⁹ I will lead them away captive to the ends of the whole earth. ¹⁰ You shall go and seize all their territory for me in advance. They must yield themselves to you, and you shall hold them for me until the day of their punishment. ¹¹ But to those who resist show no mercy, but hand them over to slaughter and plunder throughout your whole region. ¹² For as I live, and by the power of my kingdom, what I have spoken I will accomplish by my own hand. ¹³ And you—take care not to transgress any of your lord’s commands, but carry them out exactly as I have ordered you; do it without delay.”

¹⁴ So Holofernes left the presence of his lord, and summoned all the commanders, generals, and officers of the Assyrian army. ¹⁵ He mustered the picked troops by divisions as his lord had ordered him to do, one hundred twenty thousand of them, together with twelve thousand archers on horseback, ¹⁶ and he organized them as a great army is marshaled for a campaign. ¹⁷ He took along a vast number of camels and donkeys and mules for transport, and innumerable sheep and oxen and goats for food; ¹⁸ also ample rations for everyone, and a huge amount of gold and silver from the royal palace.

¹⁹ Then he set out with his whole army, to go ahead of King Nebuchadnezzar and to cover the whole face of the earth to the west with their chariots and cavalry and picked foot soldiers. ²⁰ Along with them went a mixed crowd like a swarm of locusts, like the sibly the Red Sea and the Mediterranean. 16: The army rested and feasted for one hundred twenty days. This is the first of a series of well-placed pauses in the military history of the first half of the book (cf. 2.28; 3.10; 6.21; 7.32).

2.1–13: Nebuchadnezzar makes plans to destroy all the nations who opposed him. 1: The eighteenth year, 587 BCE, when the siege of Jerusalem began; see 2 Kings 25.1. 2: Nebuchadnezzar summons all his ministers and threatens to destroy the whole region (cf. Dan 2.2–5; 3.2–9). 4: Holofernes was the name of a general in the Persian army of Artaxerxes III Ochus, who invaded this same region in 350 and 343 BCE. His officer was named Bagoas, a name that will appear in 12:11. Real persons have likely been used as fictional opponents. 5: The lord of the whole earth, Nebuchadnezzar and Holofernes will have delusions of grandeur and attribute terms to Nebuchadnezzar that should be reserved for God alone (cf. 3.8). 7: It was Persian practice to demand earth and water from foreign states as a sign of submission (Herodotus, Histories 6.48).

2.14–3.10: Holofernes begins the campaign to destroy the disobedient nations.

2.15–20: The enormousness of the Assyrian army is emphasized, including animals, rations, gold and silver, even hangers-on—a mixed crowd (cf. Ex 12.38) like a swarm of locusts (cf. Judg 6.5; Joel 1.4–7), like the dust of the dust^a of the earth—a multitude that could not be counted.

²¹They marched for three days from Nineveh to the plain of Bectileth, and camped opposite Bectileth near the mountain that is to the north of Upper Cilicia. ²²From there Holofernes^b took his whole army, the infantry, cavalry, and chariots, and went up into the hill country. ²³He ravaged Put and Lud, and plundered all the Rassisites and the Ishmaelites on the border of the desert, south of the country of the Chelleans. ²⁴Then he followed^c the Euphrates and passed through Mesopotamia and destroyed all the fortified towns along the brook Abron, as far as the sea. ²⁵He also seized the territory of Cilicia, and killed everyone who resisted him. Then he came to the southern borders of Japheth, facing Arabia. ²⁶He surrounded all the Midianites, and burned their tents and plundered their sheepfolds. ²⁷Then he went down into the plain of Damascus during the wheat harvest, and burned all their fields and destroyed their flocks and herds and sacked their towns and ravaged their lands and put all their young men to the sword.

²⁸So fear and dread of him fell upon all the people who lived along the seacoast, at Sidon and Tyre, and those who lived in Sur and Ocina and all who lived in Jamnia. Those who lived in Azotus and Ascalon feared him greatly.

3 They therefore sent messengers to him to sue for peace in these words: ²“We, the servants of Nebuchadnezzar, the Great King, lie prostrate before you. Do with us whatever you will. ³See, our buildings and all our land and all our wheat fields and our flocks and herds and all our encampments^d lie before you; do with them as you please. ⁴Our towns and their inhabitants are also your slaves; come and deal with them as you see fit.”

⁵The men came to Holofernes and told him all this. ⁶Then he went down to the seacoast with his army and stationed garrisons in the fortified towns and took picked men from them as auxiliaries. ⁷These people and all in the countryside welcomed him with garlands and dances and tambourines. ⁸Yet he demolished all their shrines^e and cut down their sacred groves; for he had been commissioned to destroy all the gods of the land, so that all nations should worship Nebuchadnezzar alone, and that all their dialects and tribes should call upon him as a god.

4 When the Israelites living in Judea heard of everything that Holofernes, the general of Nebuchadnezzar, the king of the Assyrians, had done to the nations, and how he had plundered and destroyed all their temples, ²they were therefore greatly terrified at his approach; they were alarmed both for Jerusalem and for the temple of the Lord their God. ³For they had only recently returned from exile, and all the people of Judea had earth. Such images depict the entire world at war. 21–27: The campaign builds in intensity to include plundering, slaughter, and destruction, but the geography is confused. 21: Upper Cilicia, in southeastern Asia Minor, is 400 mi (650 km) from Nineveh, a distance far too great to travel on foot in three days. 23: Put, usually Libya; Lud, Lydia, in central Asia Minor; Ishmaelites, Arabs (Gen 16.11–12). 26: Midianites, a group of people who lived in southern Transjordan, sometimes depicted as nomads (Gen 37.28; Judg 6.1–6).

2.28–3.10: The surrounding nations, who had caused trouble for Israel in the past, showed initial courage before Nebuchadnezzar (1.11), but now they succumb. 2.28: Sidon and Tyre were two Phoenician cities on the Mediterranean coast north of Israel. Jamnia, Azotus (earlier Ashdod), and Ascalon (earlier Ashkelon), were on the Mediterranean coast of Palestine. 3.8: All nations, dialects, and tribes (cf. Dan 3–4). 9: Dothan was south of the plain of Esdraelon (see 1.8n.); Scythopolis (formerly Beth-shan) was at the plain's eastern end.

4.1–7: Israel, now standing alone, prepares for attack. The perspective now shifts to the Israelites living in Judea (v. 1), allowing an opportunity for a reflection on their history; however, it is telescoped: the Assyrians actually ruled before the Judeans returned from exile (v. 3). 3: The consecration of the sacred vessels, altar, and just now gathered together, and the sacred vessels and the altar and the temple had been consecrated after their profanation. ⁴ So they sent word to every district of Samaria, and to Kona, Beth-horon, Belmain, and Jericho, and to Choba and Aesora, and the valley of Salem. ⁵ They immediately seized all the high hilltops and fortified the villages on them and stored up food in preparation for war—since their fields had recently been harvested.

⁶ The high priest, Joakim, who was in Jerusalem at the time, wrote to the people of Bethulia and Betomesthaim, which faces Esdraelon opposite the plain near Dothan, ⁷ ordering them to seize the mountain passes, since by them Judea could be invaded; and it would be easy to stop any who tried to enter, for the approach was narrow, wide enough for only two at a time to pass.

⁸ So the Israelites did as they had been ordered by the high priest Joakim and the senate of the whole people of Israel, in session at Jerusalem. ⁹ And every man of Israel cried out to God with great fervor, and they humbled themselves with much fasting. ¹⁰ They and their wives and their children and their cattle and every resident alien and hired laborer and purchased slave—they all put sackcloth around their waists. ¹¹ And all the Israelite men, women, and children living at Jerusalem prostrated themselves before the temple and put ashes on their heads and spread out their sackcloth before the Lord.

¹² They even draped the altar with sackcloth and cried out in unison, praying fervently to the God of Israel not to allow their infants to be carried off and their wives to be taken as booty, and the towns they had inherited to be destroyed, and the sanctuary to be profaned and desecrated to the malicious joy of the Gentiles.

5 It was reported to Holofernes, the general of the Assyrian army, that the people of Israel had prepared for war and had closed the mountain passes and fortified all the high hilltops and set up barricades in the plains.

² In great anger he called together all the princes of Moab and the commanders of Ammon and all the governors of the coastland, ³ and said to them, “Tell me, you Canaanites, what people is this that lives in the hill country? What towns do they inhabit? How large is their army, and in what does their power and strength consist? Who rules over them temple ostensibly refers to the events in the late sixth century BCE after the exile (Ezra 6.13–22), but for the reader it would also evoke the more recent events after the victory of the Maccabees in 164 BCE (1 Macc 4:36–61; 2 Macc 10:1–8). Such telescoping distances the story from any specific historical event and so suggests that it concerns threats and responses in general. 4: Beth-horon, 11 miles (18 km) northwest of Jerusalem. 6: Judith’s village, Bethulia (“virginity”), is named for the first time; if it is not a fictional place, its location is unknown. Although it is in Samaritan territory, Jerusalem and the Temple are always the focus.

4.8–15: Israel prays and fasts. The Israelites humbled themselves with much fasting, and put sackcloth around their waists—even the cattle! The humor is intentional (cf. Jon 3.8). The penitential theology found here became a staple of postexilic Judaism (cf. Ezra 9; Neh 9; Dan 9.4–19; Bar 1.1–3). 13: The Lord heard their prayers and had regard for their distress (cf. Judg 3:9,15). Readers are assured that help is on the way, but in 7.23–31 this will be brought into question. Other novelistic texts of the period similarly predict happy endings despite building tension (Tob 3.16–17; Xenophon of Ephesus, Ephesian Tale 1.6). The question is not whether the protagonists will be saved, but how. 14: For the various types of offerings, see Ex 29.38–41 and Lev 22.18–30.

5.1–21: Holofernes learns from Achior about Israelite identity. 1–4: Holofernes’ campaign pauses for him to inquire concerning these Israelites who dare to oppose him. His military questions call forth a reflection on Jewish identity within a larger world: In what does their power and strength consist? Who rules over them as king? For the reader, God is king, which profoundly qualifies reverence for any earthly king. This scene introduces a recurring irony: the opponents perceive a worldly frame of reference, but Judith—and the audience—under-as king and leads their army?⁴ And why have they alone, of all who live in the west, refused to come out and meet me?”

⁵Then Achior, the leader of all the Ammonites, said to him, “May my lord please listen to a report from the mouth of your servant, and I will tell you the truth about this people that lives in the mountain district near you. No falsehood shall come from your servant’s mouth. ⁶These people are descended from the Chaldeans. ⁷At one time they lived in Mesopotamia, because they did not wish to follow the gods of their ancestors who were in Chaldea. ⁸Since they had abandoned the ways of their ancestors, and worshiped the God of heaven, the God they had come to know, their ancestors^a drove them out from the presence of their gods. So they fled to Mesopotamia, and lived there for a long time. ⁹Then their God commanded them to leave the place where they were living and go to the land of Canaan. There they settled, and grew very prosperous in gold and silver and very much livestock. ¹⁰When a famine spread over the land of Canaan they went down to Egypt and lived there as long as they had food. There they became so great a multitude that their race could not be counted. ¹¹So the king of Egypt became hostile to them; he exploited them and forced them to make bricks. ¹²They cried out to their God, and he afflicted the whole land of Egypt with incurable plagues. So the Egyptians drove them out of their sight. ¹³Then God dried up the Red Sea before them, ¹⁴and he led them by the way of Sinai and Kadesh-barnea. They drove out all the people of the desert, ¹⁵and took up residence in the land of the Amorites, and by their might destroyed all the inhabitants of Heshbon; and crossing over the Jordan they took possession of all the hill country. ¹⁶They drove out before them the Canaanites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Shechemites, and all the Gergesites, and lived there a long time.

¹⁷“As long as they did not sin against their God they prospered, for the God who hates iniquity is with them. ¹⁸But when they departed from the way he had prescribed for them, they were utterly defeated in many battles and were led away captive to a foreign land. The temple of their God was razed to the ground, and their towns were occupied by their enemies. ¹⁹But now they have returned to their God, and have come back from the places where they were scattered, and have occupied Jerusalem, where their sanctuary is, and have settled in the hill country, because it was uninhabited.

²⁰“So now, my master and lord, if there is any oversight in this people and they sin stand these discussions on a theological level. 5–21: Achior’s account of Israelite history is told from a Jewish, not an Ammonite, point of view and summarizes Israelite history from the time of Abraham until the return from exile. The character of the Ammonite Achior is probably inspired by the legendary Assyrian courtier Ahikar (cf. Tob 1.21–22; 14.10). He is similar to other righteous Gentiles (Josh 2–6; 2 Kings 5) and foreshadows Judith’s role: he is heroic, in an almost prophetic way says many of the same things as she, and will attest to her achievements. 6–9: The ancestral narratives from Gen 12–36. 6: Chaldeans, Abraham came from Ur of the Chaldees (Gen 11.27–31), in southern Babylonia. It is characteristic of Greek and Roman ethnography to begin by noting the origins of a people. 7: Early Jewish tradition explains that Abraham’s family migrated from Chaldea because they wished to escape polytheism (Jub. 11.16–12.7; Josephus, Ant. 1.134–57). 10–13: The descent into Egypt and the Exodus (Gen 37–Ex 18). 14: Sinai, Ex 19–Num 10; Kadesh-barnea, Num 20.1. 15–16: The conquests in Transjordan and Canaan (Num 20–Josh 11). 17–21: Achior here states the Deuteronomic principle of God’s conditional favor (Deut 28) that is prominent in the books of Joshua through Kings, later repeated by Judith (11. 9–15), and finally illustrated by the outcome of the story. 19: The return from exile (Ezra 1–3).

5.22–6.21: Holofernes expels Achior, who is received in Bethulia. 6.2: Ephraim, the northern part of Israel. Holofernes understands Achior’s words as an attempt at prophecy and uses prophetic idioms to report Nebuchadnezzar’s will (v. 4). He thus defines the conflict as a question of who is God. 6.5: You shall not see my face again, highly ironic, since Achior will see Holofernes’ face again—separated from the rest of his body (14.6)! Achior will not die in battle but will become a Jew (14.10). At least some of Holofernes’ words will indeed come true, but not as he assumes. 20: His banquet upon being received will be balanced by Judith’s smaller banquet when she is received by Holofernes (12.1).

against their God and we find out their offense, then we can go up and defeat them.

²¹ But if they are not a guilty nation, then let my lord pass them by; for their Lord and God will defend them, and we shall become the laughingstock of the whole world.”

²² When Achior had finished saying these things, all the people standing around the tent began to complain; Holofernes’ officers and all the inhabitants of the seacoast and Moab insisted that he should be cut to pieces.

6 When the disturbance made by the people outside the council had died down, Holofernes, the commander of the Assyrian army, said to Achior^a in the presence of all the foreign contingents:

² “Who are you, Achior and you mercenaries of Ephraim, to prophesy among us as you have done today and tell us not to make war against the people of Israel because their God will defend them? What god is there except Nebuchadnezzar? He will send his forces and destroy them from the face of the earth. Their God will not save them; ³ we the king’s^b servants will destroy them as one man. They cannot resist the might of our cavalry. ⁴ We will overwhelm them;^c their mountains will be drunk with their blood, and their fields will be full of their dead. Not even their footprints will survive our attack; they will utterly perish. So says King Nebuchadnezzar, lord of the whole earth. For he has spoken; none of his words shall be in vain.

⁵ “As for you, Achior, you Ammonite mercenary, you have said these words in a moment of perversity; you shall not see my face again from this day until I take revenge on this race that came out of Egypt. ⁶ Then at my return the sword of my army and the spear^d of my servants shall pierce your sides, and you shall fall among their wounded.

⁷ Now my slaves are going to take you back into the hill country and put you in one of the towns beside the passes. ⁸ You will not die until you perish along with them. ⁹ If you really hope in your heart that they will not be taken, then do not look downcast! I have spoken, and none of my words shall fail to come true.”

¹⁰ Then Holofernes ordered his slaves, who waited on him in his tent, to seize Achior and take him away to Bethulia and hand him over to the Israelites. ¹¹ So the slaves took him and led him out of the camp into the plain, and from the plain they went up into the hill country and came to the springs below Bethulia. ¹² When the men of the town saw them,^e they seized their weapons and ran out of the town to the top of the hill, and all the slingers kept them from coming up by throwing stones at them. ¹³ So having taken shelter below the hill, they bound Achior and left him lying at the foot of the hill, and returned to their master.

¹⁴ Then the Israelites came down from their town and found him; they untied him and brought him into Bethulia and placed him before the magistrates of their town, ¹⁵ who in those days were Uzziah son of Micah, of the tribe of Simeon, and Chabris son of Gothoniel, and Charmis son of Melchiel. ¹⁶ They called together all the elders of the town, and all their young men and women ran to the assembly. They set Achior in the midst of all their people, and Uzziah questioned him about what had happened. ¹⁷ He answered and told them what had taken place at the council of Holofernes, and all that he had said in the presence of the Assyrian leaders, and all that Holofernes had boasted he would do against the house of Israel. ¹⁸ Then the people fell down and worshiped God, and cried out:

²⁰ Then they reassured Achior, and praised him highly. ²¹ Uzziah took him from the assembly to his own house and gave a banquet for the elders; and all that night they called on the God of Israel for help.

7 The next day Holofernes ordered his whole army, and all the allies who had joined him, to break camp and move against Bethulia, and to seize the passes up into the hill country and make war on the Israelites. ² So all their warriors marched off that day; their fighting forces numbered one hundred seventy thousand infantry and twelve thousand cavalry, not counting the baggage and the foot soldiers handling it, a very great multitude. ³ They encamped in the valley near Bethulia, beside the spring, and they spread out in breadth over Dothan as far as Balbaim and in length from Bethulia to Cya-mon, which faces Esdraelon.

⁴ When the Israelites saw their vast numbers, they were greatly terrified and said to one another, “They will now strip clean the whole land; neither the high mountains nor the valleys nor the hills will bear their weight.” ⁵ Yet they all seized their weapons, and when they had kindled fires on their towers, they remained on guard all that night.

⁸ Then all the chieftains of the Edomites and all the leaders of the Moabites and the commanders of the coastland came to him and said, ⁹ “Listen to what we have to say, my lord, and your army will suffer no losses. ¹⁰ This people, the Israelites, do not rely on their spears but on the height of the mountains where they live, for it is not easy to reach the tops of their mountains. ¹¹ Therefore, my lord, do not fight against them in regular formation, and not a man of your army will fall. ¹² Remain in your camp, and keep all the men in your forces with you; let your servants take possession of the spring of water that flows from the foot of the mountain, ¹³ for this is where all the people of Bethulia get their water. So thirst will destroy them, and they will surrender their town. Meanwhile, we and our people will go up to the tops of the nearby mountains and camp there to keep watch to see that no one gets out of the town. ¹⁴ They and their wives and children will waste away with famine, and before the sword reaches them they will be strewn about in the streets where they live. ¹⁵ Thus you will pay them back with evil, because they rebelled and did not receive you peaceably.”

¹⁶ These words pleased Holofernes and all his attendants, and he gave orders to do as they had said. ¹⁷ So the army of the Ammonites moved forward, together with five thousand Assyrians, and they encamped in the valley and seized the water supply and the springs of the Israelites. ¹⁸ And the Edomites and Ammonites went up and encamped in the hill country opposite Dothan; and they sent some of their men toward the south and the east, toward Egrebeh, which is near Chusi beside the Wadi Mochmur. The rest of the Assyrian army encamped in the plain, and covered the whole face of the land. Their tents and supply trains spread out in great number, and they formed a vast multitude.

7:1–18: Holofernes advances on Bethulia and prepares for a siege. Again, the size of the army is emphasized, covering an entire valley (see 2:15–20n). They will strip clean the whole land like locusts. The action is drawn out and presented visually to give the full impression of the forces arrayed against Bethulia. 8: The historical enemies of Israel, Edomites and Moabites, recommend a siege, so that Bethulia will fall for lack of water.

7:19–32: Israelites in Bethulia begin to despair. The predictions of Holofernes’ advisers appear to be coming true. Just as lack of water led to murmuring in Ex 17:1–7, so also here; Moses’ role is paralleled by both Uzziah

²³ Then all the people, the young men, the women, and the children, gathered around Uzziah and the rulers of the town and cried out with a loud voice, and said before all the elders, ²⁴ “Let God judge between you and us! You have done us a great injury in not making peace with the Assyrians. ²⁵ For now we have no one to help us; God has sold us into their hands, to be strewn before them in thirst and exhaustion. ²⁶ Now summon them and surrender the whole town as booty to the army of Holofernes and to all his forces. ²⁷ For it would be better for us to be captured by them.^a We shall indeed become slaves, but our lives will be spared, and we shall not witness our little ones dying before our eyes, and our wives and children drawing their last breath. ²⁸ We call to witness against you heaven and earth and our God, the Lord of our ancestors, who punishes us for our sins and the sins of our ancestors; do today the things that we have deserved!”

²⁹ Then great and general lamentation arose throughout the assembly, and they cried out to the Lord God with a loud voice. ³⁰ But Uzziah said to them, “Courage, my brothers and sisters!^b Let us hold out for five days more; by that time the Lord our God will turn his mercy to us again, for he will not forsake us utterly. ³¹ But if these days pass by, and no help comes for us, I will do as you say.”

³² Then he dismissed the people to their various posts, and they went up on the walls and towers of their town. The women and children he sent home. In the town they were in great misery.

8 Now in those days Judith heard about these things: she was the daughter of Merari son of Ox son of Joseph son of Oziel son of Elkiah son of Ananias son of Gideon son of Raphain son of Ahitub son of Elijah son of Hilkiah son of Eliab son of Nathanael son of Salamiel son of Sarasadai son of Israel. ² Her husband Manasseh, who belonged to her tribe and family, had died during the barley harvest. ³ For as he stood overseeing those who were binding sheaves in the field, he was overcome by the burning heat, and took to his bed and died in his town Bethulia. So they buried him with his ancestors in the field between Dothan and Balamon. ⁴ Judith remained as a widow for three years and four months ⁵ at home where she set up a tent for herself on the roof of her house. She put sackcloth around her waist and dressed in widow's clothing. ⁶ She fasted all the days of her widowhood, except the day before the sabbath and the sabbath itself, the day before the new moon and the day of the new moon, and the festivals and days of rejoicing of the house of Israel. ⁷ She was beautiful in appearance, and was very lovely to behold. Her husband Manasseh had left her gold and silver, men and women slaves, livestock, and fields; and she and Judith. 28: Our sins and the sins of our ancestors, the Israelites blame themselves for their predicaments (cf. Judith's interpretation in 8.18,27). 30: Uzziah urges that they hold out for five days more. A similar story is told of the Greek city of Lindos, in which the citizens, besieged by the Persians, pray to Athena to send rain within five days. The goddess comes to their aid by bringing rain to them and drought to the Persians. Judith, however, will later have none of this; she will condemn the Bethulians for setting a deadline on God's help (see 8.11–17). 7.32: Calm descends on Bethulia, but it is the calm of despair. This makes an effective conclusion to the first half and a transition to the introduction of the person who will save Bethulia and thus Israel: Judith.

8.1–16.25: Part II: Judith rescues her people.

8.1–8: Judith is introduced. 1: Judith's name, in Greek “loudith,” in Hebrew “Yehudit,” is the feminine for Judean or Jew. Her name suggests that Bethulia and Jerusalem will be saved by the ideal Jewish woman, and it also echoes the name of one of the leaders of the Maccabean revolt, Judas Maccabeus. She is given the longest genealogy of any woman in the Bible, but it is likely fictitious. Many of the names are unknown, although it includes Israel, i.e., Jacob. 2–3: The death of her husband from sunstroke provides an unheroic contrast to Judith's actions. Other male characters will also be passive in contrast to her. 4–6: Judith's piety is exemplary, and her period of mourning is far greater than prescribed in Jewish law, suggesting a new mode of ascetic practice. In keeping with Jewish law, she does not fast on festive holidays. 7–8: Judith's beauty and wealth give her a larger-than-life quality, but her devotion to God is the source of her strength.

maintained this estate.⁸ No one spoke ill of her, for she feared God with great devotion.

⁹ When Judith heard the harsh words spoken by the people against the ruler, because they were faint for lack of water, and when she heard all that Uzziah said to them, and how he promised them under oath to surrender the town to the Assyrians after five days,¹⁰ she sent her maid, who was in charge of^a her possessions, to summon Uzziah and^a Chabris and Charmis, the elders of her town.¹¹ They came to her, and she said to them:

“Listen to me, rulers of the people of Bethulia! What you have said to the people today is not right; you have even sworn and pronounced this oath between God and you, promising to surrender the town to our enemies unless the Lord turns and helps us within so many days.¹² Who are you to put God to the test today, and to set yourselves up in the place of^b God in human affairs?¹³ You are putting the Lord Almighty to the test, but you will never learn anything!¹⁴ You cannot plumb the depths of the human heart or understand the workings of the human mind; how do you expect to search out God, who made all these things, and find out his mind or comprehend his thought? No, my brothers, do not anger the Lord our God.¹⁵ For if he does not choose to help us within these five days, he has power to protect us within any time he pleases, or even to destroy us in the presence of our enemies.¹⁶ Do not try to bind the purposes of the Lord our God; for God is not like a human being, to be threatened, or like a mere mortal, to be won over by pleading.¹⁷ Therefore, while we wait for his deliverance, let us call upon him to help us, and he will hear our voice, if it pleases him.

¹⁸ “For never in our generation, nor in these present days, has there been any tribe or family or people or town of ours that worships gods made with hands, as was done in days gone by.¹⁹ That was why our ancestors were handed over to the sword and to pillage, and so they suffered a great catastrophe before our enemies.²⁰ But we know no other god but him, and so we hope that he will not disdain us or any of our nation.²¹ For if we are captured, all Judea will be captured and our sanctuary will be plundered; and he will make us pay for its desecration with our blood.²² The slaughter of our kindred and the captivity of the land and the desolation of our inheritance—all this he will bring on our heads among the Gentiles, wherever we serve as slaves; and we shall be an offense and a disgrace in the eyes of those who acquire us.²³ For our slavery will not bring us into favor, but the Lord our God will turn it to dishonor.

²⁴ “Therefore, my brothers, let us set an example for our kindred, for their lives depend upon us, and the sanctuary—both the temple and the altar—rests upon us.²⁵ In spite of everything let us give thanks to the Lord our God, who is putting us to the test as he did our ancestors.²⁶ Remember what he did with Abraham, and how he tested Isaac, and what happened to Jacob in Syrian Mesopotamia, while he was tending the sheep of Laban, his mother’s brother.²⁷ For he has not tried us with fire, as he did them, to search their hearts, nor has he taken vengeance on us; but the Lord scourges those who are close to him in order to admonish them.”

²⁸ Then Uzziah said to her, “All that you have said was spoken out of a true heart, and there is no one who can deny your words.²⁹ Today is not the first time your wisdom

8.9–27: Judith upbraids the town leaders. 10: Her unnamed maid, a slave, is responsible for her affairs. Slaves could wield the authority of their owners. 11: That they came to her indicates Judith’s important status in the community. 12: Judith will insist that they pray to God (v.17), but they may not put God to the test by setting a date, a violation of Deut 6.16. 18–19: A theme of this story is the Deuteronomic principle that if Jews sin, they will be defeated, but if they remain righteous, God will protect them (Deut 28). Judith’s description of the present righteousness idealizes the period after the Maccabean Revolt when the Temple had been rededicated. 25–27: Rather than testing God, it is God who tests Israel, as God tested Abraham (Gen 22), Isaac, and Jacob (Gen 29). Israelite history is echoed often in Judith.

8.28–36: Judith’s powerful words win over Uzziah and the citizens. Just as Holofernes in the first half spends much of his time in war councils, Judith holds a war council with the Bethulians. 29: The Bethulians have always has been shown, but from the beginning of your life all the people have recognized your understanding, for your heart's disposition is right.³⁰ But the people were so thirsty that they compelled us to do for them what we have promised, and made us take an oath that we cannot break.³¹ Now since you are a God-fearing woman, pray for us, so that the Lord may send us rain to fill our cisterns. Then we will no longer feel faint from thirst.”

³² Then Judith said to them, “Listen to me. I am about to do something that will go down through all generations of our descendants.

³³ Stand at the town gate tonight so that I may go out with my maid; and within the days after which you have promised to surrender the town to our enemies, the Lord will deliver Israel by my hand.³⁴ Only, do not try to find out what I am doing; for I will not tell you until I have finished what I am about to do.”

³⁵ Uzziah and the rulers said to her, “Go in peace, and may the Lord God go before you, to take vengeance on our enemies.”³⁶ So they returned from the tent and went to their posts.

9 Then Judith prostrated herself, put ashes on her head, and uncovered the sackcloth she was wearing. At the very time when the evening incense was being offered in the house of God in Jerusalem, Judith cried out to the Lord with a loud voice, and said,

² “O Lord God of my ancestor Simeon, to whom you gave a sword to take revenge on those strangers who had torn off a virgin's clothing^a to defile her, and exposed her thighs to put her to shame, and polluted her womb to disgrace her; for you said, ‘It shall not be done’—yet they did it;³ so you gave up their rulers to be killed, and their bed, which was ashamed of the deceit they had practiced, was stained with blood, and you struck down slaves along with princes, and princes on their thrones.⁴ You gave up their wives for booty and their daughters to captivity, and all their booty to be divided among your beloved children who burned with zeal for you and abhorred the pollution of their blood and called on you for help. O God, my God, hear me also, a widow.

⁵ “For you have done these things and those that went before and those that followed. You have designed the things that are now, and those that are to come. What you had in mind has happened;⁶ the things you decided on presented themselves and said, ‘Here we are!’ For all your ways are prepared in advance, and your judgment is with foreknowledge.

⁷ “Here now are the Assyrians, a greatly increased force, priding themselves in their horses and riders, boasting in the strength of their foot soldiers, and trusting in shield and spear, in bow and sling. They do not know that you are the Lord who crushes wars; the Lord is your name.⁸ Break their strength by your might, and bring down their power in your anger; for they intend to defile your sanctuary, and to pollute the tabernacle where your glorious name resides, and to break off the horns^b of your altar with the sword.⁹ Look at their pride, and send your respected Judith's wisdom; her traits are similar to personified Wisdom (Prov 8.6) and the capable wife (Prov 31.10–31). However, her wisdom will exceed the usual standards for wise women. 30: Thirst had rendered the people weak, and the passive leaders, unlike Judith, had acquiesced. 32–34: Judith keeps her plan secret, in contrast to Nebuchadnezzar who reveals his secret plan to his advisors (2.2), and places her confidence in God that it will succeed. It will be remembered by all generations (cf. 16.21–25).

9.1–14: Judith prepares through prayer. 1: Ashes and sackcloth are signs of mourning and affliction. Judith's prayer coincides with the offering of evening incense (Ex 30.8). 2–8: She invokes the sins of the invaders and the revenge of my ancestor Simeon on Shechem for raping Dinah (Gen 34). Although Simeon's revenge is characterized as excessive and foolhardy in Gen 34.30; 49.5–7, here it is considered justified, as in Jub. 30. 8: The horns of the altar were projections with symbolic importance; see Ex 27.2; 1 Kings 1.50; 2.28; Am 3.14. 9–10: Judith prays that God strike down Holofernes by the hand of a widow and a woman, a reversal found also at Judg 4; 5; 9.53–54. Like Simeon, Judith will use deceit—not a last-minute expedient but the basis of her plan and her prayer all along. By contrast, a weaker male, Achior, insisted rightly that he would speak only truth (5.5). Although rejected in wisdom texts (Prov 6.16–19; Wis 1.8; Jas 3.5–12), deceit is celebrated in this story, and wrath upon their heads. Give to me, a widow, the strong hand to do what I plan. ¹⁰ By the deceit of my lips strike down the slave with the prince and the prince with his servant; crush their arrogance by the hand of a woman.

¹¹ “For your strength does not depend on numbers, nor your might on the powerful. But you are the God of the lowly, helper of the oppressed, upholder of the weak, protector of the forsaken, savior of those without hope. ¹² Please, please, God of my father, God of the heritage of Israel, Lord of heaven and earth, Creator of the waters, King of all your creation, hear my prayer! ¹³ Make my deceitful words bring wound and bruise on those who have planned cruel things against your covenant, and against your sacred house, and against Mount Zion, and against the house your children possess. ¹⁴ Let your whole nation and every tribe know and understand that you are God, the God of all power and might, and that there is no other who protects the people of Israel but you alone!”

10 When Judith^a had stopped crying out to the God of Israel, and had ended all these words, ² she rose from where she lay prostrate. She called her maid and went down into the house where she lived on sabbaths and on her festal days. ³ She removed the sackcloth she had been wearing, took off her widow’s garments, bathed her body with water, and anointed herself with precious ointment. She combed her hair, put on a tiara, and dressed herself in the festive attire that she used to wear while her husband Manasseh was living. ⁴ She put sandals on her feet, and put on her anklets, bracelets, rings, earrings, and all her other jewelry. Thus she made herself very beautiful, to entice the eyes of all the men who might see her. ⁵ She gave her maid a skin of wine and a flask of oil, and filled a bag with roasted grain, dried fig cakes, and fine bread;^b then she wrapped up all her dishes and gave them to her to carry.

⁶ Then they went out to the town gate of Bethulia and found Uzziah standing there with the elders of the town, Chabris and Charmis. ⁷ When they saw her transformed in appearance and dressed differently, they were very greatly astounded at her beauty and said to her, ⁸ “May the God of our ancestors grant you favor and fulfill your plans, so that the people of Israel may glory and Jerusalem may be exalted.” She bowed down to God.

⁹ Then she said to them, “Order the gate of the town to be opened for me so that I may go out and accomplish the things you have just said to me.” So they ordered the young men to open the gate for her, as she requested.

¹¹ As the women^c were going straight on through the valley, an Assyrian patrol met her ¹² and took her into custody. They asked her, “To what people do you belong, and where are you coming from, and where are you going?” She replied, “I am a daughter of the Hebrews, but I am fleeing from them, for they are about elsewhere is often used by tricksters and those less powerful than their adversaries, such as Rebekah (Gen 27), Jacob (Gen 27), Rachel (Gen 31), Tamar (Gen 38), and Abraham (Gen 12; 20).

10.1–10: Judith puts her plan into motion. 1–4: Judith wore sackcloth while praying, but now dresses in beautiful clothes (cf. Add Esth 15). 3: Given the lack of water in Bethulia, Judith’s decision to bathe her body with water indicates the significance of her mission. 5: Judith’s provisions will allow her to keep the dietary laws while with the Assyrians (cf. Dan 1.8–16). Her maid will be a silent, efficient, loyal counterpart to Holofernes’ talkative assistant, Bagoas. 6–10: The ritualized departure slows the rhythm of the story here, and the visual detail is striking. Once Judith passes through the gate of the city, almost every word out of her mouth will be deceitful and every action sexually provocative or murderous.

10.11–23: Judith meets the guards and is taken to Holofernes. 13–16: Ironically and humorously, readers already see that her true report will be a lie. Nearly every line of dialogue that follows can be read ironically as well: You have saved your life by hurrying down to see our lord (v. 15) can be heard by the audience as referring to God. The obtuseness of the Assyrians, even about the meanings of their own words, is likely intended as to be handed over to you to be devoured.¹³ I am on my way to see Holofernes the commander of your army, to give him a true report; I will show him a way by which he can go and capture all the hill country without losing one of his men, captured or slain.”

¹⁴When the men heard her words, and observed her face—she was in their eyes marvelously beautiful—they said to her,¹⁵ “You have saved your life by hurrying down to see our lord. Go at once to his tent; some of us will escort you and hand you over to him.¹⁶ When you stand before him, have no fear in your heart, but tell him what you have just said, and he will treat you well.”

¹⁷They chose from their number a hundred men to accompany her and her maid, and they brought them to the tent of Holofernes.¹⁸ There was great excitement in the whole camp, for her arrival was reported from tent to tent. They came and gathered around her as she stood outside the tent of Holofernes, waiting until they told him about her.¹⁹ They marveled at her beauty and admired the Israelites, judging them by her. They said to one another, “Who can despise these people, who have women like this among them? It is not wise to leave one of their men alive, for if we let them go they will be able to beguile the whole world!”

²⁰Then the guards of Holofernes and all his servants came out and led her into the tent.²¹ Holofernes was resting on his bed under a canopy that was woven with purple and gold, emeralds and other precious stones.²² When they told him of her, he came to the front of the tent, with silver lamps carried before him.²³ When Judith came into the presence of Holofernes^a and his servants, they all marveled at the beauty of her face. She prostrated herself and did obeisance to him, but his slaves raised her up.

11 Then Holofernes said to her, “Take courage, woman, and do not be afraid in your heart, for I have never hurt anyone who chose to serve Nebuchadnezzar, king of all the earth.² Even now, if your people who live in the hill country had not slighted me, I would never have lifted my spear against them. They have brought this on themselves.³ But now tell me why you have fled from them and have come over to us. In any event, you have come to safety. Take courage! You will live tonight and ever after.⁴ No one will hurt you. Rather, all will treat you well, as they do the servants of my lord King Nebuchadnezzar.”

⁵Judith answered him, “Accept the words of your slave, and let your servant speak in your presence. I will say nothing false to my lord this night.⁶ If you follow out the words of your servant, God will accomplish something through you, and my lord will not fail to achieve his purposes.⁷ By the life of Nebuchadnezzar, king of the whole earth, and by the power of him who has sent you to direct every living being! Not only do human beings serve him because of you, but also the animals of the field and the cattle and the birds of the air will live, because of your power, under Nebuchadnezzar and all his house.⁸ For we have heard of your wisdom and skill, and it is reported throughout the whole world that you alone are the best in the whole kingdom, the most informed and the most astounding in military strategy.

⁹“Now as for Achior’s speech in your council, we have heard his words, for the people of Bethulia spared him and he told them all he had said to you.¹⁰ Therefore, lord and master, do not disregard what he said, but keep it in your mind, for it is true. Indeed our nation cannot be punished, nor can the sword prevail against them, unless they sin against their God.

humorous. 20–22: Holofernes’ tent is decorated with luxurious items like a harem chamber.

11.1–23: Judith’s dialogue with Holofernes. 1: Holofernes also speaks a mixture of truth and lies (see 3.2–8). 6: Judith’s double meanings continue with the ambiguity in her statement: My lord will not fail to achieve his purposes. 7: This grandiose view of Nebuchadnezzar is also played upon in Dan 2.37–38; 4.12 (cf. Jer 27.6; 28.14). Judith cleverly adapts the praise of Nebuchadnezzar to flatter Holofernes. 9–15: That Holofernes would have believed any part of her story is preposterous, but this only makes the fictional world more enjoyable. 9: Achior’s will fall upon them, for a sin has overtaken them by which they are about to provoke their God to anger when they do what is wrong.¹² Since their food supply is exhausted and their water has almost given out, they have planned to kill their livestock and have determined to use all that God by his laws has forbidden them to eat.¹³ They have decided to consume the first fruits of the grain and the tithes of the wine and oil, which they had consecrated and set aside for the priests who minister in the presence of our God in Jerusalem—things it is not lawful for any of the people even to touch with their hands.¹⁴ Since even the people in Jerusalem have been doing this, they have sent messengers there in order to bring back permission from the council of the elders.¹⁵ When the response reaches them and they act upon it, on that very day they will be handed over to you to be destroyed.

¹⁶“So when I, your slave, learned all this, I fled from them. God has sent me to accomplish with you things that will astonish the whole world wherever people shall hear about them.¹⁷ Your servant is indeed God-fearing and serves the God of heaven night and day. So, my lord, I will remain with you; but every night your servant will go out into the valley and pray to God. He will tell me when they have committed their sins.¹⁸ Then I will come and tell you, so that you may go out with your whole army, and not one of them will be able to withstand you.¹⁹ Then I will lead you through Judea, until you come to Jerusalem; there I will set your throne.^a You will drive them like sheep that have no shepherd, and no dog will so much as growl at you. For this was told me to give me foreknowledge; it was announced to me, and I was sent to tell you.”

²⁰Her words pleased Holofernes and all his servants. They marveled at her wisdom and said,²¹ “No other woman from one end of the earth to the other looks so beautiful or speaks so wisely!”²² Then Holofernes said to her, “God has done well to send you ahead of the people, to strengthen our hands and bring destruction on those who have despised my lord.²³ You are not only beautiful in appearance, but wise in speech. If you do as you have said, your God shall be my God, and you shall live in the palace of King Nebuchadnezzar and be renowned throughout the whole world.”

12 Then he commanded them to bring her in where his silver dinnerware was kept, and ordered them to set a table for her with some of his own delicacies, and with some of his own wine to drink.² But Judith said, “I cannot partake of them, or it will be an offense; but I will have enough with the things I brought with me.”³ Holofernes said to her, “If your supply runs out, where can we get you more of the same? For none of your people are here with us.”⁴ Judith replied, “As surely as you live, my lord, your servant will not use up the supplies I have with me before the Lord carries out by my hand what he has determined.”

⁵Then the servants of Holofernes brought her into the tent, and she slept until midnight. Toward the morning watch she got up⁶ and sent this message to Holofernes: “Let my lord now give orders to allow your servant to go out and pray.”⁷ So Holofernes commanded his guards not to hinder her. She remained in the camp three days. She went out each night to the valley of Bethulia, and bathed at the spring in the camp.^b⁸ After bathing, she prayed the Lord God of Israel to direct her way for the triumph of his^c people.⁹ Then she returned purified and stayed in the tent until she ate her food toward evening.

speech, see 5.5–21. 13: First fruits, Ex 23.19; tithes, Lev 27.30. 17: Even Judith’s piety is deceitful; she establishes a prayer discipline that will allow her to escape unnoticed (13.3,10), just as her pouch for kosher food will also serve a different and macabre purpose. 22–23: Holofernes unknowingly speaks the truth in double meanings: bring destruction on those who have despised my lord; your God shall be my God—in judgment!

12.1–9: Judith’s daily schedule within Holofernes’ camp. Judith imposes her schedule on Holofernes, which allows her to keep the dietary laws and to pray (cf. Dan 1.8–19). 8: Her daily bathing may be a ritual bath; similar rituals were practiced at Qumran.

¹⁰ On the fourth day Holofernes held a banquet for his personal attendants only, and did not invite any of his officers. ¹¹ He said to Bagoas, the eunuch who had charge of his personal affairs, “Go and persuade the Hebrew woman who is in your care to join us and to eat and drink with us. ¹² For it would be a disgrace if we let such a woman go without having intercourse with her. If we do not seduce her, she will laugh at us.”

¹³ So Bagoas left the presence of Holofernes, and approached her and said, “Let this pretty girl not hesitate to come to my lord to be honored in his presence, and to enjoy drinking wine with us, and to become today like one of the Assyrian women who serve in the palace of Nebuchadnezzar.” ¹⁴ Judith replied, “Who am I to refuse my lord? Whatever pleases him I will do at once, and it will be a joy to me until the day of my death.” ¹⁵ So she proceeded to dress herself in all her woman’s finery. Her maid went ahead and spread for her on the ground before Holofernes the lambskins she had received from Bagoas for her daily use in reclining.

¹⁶ Then Judith came in and lay down. Holofernes’ heart was ravished with her and his passion was aroused, for he had been waiting for an opportunity to seduce her from the day he first saw her. ¹⁷ So Holofernes said to her, “Have a drink and be merry with us!” ¹⁸ Judith said, “I will gladly drink, my lord, because today is the greatest day in my whole life.” ¹⁹ Then she took what her maid had prepared and ate and drank before him. ²⁰ Holofernes was greatly pleased with her, and drank a great quantity of wine, much more than he had ever drunk in any one day since he was born.

13 When evening came, his slaves quickly withdrew. Bagoas closed the tent from outside and shut out the attendants from his master’s presence. They went to bed, for they all were weary because the banquet had lasted so long. ² But Judith was left alone in the tent, with Holofernes stretched out on his bed, for he was dead drunk.

³ Now Judith had told her maid to stand outside the bedchamber and to wait for her to come out, as she did on the other days; for she said she would be going out for her prayers. She had said the same thing to Bagoas. ⁴ So everyone went out, and no one, either small or great, was left in the bedchamber. Then Judith, standing beside his bed, said in her heart, “O Lord God of all might, look in this hour on the work of my hands for the exaltation of Jerusalem. ⁵ Now indeed is the time to help your heritage and to carry out my design to destroy the enemies who have risen up against us.”

⁶ She went up to the bedpost near Holofernes’ head, and took down his sword that hung there. ⁷ She came close to his bed, took hold of the hair of his head, and said, “Give me strength today, O Lord God of Israel!” ⁸ Then she struck his neck twice with all her might, and cut off his head. ⁹ Next she rolled his body off the bed and pulled down the canopy from the posts. Soon afterward she went out and gave Holofernes’ head to her maid, ¹⁰ who placed it in her food bag.

12.10–20: Holofernes invites Judith to a banquet. 11–13: Bagoas, see 2.4n. Both Holofernes and Bagoas reveal by their words that they are putty in Judith’s hands, an ironic contrast with the power they think they have. In the Greek novels the beautiful heroine is often threatened with the prospect of being forced to marry a king or become a courtesan, but here Judith is fully in charge and can manipulate the suggestion. 15: The lambskins may symbolically protect Judith from impurity (cf. Josephus, Ant. 3.270, m. Sot. 2:4). 16–20: Holofernes thinks that he will seduce Judith, but it is she who seduces him into drinking more than he had ever drunk before. She seems as excited as Holofernes, but for an entirely different reason. Again, Judith speaks the truth that she intends to be misunderstood by Holofernes.

13.1–10a: Judith beheads Holofernes 1–3: Chs 1–12 have been building in tension for this moment. The story has been intentionally delayed before but proceeds quickly now, with the beheading scene told in seven verses. 6–10a: Judith’s actions and words also have biblical precedents, including David slaying Goliath (1 Sam 17.46) and Jael slaying Sisera (Judg 4–5). Holofernes’ canopy and head are collected as trophies, which will be important later. The food bag is now seen to be part of her plan to kill Holofernes as well.

13.10b–20: Judith and her maid return to Bethulia. The daily prayers of Judith and her maid now make it

Then the two of them went out together, as they were accustomed to do for prayer. They passed through the camp, circled around the valley, and went up the mountain to Bethulia, and came to its gates. ¹¹ From a distance Judith called out to the sentries at the gates, “Open, open the gate! God, our God, is with us, still showing his power in Israel and his strength against our enemies, as he has done today!”

¹² When the people of her town heard her voice, they hurried down to the town gate and summoned the elders of the town. ¹³ They all ran together, both small and great, for it seemed unbelievable that she had returned. They opened the gate and welcomed them. Then they lit a fire to give light, and gathered around them. ¹⁴ Then she said to them with a loud voice, “Praise God, O praise him! Praise God, who has not withdrawn his mercy from the house of Israel, but has destroyed our enemies by my hand this very night!”

¹⁵ Then she pulled the head out of the bag and showed it to them, and said, “See here, the head of Holofernes, the commander of the Assyrian army, and here is the canopy beneath which he lay in his drunken stupor. The Lord has struck him down by the hand of a woman. ¹⁶ As the Lord lives, who has protected me in the way I went, I swear that it was my face that seduced him to his destruction, and that he committed no sin with me, to defile and shame me.”

¹⁷ All the people were greatly astonished. They bowed down and worshiped God, and said with one accord, “Blessed are you our God, who have this day humiliated the enemies of your people.”

¹⁸ Then Uzziah said to her, “O daughter, you are blessed by the Most High God above all other women on earth; and blessed be the Lord God, who created the heavens and the earth, who has guided you to cut off the head of the leader of our enemies. ¹⁹ Your praise^a will never depart from the hearts of those who remember the power of God. ²⁰ May God grant this to be a perpetual honor to you, and may he reward you with blessings, because you risked your own life when our nation was brought low, and you averted our ruin, walking in the straight path before our God.” And all the people said, “Amen. Amen.”

14 Then Judith said to them, “Listen to me, my friends. Take this head and hang it upon the parapet of your wall. ² As soon as day breaks and the sun rises on the earth, each of you take up your weapons, and let every able-bodied man go out of the town; set a captain over them, as if you were going down to the plain against the Assyrian outpost; only do not go down. ³ Then they will seize their arms and go into the camp and rouse the officers of the Assyrian army. They will rush into the tent of Holofernes and will not find him. Then panic will come over them, and they will flee before you. ⁴ Then you and all who live within the borders of Israel will pursue them and cut them down in their tracks. ⁵ But before you do all this, bring Achior the Ammonite to me so that he may see and recognize the man who despised the house of Israel and sent him to us as if to his death.”

⁶ So they summoned Achior from the house of Uzziah. When he came and saw the head of Holofernes in the hand of one of the men in the assembly of the people, he fell down on his face in a faint. ⁷ When they raised him up he threw himself at Judith’s feet, and did obeisance to her, and said, “Blessed are you in every tent of Judah! In every nation those who hear your name will be alarmed. ⁸ Now tell me what you have done during these days.”

So Judith told him in the presence of the people all that she had done, from the day possible for them to arouse no suspicion as they escape (11.17; 12.7). 15: By the hand of a woman, see 9.9–10n. 18–20: Judith’s deed is met with a blessing similar to Deborah’s blessing of Jael for killing the Canaanite general Sisera (Judg 5.24).

14.1–10: Judith plans for a military victory, and Achior converts. Judith again orders the Bethulians into action and demonstrates her control over the Assyrians. On exhibiting the enemy’s head, cf. 1 Sam 17.54; 31.9–10; 2 Kings 10.7–8; Matt 14.8; 1 Macc 7.47; 2 Macc 15.35. The last two are significant because Judith’s name may be a play on that of Judas Maccabeus, whose exhibition of the head of Nicanor also resulted in an annual celebra-

she left until the moment she began speaking to them. ⁹ When she had finished, the people raised a great shout and made a joyful noise in their town. ¹⁰ When Achior saw all that the God of Israel had done, he believed firmly in God. So he was circumcised, and joined the house of Israel, remaining so to this day.

¹¹ As soon as it was dawn they hung the head of Holofernes on the wall. Then they all took their weapons, and they went out in companies to the mountain passes. ¹² When the Assyrians saw them they sent word to their commanders, who then went to the generals and the captains and to all their other officers. ¹³ They came to Holofernes' tent and said to the steward in charge of all his personal affairs, "Wake up our lord, for the slaves have been so bold as to come down against us to give battle, to their utter destruction."

¹⁴ So Bagoas went in and knocked at the entry of the tent, for he supposed that he was sleeping with Judith. ¹⁵ But when no one answered, he opened it and went into the bedchamber and found him sprawled on the floor dead, with his head missing. ¹⁶ He cried out with a loud voice and wept and groaned and shouted, and tore his clothes. ¹⁷ Then he went to the tent where Judith had stayed, and when he did not find her, he rushed out to the people and shouted, ¹⁸ "The slaves have tricked us! One Hebrew woman has brought disgrace on the house of King Nebuchadnezzar. Look, Holofernes is lying on the ground, and his head is missing!"

¹⁹ When the leaders of the Assyrian army heard this, they tore their tunics and were greatly dismayed, and their loud cries and shouts rose up throughout the camp.

15 When the men in the tents heard it, they were amazed at what had happened. ² Overcome with fear and trembling, they did not wait for one another, but with one impulse all rushed out and fled by every path across the plain and through the hill country. ³ Those who had camped in the hills around Bethulia also took to flight. Then the Israelites, everyone that was a soldier, rushed out upon them. ⁴ Uzziah sent men to Beto-masthaim^a and Choba and Kola, and to all the frontiers of Israel, to tell what had taken place and to urge all to rush out upon the enemy to destroy them. ⁵ When the Israelites heard it, with one accord they fell upon the enemy,^b and cut them down as far as Choba. Those in Jerusalem and all the hill country also came, for they were told what had happened in the camp of the enemy. The men in Gilead and in Galilee outflanked them with great slaughter, even beyond Damascus and its borders. ⁶ The rest of the people of Bethulia fell upon the Assyrian camp and plundered it, acquiring great riches. ⁷ And the Israelites, when they returned from the slaughter, took possession of what remained. Even the villages and towns in the hill country and in the plain got a great amount of booty, since there was a vast quantity of it.

⁸ Then the high priest Joakim and the elders of the Israelites who lived in Jerusalem came to witness the good things that the Lord

tion. 6: Cf. 6.5. It is ironic that Achior faints, since Judith was so resolute in taking the head. 10: Like Judith, Achior recognizes that her heroism comes from God, and responds by converting. Although Deut 23.3 forbids the acceptance of Ammonites or Moabites to the tenth generation, in this romanticized narrative, he, like Ruth the Moabite, is permitted to join.

14.11–15.7: The Assyrians discover Holofernes' headless body and are put to flight. 14.11–14: Events occur just as Judith predicted (14.3), although the story is slowed somewhat so that the audience can relish the coming reversal. 18: Honor and shame are now reversed; Judith has exhibited Holofernes' head, shaming him and his memory, and the status of weak and powerful is reversed: Slaves and one Hebrew woman prevail over and disgrace the house of King Nebuchadnezzar. 14.19–15.7: Upon learning that Holofernes has lost his head, the Assyrians lose theirs as well: general chaos results, and they are easily vanquished by the outnumbered Israelites. Here the Assyrians experience the same fear and trembling that they caused other nations (cf. 2.3), including Israel (4.1–2). The depiction of victory and plundering is similar to 1 Macc 7.44–47 (cf. also Deut 20.10–18; Esth 9.1–19; Ps 48).

had done for Israel, and to see Judith and to wish her well. ⁹ When they met her, they all blessed her with one accord and said to her, “You are the glory of Jerusalem, you are the great boast of Israel, you are the great pride of our nation! ¹⁰ You have done all this with your own hand; you have done great good to Israel, and God is well pleased with it. May the Almighty Lord bless you forever!” And all the people said, “Amen.”

¹¹ All the people plundered the camp for thirty days. They gave Judith the tent of Holofernes and all his silver dinnerware, his beds, his bowls, and all his furniture. She took them and loaded her mules and hitched up her carts and piled the things on them.

¹⁴ Judith began this thanksgiving before all Israel, and all the people loudly sang this song of praise. ¹ And Judith said,

16 Begin a song to my God with tambourines, sing to my Lord with cymbals.
Raise to him a new psalm;^a exalt him, and call upon his name.

² For the Lord is a God who crushes wars;
he sets up his camp among his people;
he delivered me from the hands of my pursuers.

³ The Assyrian came down from the mountains of the north;
he came with myriads of his warriors;
their numbers blocked up the wadis,
and their cavalry covered the hills.

⁴ He boasted that he would burn up my territory,
and kill my young men with the sword,
and dash my infants to the ground,
and seize my children as booty,
and take my virgins as spoil.

⁵ But the Lord Almighty has foiled them by the hand of a woman.^b

⁶ For their mighty one did not fall by the hands of the young men, nor did the sons of the Titans strike him down,
nor did tall giants set upon him;
but Judith daughter of Merari with the beauty of her countenance undid him.

⁷ For she put away her widow’s clothing to exalt the oppressed in Israel.

She anointed her face with perfume;
⁸ she fastened her hair with a tiara and put on a linen gown to beguile
him.

⁹ Her sandal ravished his eyes, her beauty captivated his mind,
and the sword severed his neck!

¹⁰ The Persians trembled at her boldness, the Medes were daunted at her daring.

Temple officials has often been emphasized in the story, and especially here in the co-celebration. 11: A balanced and complete reversal of fortune can be seen here. Bethulia was under siege for thirty-four days (7.20) before Judith went to the Assyrian camp for four days, which the Israelites then plunder for thirty days. 12: The women . . . performed a dance in her honor, women in Israel performed victory dances and songs (Ex 15.20–21; 1 Sam 18.6–7). Ivy-wreathed wands were Greek in origin, but 2 Macc 10.7 and 3 Macc 7.16 indicate that they had been adopted by Jews. 15.14–16.17: Judith’s victory song. This book, like Tobit, concludes with a long hymn of thanksgiving (cf. also Deut 32–33; Judg 5; 2 Sam 22; Jon 2; Prayer of Azariah, and the Song of the Three Jews). Especially close is Ex 15; Ex 15.3 (Greek) and Jdt 16.2 both read: For the Lord is a God who crushes wars. 16.1: Tambourines, small hand-drums without the modern metal rattles, are known from ancient depictions (cf. Ps 150.4–5). A new psalm (cf. Ps 96.1; 98.1). 5: By the hand of a woman, see 9.9–10n.; 13.15. 6: Titans and giants are from Greek mythology, though here perhaps also referring to giants from Israelite tradition (Gen 6.4; Deut 3.11). 10: The

 is a small thing,
 and the fat of all whole burnt offerings to you is a very little thing;
 but whoever fears the Lord is great forever.

 my people!
 The Lord Almighty will take vengeance on them in the day of judgment;
 he will send fire and worms into their they shall weep in pain forever.

¹⁸When they arrived at Jerusalem, they worshiped God. As soon as the people were purified, they offered their burnt offerings, their freewill offerings, and their gifts. ¹⁹Ju-dith also dedicated to God all the possessions of Holofernes, which the people had given her; and the canopy that she had taken for herself from his bedchamber she gave as a votive offering. ²⁰For three months the people continued feasting in Jerusalem before the sanctuary, and Judith remained with them.

²¹After this they all returned home to their own inheritances. Judith went to Bethulia, and remained on her estate. For the rest of her life she was honored throughout the whole country. ²²Many desired to marry her, but she gave herself to no man all the days of her life after her husband Manasseh died and was gathered to his people. ²³She became more and more famous, and grew old in her husband's house, reaching the age of one hundred five. She set her maid free. She died in Bethulia, and they buried her in the cave of her husband Manasseh; ²⁴and the house of Israel mourned her for seven days. Before she died she distributed her property to all those who were next of kin to her husband Manasseh, and to her own nearest kindred. ²⁵No one ever again spread terror among the Israelites during the lifetime of Judith, or for a long time after her death.

Persians and Medes are surprising here; they have not figured in the narrative before. 13: A new song (cf. 16.1n.; Ps 33; 149.1; Isa 42.10). 14: Cf. Ps 104.30. 15: Cf. Ps. 97.5. 19: Offerings of military booty were common; David offered the sword of Goliath (1 Sam 21.9). Ironically, Judith does not offer Holofernes' sword but the inner canopy of his tent, which she penetrated to kill him. Even in death Holofernes is unmanned and shamed.

16.21–25: Conclusion. The hero or heroine in stories of many cultures does not generally reintegrate into society after saving the people, although Judith's status is unclear. She does not marry, gives away her wealth (cf. Num 27.11), and frees her slave, but does she reenter her hut (8.5)? At any rate, like the judges she brings peace and safety to the land for a period (Judg 3.11,30; 5.31).

ESTHER

(THE GREEK VERSION CONTAINING ADDITIONAL CHAPTERS)

NAME AND CANONICAL STATUS

The Greek version of Esther is a second- or first-century BCE translation for Greek-speaking Jews of the canonical Hebrew book of Esther (i.e., the one included in the “Hebrew Bible” portion of this edition). The earliest indication that the story was titled “Esther” after its Jewish heroine appears in connection with this Greek translation. The translator—very likely the Lysimachus of Jerusalem mentioned in 11.1—produced a systematic but relatively free translation of the Hebrew. Besides numerous small but often significant omissions and additions (see annotations that follow), the Greek version includes six extra sections with more than a hundred verses that have no counterparts in any Hebrew manuscript.

In the early centuries CE, as the rabbis worked out the official canon of Jewish scripture, they rejected the Greek translation of Esther, including its additional verses, along with all other non-Hebrew Jewish texts. By contrast the early Church adopted into its canon a number of Jewish writings in Greek, among them the “extra” verses in Greek Esther. Protestants follow the Jewish model and exclude the additional verses from their canon, while Roman Catholic and Orthodox Christians accept them. (Most editions of this Bible include these disputed Greek/Jewish texts in the Apocryphal/Deuterocanonical section.)

AUTHORSHIP, DATE, AND LITERARY HISTORY

The evidence from both Hebrew and Greek manuscripts suggests a complicated evolution of the Esther story that scholars have yet to disentangle fully. Originally, Additions A, C, D, and F were probably composed in either Hebrew or Aramaic, and if so may have already been part of the text from which the Greek translator worked. The florid rhetorical phraseology of B and E indicates that they must originally have been composed in Greek. It is impossible to say who authored either the Semitic or Greek Additions. Additions B and E may have been composed in a sophisticated Greek Jewish center, such as Alexandria, but a Palestinian provenance for the others is likely.

The additions were not composed at the same time. The latest possible date for B, C, D, and E is 93 CE when the historian Josephus paraphrased them in his Jewish Antiquities. The colophon’s location (11.1) immediately after F suggests that A as well as F were part of the Semitic text at the time that Lysimachus made his Greek translation in the late second or first century BCE.

The additional sections are clearly intrusive and secondary, for they contradict the older Hebrew text at a number of points. What is clear, however, is that the Hellenistic author(s) of these extra portions of the story all followed the early Jewish tradition of biblical interpretation called midrash and felt called upon to resolve perceived narrative, theological, and moral ambiguities in Jewish scripture. Consequently, while the additions sometimes make the characters and events more vivid or dramatic, their main purpose is to transform the comparatively subtle and enigmatic Hebrew story of Esther into a more conventional tale of divine intervention and exemplary Jewish piety.

CONTENTS

The Greek Additions to the book of Esther comprise 105 verses. Their contents are as follows:

- Addition A: Mordecai’s dream (11.2–12) and his discovery of a plot against the king (12.1–6)
- Addition B: The royal edict dictated by Haman, announcing a pogrom (a persecution to the death) against the Jews (13.1–7)
- Addition C: The prayers of Mordecai (13.8–18) and Esther (14.1–19)
- Addition D: Esther’s appearance, unsummoned, before the king (15.4–19)
- Addition E: The royal edict dictated by Mordecai, counteracting the edict sent by Haman (16.1–24)
- Addition F: The interpretation of Mordecai’s dream (10.4–13) and the colophon (an inscription at the end of a manuscript) to the Greek version (11.1)

ESTHER (GREEK)

Besides the Additions, the translators also made many minor changes as they interpreted the Hebrew text. These are mentioned in the annotations.

INTERPRETATION

Besides giving the story a more explicit religious character, the additions as they are arranged within the narrative create new emphases. A and F, which frame the story, graft onto it an apocalyptic perspective of cosmic struggle between good and evil. The juxtaposition of C's extensive praise of God with specific terms and phrases applied to Ahasuerus in D makes explicit the Greek version's intent throughout the story to contrast the capricious earthly king with God the faithful heavenly king. Similarly, the royal decrees in B and E highlight the theme of human commandments versus the divinely given Jewish law to which Esther also alludes when she prays in C.

There is no mention of God in the original Hebrew narrative, one important reason for the centuries of rabbinical debate over including Esther among the authoritative Jewish scriptures. By contrast, in the Greek Additions the terms "Lord" or "God" appear more than fifty times. Occasionally the Greek translation inserts references to God into verses that correspond to the original Hebrew text, as when Mordecai instructs Esther prior to her becoming queen that she should "fear God and keep his laws" (2.20) and then later urges her to "call upon the Lord" (4.8) before appearing unsummoned before the king. In 6.1 according to the Greek text, "That night the Lord took sleep from the king," whereas the Hebrew leaves the source of Ahasuerus's insomnia unspecified. Likewise in the Greek version, Haman's wife and his friends caution Haman that if Mordecai is Jewish, then "the living God is with him" (compare the Heb at 6.13).

The additions provide their authors with an opportunity to express their own particular theological views. Additions A and F introduce apocalyptic motifs to emphasize God's providential care for the people Israel in a universally hostile world. Addition C attests to the efficacy of prayer and expresses Queen Esther's abhorrence at being married to a Gentile, her loathing of all things worldly and courtly, and her strict observance of Jewish dietary laws—none of which are so much as hinted at in the Hebrew. Thanks largely to Addition D, the climax of the Greek version is reached when God miraculously changes to gentleness the king's "fierce anger" at Esther's unannounced entrance. This motif is lacking in the Hebrew. Taken together, the six additions deemphasize the establishment of Purim and express a deep distrust of Gentiles.

ADDITION A

11^{a 2} In the second year of the reign of Artaxerxes the Great, on the first day of Nisan, Mordecai son of Jair son of Shimei^b son of Kish, of the tribe of Benjamin, had a dream.³ He was a Jew living in the city of Susa, a great man, serving in the court of the king.⁴ He was one of the captives whom King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon had brought from Jerusalem with King Jeconiah of Judea. And this was his dream:⁵ Noises^c and confusion, thunders and earthquake, tumult on the earth!⁶ Then two great dragons came forward, both ready to fight, and they roared terribly.⁷ At their roaring every nation prepared for war, to fight against the righteous nation.⁸ It was a day of darkness and gloom, of tribulation and distress, affliction and great tumult on the earth!⁹ And the whole righteous nation was troubled; they feared the evils that threatened them,^d and were ready to perish.¹⁰ Then they cried out to God; and at their outcry, as though from a tiny spring, there came a great river, with abundant water;¹¹ light came, and the sun rose, and the lowly were exalted and devoured those held in honor.

¹² Mordecai saw in this dream what God had determined to do, and after he awoke he had it on his mind, seeking all day to understand it in every detail.

12 Now Mordecai took his rest in the courtyard with Gabatha and Tharra, the two eunuchs of the king who kept watch in the courtyard.² He overheard their conversation and inquired into their purposes, and learned that they were preparing to lay hands on King Artaxerxes; and he informed the king concerning them.³ Then the king examined the two eunuchs, and after they had confessed it, they were led away to execution.

⁴ The king made a permanent record of these

Addition A: 11.2–12: Mordecai’s prophetic dream of impending danger to the Jews. 2: Artaxerxes, a mistranslation of the Heb “Ahasuerus,” that is, Xerxes I (486–465 BCE); the second year would be 485. Month names in Esther are Babylonian; Nisan, March–April, is the first month of the new year. Thus, Mordecai’s dream comes on New Year’s Day. Mordecai’s name derives from the name of the Babylonian god Marduk, whose creation of the world was reenacted every new year in Babylon. Mordecai’s genealogy connecting him with King Saul (1 Sam 9.1; 2 Sam 16.5–18) is repeated in 2.5. 3: Jew (Heb “yehudi”), originally meaning someone from the kingdom of Judah (2 Kings 16.6), is used here in its later sense of an adherent to Judaism. Susa, westernmost of the three capital cities of the Persian empire in northwestern Iran. In contrast to Heb Esther, Mordecai is already an important royal official. 4: Mordecai would be well over one hundred years old by 485 BCE if he, along with Judah’s last king Jeconiah (Jehoiachin), had been exiled by Nebuchadnezzar in 597 (2 Kings 24.8–16). As in other historical novellas, the author takes liberties with actual chronology. 5: Noises . . . tumult on the earth, the language of cosmic chaos is typical of apocalyptic texts (see Isa 24.17–20; Dan 12.1,4). 6: Two great dragons, Mordecai and Haman (see Addition F 10.7). God defeated the chaos dragon (a sea monster) at the time of creation (Pss 74.13; 89.10; Isa 27.1; 51.9–10; Job 26.12–13); imagery from this primordial battle is frequently used in apocalyptic literature (Dan 7; Rev 12.3; 13.2; 20.2). Two dragons (see 2 Esd 6.49–52), one good, one evil, are unusual and may reflect Persian influence. 7: Righteous nation, the Jews (see Dan 7.27). Unlike the Heb, Gk Esther perceives the entire Gentile (non-Jewish) world as a danger to the Jews. 10: Cried out, Ex 3.7; Jdt 4.9,12,15. Tiny spring and great river refer to Esther (10.6). 11: Light and morning, symbolizing joy, salvation, and new life (Pss 30.5; 46.5; 112.4; Isa 33.2). Lowly were exalted, 1 Sam 2.4–9. One held in honor is Haman (12.6). 12: What God had determined to do, in contrast to the Heb, all events in Gk Esther are foreordained by God, although Mordecai does not yet fully understand the dream’s symbolism (10.4–9).

12.1–6: Mordecai saves the king’s life. It is unclear whether this conspiracy is the same as the one in Esth 2.19–23 of the Heb text or an earlier intrigue. 5: The king rewarded Mordecai immediately (in contrast to 6.1–3). 6: The Gk text suggests (in contrast to the Heb) that Haman took part in the eunuchs’ foiled plot and thus provides a motivation for Mordecai’s and Haman’s subsequent actions. Bougean (see also 3.1) is apparently an attempt to translate the Heb word “Agagite,” which connects Haman to the Amalekite king, Agag, Saul’s vanquished enemy (see 1 Sam 15.8). Mordecai and Haman share an ancestral enmity (Ex 17.8–16; Num 24.7).

things, and Mordecai wrote an account of them.⁵ And the king ordered Mordecai to serve in the court, and rewarded him for these things.⁶ But Haman son of Hammedatha, a Bougean, who was in great honor with the king, determined to injure Mordecai and his people because of the two eunuchs of the king.

END OF ADDITION A

1 It was after this that the following things happened in the days of Artaxerxes, the same Artaxerxes who ruled over one hundred twenty-seven provinces from India to Ethiopia.^a ² In those days, when King Artaxerxes was enthroned in the city of Susa, ³ in the third year of his reign, he gave a banquet for his Friends and other persons of various nations, the Persians and Median nobles, and the governors of the provinces.⁴ After this, when he had displayed to them the riches of his kingdom and the splendor of his bountiful celebration during the course of one hundred eighty days, ⁵ at the end of the festivity^b the king gave a drinking party for the people of various nations who lived in the city. This was held for six days in the courtyard of the royal palace, ⁶ which was adorned with curtains of fine linen and cotton, held by cords of purple linen attached to gold and silver blocks on pillars of marble and other stones. Gold and silver couches were placed on a mosaic floor of emerald, mother-of-pearl, and marble. There were coverings of gauze, embroidered in various colors, with roses arranged around them.⁷ The cups were of gold and silver, and a miniature cup was displayed, made of ruby, worth thirty thousand talents. There was abundant sweet wine, such as the king himself drank.⁸ The drinking was not according to a fixed rule; but the king wished to have it so, and he commanded his stewards to comply with his pleasure and with that of the guests.

⁹ Meanwhile, Queen Vashti^c gave a drinking party for the women in the palace where King Artaxerxes was.

¹⁰ On the seventh day, when the king was in good humor, he told Haman, Bazan, Tharra, Boraze, Zatholtha, Abataza, and Tharaba, the seven eunuchs who served King Artaxerxes, ¹¹ to escort the queen to him in order to proclaim her as queen and to place the diadem on her head, and to have her display her beauty to all the governors and the people of various nations, for she was indeed a beautiful woman.¹² But Queen Vashti^c refused to obey him and would not come with the eunuchs. This offended the king and he became furious.¹³ He said to his Friends, “This is how Vashti^c has answered me.^d Give therefore your ruling and judgment on this matter.” ¹⁴ Arkesaeus, Sarsathaeus, and Malesear, then the governors of the Persians and Medes who were closest to the king—Arkesaeus, Sarsathaeus, and Malesear, who sat beside him in the chief seats—came to him¹⁵ and told him what must be done

1.1–9: Artaxerxes’ banquet. 1: Artaxerxes see 11.2n. Ethiopia (Heb “Cush”), in the Bible this term refers to the territory of modern Sudan and Ethiopia. 3–4: Greek writers mention fabulous feasts given by Persian kings; Ahasuerus’s banquet, with its exaggerated length of one hundred eighty days (see Jdt 1.16), is the first of several that occur at key points in the story. Friends, a special class of courtiers. 5: Festivity, or marriage feast (see textual note b), which would clarify the behavior of the king and Vashti (see 1.11). Six days, 1.10 (and Heb 1.5,10) says the party lasted seven days. 6–7: The description, which emphasizes power and wealth, is more extravagant than in the Heb version. 8: According to a fixed rule, ancient sources suggest that the king set the pace for drinking (Herodotus 1.33), and all guests drank when he drank. 9: There are no ancient references to Vashti, whose name means “beloved”; Xerxes I’s queen was Amestris (Herodotus 7.61). Queen Vashti gave a drinking party for the women emphasizes the separate gendered spheres of king and queen, a factor in Esther’s later bravery.

1.10–22: Queen Vashti’s downfall. 10: Eunuchs were castrated males who served in the Persian court. The list of their names lends the story an air of authenticity. 11: Proclaim her as queen, in contrast to the Heb, Vashti is summoned for her official coronation as well as for display. 12: The circumstances will be reversed when Esther approaches the king without having been summoned (4.11,16,15). 13–14: Three governors rather than the seven to Queen Vashti³ for not obeying the order that the king had sent her by the eunuchs. ¹⁶Then Muchaeus said to the king and the governors, “Queen Vashti^a has insulted not only the king but also all the king’s governors and officials” ¹⁷(for he had reported to them what the queen had said and how she had defied the king). “And just as she defied King Artaxerxes, ¹⁸so now the other ladies who are wives of the Persian and Median governors, on hearing what she has said to the king, will likewise dare to insult their husbands. ¹⁹If therefore it pleases the king, let him issue a royal decree, inscribed in accordance with the laws of the Medes and Persians so that it may not be altered, that the queen may no longer come into his presence; but let the king give her royal rank to a woman better than she. ²⁰Let whatever law the king enacts be proclaimed in his kingdom, and thus all women will give honor to their husbands, rich and poor alike.” ²¹This speech pleased the king and the governors, and the king did as Muchaeus had recommended. ²²The king sent the decree into all his kingdom, to every province in its own language, so that in every house respect would be shown to every husband.

2 After these things, the king’s anger abated, and he no longer was concerned about Vashti^a or remembered what he had said and how he had condemned her. ²Then the king’s servants said, “Let beautiful and virtuous girls be sought out for the king. ³The king shall appoint officers in all the provinces of his kingdom, and they shall select beautiful young virgins to be brought to the harem in Susa, the capital. Let them be entrusted to the king’s eunuch who is in charge of the women, and let ointments and whatever else they need be given them. ⁴And the woman who pleases the king shall be queen instead of Vashti.”^a This pleased the king, and he did so.

⁵Now there was a Jew in Susa the capital whose name was Mordecai son of Jair son of Shimei^b son of Kish, of the tribe of Benjamin; ⁶he had been taken captive from Jerusalem among those whom King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon had captured. ⁷And he had a foster child, the daughter of his father’s brother, Aminadab, and her name was Esther. When her parents died, he brought her up to womanhood as his own. The girl was beautiful in appearance. ⁸So, when the decree of the king was proclaimed, and many girls were gathered in Susa the capital in custody of Gai, Esther also was brought to Gai, who had custody of the women. ⁹The girl pleased him officials named in the Heb. 16–18: The fear of a feminine insurrection against patriarchal order lies just below the surface of many ancient myths and legends. Contrary to Muchaeus’s dire imaginings, the real danger will come in the form of a conspiracy by palace bodyguards (2.21). 19: There is no historical evidence that the laws of the Medes and the Persians (Esth 8.8; Dan 6.9,13) were unalterable. The phrase sets up a narrative tension between rigid legalism and the requirements of true justice. 20: By issuing an absurdly unenforceable decree, the foolish king draws attention to his failure at ruling his own wife. 22: The first of several decrees in the book (see 2.8; 3.12,13; 8.9–11; 9.20–22,29–32). Persian royal edicts were issued both in Aramaic, the official language of Persian diplomacy, and in the languages of subject peoples (see Ezra 6.3–5).

2.1–18: Esther becomes queen. 1–4: The king agrees to seek a new queen. 1: Here the search for a replacement occurs after the king forgets Vashti, while in the Heb the search begins because the king remembers Vashti’s act. 2: Consistent with its concern for moral rectitude, the Gk version adds that the winning girl (Heb “virgin”) must be virtuous as well as beautiful. 3: In patriarchal societies, a virgin bride ensures the paternity of children within the marriage (see Ex 22.16; Lev 21.13); here it may also be a convention of historical romance. Actual Persian law restricted kings to wives from certain noble Persian families.

2.5–7: Mordecai and Esther. 5–6: For a second time, the Gk introduces Mordecai (see 11.2–4n.). 7: The name Esther derives from Ishtar, the Babylonian goddess of sexuality and war (the deities Marduk and Ishtar were cousins), or from the Persian word for “star,” or both. The Gk fails to mention Esther’s Heb name, Hadassah (see 2.7 in the Heb). Aminadab, in the Heb (2.15) Esther’s father is Abihail. 8: By beginning the book (11.2–12) with Mordecai’s prophetic dream, the Gk version suggests that Esther arrives at court according to divine plan (see 10.4–6). Neither the Heb nor the Gk mentions Esther’s feelings when she was brought to Susa. This is contra-and won his favor, and he quickly provided her with ointments and her portion of food,^a as well as seven maids chosen from the palace; he treated her and her maids with special favor in the harem.¹⁰ Now Esther had not disclosed her people or country, for Mordecai had commanded her not to make it known.¹¹ And every day Mordecai walked in the courtyard of the harem, to see what would happen to Esther.

¹² Now the period after which a girl was to go to the king was twelve months. During this time the days of beautification are completed—six months while they are anointing themselves with oil of myrrh, and six months with spices and ointments for women.

¹³ Then she goes in to the king; she is handed to the person appointed, and goes with him from the harem to the king's palace.¹⁴ In the evening she enters and in the morning she departs to the second harem, where Gai the king's eunuch is in charge of the women; and she does not go in to the king again unless she is summoned by name.

¹⁵ When the time was fulfilled for Esther daughter of Aminadab, the brother of Mordecai's father, to go in to the king, she neglected none of the things that Gai, the eunuch in charge of the women, had commanded. Now Esther found favor in the eyes of all who saw her.¹⁶ So Esther went in to King Artaxerxes in the twelfth month, which is Adar, in the seventh year of his reign.¹⁷ And the king loved Esther and she found favor beyond all the other virgins, so he put on her the queen's diadem.¹⁸ Then the king gave a banquet lasting seven days for all his Friends and the officers to celebrate his marriage to Esther; and he granted a remission of taxes to those who were under his rule.

¹⁹ Meanwhile Mordecai was serving in the courtyard.²⁰ Esther had not disclosed her country—such were the instructions of Mordecai; but she was to fear God and keep his laws, just as she had done when she was with him. So Esther did not change her mode of life.

²¹ Now the king's eunuchs, who were chief bodyguards, were angry because of Mordecai's advancement, and they plotted to kill King Artaxerxes.²² The matter became known to Mordecai, and he warned Esther, who in turn revealed the plot to the king.²³ He investigated the two eunuchs and hanged them. Then the king ordered a memorandum to be deposited in the royal library in praise of the goodwill shown by Mordecai.

3 After these events King Artaxerxes promoted Haman son of Hammedatha, a Bougean, advancing him and granting him precedence over all the king's^b Friends.² So all who were at court used to do obeisance to Haman,^c for so the king had commanded to be done. Mordecai, however, did not do obeisance.³ Then the king's courtiers said to Mordecai, "Mordecai, why do you disobey the king's command?"⁴ Day after day they spoke dicted later in one of the Gk additions (14.15–18). 9: In winning the favor of Gai (foreshadowing 2.15,17; 5.8; 7.3), Esther resembles Joseph in the house of Potiphar (Gen 39.2–6) and Daniel at the Babylonian court (Dan 1.9). 10: Esther's silence about her Jewish identity (reiterated in v. 20) demonstrates her submissive nature even as it heightens narrative suspense.

2.12–18: Esther becomes queen. 14: The impossibility of seeing the king again unless summoned by name foreshadows Esther's dilemma in 4.11–16 and 15.1–6. 16: Adar, February–March. The Heb gives a different month, Tebeth (December–January). In the seventh year of his reign, Ahasuerus has been testing queen candidates now for about four years. 18: Another in the series of banquets (see 1.3n.) that will climax with the feast of Purim. Remission of taxes, the Gk correctly interprets the Hebrew term "holiday" in economic terms.

2.19–23: Mordecai and Esther save the king's life. This may be a second version of the plot in 12.1–6 or a different episode altogether. 20: Mode of life, in contrast to the Heb, where Esther seems Jewish by ethnicity rather than religious observance. 21: Unlike the Heb, the conspirators in the Gk are motivated by jealousy of Mordecai (see Dan 6.3–5). 23: Hanged, impaled, not strangled with a rope, a foreshadowing of 5.14; 7.9–10; 9.13–14. The royal library, an official archive of royal decrees (cf. 10.2; 1 Kings 14.19,29; 2 Chr 25.26; 32.32).

3.1–13: Haman plots to annihilate the Jews. 1: Bougean, see 12.6n. 2: The reasons for Mordecai's refusal to do obeisance are unclear but possibly explained in the Gk by Mordecai's prayer (13.14) or by the fact that Jews and to him, but he would not listen to them. Then they informed Haman that Mordecai was resisting the king's command. Mordecai had told them that he was a Jew.⁵ So when Haman learned that Mordecai was not doing obeisance to him, he became furiously angry,⁶ and plotted to destroy all the Jews under Artaxerxes' rule.

⁷In the twelfth year of King Artaxerxes Haman^a came to a decision by casting lots, taking the days and the months one by one, to fix on one day to destroy the whole race of Mordecai. The lot fell on the fourteenth^b day of the month of Adar.

⁸Then Haman^a said to King Artaxerxes, "There is a certain nation scattered among the other nations in all your kingdom; their laws are different from those of every other nation, and they do not keep the laws of the king. It is not expedient for the king to tolerate them.⁹ If it pleases the king, let it be decreed that they are to be destroyed, and I will pay ten thousand talents of silver into the king's treasury."¹⁰ So the king took off his signet ring and gave it to Haman to seal the decree^c that was to be written against the Jews.¹¹ The king told Haman, "Keep the money, and do whatever you want with that nation."

¹²So on the thirteenth day of the first month the king's secretaries were summoned, and in accordance with Haman's instructions they wrote in the name of King Artaxerxes to the magistrates and the governors in every province from India to Ethiopia. There were one hundred twenty-seven provinces in all, and the governors were addressed each in his own language.¹³ Instructions were sent by couriers throughout all the empire of Artaxerxes to destroy the Jewish people on a given day of the twelfth month, which is Adar, and to plunder their goods.

ADDITION B

13^d This is a copy of the letter: "The Great King, Artaxerxes, writes the following to the governors of the hundred twenty-seven provinces from India to Ethiopia and to the officials under them:

²"Having become ruler of many nations and master of the whole world (not elated with presumption of authority but always acting reasonably and with kindness), I have determined to settle the lives of my subjects in lasting tranquility and, in order to make my kingdom peaceable and open to travel throughout all its extent, to restore the peace desired by all people.

³"When I asked my counselors how this might be accomplished, Haman—who excels among us in sound judgment, and is distinguished for his unchanging goodwill and steadfast fidelity, and has attained the second place in the kingdom—⁴ pointed out to us that among all the nations in the world there is scattered a certain hostile people, who have laws contrary to those of every nation and continually disregard the ordinances of kings, so that the unifying of the kingdom

Agagites were traditionally enemies; see 12.6n. 4: Day after day, wording reminiscent of Joseph's resistance to the blandishments of Potiphar's wife (Gen 39.10). 7: The twelfth year, Esther has been queen for five years. The Heb word for lot, "pur" (pl. "purim"), is borrowed from Babylonian. Haman resorts to this common form of divination (Herodotus 3.128) known also to the Israelites (1 Sam 14.42). Adar, February-March. Instead of the fourteenth day, 8.12 of the Gk and Heb rightly cite the thirteenth. 8: Haman's manipulation of the pliable king (see 1.16–20) begins with the truth: the Jews were indeed scattered (Zech 7.14), and like other subject peoples in the Persian empire, their laws were different (Deut 4.5–6). He slides into falsehood in asserting that Jews do not keep the laws of the king. 9: Ten thousand talents of silver, equal in value to hundreds of millions of US dollars. 10: The king's signet ring gave Haman unlimited power to sign documents in the king's name (8.2,8; cf. Gen 41.41–42; 1 Kings 21.8–9). 12: In his own language, see 1.22n. 13: Couriers, the Persian empire's communication system was renowned (Herodotus 8.98). A given day, the thirteenth (see 8.12, Gk and Heb). Adar, February-March.

Addition B: 13.1–7: The text of the king's letter authorizing the slaughter of the Jews. This addition to the Gk version of Esther was composed in Gk by the same author as 16.1–24 (Addition E). The brazen tone of the letter seems inconsistent with the king's general demeanor as depicted earlier in the story and reflects Haman's that we honorably intend cannot be brought about.⁵ We understand that this people, and it alone, stands constantly in opposition to every nation, perversely following a strange manner of life and laws, and is ill-disposed to our government, doing all the harm they can so that our kingdom may not attain stability.

⁶“Therefore we have decreed that those indicated to you in the letters written by Haman, who is in charge of affairs and is our second father, shall all—wives and children included—be utterly destroyed by the swords of their enemies, without pity or restraint, on the fourteenth day of the twelfth month, Adar, of this present year,⁷ so that those who have long been hostile and remain so may in a single day go down in violence to Hades, and leave our government completely secure and untroubled hereafter.”

END OF ADDITION B

3¹⁴ Copies of the document were posted in every province, and all the nations were ordered to be prepared for that day.¹⁵ The matter was expedited also in Susa. And while the king and Haman caroused together, the city of Susa^a was thrown into confusion.

4 When Mordecai learned of all that had been done, he tore his clothes, put on sackcloth, and sprinkled himself with ashes; then he rushed through the street of the city, shouting loudly: “An innocent nation is being destroyed!”² He got as far as the king’s gate, and there he stopped, because no one was allowed to enter the courtyard clothed in sackcloth and ashes.³ And in every province where the king’s proclamation had been posted there was a loud cry of mourning and lamentation among the Jews, and they put on sackcloth and ashes.⁴ When the queen’s^b maids and eunuchs came and told her, she was deeply troubled by what she heard had happened, and sent some clothes to Mordecai to put on instead of sackcloth; but he would not consent.⁵ Then Esther summoned Hachratheus, the eunuch who attended her, and ordered him to get accurate information for her from Mordecai.^c

⁷ So Mordecai told him what had happened and how Haman had promised to pay ten thousand talents into the royal treasury to bring about the destruction of the Jews.⁸ He also gave him a copy of what had been posted in Susa for their destruction, to show to Esther; and he told him to charge her to go in to the king and plead for his favor in behalf of the people. “Remember,” he said, “the days when you were an ordinary person, being brought up under my care—for Haman, who stands next to the king, has spoken against us and demands our death. Call upon the Lord; then speak to the king in our behalf, and save us from death.”

⁹ Hachratheus went in and told Esther all these things.¹⁰ And she said to him, “Go to Mordecai and say,¹¹ ‘All nations of the empire know that if any man or woman goes to the king inside the inner court without being called, there is no escape for that person. Only the one to whom the king stretches out the golden scepter is safe—and it is now thirty days since I was called to go to the king.’”

¹² When Hachratheus delivered her entire message to Mordecai,¹³ Mordecai told him to go back and say to her, “Esther, do not say to yourself that you alone among all the Jews will escape alive.¹⁴ For if you keep quiet at such a time as this, help and protection will come to the Jews from another quarter,

3.14–15: Haman and the king celebrate the publication of the decree.

4.1–17: Mordecai persuades Esther to risk her life to save her people. 1: Sackcloth and ashes and torn clothing were traditional signs of mourning and repentance (2 Sam 3.31; Job 42.6; Jon 3.5; Dan 9.3). 2: No one rendered ritually unclean by mourning could enter the courtyard. 4: Esther has obeyed Mordecai and kept her Jewish identity a secret; she is unaware of the edict. 11: Like other biblical heroes called upon to save their people (Ex 3.11; 4.10; 10.28; Judg 6.15; Jer 1.6), Esther initially objects. Since I was called to go to the king, see 2.14. 14: From another quarter, divine providence according to Gk 10.4–5; the phrase is ambiguous in Heb Esther. Who

but you and your father's family will perish. Yet, who knows whether it was not for such a time as this that you were made queen?"

¹⁵ Then Esther gave the messenger this answer to take back to Mordecai: ¹⁶ "Go and gather all the Jews who are in Susa and fast on my behalf; for three days and nights do not eat or drink, and my maids and I will also go without food. After that I will go to the king, contrary to the law, even if I must die."

¹⁷ So Mordecai went away and did what Esther had told him to do.

ADDITION C

13 ^{8a} Then Mordecai^b prayed to the Lord, calling to remembrance all the works of the Lord.

⁹ He said, "O Lord, Lord, you rule as King over all things, for the universe is in your power and there is no one who can oppose you when it is your will to save Israel, ¹⁰ for you have made heaven and earth and every wonderful thing under heaven. ¹¹ You are Lord of all, and there is no one who can resist you, the Lord. ¹² You know all things; you know, O Lord, that it was not in insolence or pride or for any love of glory that I did this, and refused to bow down to this proud Haman; ¹³ for I would have been willing to kiss the soles of his feet to save Israel! ¹⁴ But I did this so that I might not set human glory above the glory of God, and I will not bow down to anyone but you, who are my Lord; and I will not do these things in pride. ¹⁵ And now, O Lord God and King, God of Abraham, spare your people; for the eyes of our foes are upon us^c to annihilate us, and they desire to destroy the inheritance that has been yours from the beginning. ¹⁶ Do not neglect your portion, which you redeemed for yourself out of the land of Egypt. ¹⁷ Hear my prayer, and have mercy upon your inheritance; turn our mourning into feasting that we may live and sing praise to your name, O Lord; do not destroy the lips^d of those who praise you."

¹⁸ And all Israel cried out mightily, for their death was before their eyes.

14 Then Queen Esther, seized with deadly anxiety, fled to the Lord. ² She took off her splendid apparel and put on the garments of distress and mourning, and instead of costly perfumes she covered her head with ashes and dung, and she utterly humbled her body; every part that she loved to adorn she covered with her tangled hair. ³ She prayed to the Lord God of Israel, and said: "O my Lord, you only are our king; help me, who am alone and have no helper but you, ⁴ for my danger is in my hand. ⁵ Ever since I was born I have heard in the tribe of my family that you, O Lord, took Israel out of all the nations, and our ancestors from among all their forebears, for an everlasting inheritance, and that you did for them all that you promised. ⁶ And now we have sinned before you, and you have handed us over to our enemies⁷ because we glorified their gods. You are righteous, O Lord! ⁸ And now they are not satisfied that we are in bitter slavery, but they have covenanted with their idols⁹ to abolish what your mouth has ordained, and to destroy knows? Often precedes an expression of hope for divine mercy (2 Sam 12.22; Joel 2.14; Jon 3.9). 16-17: Resolving to act contrary to the law (see 4.11) on behalf of her people, Esther takes charge (anticipating 9.29). Communal or individual fasting was a rite of repentance believed to influence the deity (Lev 16.29-31; Judg 20.26; 2 Sam 12.16; 1 Kings 21.27; Jon 3.5,8; Ezra 8.21-23; Joel 1.14; 2.12,15; 1 Macc 3.47).

Addition C: 13.8-14.19: The prayers of Mordecai and Esther give the book an explicitly religious tone. Both contain themes common to national laments (Neh 9; Dan 9).

13.8-17: Mordecai's prayer and the people's response. 12-14: Mordecai justifies his refusal to bow down to Haman (3.2) on religious grounds (see Dan 3.12,16-18). 16: Mordecai is confident in the god who liberated the Israelites, God's portion (Deut 32.9), from enslavement in Egypt (Ex 1-14).

14.1-19: Esther humbly petitions God. Her prayer (see especially Jdt 9) resembles Mordecai's in its sincere, if conventional, piety and concern for religious self-justification. 2: Humble garments, filth, and disarray are appropriate to penitential prayer (2 Kings 19.1; Neh 1.4; Dan 9.3-4; Jdt 9.1). 8: Bitter slavery interprets the exile and Diaspora in terms evocative of bondage in Egypt (Ex 1-14). 9: Your altar and your house refer to the ruined your inheritance, to stop the mouths of those who praise you and to quench your altar and the glory of your house,¹⁰ to open the mouths of the nations for the praise of vain idols, and to magnify forever a mortal king.

¹¹“O Lord, do not surrender your scepter to what has no being; and do not let them laugh at our downfall; but turn their plan against them, and make an example of him who began this against us.¹² Remember, O Lord; make yourself known in this time of our affliction, and give me courage, O King of the gods and Master of all dominion!¹³ Put eloquent speech in my mouth before the lion, and turn his heart to hate the man who is fighting against us, so that there may be an end of him and those who agree with him.¹⁴ But save us by your hand, and help me, who am alone and have no helper but you, O Lord.¹⁵ You have knowledge of all things, and you know that I hate the splendor of the wicked and abhor the bed of the uncircumcised and of any alien.¹⁶ You know my necessity—that I abhor the sign of my proud position, which is upon my head on days when I appear in public. 15 On the third day, when she ended her prayer, she took off the garments in which she had worshiped, and arrayed herself in splendid attire.² Then, majestically adorned, after invoking the aid of the all-seeing God and Savior, she took two maids with her;³ on one she leaned gently for support,⁴ while the other followed, carrying her train.⁵ She was radiant with perfect beauty, and she looked happy, as if beloved, but her heart was frozen with fear.⁶ When she had gone through all the doors, she stood before the king. He was seated on his royal throne, clothed in the full array of his majesty, all covered with gold and precious stones. He was most terrifying.

⁷Lifting his face, flushed with splendor, he looked at her in fierce anger. The queen faltered, and turned pale and faint, and collapsed on the head of the maid who went in front of her.⁸ Then God changed the spirit of the king to gentleness, and in alarm he sprang from his throne and took her in his arms until she came to herself. He comforted her with soothing words, and said to her,⁹ “What is it, Esther? I am your husband.^a Take courage;¹⁰ You shall not die, for our law applies only to our subjects.^b Come near.”

¹¹Then he raised the golden scepter and touched her neck with it;¹² he embraced her, and said, “Speak to me.”¹³ She said to him, “I saw you, my lord, like an angel of God, and my heart was shaken with fear at your glory.

Unlike the Heb text, Gk Esther takes a negative view of Gentiles. 16: The sign upon Esther’s head is the crown which she abhors as a filthy rag (lit. a rag soaked in menstrual blood; see Lev 15.19–24; Isa 64.6; contrast Deut 6.9). 17: Esther observes the Jewish dietary laws (Lev 11; see Jdt 12.1–2).

Addition D: 15.1–16: Esther approaches the king. This chapter expands 5.1–2 in the Heb text, heightening the suspense with added details and, consistent with the Gk version’s theological perspective, crediting Esther’s success to God’s intervention. 1: Esther’s preparations call to mind an epic hero arming for battle (see Iliad 19.338–39; 360–91; 1 Sam 17.5–7,38–39; see Jdt 10.3; 12.15). 7–8: This episode, absent in the Heb, portrays an Esther undone by feminine weakness and dependant upon God to succeed in her mission. God changed the spirit of the king, see 1 Sam 10.9. 9: Husband, Gk “brother,” a metaphorical expression of endearment found in Egyptian and Israelite love poetry (Song 4.9–10; 5.1–2). 13: Like an angel of God, see 2 Sam 14.20. 5^{a,3}The king said to her, “What do you wish, Esther? What is your request? It shall be given you, even to half of my kingdom.” ⁴And Esther said, “Today is a special day for me. If it pleases the king, let him and Haman come to the dinner that I shall prepare today.” ⁵Then the king said, “Bring Haman quickly, so that we may do as Esther desires.” So they both came to the dinner that Esther had spoken about. ⁶While they were drinking wine, the king said to Esther, “What is it, Queen Esther? It shall be granted you.” ⁷She said, “My petition and request is: ⁸if I have found favor in the sight of the king, let the king and Haman come to the dinner that I shall prepare them, and tomorrow I will do as I have done today.”

⁹So Haman went out from the king joyful and glad of heart. But when he saw Mordecai the Jew in the courtyard, he was filled with anger. ¹⁰Nevertheless, he went home and summoned his friends and his wife Zosara. ¹¹And he told them about his riches and the honor that the king had bestowed on him, and how he had advanced him to be the first in the kingdom. ¹²And Haman said, “The queen did not invite anyone to the dinner with the king except me; and I am invited again tomorrow. ¹³But these things give me no pleasure as long as I see Mordecai the Jew in the courtyard.”

¹⁴His wife Zosara and his friends said to him, “Let a gallows be made, fifty cubits high, and in the morning tell the king to have Mordecai hanged on it. Then, go merrily with the king to the dinner.” This advice pleased Haman, and so the gallows was prepared.

6 That night the Lord took sleep from the king, so he gave orders to his secretary to bring the book of daily records, and to read to him. ²He found the words written about Mordecai, how he had told the king about the two royal eunuchs who were on guard and sought to lay hands on King Artaxerxes. ³The king said, “What honor or dignity did we bestow on Mordecai?” The king’s servants said, “You have not done anything for him.” ⁴While the king was inquiring about the goodwill shown by Mordecai, Haman was in the courtyard. The king asked, “Who is in the courtyard?” Now Haman had come to speak to the king about hanging Mordecai on the gallows that he had prepared. ⁵The servants of the king answered, “Haman is standing in the courtyard.” And the king said, “Summon him.” ⁶Then the king said to Haman, “What shall I do for the person whom I wish to honor?” And Haman said to himself, “Whom would the king wish to honor more than me?” ⁷So he said to the king, “For a person whom the king wishes to honor, ⁸let the king’s servants bring out the fine linen robe that the king has worn, and the horse on which the king rides, ⁹and let both be given to one of the king’s honored Friends, and let him robe the person whom the king loves and mount him on the horse, and let it be proclaimed through the open square of the city, saying, ‘Thus shall it be done to everyone

5.3–8: Esther invites the king and Haman to dinner. 3: Half of my kingdom is customary folktale hyperbole. 4: Esther frames her invitation in self-effacing terms. Dinner, see 1.3n. Food, reassuring and nurturing, is a frequent motif in stories of women confronting powerful men; Esther works indirectly to achieve her goal (Judg 5.25; Jdt 10.5; 12.1,17–20).

5.9–14: Haman’s happiness is spoiled. 11–12: Haman’s boasting sets him up as an arrogant fool ripe for a fall, a theme also found in wisdom literature (Prov 11.28; 13.3; 16.5,18; 27.1; 29.20). 14: Zosara is an exemplary son-bearing wife (9.7–10) whose husband heeds her loyal counsel. Gallows (also 9.13–14), see 2.23n. Fifty cubits, ca. 72 ft (22m), an exaggerated height. Only the king can order an execution.

6.1–13: Mordecai’s triumph. 1: The Lord took sleep from the king, unlike the Heb, the Gk ascribes the events of the Esther story to divine intention and intervention (11.1–12; 10.4–12; 4.14n.; 15.1–16). A sleepless king appears in numerous folktales (Dan 6.18; 1 Esd 3.3). 3: Herodotus (8.85,90) notes that Persian kings kept records of courtiers’ noble deeds. You have not done anything for him, in contrast to Mordecai’s royal reward for reporting the earlier plot in Gk Addition A (see 12.5). 8: A robe and a horse were gestures of favor (Gen 37.3; 41.42; 1 Sam whom the king honors.”¹⁰ Then the king said to Haman, “You have made an excellent suggestion! Do just as you have said for Mordecai the Jew, who is on duty in the courtyard. And let nothing be omitted from what you have proposed.”¹¹ So Haman got the robe and the horse; he put the robe on Mordecai and made him ride through the open square of the city, proclaiming, “Thus shall it be done to everyone whom the king wishes to honor.”¹² Then Mordecai returned to the courtyard, and Haman hurried back to his house, mourning and with his head covered.¹³ Haman told his wife Zosara and his friends what had befallen him. His friends and his wife said to him, “If Mordecai is of the Jewish people, and you have begun to be humiliated before him, you will surely fall. You will not be able to defend yourself, because the living God is with him.”

¹⁴ While they were still talking, the eunuchs arrived and hurriedly brought Haman to the banquet that Esther had prepared.

7 ¹ So the king and Haman went in to drink with the queen. ² And the second day, as they were drinking wine, the king said, “What is it, Queen Esther? What is your petition and what is your request? It shall be granted to you, even to half of my kingdom.”³ She answered and said, “If I have found favor with the king, let my life be granted me at my petition, and my people at my request. ⁴ For we have been sold, I and my people, to be destroyed, plundered, and made slaves—we and our children—male and female slaves. This has come to my knowledge. Our antagonist brings shame on^a the king’s court.”⁵ Then the king said, “Who is the person that would dare to do this thing?”⁶ Esther said, “Our enemy is this evil man Haman!” At this, Haman was terrified in the presence of the king and queen.

⁷ The king rose from the banquet and went into the garden, and Haman began to beg for his life from the queen, for he saw that he was in serious trouble.⁸ When the king returned from the garden, Haman had thrown himself on the couch, pleading with the queen. The king said, “Will he dare even assault my wife in my own house?” Haman, when he heard, turned away his face.⁹ Then Bugathan, one of the eunuchs, said to the king, “Look, Haman has even prepared a gallows for Mordecai, who gave information of concern to the king; it is standing at Haman’s house, a gallows fifty cubits high.” So the king said, “Let Haman be hanged on that.”¹⁰ So Haman was hanged on the gallows he had prepared for Mordecai. With that the anger of the king abated.

8 On that very day King Artaxerxes granted to Esther all the property of the persecutor^b Haman. Mordecai was summoned by the king, for Esther had told the king^c that he was related to her. ² The king took the ring that had been taken from Haman, and gave it to Mordecai; and Esther set Mordecai over everything that had been Haman’s.

³ Then she spoke once again to the king and, falling at his feet, she asked him to avert all the evil that Haman had planned against the Jews. ⁴ The king extended his golden scepter to Esther, and she rose and stood

8.1–12: The king shows favor to Esther, Mordecai, and the Jews. 1: In 3.9, Haman offered the king money; now the king gives Haman’s wealth to Esther. 2: Haman’s position as grand vizier (3.10) becomes Mordecai’s with the transfer of the king’s signet ring (see v. 8; 3.10n.), another ironic inversion of the two figures. 5: That before the king.⁵ Esther said, “If it pleases you, and if I have found favor, let an order be sent rescinding the letters that Haman wrote and sent to destroy the Jews in your kingdom.⁶ How can I look on the ruin of my people? How can I be safe if my ancestral nation^a is destroyed?”⁷ The king said to Esther, “Now that I^b have granted all of Haman’s property to you and have hanged him on a tree because he acted against the Jews, what else do you request?⁸ Write in my name what you think best and seal it with my ring; for whatever is written at the king’s command and sealed with my ring cannot be contravened.”

⁹The secretaries were summoned on the twenty-third day of the first month, that is, Nisan, in the same year; and all that he commanded with respect to the Jews was given in writing to the administrators and governors of the provinces from India to Ethiopia, one hundred twenty-seven provinces, to each province in its own language.¹⁰ The edict was written^c with the king’s authority and sealed with his ring, and sent out by couriers.¹¹ He ordered the Jews in every city to observe their own laws, to defend themselves, and to act as they wished against their opponents and enemies¹² on a certain day, the thirteenth of the twelfth month, which is Adar, throughout all the kingdom of Artaxerxes.

16^d The following is a copy of this letter: “The Great King, Artaxerxes, to the governors of the provinces from India to Ethiopia, one hundred twenty-seven provinces, and to those who are loyal to our government, greetings.

⁷“What has been wickedly accomplished through the pestilent behavior of those who exercise authority unworthily can be seen, not so much from the more ancient records that we hand on, as from investigation of matters close at hand.^e⁸ In the future we will take care to render our kingdom quiet and peaceable for all,⁹ by changing our methods and always judging what comes before our eyes with more equitable consideration.¹⁰ For Haman son of Hammedatha, a Macedonian

Haman wrote, Esther diplomatically dissociates the king from the edict that condemned the Jews. 8: The king’s earlier edict cannot be contravened (1.19n.), but a new edict can neutralize the former’s intent. 9: First month . . . Nisan (March–April), Heb “third month . . . Sivan” (May–June). In its own language, see 1.22n. 11: This explicit permission for the Jews . . . to observe their own laws (see 3.8n.; 13.4–5), which is a distinctly religious concern, is lacking in the Heb. 12: The date of the intended extermination (3.7,13) becomes a day of triumph and relates to the Purim festival (see 9.21). Adar, February–March.

Addition E: 16.1–24: The king’s second letter: Denunciation of Haman, praise of Mordecai and Esther, and direction to his subjects to help the Jews. Addition E to the Gk version of Esther provides a counterpoint to Addition C (13.1–17). Both were composed in Gk probably by the same author. The Gentile king refers in the most positive terms to the Jews and their God (Ex 9.27; 18.10–11; Num 22–24; 2 Kings 5:15; Dan 2.47; 3.29; 4.1–3,34–37; 6.26–27; Jdt 5.5–21). 2: Benefactors, a reference to the king. 10: Haman is actually a Macedonian scheming to overthrow Persian rule (v. 14; cf. 12.6), a plot twist not found in the Heb. This may be an allusion to the conquest of Persia by the Macedonian Alexander the Great in 333 BCE, an event already in the past when Addition E was composed.

(really an alien to the Persian blood, and quite devoid of our kindliness), having become our guest,¹¹ enjoyed so fully the goodwill that we have for every nation that he was called our father and was continually bowed down to by all as the person second to the royal throne.¹² But, unable to restrain his arrogance, he undertook to deprive us of our kingdom and our life,^a and with intricate craft and deceit asked for the destruction of Mordecai, our savior and perpetual benefactor, and of Esther, the blameless partner of our kingdom, together with their whole nation.¹⁴ He thought that by these methods he would catch us undefended and would transfer the kingdom of the Persians to the Macedonians.

¹⁵“But we find that the Jews, who were consigned to annihilation by this thrice-cursed man, are not evildoers, but are governed by most righteous laws¹⁶ and are children of the living God, most high, most mighty,^b who has directed the kingdom both for us and for our ancestors in the most excellent order.

¹⁷“You will therefore do well not to put in execution the letters sent by Haman son of Hammedatha,¹⁸ since he, the one who did these things, has been hanged at the gate of Susa with all his household—for God, who rules over all things, has speedily inflicted on him the punishment that he deserved.

¹⁹“Therefore post a copy of this letter publicly in every place, and permit the Jews to live under their own laws.²⁰ And give them reinforcements, so that on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, Adar, on that very day, they may defend themselves against those who attack them at the time of oppression.²¹ For God, who rules over all things, has made this day to be a joy for his chosen people instead of a day of destruction for them.

²²“Therefore you shall observe this with all good cheer as a notable day among your commemorative festivals,²³ so that both now and hereafter it may represent deliverance for you^c and the loyal Persians, but that it may be a reminder of destruction for those who plot against us.

²⁴“Every city and country, without exception, that does not act accordingly shall be destroyed in wrath with spear and fire. It shall be made not only impassable for human beings, but also most hateful to wild animals and birds for all time.

END OF ADDITION E

8¹³“Let copies of the decree be posted conspicuously in all the kingdom, and let all the Jews be ready on that day to fight against their enemies.”

¹⁴So the messengers on horseback set out with all speed to perform what the king had commanded; and the decree was published also in Susa.¹⁵ Mordecai went out dressed in the royal robe and wearing a gold crown and a turban of purple linen. The people in Susa rejoiced on seeing him.¹⁶ And the Jews had light and gladness¹⁷ in every city and province wherever the decree was published; wherever the proclamation was made, the Jews had joy and gladness, a banquet and a holiday. And many of the Gentiles were circumcised and became Jews out of fear of the Jews.

9 Now on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is Adar, the decree written by the king arrived.² On that same day the enemies of the Jews perished; no one resisted, because they feared them.³ The chief provincial governors, the princes, and the royal secretaries were paying honor to the Jews, because fear of Mordecai weighed upon them.⁴ The king's decree required that Mordecai's name be held in honor throughout the kingdom.^a ⁶ Now in the city of Susa the Jews killed five hundred people,⁷ including Pharsannestain, Delphon, Phasga,⁸ Pharadatha, Barea, Sarbacha,⁹ Marmasima, Aruphaeus, Arsaeus, Zabutheus,¹⁰ the ten sons of Haman son of Hammedatha, the Bougean, the enemy of the Jews—and they indulged^b themselves in plunder.

¹¹ That very day the number of those killed in Susa was reported to the king. ¹² The king said to Esther, “In Susa, the capital, the Jews have destroyed five hundred people. What do you suppose they have done in the surrounding countryside? Whatever more you ask will be done for you.” ¹³ And Esther said to the king, “Let the Jews be allowed to do the same tomorrow. Also, hang up the bodies of Haman’s ten sons.” ¹⁴ So he permitted this to be done, and handed over to the Jews of the city the bodies of Haman’s sons to hang up. ¹⁵ The Jews who were in Susa gathered on the fourteenth and killed three hundred people, but took no plunder.

¹⁶ Now the other Jews in the kingdom gathered to defend themselves, and got relief from their enemies. They destroyed fifteen thousand of them, but did not engage in plunder. ¹⁷ On the fourteenth day they rested and made that same day a day of rest, celebrating it with joy and gladness. ¹⁸ The Jews who were in Susa, the capital, came together also on the fourteenth, but did not rest. They celebrated the fifteenth with joy and gladness. ¹⁹ On this account then the Jews who are scattered around the country outside Susa keep the fourteenth of Adar as a joyful holiday, and send presents of food to one another, while those who live in the large cities keep the fifteenth day of Adar as their joyful holiday, also sending presents to one another.

²⁰ Mordecai recorded these things in a book, and sent it to the Jews in the kingdom of Artaxerxes both near and far,²¹ telling them that they should keep the fourteenth and fifteenth days of Adar,²² for on these days the Jews got relief from their enemies. The whole month (namely, Adar), in which their condition had been changed from sorrow into gladness and from a time of distress to a holiday, was to be celebrated as a time for feasting^c and gladness and for sending presents of food to their friends and to the poor.

²³ So the Jews accepted what Mordecai had written to them²⁴—how Haman son of Hammedatha, the Macedonian,^d fought against them, how he made a decree and cast lots^e to destroy them,²⁵ and how he went in to the king, telling him to hang Mordecai; but the wicked plot he had devised against the Jews came back upon himself, and he and his sons were hanged. ²⁶ Therefore these days were called “Purim,” because of the lots (for in their language this is the word that means “lots”). And so, because of what was written in this letter, and because of what they had experienced in this affair and what had befallen them, Mordecai established this festival,^f ²⁷ and the Jews took upon themselves, upon their descendants, and upon all who would join them, to observe it without fail.^g These days of Purim should be a memorial and kept from generation to generation, in every city, family, and country. ²⁸ These days of Purim were to be observed for all time, and the 61.3; Jer 31.13. 24–26: This plot summary, which does not mention Esther, differs slightly from the Heb version. The festival came to be called “Purim” for the lot, “pur” (pl. “purim”), which Haman cast (see 3.7n.). 32: Esther established it, Queen Esther is the only woman in the Bible credited with establishing a religious observance.

10.1–3: The greatness of Artaxerxes and Mordecai. 1: This seemingly irrelevant comment may imply that the king prospered with Mordecai’s assistance (see Gen 47.1–26). 2: Recorded in the annals, a standard formula for historical reports in Kings and Chronicles (1 Kings 14.19,29; 2 Chr 25.26; 32.32).

Addition F: 10.4–13: Epilogue: Mordecai’s dream explained. This addition rounds out the Gk version of Esther with an explanation of Mordecai’s dream with which the book began (11.2–12n.). 4: These things have come from God, the theme of Gk Esther (11.12; 4.14; 15.8; 6.1,13; 16.4; see Ps 118.23). 6: Light and sun, 11.11n.; 8.16. 8: Name, in ancient times, the essence of one’s identity resided largely in one’s name. 10: Two lots, not mentioned in 11.2–12. This verse may represent an alternative derivation for Purim. It assumes a different context for the “lots” that give Purim its name (9.23; 3.7n.), understanding them as symbols of destiny (Dan 12.13; Isa 17.14; Jer 13.25). A similar concept appears in the Dead Sea Scrolls (1QS 2.2,5; 3.1–4.26). 13: So they will observe these days, see 9.20–22.

11.1: The colophon to Gk Esther provides a probable date reference for the Gk translation. Ptolemy and Cleopatra, because three kings of Egypt named Ptolemy had wives named Cleopatra, the fourth year could be 114–113, 78–77, or 49–48 BCE. Dositheus, a common Hellenistic name (2 Macc 12.19,35; 3 Macc 1.3); presumably a copyist, he affirms the text’s authenticity and his own religious authority. Letter about Purim, probably the entire book of Esther. Lysimachus, a Greek name (cf. 2 Macc 4.29), likely the translator of Heb Esther into Gk.

THE WISDOM OF SOLOMON

NAME AND CANONICAL STATUS

The title of the book in most manuscripts is “The Wisdom of Solomon.” It is a Jewish writing, but it was preserved in Christian circles, like other Jewish writings in Greek. There is no evidence that the writing was accepted as canonical by any Jewish group, or even read by Jewish readers until many centuries after it had been written. The work seems to have been known to Clement of Rome and possibly Ignatius (late first-early second century CE). The Wisdom of Solomon was certainly used as Scripture by such early third-century writers as Tertullian, Clement of Alexandria, and Pseudo-Hippolytus. On the other hand, its canonicity was doubted by Origen, although he sometimes quotes it as if it were canonical. The book became a part of the Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox canons but is considered one of the Apocrypha by many Protestant groups.

AUTHORSHIP, DATE, AND HISTORICAL CONTEXT

Although the author claims to be King Solomon (with parts of ch 9 based on his prayer for wisdom in 1 Kings 3.6–9), this ascription has been recognized as a literary fiction since ancient times. Instead, the author is an anonymous Hellenistic Jew writing some time in the late first century BCE or early first century CE. The author most likely came from the Jewish community in Alexandria in Egypt or possibly from another major center in the Hellenistic world. In spite of seeming to appeal to Greek readers, the work is evidently aimed at an internal audience, probably the Jewish youth of Alexandria who might be tempted by the Hellenistic culture around them.

Some recent commentators view the book as originating in the historical context of the troubles experienced by the Alexandrian Jewish community in the period 38–41 CE, but the book gives no hint of a period of trauma or threat. Others have argued that the book is earlier, dating from the reign of the Roman emperor Augustus (27 BCE–14 CE). Nothing prevents the book from being this early. Typologically, The Wisdom of Solomon represents an earlier stage of development in the trajectory of biblical interpretation that reached its culmination in the Jewish philosopher Philo of Alexandria. A date about 20 BCE would fit the contents of the book.

GENRE, STRUCTURE, AND CONTENTS

The genre of the book has been analyzed in two distinct ways. One is as an “encomium,” defined by Aristotle as a work praising someone or, in this case, something—the quality of wisdom. Much of the content of the book can be seen as part of an encomium if the structure is understood as follows:

Introduction	chs 1–6
Encomium proper	chs 6–9
Comparison	10.1–19.9
Epilogue and conclusion	19.10–22

Another suggestion is that The Wisdom of Solomon is an “exhortatory discourse.” This is a much more specialized type of writing that was cultivated in philosophical schools and argued for and extolled a philosophical lifestyle. In addition to these two literary forms, The Wisdom of Solomon also has much in common with the “diatribe.” The Hellenistic diatribe was a specific rhetorical form and should not be confused with the English term “diatribe”; it was essentially a type of moral discourse in the form of a speech or address, much favored by the philosophical street preachers among the Cynics and Stoics, though recent study has emphasized its home in an academic context. Its aim was to convince the hearers of a particular course of action, and it always had a moral theme.

Some scholars have argued that a concentric internal structure (or “chiasmic” structure) with parallel elements can be found in various passages of The Wisdom of Solomon, indicating a deliberate arrangement of material. Some of these arrangements affect only individual passages of a few verses or so (for example, see chs 7–8). Others suggest an overall structure to the book. For example:

1–6	Book of Eschatology
7–10	Book of Wisdom
11–19	Book of History

Arguments about how to divide the book are often based on an inclusio, in which a section is delimited by having the same device (e.g., a word, a phrase, a sentence, a subject) at the beginning and the end. For example, the Book of Eschatology begins with an address to the rulers of the earth (ch 1) and ends with an address to the kings of the earth (ch 6), suggesting that chs 1–6 formed a complete unit in the mind of the author.

The Book of Eschatology (chs 1–6) contrasts the lives of the just and the wicked, dramatizing the eschatological destinies of the two groups. The next section, the Book of Wisdom (chs 7–10), celebrates the figure of divine Sophia (Wisdom). The author’s persona as Solomon emerges most clearly here, as the king describes wisdom and his pursuit of her. The third section, the Book of History (chs 11–19), adopts the approach of historical comparison, presenting an elaborate system of contrasts based largely on Ex 7–14. A series of digressions in 11.17–15.19 explains why God’s judgment manifested itself differently in dealing with the Egyptians and the Israelites. This adaptation of the Exodus story is meant to complement the arguments of the first two sections, providing biblical examples of the righteous and the unrighteous, and demonstrating how the power of divine wisdom operates in human history.

GUIDE TO READING

As a carefully crafted work, the book is best read in its entirety. For an understanding of its distinctive style and philosophical approach, comparing its summaries of biblical history in 10.1–11.14 with the corresponding passages in Genesis and Exodus will be fruitful.

1 Love righteousness, you rulers of the earth, think of the Lord in goodness and seek him with sincerity of heart; ² because he is found by those who do not put him to the test,
 and manifests himself to those who do not distrust him.
³ For perverse thoughts separate people from God,
 and when his power is tested, it exposes
 the foolish;

⁴ because wisdom will not enter a deceitful soul,
 or dwell in a body enslaved to sin.
⁵ For a holy and disciplined spirit will flee from deceit,
 and will leave foolish thoughts behind, and will be ashamed at the approach of unrighteousness.
⁶ For wisdom is a kindly spirit, but will not free blasphemers from the guilt of their words;

1.1–6.21: The Book of Eschatology. Many scholars see this “book” as having a concentric structure, as follows:

- A. Address to judges: exhortation to justice (1.1–15)
- B. Speech of the wicked (1.16–2.24)
 - C. Four paired contrasts of the just and the wicked (3.1–4.20)
 - B.’ Speech of the wicked (5.1–23)
- A.’ Address to kings: exhortation to wisdom (6.1–21).

For those who analyze the book as an encomium (see Introduction), chs 1–6 function as the introduction (“exordium”) whose theme is Wisdom’s gift of immortality to the righteous. This section addresses “rulers of the earth” in what is mainly a discourse on righteousness and wickedness.

1.1–15: An exhortation to justice. The figure of Wisdom is introduced (v. 4) and seems to be equated with a holy . . . spirit (v. 5) or the spirit of the Lord (v. 7). Specific references to wisdom then disappear until ch 6. Much of the passage is framed negatively, focusing on those things that are the opposite of wisdom and God’s spirit: perverse thoughts (v. 3), sin (v. 4), injustice (vv. 5, 8), blasphemy (v. 6), counsels of the ungodly (v. 9), lawless deeds (v. 9), and so on. 1: The verse is reminiscent of Ps 2.2; other passages seem to presuppose this Psalm (see 2.10–20; 4.8, 19; 6.1, 21). The book begins with the literary device of the apostrophe, a direct address to the hearers or readers, though the actual audience is the Hellenistic Jewish community, not their Gentile rulers. This is one of the features of the diatribe that has influenced the rhetoric of Wisdom of Solomon; see also 2.10–20n. 5:

because God is witness of their inmost feelings, and a true observer of their hearts, and a hearer of their tongues.

⁷ Because the spirit of the Lord has filled the world, and that which holds all things together knows what is said,

⁸ therefore those who utter unrighteous things will not escape notice, and justice, when it punishes, will not pass them by.

⁹ For inquiry will be made into the counsels of the ungodly, and a report of their words will come to the Lord,

to convict them of their lawless deeds;

¹⁰ because a jealous ear hears all things, and the sound of grumbling does not go unheard.

¹¹ Beware then of useless grumbling, and keep your tongue from slander;
because no secret word is without result,^a and a lying mouth destroys the soul.

¹² Do not invite death by the error of your life, or bring on destruction by the works of your hands;

¹³ because God did not make death, and he does not delight in the death of the living.

¹⁴ For he created all things so that they might exist;

the generative forces^b of the world are wholesome,
and there is no destructive poison in them, and the dominion^c of Hades is not on earth.

¹⁵ For righteousness is immortal.

¹⁶ But the ungodly by their words and deeds summoned death;^d considering him a friend, they pined away and made a covenant with him, because they are fit to belong to his company.

2 For they reasoned unsoundly, saying to themselves,

“Short and sorrowful is our life, and there is no remedy when a life comes to its end,
and no one has been known to return from Hades.

² For we were born by mere chance, and hereafter we shall be as though we had never been,
for the breath in our nostrils is smoke, and reason is a spark kindled by the beating of our hearts;

and the spirit will dissolve like empty air.

Wisdom is a product of the spirit of God; cf. Isa 2.11. 6: A kindly spirit, literally “a philanthropic spirit,” i.e., loving humanity (cf. 7.22–23; 12.19; 15.1). 7: See 12.1n. 11: Tongue, counsel on the vices of human speech is ubiquitous in wisdom literature (e.g., Prov 2.12; 4.24; 10.11,18–19,31–32; Sir 9.18; 20.24–26; 28.12–26). 12–15: These verses anticipate the discussion on immortality that follows in chs 2–6. 13: Death is eternal separation from God, the condition of the sinner. Here the author does not refer to the reality of physical death. 14: Hades, the abode of the dead in Greek tradition; comparable to Heb “Sheol.” 15: Immortality is not an innate condition of the soul but God’s gift to the righteous (see Philo, On the Confusion of Tongues, 149); see 2.23–24n.

1.16–2.24: The deluded reasoning of the ungodly. The passage’s style resembles that of the Greco-Roman diatribe, which often included argumentative exchanges with a fictional adversary. Here the ungodly are made to explain their actions and motives to themselves (2.1–20). The writer then disproves the reasoning of the ungodly (vv. 21–24). The view expressed is Epicurean or a caricature of the Epicurean belief, which argued that everything was material, that life and the universe came about by accident, and that death was the end of the person. Epicureans were accused of being atheists and of promoting a sensual lifestyle. Some of this was broadly true, but in reality the Epicurean lifestyle was one of moderation, not excess. 1.16: For the covenant with death cf. Isa 28.15. 2.1–5: This view of death is reflected also in Job 7.9–10; 14.1–2; Eccl 2.14,16,24; 3.12,19; 6.12;

our life will pass away like the traces of a cloud, and be scattered like mist that is chased by the rays of the sun and overcome by its heat.
⁵ For our allotted time is the passing of a shadow, and there is no return from our death,
because it is sealed up and no one turns back.

⁶ “Come, therefore, let us enjoy the good things that exist, and make use of the creation to the full as in youth.

⁷ Let us take our fill of costly wine and perfumes, and let no flower of spring pass us by.

⁸ Let us crown ourselves with rosebuds before they wither.

⁹ Let none of us fail to share in our revelry; everywhere let us leave signs of enjoyment, because this is our portion, and this our lot.

¹⁰ Let us oppress the righteous poor man; let us not spare the widow or regard the gray hairs of the aged.

¹¹ But let our might be our law of right, for what is weak proves itself to be useless.

¹² “Let us lie in wait for the righteous man, because he is inconvenient to us and opposes our actions; he reproaches us for sins against the law, and accuses us of sins against our training.

¹³ He professes to have knowledge of God, and calls himself a child^a of the Lord.

¹⁴ He became to us a reproof of our thoughts;

¹⁵ the very sight of him is a burden to us, because his manner of life is unlike that of others, and his ways are strange.

¹⁶ We are considered by him as something base, and he avoids our ways as unclean; he calls the last end of the righteous happy, and boasts that God is his father.

¹⁷ Let us see if his words are true, and let us test what will happen at the end of his life;

¹⁸ for if the righteous man is God’s child, he will help him, and will deliver him from the hand of his adversaries.

¹⁹ Let us test him with insult and torture, so that we may find out how gentle he is, and make trial of his forbearance.

²⁰ Let us condemn him to a shameful death, for, according to what he says, he will be protected.”

²¹ Thus they reasoned, but they were led astray, for their wickedness blinded them,

²² and they did not know the secret purposes of God, nor hoped for the wages of holiness, nor discerned the prize for blameless souls;

²³ for God created us for incorruption, and made us in the image of his own eternity,^b

9.2,7–9). 1: Hades, see 1.14n. 6–9: In the reasoning of the ungodly, the threat of death warrants sensuality (see Isa 22.13). In Eccl 9.7 enjoyment of pleasure is recommended as a proper response to life under the shadow of death. 10–20: The wicked are misled by an irrational antipathy for the righteous and the weak, persecuting those who call God their father. This passage draws on Isa 52.13–53.12: vv. 13 and 16 describe the righteous as child, Gk “pais,” which can also be translated “servant” (as in LXX Isa 52.13); cf. also vv. 19–20 with Isa 53.7–9. Other parallels in following chapters include 3.2–3 and Isa 53.4; 3.6 and Isa 53.7–10; 4.19 and Isa 52.15; 5.2 and Isa 52.14; 5.3–4 and Isa 53.3,10; 5.6 and Isa 53.6. The passage also shows affinities with 1 Enoch 62–63, probably indicating that both 1 Enoch and Wis have drawn on Isa 52–53. 13: Knowledge of God, a gift of wisdom illuminating the path to immortality (6.22; 7.12,17; 8.4,9; 10.10; 15.2–3; 18.6). ^b Or what is right devil's envy death entered refers to Gen 3.1–24 (see 6.23; 2 Enoch 31.3–6). Consequently, immortality (incorruption) is no longer a natural condition but a reward from God, contrasted with the view of this time in the Greek world that the soul was naturally immortal (see 1.16–2.24n., however, for the Epicurean view).

3.1–4.20: Four pairs contrasting the just and the wicked. 3.1–11: The souls of the righteous will be rewarded, and the wicked, punished; 3.12–19: the offspring of the righteous and the wicked; 4.1–6: better the childlessness of the righteous than the fertility of the wicked; 4.7–20: better a short life and righteousness than long life and wickedness.

3.1–11: First contrast, on suffering and death. The suffering and even death of the righteous is only apparent (vv. 1–9; cf. 1 Enoch 102.4–103.4; 103.9–104.6), in contrast to the wicked (vv. 10–11; cf. 1 Enoch 103.5–8; 104.7–10) who are rightly punished. 1: Souls, the author repeatedly emphasizes the primacy of the soul in constituting human identity (1.4,11; 2.22; 3.13; 4.14; 7.27; 8.19; 9.15; 10.16; 15.8,11). 4: The emphasis on immortality rather than bodily resurrection reflects Greek influence (1.15; 2.23; 4.1; 6.18–19; 8.13, 17; 12.1; 15.3; 2 Esd 2.45; 7.13,96; 8.54; 4 Macc 9.22). 5–6: The value of divine discipline; cf. 11.8–10; 12.20–22; 16.3–6,11; 18.20; Deut 8.5; Job 5.17; Prov 3.11–12; Sir 2.1–5; 4.17; 18.13–14; 32.14; 2 Macc 6.12–16; 7.33. 7: Shine forth, the star-like appearance of the glorified righteous is frequently mentioned in apocalyptic literature (cf. Dan 12.3; 2 Esd 7.97; 1 Enoch 104.2). 9: Watches over his elect, see 4.15; Ps 1.6; 145.20; Sir 46.14; 2 Macc 7.6.

3.12–19: Second contrast, on offspring. Better is childlessness than children through adultery and unlawful union. Since children were considered a blessing in the ancient world (e.g., Ps 127.3–5; 128.3–4), the author shows how the apparent good fortune of the ungodly in having children is illusory. See also 3.16–19; 4.3–6; cf. Sir 16.1–4; 23.22–27. 41.5–9. In contrast, barrenness, which was often thought to indicate divine displeasure

¹⁴ Blessed also is the eunuch whose hands have done no lawless deed, and who has not devised wicked things against the Lord;
for special favor will be shown him for his faithfulness,
and a place of great delight in the temple
of the Lord.

¹⁵ For the fruit of good labors is renowned,
and the root of understanding does not fail.

¹⁶ But children of adulterers will not come to maturity,
and the offspring of an unlawful union will perish.

¹⁷ Even if they live long they will be held of no account,
and finally their old age will be without honor.

¹⁸ If they die young, they will have no hope
and no consolation on the day of judgment.

¹⁹ For the end of an unrighteous generation is grievous.

4 Better than this is childlessness with virtue,
for in the memory of virtue^a is
immortality,
because it is known both by God and by mortals.

² When it is present, people imitate^b it, and they long for it when it has gone;
throughout all time it marches, crowned in triumph, victor in the contest for prizes that are undefiled.

³ But the prolific brood of the ungodly will be of no use,
and none of their illegitimate seedlings will strike a deep root or take a firm hold.

⁴ For even if they put forth boughs for a while,
standing insecurely they will be shaken by the wind,
and by the violence of the winds they will be uprooted.

⁵ The branches will be broken off before they come to maturity,
and their fruit will be useless, not ripe enough to eat, and good for
nothing.

⁶ For children born of unlawful unions are witnesses of evil against their parents when God examines them.^c

⁷ But the righteous, though they die early, will be at rest.

⁸ For old age is not honored for length of
time,

or measured by number of years;
⁹ but understanding is gray hair for anyone,

and a blameless life is ripe old age.

¹⁰ There were some who pleased God and were loved by him,
and while living among sinners were taken up.

¹¹ They were caught up so that evil might not change their understanding or guile deceive their souls.

5.1–23: Final judgment and the speech of the impious. In contrast to their arrogant speech of 2.1–20, the unrighteous now speak with remorse and self-condemnation (5.4–13). 1–8: The reaction of the unrighteous to the righteous parallels the so-called servant song of Isa 52.13–53.12, which describes the astonishing restoration of Israel after terrible affliction. Cf. also 1 Enoch 62–63. 4–13: An imaginary monologue is placed in the mouths of the wicked, as in 2.1–20, a device common in diatribe. 5: The righteous eventually become part of the heavenly host, a kind of astral immortality; cf. ⁸ What has our arrogance profited us?
And what good has our boasted wealth brought us?

⁹ “All those things have vanished like a shadow,
and like a rumor that passes by;
¹⁰ like a ship that sails through the billowy water,
and when it has passed no trace can be
found,
no track of its keel in the waves;
¹¹ or as, when a bird flies through the air,
no evidence of its passage is found;
the light air, lashed by the beat of its pinions
and pierced by the force of its rushing flight,
is traversed by the movement of its wings, and afterward no sign of its coming is found there;
¹² or as, when an arrow is shot at a target, the air, thus divided, comes together at once,
so that no one knows its pathway.
¹³ So we also, as soon as we were born, ceased to be,
and we had no sign of virtue to show,
but were consumed in our wickedness.” ¹⁴ Because the hope of the ungodly is like thistledown^a carried by the wind, and like a light frost^b driven away by a storm;
it is dispersed like smoke before the wind, and it passes like the remembrance of a guest who stays but a day.

¹⁵ But the righteous live forever, and their reward is with the Lord;
the Most High takes care of them.
¹⁶ Therefore they will receive a glorious crown

and a beautiful diadem from the hand of
the Lord,
because with his right hand he will cover
them,
and with his arm he will shield them.
¹⁷ The Lord^c will take his zeal as his whole armor,
and will arm all creation to repel^d his enemies;
¹⁸ he will put on righteousness as a breastplate,
and wear impartial justice as a helmet;
¹⁹ he will take holiness as an invincible shield,
²⁰ and sharpen stern wrath for a sword, and creation will join with him to fight against his frenzied foes.
²¹ Shafts of lightning will fly with true aim,
and will leap from the clouds to the target,
as from a well-drawn bow, ²² and hailstones full of wrath will be hurled as from a catapult;
the water of the sea will rage against
them,
and rivers will relentlessly overwhelm
them;
²³ a mighty wind will rise against them, and like a tempest it will winnow them
away.
Lawlessness will lay waste the whole
earth,
and evildoing will overturn the thrones of rulers.

learn, O judges of the ends of the earth.

6.1–21: An exhortation to wisdom. This section is parallel to 1.1–15, forming an inclusio that marks off 1.1–6.21 as a unit: just as the section began with an address to “the rulers of the earth” (1.1–15), it ends with an address to “the kings of the earth” (6.1–21). Some of the passage’s themes are familiar from philosophical treatises on kingship (e.g., Plutarch, To an Uneducated Ruler), which generally stressed the need for rulers to be wise and

² Give ear, you that rule over multitudes, and boast of many nations.

³ For your dominion was given you from
the Lord,
and your sovereignty from the Most High;
he will search out your works and inquire into your plans.

⁴ Because as servants of his kingdom you did not rule rightly,
or keep the law,
or walk according to the purpose of God, ⁵ he will come upon you terribly and swiftly,

because severe judgment falls on those in high places.

⁶ For the lowliest may be pardoned in mercy,

but the mighty will be mightily tested.

⁷ For the Lord of all will not stand in awe of
anyone,

or show deference to greatness;
because he himself made both small and great,
and he takes thought for all alike.

⁸ But a strict inquiry is in store for the mighty.

⁹ To you then, O monarchs, my words are directed,
so that you may learn wisdom and not transgress.

¹⁰ For they will be made holy who observe holy things in holiness, and those who have been taught them will find a defense.

¹¹ Therefore set your desire on my words;
long for them, and you will be instructed.

¹² Wisdom is radiant and unfading, and she is easily discerned by those who love her,
and is found by those who seek her.

¹³ She hastens to make herself known to those who desire her.

¹⁴ One who rises early to seek her will have no difficulty,
for she will be found sitting at the gate.

¹⁵ To fix one's thought on her is perfect understanding,
and one who is vigilant on her account will soon be free from care,

¹⁶ because she goes about seeking those worthy of her,
and she graciously appears to them in their paths,
and meets them in every thought.

¹⁷ The beginning of wisdom^a is the most sincere desire for instruction, and concern for instruction is love of her,

¹⁸ and love of her is the keeping of her laws, and giving heed to her laws is assurance of
immortality,

benevolent (cf. 12.15–18n.). Kingship is also an important theme in Proverbs (e.g., 16.10–19; 20.26–28; 25.1–7; 29.4,12–14; 30.21–31), another book attributed to Solomon. 1–11: Rulers of other nations are often condemned in the Bible and Jewish literature (e.g., Isa 14.3–21), yet this passage seems to assume that the ruler who heeds and gains wisdom will rule the world and gain many benefits. Thus, even Gentile rulers can gain favor in the eyes of God by living according to the law and God's will (6.4). Law (v. 4) here probably refers to universal law rather than the specific Jewish Torah, though some Jewish writers of the time equated the two (Ep. Aris. 161,168–69; Philo, Abraham, especially 16,60–61,133–37). 1–2: An apostrophe (see 1.1n.). 3: Political authority is granted by God (cf. Prov 8.15–16; Jer 27.5–7; Dan 2.37–38; 4.17; Sir 10.4–5). 4–6: For God's judgment against the mighty, cf. 1 Sam 2.3–5; Job 12.17–25; 34.24–30; Ps 2; Isa 2.11–17; Jer 25.15–29; Ezek 21.25–27; Sir 10.8–18. 7: Small and great, cf. Job 34.19. 12: Wisdom has been mentioned in passing at several points (1.4–6; 3.11; 6.9), but with this verse a discourse on the figure of personified Wisdom begins, continuing to the end of ch 10. The figure of Wisdom or Lady Wisdom occurs frequently in late Israelite and Jewish literature, especially Prov 1.20–33; 8; 9.1–6; Job 28.12–28; Sir 1.1–27; 4.11–19; 6.18–37; 14.20–15.10; 24; Bar 3.9–4.4. Later, Wisdom came to be equated with the Torah or elements of the Torah, rather than just intellectual or practical wisdom (e.g., Sir 24.23–29; Bar 4.1). 14: The gate, the place in a city where legal and commercial transactions were carried out (Deut 22.15,24; Prov 22.22; Isa 29.21; Am 5.10–12,15); cf. Prov 1.20–21. 17–20: The literary form called a “sorites” in Greek, defined as a set of statements that proceed step by step to a conclusion, with each statement picking up the last key word or phrase of the preceding one. The author of Wis clearly knows of the form and makes effective use of it. 18–19: Immortality, see 3.4n.

¹⁹ and immortality brings one near to God;
²⁰ so the desire for wisdom leads to a kingdom.

²¹ Therefore if you delight in thrones and scepters, O monarchs over the peoples, honor wisdom, so that you may reign forever.

²² I will tell you what wisdom is and how she came to be, and I will hide no secrets from you, but I will trace her course from the beginning of creation, and make knowledge of her clear, and I will not pass by the truth;

²³ nor will I travel in the company of sickly envy, for envy^a does not associate with wisdom.

²⁴ The multitude of the wise is the salvation of the world, and a sensible king is the stability of any people.

²⁵ Therefore be instructed by my words, and you will profit.

7 I also am mortal, like everyone else, a descendant of the first-formed child of earth; and in the womb of a mother I was molded into flesh,

² within the period of ten months, compacted with blood, from the seed of a man and the pleasure of marriage.

³ And when I was born, I began to breathe the common air, and fell upon the kindred earth; my first sound was a cry, as is true of all.

⁴ I was nursed with care in swaddling cloths.

⁵ For no king has had a different beginning of existence;

⁶ there is for all one entrance into life, and one way out.

⁷ Therefore I prayed, and understanding was given me;

I called on God, and the spirit of wisdom came to me.

⁸ I preferred her to scepters and thrones, and I accounted wealth as nothing in comparison with her.

⁹ Neither did I liken to her any priceless gem, because all gold is but a little sand in her sight, and silver will be accounted as clay before her.

¹⁰ I loved her more than health and beauty, and I chose to have her rather than light,

because her radiance never ceases.

6.22–10.21: The Book of Wisdom.

6.22–25: Introduction: the promise is made to reveal the mysteries of wisdom to the reader.

7.1–9.18: In this section the implied author speaks in the persona of Solomon, describing his life and quest for wisdom and the benefits wisdom is able to bestow. The pseudo-autobiographical narrative serves the dual function of gaining the empathy of the hearers and commending the quest for wisdom.

7.1–8.21: The first part of the autobiographical narrative consists of a speech by Solomon that has a concentric framework:

- A. Birth of Solomon (7.1–6)
- B. Solomon asks for wisdom from God (7.7–12)
- C. Solomon given wealth and power (7.13–22a)
 - D. Description of wisdom (7.22b–8.1)
- C.' Wisdom brings all good things (8.2–8)
- B.' Solomon becomes a great king through Wisdom (8.9–16)
- A.' Wisdom available only through prayer (8.17–21).

7.1–6: By describing his birth like everyone else, “Solomon” shows his common humanity with the hearers. 2: The conventional 40 weeks or 280 days of human gestation was usually interpreted as ten months in antiquity, because of the use of lunar rather than solar months. Compacted with blood, on conception as the coagulation of semen in the womb, cf. Job 10.10. 7–14: Solomon prays for wisdom from God, as also in 1 Kings 3.4–14. God grants Solomon not only wisdom but also wealth and other benefits (cf. 1 Kings 3.10–14). 8–9: Cf. Job 28.15–19;

¹¹ All good things came to me along with her,
and in her hands uncounted wealth.

¹² I rejoiced in them all, because wisdom leads them;
but I did not know that she was their mother.

¹³ I learned without guile and I impart without grudging;
I do not hide her wealth,

¹⁴ for it is an unfailing treasure for mortals;
those who get it obtain friendship with God, commended for the gifts that come from instruction.

¹⁵ May God grant me to speak with judgment, and to have thoughts worthy of what I have received;

for he is the guide even of wisdom and the corrector of the wise.

¹⁶ For both we and our words are in his hand, as are all understanding and skill in crafts.

¹⁷ For it is he who gave me unerring knowledge of what exists, to know the structure of the world and the activity of the elements;

¹⁸ the beginning and end and middle of times, the alternations of the solstices and the changes of the seasons,

¹⁹ the cycles of the year and the constellations of the stars,

²⁰ the natures of animals and the tempers of wild animals, the powers of spirits^a and the thoughts of human beings, the varieties of plants and the virtues of roots;

²¹ I learned both what is secret and what is manifest,

²² for wisdom, the fashioner of all things, taught me.

There is in her a spirit that is intelligent, holy,

unique, manifold, subtle,
mobile, clear, unpolluted, distinct, invulnerable, loving the good,
keen,

irresistible, ²³ beneficent, humane,
steadfast, sure, free from anxiety,
all-powerful, overseeing all,
and penetrating through all spirits that are intelligent, pure, and altogether subtle.

²⁴ For wisdom is more mobile than any motion;

because of her pureness she pervades and penetrates all things.

²⁵ For she is a breath of the power of God, and a pure emanation of the glory of the Almighty;
therefore nothing defiled gains entrance into her.

²⁶ For she is a reflection of eternal light, a spotless mirror of the working of God,
and an image of his goodness.

²⁷ Although she is but one, she can do all things, and while remaining in herself, she renews all things;
in every generation she passes into holy souls

Prov 2.4; 3:14–16. 14: Abraham in particular was known for his friendship with God (2 Chr 20.7; Isa 41.8; Jas 2.23); see also 7.27; 8.18; Job 29.4; Ps 25.14; Jer 3.4. 15–22: Divine wisdom is presented in scientific and philosophical terms; this sort of encyclopedic knowledge was a common interest of ancient wisdom literature; cf. 1 Kings 4.33.

7.22b–8.1: A description of wisdom, with two sets of lists. 7.22b–24: The first list consists of 21 attributes (a multiple of 7 and 3, numbers signifying completeness and perfection). Most of the epithets have parallels in Greek philosophy (cf. Pseudo-Aristotle, On the Cosmos 400B–401B); a similar litany of attributes, glorifying the deity, is used in the Apocalypse of Abraham 17.8–15. 7.25–8.1: The second list is made up of metaphors, a five-fold description of wisdom's relationship with God (breath, emanation, reflection, mirror, image). 25: Breath, see 11.20; Sir 24.3. The description of wisdom as a pure emanation or effluence of God reflects the influence of philosophical concepts (e.g., Cicero, The Nature of the Gods 2.79; cf. Sir 1.9; 24.23–33). 26: Mirror, cf. 2 Cor 3.18; Philo, Quest. in Gen. 1.57.

and makes them friends of God, and prophets;
²⁸ for God loves nothing so much as the person who lives with wisdom.
²⁹ She is more beautiful than the sun, and excels every constellation of the stars. Compared with the light she is found to be superior, ³⁰ for it is succeeded by the night, but against wisdom evil does not prevail.

8 She reaches mightily from one end of the earth to the other, and she orders all things well.

² I loved her and sought her from my youth; I desired to take her for my bride, and became enamored of her beauty.

³ She glorifies her noble birth by living with God, and the Lord of all loves her.

⁴ For she is an initiate in the knowledge of God, and an associate in his works.

⁵ If riches are a desirable possession in life, what is richer than wisdom, the active cause of all things?

⁶ And if understanding is effective, who more than she is fashioner of what exists?

⁷ And if anyone loves righteousness, her labors are virtues; for she teaches self-control and prudence, justice and courage; nothing in life is more profitable for mortals than these.

⁸ And if anyone longs for wide experience, she knows the things of old, and infers the things to come;

she understands turns of speech and the solutions of riddles; she has foreknowledge of signs and wonders and of the outcome of seasons and times.

⁹ Therefore I determined to take her to live with me, knowing that she would give me good counsel and encouragement in cares and grief.

¹⁰ Because of her I shall have glory among the multitudes and honor in the presence of the elders, though I am young.

¹¹ I shall be found keen in judgment, and in the sight of rulers I shall be admired.

¹² When I am silent they will wait for me, and when I speak they will give heed; if I speak at greater length, they will put their hands on their mouths.

¹³ Because of her I shall have immortality, and leave an everlasting remembrance to those who come after me.

¹⁴ I shall govern peoples, and nations will be subject to me;

¹⁵ dread monarchs will be afraid of me when they hear of me; among the people I shall show myself capable, and courageous in war.

¹⁶ When I enter my house, I shall find rest with her; for companionship with her has no bitterness, and life with her has no pain, but gladness and joy.

¹⁷ When I considered these things inwardly, and pondered in my heart that in kinship with wisdom there is immortality,

¹⁸ and in friendship with her, pure delight, and in the labors of her hands, unailing wealth, and in the experience of her company, understanding, and renown in sharing her words, I went about seeking how to get her for myself.

¹⁹ As a child I was naturally gifted, and a good soul fell to my lot;

8.2–16: The extended metaphor of Solomon making Wisdom his bride. Erotic imagery in connection with Wisdom is found elsewhere, as in Prov. 9.1–6, which makes Wisdom a seductress. Even more erotically explicit is the Hebrew version of Sir 51.13–30, which circulated separately at Qumran as part of a Psalms scroll (11QPsa 21). 4–6: On wisdom's agency in creation, see Prov 8.22–31. 7: The four cardinal virtues of Greek thought: self-control, prudence, justice, and courage. Cf. 4 Macc 1.2–4. 8: Turns of speech . . . riddles, cf. Prov. 1.5–6. 10–12: Cf. Job 29.7–11, 21–23; Sir 15.4–6. 13: Everlasting remembrance, see 4.1n. 15–16: Rest, see Sir 6.28.

17–21: Wisdom is available only as a gift from God. 17: Immortality, see 3.4n. 18: Friendship, see 7.8–9n.

²⁰ or rather, being good, I entered an undefiled body.
²¹ But I perceived that I would not possess wisdom unless God gave her to me—and it was a mark of insight to know whose gift she was—so I appealed to the Lord and implored him, and with my whole heart I said:
9 “O God of my ancestors and Lord of mercy, who have made all things by your word, ² and by your wisdom have formed humankind to have dominion over the creatures you have made,
³ and rule the world in holiness and righteousness, and pronounce judgment in uprightness of soul,
⁴ give me the wisdom that sits by your throne, and do not reject me from among your servants.
⁵ For I am your servant^a the son of your serving girl, a man who is weak and short-lived, with little understanding of judgment and laws;
⁶ for even one who is perfect among human beings will be regarded as nothing without the wisdom that comes from you.
⁷ You have chosen me to be king of your people and to be judge over your sons and daughters.
⁸ You have given command to build a temple on your holy mountain, and an altar in the city of your habitation, a copy of the holy tent that you prepared from the beginning.

⁹ With you is wisdom, she who knows your works and was present when you made the world; she understands what is pleasing in your sight and what is right according to your commandments.
¹⁰ Send her forth from the holy heavens, and from the throne of your glory send her, that she may labor at my side, and that I may learn what is pleasing to you.
¹¹ For she knows and understands all things, and she will guide me wisely in my actions and guard me with her glory.
¹² Then my works will be acceptable, and I shall judge your people justly, and shall be worthy of the throne^b of my father.
¹³ For who can learn the counsel of God? Or who can discern what the Lord wills?
¹⁴ For the reasoning of mortals is worthless, and our designs are likely to fail;
¹⁵ for a perishable body weighs down the soul, and this earthly tent burdens the thoughtful^c mind.
¹⁶ We can hardly guess at what is on earth, and what is at hand we find with labor; but who has traced out what is in the heavens?
¹⁷ Who has learned your counsel, unless you have given wisdom and sent your holy spirit from on high?

19–20: The Platonic view of the soul as preexistent is reflected here, as in other Hellenistic Jewish writings (cf. Philo, Giants 6–14; 2 Enoch 23.4–5). The author may be referring also to Hellenistic theories about the transmigration of souls, a belief attributed by Josephus to the Pharisees (J.W. 2.8.14).

9.1–18: Solomon's prayer (cf. 1 Kings 3.6–9; 2 Chr 1.8–10). Verses 1–5 parallel vv. 7–12: Address to God (vv. 1–3; 7–9); petition (vv. 4; 10a); motive (vv. 5; 10b–12). Verses 13–18 are a meditation on humanity's insignificance before God. 2: Dominion, see 10.2; Gen 1.26,28; Ps 8.6; Sir 17.2–4. 4: Wisdom . . . sits by your throne, see 9.10; 18.15; Prov 8.30; Sir 24.4; 1 Enoch 84.3. 5: Your servant, see Pss 86.16; 116.16. 8: That the earthly temple on Mount Zion was only a copy of a heavenly archetype may be an interpretation of Ex 25.9,40; 26.30 (cf. Heb 8.2–5; Rev 11.19; 1 Enoch 14.10–20). 9: Cf. Prov. 8.22–31. 12: My father, David. 13: Cf. Isa 40.12–14; Sir 1.2–6; Bar 3.29–31.15: That

¹⁸ And thus the paths of those on earth were set right,
and people were taught what pleases you,
and were saved by wisdom.”

10 Wisdom^a protected the first-formed father of the world, when he alone had been created;
she delivered him from his transgression,
² and gave him strength to rule all things.
³ But when an unrighteous man departed from her in his anger, he perished because in rage he killed his brother.
⁴ When the earth was flooded because of him, wisdom again saved it, steering the righteous man by a paltry piece of wood.

⁵ Wisdom^a also, when the nations in wicked agreement had been put to confusion, recognized the righteous man and preserved him blameless before God, and kept him strong in the face of his compassion for his child.

⁶ Wisdom^a rescued a righteous man when the ungodly were perishing;
he escaped the fire that descended on the Five Cities.^b

⁷ Evidence of their wickedness still remains:
a continually smoking wasteland,
plants bearing fruit that does not ripen, and a pillar of salt standing as a monument to an unbelieving soul.

⁸ For because they passed wisdom by, they not only were hindered from recognizing the good,

but also left for humankind a reminder of their folly,
so that their failures could never go unnoticed.

⁹ Wisdom rescued from troubles those who served her.

¹⁰ When a righteous man fled from his brother's wrath,
she guided him on straight paths;
she showed him the kingdom of God, and gave him knowledge of holy
things;
she prospered him in his labors,
and increased the fruit of his toil.

¹¹ When his oppressors were covetous, she stood by him and made him rich.

¹² She protected him from his enemies,
and kept him safe from those who lay in wait for him;
in his arduous contest she gave him the victory,
so that he might learn that godliness is more powerful than anything else.

¹³ When a righteous man was sold, wisdom^c did not desert him,
but delivered him from sin.
She descended with him into the dungeon,

¹⁴ and when he was in prison she did not leave him,
until she brought him the scepter of a kingdom
and authority over his masters.

the body weighs down the soul was a common philosophical belief (see Plato, Phaedr 81C). 18: Saved by wisdom, the attribution of a saving role to wisdom is one of the book's distinctive features; here as elsewhere activities usually reserved for God are assigned to wisdom.

10.1–21: Biblical history illustrates wisdom's saving and punishing power. The author presents seven righteous heroes as evidence of wisdom's providential ordering of Israelite history, each contrasted with some unrighteous villain. Personal names are avoided in favor of generic categories, but the descriptions make it clear who they are. This chapter provides a transition to the third part of the book. 1–2: The interpretation of Adam is different in emphasis from the account in Gen 1.26–5.5. 2: Rule, see 9.2n. 3: Cain and Abel (Gen 4.1–16). 4: Because of him, Cain's crime is interpreted by the author as the cause of the Flood. The righteous man, Noah (Gen 5.28–9.29). 5: Abraham (Gen 11.26–25.10). The nations, referring to the Tower of Babel story (Gen 11.1–9). Compassion for his child, cf. wisdom delivered from a nation of oppressors.

¹⁶ She entered the soul of a servant of the Lord,
and withstood dread kings with wonders and signs.

¹⁷ She gave to holy people the reward of their labors;
she guided them along a marvelous way,

and became a shelter to them by day,
and a starry flame through the night.

¹⁸ She brought them over the Red Sea, and led them through deep waters;

¹⁹ but she drowned their enemies, and cast them up from the depth of the sea.

²⁰ Therefore the righteous plundered the

who were mute,
and made the tongues of infants speak
clearly.

11 Wisdom^a prospered their works by the hand of a holy prophet.

² They journeyed through an uninhabited wilderness,

and pitched their tents in untrodden places.

³ They withstood their enemies and fought off their foes.

⁴ When they were thirsty, they called upon
you,

and water was given them out of flinty rock, and from hard stone a remedy for their thirst.

⁵ For through the very things by which their enemies were punished, they themselves received benefit in their need.

⁶ Instead of the fountain of an ever-flowing river,

stirred up and defiled with blood

⁷ in rebuke for the decree to kill the infants, you gave them abundant water unexpectedly,

⁸ showing by their thirst at that time
how you punished their enemies.

⁹ For when they were tried, though they were being disciplined in mercy, they learned how the ungodly were tormented when judged in wrath.

¹⁰ For you tested them as a parent^b does in warning,

see Gen 28.12,17,22. 12: Arduous contest (Gen 32.22–32; Hos 12.3–4). 13–14: Joseph (Gen 37–50). 15–21: Moses (Ex 1–17).

11.1–19.22: The Book of History, a historical meditation contrasting God's dealings with the Israelites and the Egyptians. The presentation of Moses in the preceding passage leads without a break into an elaborate comparison consisting of seven historical contrasts, supplemented by a digression in 11.17–15.19. Although based on the events of Ex 7–14, the author's interpretation is apologetic in nature, underscoring the Egyptians' culpability while omitting reference to any of Israel's failures. Three principles seem to have been used in constructing these historical contrasts: Israel would benefit from those things that were a punishment of the Egyptians (11.5); the Egyptians' sins would themselves act as a punishment of them (11.16); Israel would also suffer a mild form of the punishments, but this would be a means of understanding God's mercies (cf. 16.4).

11.1–14: First contrast: plague of the Nile versus water from the rock. The sin of the Egyptians was killing the Israelite infants in the Nile (11.7); the punishment is that the Nile becomes undrinkable. The Israelite counterpart is the water brought forth from the rock in the desert (Ex 17.1–7; Num 20.1–13). 1–3: Without making specific references, the author establishes the historical setting for what follows, the Israelites' struggle in the wilderness. 4, 6–8: See Ex 7.14–25; 17.1–7; Num 20.2–13. 5: The principle behind all the contrasts: God uses the same means for aiding Israel and punishing her enemies (see 11.13; 16.24; 18.8). 8–10: The righteous must also experience God's punishment, though not as a matter of condemnation but of compassionate testing and discipline (see 3.5).

but you examined the ungodly^a as a stern king does in condemnation.
 11 Whether absent or present, they were equally distressed, 12 for a twofold grief possessed them, and a groaning at the memory of what had occurred.
 13 For when they heard that through their own punishments the righteous^b had received benefit, they perceived it was the Lord's doing.
 14 For though they had mockingly rejected him who long before had been cast out and exposed, at the end of the events they marveled at him, when they felt thirst in a different way from the righteous.
 15 In return for their foolish and wicked thoughts, which led them astray to worship irrational serpents and worthless animals, you sent upon them a multitude of irrational creatures to punish them,
 16 so that they might learn that one is punished by the very things by which one sins.
 17 For your all-powerful hand, which created the world out of formless matter, did not lack the means to send upon them a multitude of bears, or bold lions,
 18 or newly-created unknown beasts full of rage, or such as breathe out fiery breath, or belch forth a thick pall of smoke, or flash terrible sparks from their eyes;

19 not only could the harm they did destroy people,^c but the mere sight of them could kill by fright.
 20 Even apart from these, people^b could fall at a single breath when pursued by justice and scattered by the breath of your power.
 But you have arranged all things by measure and number and weight.
 21 For it is always in your power to show great strength, and who can withstand the might of your arm?
 22 Because the whole world before you is like a speck that tips the scales, and like a drop of morning dew that falls on the ground.
 23 But you are merciful to all, for you can do all things, and you overlook people's sins, so that they may repent.
 24 For you love all things that exist, and detest none of the things that you have made, for you would not have made anything if you had hated it.
 25 How would anything have endured if you had not willed it? Or how would anything not called forth by you have been preserved?
 26 You spare all things, for they are yours, O Lord, you who love the living.

11.15–16: Second contrast: the plague of small animals (see Ex 8.1–19; 9.1–7). Here the positive parallel with the Israelites is not developed; see further 16.1–4.

11.17–15.19: Two digressions that interrupt the interpretation of the Exodus, explaining how and why God judges the nations, contrasting the results of true worship (Jewish monotheism) and false worship (idolatry).

11.17–12.27: First digression. God's power and mercy, composed of two parallel sections and a conclusion: God punished the Egyptians by degrees so that they will have a chance to repent (11.17–12.2); God's punishment of the Canaanites was gradual, in spite of their heinous sins (12.3–18); God's punishment of Israel is very mild compared to that of their enemies (12.19–22).

11.17–12.2: God exercises power and mercy in judgment so as to free all creation from wickedness. 11.17: Formless matter, a concept of Greek philosophy (see Plato, Timaeus 50D–E), here describing the chaos of Gen 1.2. 18–19: Cf. Job 41.12–21. 21: See 12.12n. 23: Merciful to all, see 12.13,16,18; 15.1; Sir 16.11–14; 18.11–14; 2 Esd

12 For your immortal spirit is in all things.
²Therefore you correct little by little those who trespass,
 and you remind and warn them of the things through which they sin, so that they may be freed from wickedness and put their trust in you, O Lord.

³Those who lived long ago in your holy
 land

⁴you hated for their detestable practices, their works of sorcery and unholy rites,

⁵their merciless slaughter^a of children, and their sacrificial feasting on human flesh and blood.

These initiates from the midst of a heathen cult,^b

⁶these parents who murder helpless lives,

you willed to destroy by the hands of our ancestors,

⁷so that the land most precious of all to
 you might receive a worthy colony of the servants^c of God.

⁸But even these you spared, since they were but mortals,

and sent wasps^d as forerunners of your army

to destroy them little by little,

⁹though you were not unable to give the ungodly into the hands of the righteous in battle,

or to destroy them at one blow by dread wild animals or your stern word.

¹⁰But judging them little by little you gave them an opportunity to repent, though you were not unaware that their origin^e was evil

and their wickedness inborn,

and that their way of thinking would never change.

¹¹For they were an accursed race from the beginning,
 and it was not through fear of anyone that you left them unpunished for their sins.

¹²For who will say, "What have you done?" or will resist your judgment?

Who will accuse you for the destruction of nations that you made?

Or who will come before you to plead as an advocate for the unrighteous?

¹³For neither is there any god besides you, whose care is for all people,^f

to whom you should prove that you have not judged unjustly;

¹⁴nor can any king or monarch confront you about those whom you have punished.

¹⁵You are righteous and you rule all things righteously,
 deeming it alien to your power to condemn anyone who does not deserve to be punished.

¹⁶For your strength is the source of
 righteousness,
 and your sovereignty over all causes you to spare all.

¹⁷For you show your strength when people doubt the completeness of your power,

12.3–11: Divine judgment of the ancient Canaanites, a common theme of Jewish apologetic (see Jub. 10.27–34; 22.20–22), gives an illustration for the preceding argument; although hating their wickedness, God showed forbearance in destroying them. 5: Cf. Lev 20.2–5. 8: Wasps, see Ex 23.28; Deut 7.20; Josh 24.12. 10: Little by little, see 12.2,8; Ex 23.28–30. Their origin was evil (see textual note e), cf. and you rebuke any insolence among those who know it.^a 18 Although you are sovereign in strength, you judge with mildness,
and with great forbearance you govern us;
for you have power to act whenever you choose.

19 Through such works you have taught your people
that the righteous must be kind, and you have filled your children with good hope,
because you give repentance for sins.

20 For if you punished with such great care and indulgence^b
the enemies of your servants^c and those deserving of death, granting them time and opportunity to give up their wickedness,

21 with what strictness you have judged your children,
to whose ancestors you gave oaths and covenants full of good promises!

22 So while chastening us you scourge our enemies ten thousand times
more,
so that, when we judge, we may meditate upon your goodness, and when we are judged, we may expect
mercy.

23 Therefore those who lived unrighteously, in a life of folly, you tormented through their own abominations.

24 For they went far astray on the paths of error,

accepting as gods those animals that even their enemies^d despised;
they were deceived like foolish infants.

25 Therefore, as though to children who cannot reason,
you sent your judgment to mock them.

26 But those who have not heeded the warning of mild rebukes will experience the deserved judgment of God.

27 For when in their suffering they became incensed
at those creatures that they had thought to be gods, being punished by means of them,

they saw and recognized as the true God
the one whom they had before refused to know.

Therefore the utmost condemnation came upon them.

to describe the ideal ruler in philosophical treatises on kingship (see 6.1–21n.). 17: You rebuke any insolence, see Ps 119.21; Isa 13.11; Jer 48.28–33; Sir 35.22–26; Bar 4.34; 3 Macc 2.3, 21. 19–22: Divine judgment is a model of goodness and mercy for God's children. 20–21: If repentance is available to the wicked, it is all the more available to the heirs of God's promises. 23–27: Condemnation of animal worshipers (see 11.15–16; 13.14; 15.18–19); divine judgment forces them to recognize the true God. On their refusal to know God, see 2.13n. 25: To mock them, cf. Ex 10.2; Isa 66.4.

13.1–15.19: Second digression. False worship of nature, idols, and animals is castigated at length. The material is divided into two sections: a short section on worship of the natural world (13.1–9), and a much longer and detailed section on idol worship (13.10–15.19).

13.1–9: Worship of the natural world. The natural philosophers are to be blamed, because they sought the Creator but were unable to find him in spite of his works. 1: The one who exists is used of the Supreme Being by Platonists, whereas it is used by Jews (e.g., LXX Ex 3.14) to refer to the only God. Platonists considered the Supreme Being to be separate from the material creator. For Jews the Supreme Being is also the creator or artisan.

³ If through delight in the beauty of these things people assumed them to be gods, let them know how much better than these is their Lord, for the author of beauty created them.

⁴ And if people^a were amazed at their power and working, let them perceive from them how much more powerful is the one who formed them.

⁵ For from the greatness and beauty of created things comes a corresponding perception of their Creator.

⁶ Yet these people are little to be blamed, for perhaps they go astray while seeking God and desiring to find him.

⁷ For while they live among his works, they keep searching, and they trust in what they see, because the things that are seen are beautiful.

⁸ Yet again, not even they are to be excused;

⁹ for if they had the power to know so much that they could investigate the world, how did they fail to find sooner the Lord of these things?

¹⁰ But miserable, with their hopes set on dead things, are those who give the name “gods” to the works of human hands, gold and silver fashioned with skill, and likenesses of animals, or a useless stone, the work of an ancient hand.

¹³ But a cast-off piece from among them, useful for nothing, a stick crooked and full of knots, he takes and carves with care in his leisure, and shapes it with skill gained in idleness;^b he forms it in the likeness of a human being,

^a Gk they

^b Other ancient authorities read with intelligent skill

In Hellenistic literature, ignorance in this sort of context often implied impiety. 2: The elements worshiped by those who do not know God. Associated with them are several philosophical terms; for example, the phrase gods that rule the world seems to refer to astral piety, the worship of the heavenly bodies (cf. 2 Kings 17:16; 23:4; Job 31:26–28; Cicero, The Nature of the Gods 2.15). 4: Another technical philosophical expression, known from Aristotle (Metaphysics, 9.6.1–2 1048a), is power and working. 5: The type of argumentation used here is Hellenistic, not biblical. It includes the common Hellenistic form of reasoning from analogy, and it argues that the beauty of the creation requires some overseer and source of beauty behind it. 6: Seeking God, cf. Philo, Abraham 124–30; Acts 17:26–27. 9: In Hellenistic speculation, the word translated world (Gk “aion”) could mean both “world” and “age,” but in Hellenistic speculation it was used of a mystical concept, the personification of a kind of world-soul, as in Plato’s Timaeus 37D. The Stoics believed in an analogous cosmic “reason” or mind that governed all things.

13.10–15.19: Polemic against idolatry. The Jews came to regard idolatry as one of the most disgusting traits of paganism. Here it is stated that idolatry is “the beginning and cause and end of every evil” (14.27), leading to child murder, secret rites, pollution of marriages, adultery, bloodshed, murder, theft, deceit, sexual perversion, and debauchery. Jer 10.1–16 and Isa 44.9–20 engage in a similar polemic, describing at length the way in which a piece of wood could partly be burned for warmth and preparing food, and partly used to make a god for worship. This was a simplistic criticism, of course, since no pagans regarded themselves as worshiping a piece of wood, stone, or metal. The criticism is aimed at a Jewish audience, however, and the polemic may have been effective in this context. Yet similar comments about idols can be found in some Greco-Roman writers (Horace, Satires 1.8.1–7; Sophocles, according to a quotation in Clement of Alexandria, Strom. 5.14 113.1–2).

13.10–16: A sarcastic description of how idol “gods” are created from discarded wood (see 15.7–19). 13: In the

¹⁴ or makes it like some worthless animal, giving it a coat of red paint and coloring its surface red

and covering every blemish in it with paint;

¹⁵ then he makes a suitable niche for it, and sets it in the wall, and fastens it there with iron.

¹⁶ He takes thought for it, so that it may not fall,
because he knows that it cannot help itself,

for it is only an image and has need of
help.

¹⁷ When he prays about possessions and his marriage and children, he is not ashamed to address a lifeless thing.

¹⁸ For health he appeals to a thing that is weak;

for life he prays to a thing that is dead;
for aid he entreats a thing that is utterly inexperienced;

for a prosperous journey, a thing that cannot take a step;

¹⁹ for money-making and work and success with his hands

he asks strength of a thing whose hands have no strength.

14 Again, one preparing to sail and about to voyage over raging waves calls upon a piece of wood more fragile than the ship that carries him.

² For it was desire for gain that planned that vessel,

and wisdom was the artisan who built it;

³ but it is your providence, O Father, that steers its course,

because you have given it a path in the sea,
and a safe way through the waves,

⁴ showing that you can save from every danger,

so that even a person who lacks skill may put to sea.

⁵ It is your will that works of your wisdom should not be without effect; therefore people trust their lives even to the smallest piece of wood, and passing through the billows on a raft
they come safely to land.

⁶ For even in the beginning, when arrogant giants were perishing,
the hope of the world took refuge on a raft,
and guided by your hand left to the world the seed of a new generation.

⁷ For blessed is the wood by which righteousness comes.

⁸ But the idol made with hands is accursed, and so is the one who made it—he for having made it, and the perishable thing because it was named a god.

⁹ For equally hateful to God are the ungodly and their ungodliness;

¹⁰ for what was done will be punished together with the one who did it.

¹¹ Therefore there will be a visitation also upon the heathen idols,

because, though part of what God created,
they became an abomination, snares for human souls
and a trap for the feet of the foolish.

¹² For the idea of making idols was the beginning of fornication, and the invention of them was the corruption of life;

likeness of a human being, cf. 14.19; Deut 4.16.

13.17–14.2: The ironically ineffective prayer of the idolater contrasts with that of Solomon in 9.1–18.

14.3–11: Safety and salvation come from God, not idols. 3: Providence, see 17.2.4; 4 Macc 9.24. O Father, cf. Isa 63.16; Tob 13.4; Sir 23.1; 3 Macc 6.3. 6–7: Arrogant giants, see Gen 6.1–4; cf. Sir 16.7; Bar 3.26–28; 3 Macc 2.4. A raft, Noah's ark (Gen 6.5–9.29). 8–11: The author's premise is that one takes on the status of what one worships; in this case both idols and idolaters are accursed by God. 11: Visitation, the occasion of God's judgment; see 3.7; Sir 16.18. Abomination, a common term for idolatry (see 12.23; 2 Chr 34.33; Ezra 9.1,11,14; Jer 2.7–8; Ezek 8.6–17; 18.12–13; Mal 2.11; 1 Macc 1.43–49).

14.12–31: Origins and repercussions of idolatry. The idea that the gods were originally human beings who have been elevated to divine status goes back to the Greek writer Euhemerus (ca. 300 BCE). He told a story about islands with a utopian society, in which the local gods (with Greek names) were originally kings who were promoted to divine status and worshiped by the people after their death (Diodorus Siculus 6.1). Although

¹³ for they did not exist from the beginning, nor will they last forever.

¹⁴ For through human vanity they entered the world,
and therefore their speedy end has been planned.

¹⁵ For a father, consumed with grief at an untimely bereavement, made an image of his child, who had been suddenly taken from him;
he now honored as a god what was once a dead human being,
and handed on to his dependents secret rites and initiations.

¹⁶ Then the ungodly custom, grown strong with time, was kept as a law, and at the command of monarchs carved images were worshipped.

¹⁷ When people could not honor monarchs^a in their presence, since they lived at a distance, they imagined their appearance far away,
and made a visible image of the king whom they honored,
so that by their zeal they might flatter the absent one as though present.

¹⁸ Then the ambition of the artisan impelled
even those who did not know the king to intensify their worship.

¹⁹ For he, perhaps wishing to please his ruler, skillfully forced the likeness to take more beautiful form,

²⁰ and the multitude, attracted by the charm of his work,
now regarded as an object of worship the one whom shortly before they had honored as a human being.

²¹ And this became a hidden trap for humankind,
because people, in bondage to misfortune or to royal authority,

bestowed on objects of stone or wood the name that ought not to be shared.

²² Then it was not enough for them to err about the knowledge of God, but though living in great strife due to ignorance,
they call such great evils peace.

²³ For whether they kill children in their initiations, or celebrate secret mysteries,
or hold frenzied revels with strange customs,

²⁴ they no longer keep either their lives or their marriages pure,
but they either treacherously kill one another, or grieve one another by adultery,

²⁵ and all is a raging riot of blood and murder, theft and deceit, corruption, faithlessness, tumult, perjury,

²⁶ confusion over what is good, forgetfulness of favors,
defiling of souls, sexual perversion, disorder in marriages, adultery, and debauchery.

²⁷ For the worship of idols not to be named is the beginning and cause and end of every evil.

²⁸ For their worshipers^b either rave in exultation,
or prophesy lies, or live unrighteously, or readily commit perjury;

²⁹ for because they trust in lifeless idols they swear wicked oaths and expect to suffer no harm.

³⁰ But just penalties will overtake them on two counts:

because they thought wrongly about God in devoting themselves to idols,

^a Gk them

^b Gk they

the idea was not widespread among Greeks, the Jews latched on to it as an explanation for pagan worship, and it appears in several Jewish writings (e.g., Aristeas 135; Artapanus [Eusebius, Praep. Ev. 9.18,23,27; Clement of Alexandria, Strom. 1.23.154]; Sib. Or. 3.110–58). 12: Fornication, the prophets sometimes spoke of idolatry metaphorically as sexual immorality (Jer 3.1–3; Ezek 16.28–41; Hos 2.2–15). 22–31. The repercussions of idolatry include strife, murder, adultery, and perjury. 23: Cf. 11.7; 12.4–5. 25: Similar crimes are enumerated in Jer 7.9; Hos 4.2. 27: Cf. 14.12. 29: They swear wicked oaths, for the seriousness with which false oaths were regarded, see Hos 10.4; Sir 23.11; 41.19; 1 Macc 7.18; 1 Esd 1.48.

and because in deceit they swore unrighteously through contempt for holiness.

³¹ For it is not the power of the things by which people swear,^a
but the just penalty for those who sin, that always pursues the transgression of the unrighteous.

15 But you, our God, are kind and true, patient, and ruling all things^b in mercy.

² For even if we sin we are yours, knowing your power;
but we will not sin, because we know that you acknowledge us as yours.

³ For to know you is complete
righteousness,
and to know your power is the root of immortality.

⁴ For neither has the evil intent of human art misled us,
nor the fruitless toil of painters,
a figure stained with varied colors,

⁵ whose appearance arouses yearning in fools,
so that they desire^c the lifeless form of a dead image.

⁶ Lovers of evil things and fit for such objects of hope^d are those who either make or desire or worship them.

⁷ A potter kneads the soft earth and laboriously molds each vessel for our service,
fashioning out of the same clay both the vessels that serve clean uses and those for contrary uses, making all alike;

but which shall be the use of each of them
the worker in clay decides.

⁸ With misspent toil, these workers form a futile god from the same clay—

these mortals who were made of earth a short time before and after a little while go to the earth from which all mortals are taken, when the time comes to return the souls that were borrowed.

⁹ But the workers are not concerned that mortals are destined to die or that their life is brief, but they compete with workers in gold and silver,
and imitate workers in copper;
and they count it a glorious thing to mold counterfeit gods.

¹⁰ Their heart is ashes, their hope is cheaper than dirt,
and their lives are of less worth than clay,

¹¹ because they failed to know the one who formed them
and inspired them with active souls and breathed a living spirit into them.

¹² But they considered our existence an idle game,
and life a festival held for profit, for they say one must get money however one can, even by base means.

¹³ For these persons, more than all others, know that they sin
when they make from earthy matter fragile vessels and carved images.

¹⁴ But most foolish, and more miserable are all the enemies who oppressed your

people.

15.1–6: The benefits of true worship include righteousness and immortality. 1–3: An apostrophe (direct address) to the deity. Allusion to Ex 34.6–9 makes it clear that the author associates authentic worship with the Sinai covenant. 5–6: Desire, cf. 4.12; 6.11,13,17,20; 8.2; 13.6; 15.19.

15.7–19: The fabrication of idols (cf. 13.10–19). The image of clay and the potter occurs frequently (Isa 41.25; 45.9; 64.8; Jer 18.1–10), but it is usually about God as the potter and humans as clay. The image is turned here into the choice of the potter to turn the clay into base objects (e.g., a sewage pipe) or divine images, thus making the same point as at 13.11–19. 8: That souls are borrowed was a philosophical conception (cf. 15.16). 12: The image of life as a game or festival was common in ancient literature, e.g. Isa 22.12–13; Mt 11.16–17; Epictetus, though these have neither the use of their eyes to see with, nor nostrils with which to draw breath, nor ears with which to hear, nor fingers to feel with, and their feet are of no use for walking.

¹⁶For a human being made them, and one whose spirit is borrowed formed them; for none can form gods that are like themselves.

¹⁷People are mortal, and what they make with lawless hands is dead; for they are better than the objects they worship, since^a they have life, but the idols^b never had.

¹⁸Moreover, they worship even the most hateful animals, which are worse than all others when judged by their lack of intelligence;

¹⁹and even as animals they are not so beautiful in appearance that one would desire them, but they have escaped both the praise of God and his blessing.

16 Therefore those people^c were deservedly punished through such creatures, and were tormented by a multitude of animals.

²Instead of this punishment you showed kindness to your people, and you prepared quails to eat, a delicacy to satisfy the desire of appetite;

³in order that those people, when they desired food, might lose the least remnant of appetite^d

because of the odious creatures sent to them, while your people,^c after suffering want a short time, might partake of delicacies.

⁴For it was necessary that upon those oppressors inescapable want should come, while to these others it was merely shown how their enemies were being tormented.

⁵For when the terrible rage of wild animals came upon your people^e and they were being destroyed by the bites of writhing serpents, your wrath did not continue to the end; ⁶they were troubled for a little while as a warning, and received a symbol of deliverance to remind them of your law's command.

⁷For the one who turned toward it was saved, not by the thing that was beheld, but by you, the Savior of all.

⁸And by this also you convinced our enemies that it is you who deliver from every evil.

⁹For they were killed by the bites of locusts and flies,

Discourses 2.14.23–29. 14: Most foolish are the Egyptians who oppressed the Israelites. 18–19: Egyptian animal worship was denounced by Romans as well as Jews, e.g., Juvenal, Satire 15.1–11; cf. Philo, Decalogue 76–80. 19: They have escaped . . . blessing, referring perhaps to Gen 3.14–15 (cf. Wis 11.15; 1.5,10).

16.1–14: The contrasts, resumed (see 11.1–16). Each of the “elements” of classical antiquity (water, earth, air, and fire) is associated with one of the plagues in this section of the book; see 16.1–4; 16.5–14; 16.15–29; 17.1–18.4.

16.1–4: The second contrast, continued (see 11.15–16). The plague of frogs (cf. Ex 7.25–8.11) that came up from the Nile as punishment for the Egyptian attempt to kill the Israelite baby boys in the Nile is contrasted with the gift of God to the Israelites in the form of the quails from the sea to provide food in the wilderness (Ex 16.12–13; Num 11.31–34; Wis ignores the context in Num in which the demand for meat is actually criticized). This section also represents the element of water, with references to the river and the sea.

16.5–14: The third contrast: the plague of insects and the bronze serpent (Ex 8.20–32; 10.1–20; Num 21.4–9). Whereas the Egyptians were plagued by locusts and flies, the Israelites were saved from a plague of poisonous and no healing was found for them, because they deserved to be punished by such things.

¹⁰ But your children were not conquered even by the fangs of venomous serpents,
for your mercy came to their help and healed them.

¹¹ To remind them of your oracles they were bitten,
and then were quickly delivered,
so that they would not fall into deep forgetfulness
and become unresponsive^a to your kindness.

¹² For neither herb nor poultice cured
them,
but it was your word, O Lord, that heals all
people.

¹³ For you have power over life and death;
you lead mortals down to the gates of Hades and back again.

¹⁴ A person in wickedness kills another,
but cannot bring back the departed spirit,
or set free the imprisoned soul.

¹⁵ To escape from your hand is impossible;
¹⁶ for the ungodly, refusing to know you, were flogged by the strength of your arm, pursued by unusual rains and hail and relentless storms,
and utterly consumed by fire.

¹⁷ For—most incredible of all—in water, which quenches all things,
the fire had still greater effect,
for the universe defends the righteous.

¹⁸ At one time the flame was restrained, so that it might not consume the creatures sent against the ungodly, but that seeing this they might know that they were being pursued by the judgment of God;

¹⁹ and at another time even in the midst of water it burned more intensely than
fire,

to destroy the crops of the unrighteous land.

²⁰ Instead of these things you gave your people food of angels,
and without their toil you supplied them from heaven with bread ready to eat, providing every pleasure and suited to every taste.

²¹ For your sustenance manifested your sweetness toward your children; and the bread, ministering^b to the desire of the one who took it,
was changed to suit everyone's liking.

²² Snow and ice withstood fire without melting,
so that they might know that the crops of their enemies
were being destroyed by the fire that blazed in the hail

and flashed in the showers of rain; ²³ whereas the fire,^c in order that the righteous might be fed, even forgot its native power.

²⁴ For creation, serving you who made it, exerts itself to punish the unrighteous, and in kindness relaxes on behalf of those who trust in you.

²⁵ Therefore at that time also, changed into all forms,
it served your all-nourishing bounty, according to the desire of those who had need,^d

serpents through God's "word." 9: Ex 16.16–32 and 10.12–20 do not speak of deaths from the lice/gnats/flies and locusts, but Josephus mentions them in connection with this plague (Ant. 2.14.3).

16.15–29: The fourth contrast: the plague of storms (cf. Ex 9.13–35). Because the Egyptians sinned by refusing to recognize God (16.16), their crops were destroyed by fire and hail. The Israelite counterpart of this plague is the rain of manna from heaven (Ex 16.11–35; Num. 11.6–9). 17: Water . . . fire, referring to the hail and lightning of Ex 9.23–24. 18: So that it might not consume, cf. 19.21. The creatures, the animals and insects of 16.1–14; apparently the author assumes that the plagues occurred at one time. 20: Food of angels, cf. Ps 78.24–25. 21: Changed to suit everyone's liking, a tradition also reflected in Tosefta to Yoma 75a and Mekilta on Ex 16.23. 24: Since it was fashioned in accordance with wisdom, creation inherently assists providence, functioning as an instrument of that it is not the production of crops that feeds humankind but that your word sustains those who trust in you.

²⁷ For what was not destroyed by fire was melted when simply warmed by a fleeting ray of the sun,

²⁸ to make it known that one must rise before the sun to give you thanks, and must pray to you at the dawning of the light;

²⁹ for the hope of an ungrateful person will melt like wintry frost, and flow away like waste water.

17 Great are your judgments and hard to describe; therefore uninstructed souls have gone astray.

² For when lawless people supposed that they held the holy nation in their power, they themselves lay as captives of darkness and prisoners of long night, shut in under their roofs, exiles from eternal providence.

³ For thinking that in their secret sins they were unobserved behind a dark curtain of forgetfulness, they were scattered, terribly^a alarmed, and appalled by specters.

⁴ For not even the inner chamber that held them protected them from fear, but terrifying sounds rang out around them, and dismal phantoms with gloomy faces appeared.

⁵ And no power of fire was able to give light, nor did the brilliant flames of the stars avail to illumine that hateful night.

⁶ Nothing was shining through to them except a dreadful, self-kindled fire, and in terror they deemed the things that they saw to be worse than that unseen appearance.

⁷ The delusions of their magic art lay humbled, and their boasted wisdom was scornfully rebuked.

⁸ For those who promised to drive off the fears and disorders of a sick soul were sick themselves with ridiculous fear.

⁹ For even if nothing disturbing frightened them, yet, scared by the passing of wild animals and the hissing of snakes

¹⁰ they perished in trembling fear, refusing to look even at the air, though it nowhere could be avoided.

¹¹ For wickedness is a cowardly thing, condemned by its own testimony;^b distressed by conscience, it has always exaggerated^c the difficulties.

¹² For fear is nothing but a giving up of the helps that come from reason;

¹³ and hope, defeated by this inward weakness, prefers ignorance of what causes the torment.

¹⁴ But throughout the night, which was really powerless and which came upon them from the recesses of powerless Hades, both condemnation and blessing; see 8.4–6; 19.18–21 (cf. Josh 10.11–14; Judg 5.20–21). 28: Rise before the sun, cf. Ps 119.147; Sir 39.5. 29: Hope . . . will melt, cf. 5.14; Job 14.19.

17.1–18.4: The fifth contrast: the plague of darkness and the pillar of fire (Ex. 10.21–29; 13.21–22; 14.24–15). Because the Egyptians sinned by taking the Israelites captive, they suffer by being taken captive by the darkness, which contrasts with the pillar of fire that goes with the Israelites day and night (18.3). This plague represents the element of air, since the darkness was caused by a strange atmosphere. 17.2–21: The description of the Egyptians' terror is reminiscent of the Greco-Roman genre of the "descent into Hades," of which Book 6 of Virgil's Aeneid was a popular example. 3: A dark curtain of forgetfulness, those who thought their sins were hidden are themselves concealed in darkness (cf. 16.11). 7: See Ex 7.11,22; 8.7,18; 9.11. 11: Conscience, a common topic in moral literature (e.g., T. Reuben 4.3; Philo, The Worse Attacks the Better 22–26). 14: Powerless Hades, see 1.14; cf. they all slept the same sleep, ¹⁵ and now were driven by monstrous specters, and now were paralyzed by their souls' surrender;
 for sudden and unexpected fear overwhelmed them.
¹⁶ And whoever was there fell down, and thus was kept shut up in a prison not made of iron; ¹⁷ for whether they were farmers or shepherds or workers who toiled in the wilderness, they were seized, and endured the inescapable fate;
 for with one chain of darkness they all were bound.
¹⁸ Whether there came a whistling wind, or a melodious sound of birds in wide-spreading branches,
 or the rhythm of violently rushing water, ¹⁹ or the harsh crash of rocks hurled down, or the unseen running of leaping animals,
 or the sound of the most savage roaring beasts, or an echo thrown back from a hollow of the mountains,
 it paralyzed them with terror.
²⁰ For the whole world was illumined with brilliant light, and went about its work unhindered, ²¹ while over those people alone heavy night was spread, an image of the darkness that was destined to receive them;
 but still heavier than darkness were they to themselves.

18 But for your holy ones there was very great light.
 Their enemies^a heard their voices but did not see their forms, and counted them happy for not having suffered,

² and were thankful that your holy ones,^b though previously wronged, were doing them no injury; and they begged their pardon for having been at variance with them.^b ³ Therefore you provided a flaming pillar of fire as a guide for your people's^c unknown journey, and a harmless sun for their glorious wandering.
⁴ For their enemies^d deserved to be deprived of light and imprisoned in darkness, those who had kept your children imprisoned, through whom the imperishable light of the law was to be given to the world.

⁵ When they had resolved to kill the infants of your holy ones, and one child had been abandoned and rescued,
 you in punishment took away a multitude of their children;
 and you destroyed them all together by a mighty flood.

⁶ That night was made known beforehand to our ancestors, so that they might rejoice in sure knowledge of the oaths in which they trusted.

⁷ The deliverance of the righteous and the destruction of their enemies were expected by your people.

⁸ For by the same means by which you punished our enemies you called us to yourself and glorified us.

18.5–25: The sixth contrast: the plague of the Egyptian firstborn and Israel's rescue (cf. Ex 11.1–12.32). The Egyptians sinned by killing the infants in the Nile. and with one accord agreed to the divine law, so that the saints would share alike the same things, both blessings and dangers;
 and already they were singing the praises of the ancestors.^a ¹⁰ But the discordant cry of their enemies echoed back, and their piteous lament for their children was spread abroad.
¹¹ The slave was punished with the same penalty as the master, and the commoner suffered the same loss as the king; ¹² and they all together, by the one form^b of death,
 had corpses too many to count.
 For the living were not sufficient even to bury them, since in one instant their most valued children had been destroyed.
¹³ For though they had disbelieved everything because of their magic arts, yet, when their firstborn were destroyed, they acknowledged your people to be God's child.
¹⁴ For while gentle silence enveloped all things, and night in its swift course was now half gone, ¹⁵ your all-powerful word leaped from heaven, from the royal throne, into the midst of the land that was doomed,
 a stern warrior
¹⁶ carrying the sharp sword of your authentic command, and stood and filled all things with death,
 and touched heaven while standing on the earth.
¹⁷ Then at once apparitions in dreadful dreams greatly troubled them, and unexpected fears assailed them;
¹⁸ and one here and another there, hurled down half dead, made known why they were dying;

¹⁹ for the dreams that disturbed them forewarned them of this,
 so that they might not perish without knowing why they suffered.

²⁰ The experience of death touched also the righteous, and a plague came upon the multitude in the desert,
 but the wrath did not long continue.
²¹ For a blameless man was quick to act as their champion;
 he brought forward the shield of his ministry, prayer and propitiation by incense;
 he withstood the anger and put an end to the disaster, showing that he was your servant.
²² He conquered the wrath^c not by strength of body, not by force of arms,
 but by his word he subdued the avenger, appealing to the oaths and covenants given to our ancestors.
²³ For when the dead had already fallen on one another in heaps,
 he intervened and held back the wrath,
 and cut off its way to the living.
²⁴ For on his long robe the whole world was depicted, and the glories of the ancestors were engraved on the four rows of stones, and your majesty was on the diadem upon his head.
²⁵ To these the destroyer yielded, these he^d feared;
 for merely to test the wrath was enough.

19 But the ungodly were assailed to the end by pitiless anger, for God^a knew in advance even their future actions:

² how, though they themselves had permitted^b your people to depart and hastily sent them out, they would change their minds and pursue them.

³ For while they were still engaged in mourning, and were lamenting at the graves of their dead, they reached another foolish decision, and pursued as fugitives those whom they had begged and compelled to leave.

⁴ For the fate they deserved drew them on to this end, and made them forget what had happened, in order that they might fill up the punishment that their torments still lacked,

⁵ and that your people might experience^c an incredible journey, but they themselves might meet a strange death.

⁶ For the whole creation in its nature was fashioned anew, complying with your commands, so that your children^d might be kept unharmed.

⁹ For they ranged like horses, and leaped like lambs, praising you, O Lord, who delivered them.

¹⁰ For they still recalled the events of their sojourn, how instead of producing animals the earth brought forth gnats, and instead of fish the river spewed out vast numbers of frogs.

¹¹ Afterward they saw also a new kind^e of birds, when desire led them to ask for luxurious food;

¹² for, to give them relief, quails came up from the sea.

¹³ The punishments did not come upon the sinners without prior signs in the violence of thunder, for they justly suffered because of their wicked acts; for they practiced a more bitter hatred of strangers.

¹⁴ Others had refused to receive strangers when they came to them, but these made slaves of guests who were their benefactors.

¹⁵ And not only so—but, while punishment of some sort will come upon the former for having received strangers with hostility, ¹⁶ the latter, having first received them with festal celebrations, afterward afflicted with terrible sufferings those who had already shared the same rights.

ECCLESIASTICUS, OR THE WISDOM OF JESUS, SON OF SIRACH

NAME

In most Greek manuscripts the title given to this book is “The Wisdom of Jesus the Son of Sirach.” Latin manuscripts refer to it as “The Book of Jesus the Son of Sirach.” In the Latin tradition it is also known as “Ecclesiasticus,” which means “church book” and was probably intended as a statement about the book’s acceptance in the Christian canon of scripture. If the Hebrew original had a title, it was something like “The Wisdom of Yeshua the Son of Sira.” Today some scholars refer to the book as “Sirach” and the original author as Ben Sira. Others use the title “Sirach” for the Greek version, “Ecclesiasticus” for the Latin text, and “Ben Sira” for the Hebrew original and/or its author.

CANONICAL STATUS

The book of Sirach was never part of the Hebrew canon of scripture, even though it was composed in Hebrew and was often quoted in Hebrew by later Jewish writers. It may have been considered too recent in its composition (early second century BCE) in comparison with the other canonical books. The Greek translation made by Ben Sira’s grandson, however, was transmitted as part of the larger collection of Jewish writings in Greek known as the Septuagint (LXX). The Christian churches generally followed the wider Greek canon of scripture, and for fifteen centuries most Christians regarded Sirach as part of their Old Testament. When Martin Luther and other early Reformers sought to limit the Protestant Old Testament canon to the Jewish Hebrew canon, Sirach and other “deuterocanonical” books were relegated to the “Apocrypha” (see p. 1361). Roman Catholics and Orthodox Christians regard Sirach as canonical and place it among the other Old Testament books. Some Protestant Bibles today have revived the practice of the early Reformers and place it as part of the separate section between the Old and the New Testaments that is known as the Apocrypha.

AUTHOR AND HISTORICAL CONTEXT

Near the end of the Greek version of the book, the original author identifies himself as “Jesus son of Eleazar son of Sirach” (50.27). His Hebrew name would have been “Yeshua ben Eleazar ben Sira.” He conducted a school (“a house of instruction,” 51.23) for prospective scribes and sages, perhaps in association with the Jerusalem Temple complex. His book is a summary or compendium of his teachings, written down in Hebrew ca. 180 BCE. His grandson produced the Greek version in Egypt ca. 117 BCE.

If Ben Sira wrote his book ca. 180 BCE, he would have lived through the transition in control of Judea from the Ptolemies in Egypt to the Seleucids in Syria, and the political turmoil associated with that transition, which took place around 200 BCE. He may have died before the conflicts about the Jewish high priesthood beginning ca. 175 BCE, when the Seleucid ruler Antiochus IV Epiphanes and his Jewish collaborators attempted to eradicate the distinctive features of Jewish life (the Jerusalem Temple and the Torah) and sparked the Maccabean revolt (see Daniel and 1 and 2 Maccabees). Ben Sira was a traditional and conservative person by nature, and a strong supporter of the Temple and the Jewish high priesthood. Nevertheless, it is difficult to find clear references in his book to contemporary historical events (but perhaps 35.21–26 and 36.1–22 constitute exceptions) and figures (except for Simon the high priest in 50.1–24). For Ben Sira’s autobiographical notices scattered throughout the book, see 24.30–34; 33.16–19; 34.9–13; 39.12–13; 50.27; and 51.13–30.

Ben Sira was a man of his place and time, that is, Palestine in the early second century BCE. His opinions on many social issues, especially on women and slaves, may strike modern readers as benighted, even outrageous. Ben Sira and his contemporaries perceived themselves as embedded in various groups (family, clan, village, city, etc.). They judged their own importance by what others thought of them, in what anthropologists call an honor–shame society. His social world was hierarchical, with everyone having a relatively fixed place and little opportunity for upward social mobility. People then considered wives to be naturally subordinate to their husbands, and children and slaves under the ultimate control of the male head of the household.

LITERARY HISTORY

The book of Sirach is best known through the grandson's Greek translation, which provides the basis for the present English version. As the Greek version became canonical for Christians, the Hebrew form became increasingly marginal for Jews. Large parts of the Hebrew text, however, have been found among the Dead Sea Scrolls (at Qumran and Masada) and in the Genizah (storehouse) of a medieval Jewish synagogue in Cairo. Nearly two-thirds of the Hebrew version has been retrieved in one form or another. Even in antiquity the Hebrew and Greek textual traditions developed short and long editions or recensions. The additional sayings in the longer recension appear in small type at the foot of the pages in this translation; this explains the "missing numbers" for verses throughout the main text of the book. Moreover, it appears that all the Greek manuscripts contained a textual displacement by which Sir 30.25–33.13a and 33.13b–36.16a changed places; this explains discrepancies in references between older and more recent translations and scholarly studies.

Sirach remains a valuable resource for understanding Judaism in the Second Temple period and the world in which Jesus and the early Christians lived. It was translated into various ancient languages and received much attention from patristic and medieval writers. It was treasured for its practical advice on many different topics and its emphasis on love of learning and the desire for God.

STRUCTURE AND CONTENTS

As with other ancient wisdom books, Sirach is an anthology or collection of short units on various topics. In many parts it is difficult to discover a logical progression of thought or to discern the principles of arrangement. However, a series of poems on seeking and finding wisdom (1.1–10; 4.11–19; 6.18–37; 14.20–15.10; 24.1–33; 38.24–39.11) seem to divide the book into something like chapters. The book reaches its climax with the praise of God's glory manifest in creation (42.15–43.33) and in the heroes of faith in ancient Israel's history (44.1–50.24).

In conveying his wisdom teachings, Ben Sira used a wide array of literary forms: analogies or comparisons (meshalim), maxims or proverbs, beatitudes and woes, numerical sayings, questions and answers, refrains and repetitions, "there is" sayings, "better than" sayings, prohibitions or admonitions ("Do not . . ."), instructions, prayers of petition, hymns, aretalogy (self-praise), autobiographical accounts, and biblical paraphrases. Many of these literary devices lend themselves to easy memorization, thus supplying Ben Sira's students and readers with a treasury of wisdom sayings by which to interpret the world around them and to conduct themselves wisely and righteously.

INTERPRETATION

Sirach is the largest wisdom book that we have from antiquity. It provides a window into life in ancient Israel at a pivotal point in Jewish history, illustrating how and what Jewish wisdom teachers taught, and offering wise teachings that have inspired and challenged readers for more than two millennia. Ben Sira gives his opinions on topics such as creation, death, fear of the Lord, friendship, happiness, and honor and shame. While conservative by nature, Ben Sira was an innovator in joining the wisdom traditions of the ancient Near East and the distinctive traditions of ancient Israel (cf. 24.23). The students at his school were expected to become equally adept at practical wisdom and biblical learning (39.1–5).

Ben Sira's students were mainly well-to-do young men preparing for careers as teachers and counselors in the public arena (39.6–11). He insisted that they view true wisdom as a gift from God and that they pray regularly for wisdom. He was an enthusiastic supporter of the Jerusalem Temple and high priesthood. As a teacher of young men, he issued warnings about the troubles that the wrong kinds of women might bring upon them. At several points, however, his caution borders on misogyny. With regard to human suffering, Ben Sira accepts the traditional understanding of theodicy, or divine justice, according to which wise and righteous persons prosper, while foolish and wicked persons suffer. He generally ignores the problem of innocent suffering raised by the book of Job, and at some points he may have been responding to the skepticism displayed by the book of Ecclesiastes. He takes a tentative stab at the problem of evil with his doctrine of the "pairs" (33.7–15), without proposing a full-fledged dualism. His poems about God's action in creation and in Israel's history urge his readers to seek and find the glory of God in all things (42.15–50.24). He viewed immortality mainly in terms of the good name or reputation that one leaves behind (38.16–23; 41.1–13).

GUIDE TO READING

One can read Sirach straight through from beginning to end, just as the book has come down to us. However, many find it difficult to read an anthology that way. Moreover, the various units in the book demand meditation, personal appropriation, and application. The reflections on wisdom and fear of the Lord in chapters 1 and 2 provide the theological framework for all that follows. The poem about wisdom personified and Ben Sira's identification of her with the covenant and the Torah in chapter 24 is the key to his integration of secular wisdom and biblical revelation. The other wisdom poems (4.11–19; 6.18–37; 14.20–15.10; 38.34–39.11) are also important for catching the flavor of Ben Sira's project. The description of Israel's heroes of faith as manifestations of God's glory in chapters 44–50 opens up fresh perspectives on the Bible as a whole. For the rest of the book, tracking specific themes through the various parts can be quite fruitful. For example, one might pursue several or all of the following ten topics: creation (16.24–17.24; 18.1–14; 33.7–15; 39.12–35; 42.15–43.33), death (11.26–28; 22.11–12; 38.16–23; 41.1–13), friendship (6.5–17; 9.10–16; 19.13–17; 22.19–26; 27.16–21; 36.23–37.15), happiness (25.1–11; 30.14–25; 40.1–30), honor and shame (4.20–6.4; 10.19–11.6; 41.14–42.8), money matters (3.30–4.10; 11.7–28; 13.1–14.19; 29.1–28; 31.1–11), sin (7.1–17; 15.11–20; 16.1–17.32; 18.30–19.3; 21.1–10; 22.27–23.27; 26.28–28.7), social justice (4.1–10; 34.21–27; 35.14–26), speech (5.9–15; 18.15–29; 19.4–17; 20.1–31; 23.7–15; 27.4–7; 27.11–15; 28.8–26), and women (9.1–9; 23.22–27; 25.13–26.27; 36.26–31; 42.9–14).

THE PROLOGUE

Many great teachings have been given to us through the Law and the Prophets and the others^a that followed them, and for these we should praise Israel for instruction and wisdom. Now, those who read the scriptures must not only themselves understand them, but must also as lovers of learning be able through the spoken and written word to help the outsiders. So my grandfather Jesus, who had devoted himself especially to the reading of the Law and the Prophets and the other books of our ancestors, and had acquired considerable proficiency in them, was himself also led to write something pertaining to instruction and wisdom, so that by becoming familiar also with his book^b those who love learning might make even greater progress in living according to the law.

You are invited therefore to read it with goodwill and attention, and to be indulgent in cases where, despite our diligent labor in translating, we may seem to have rendered some phrases imperfectly. For what was originally expressed in Hebrew does not have exactly the same sense when translated into another language. Not only this book, but even the Law itself, the Prophecies, and the rest of the books differ not a little when read in the original.

When I came to Egypt in the thirty-eighth year of the reign of Euergetes and stayed for some time, I found opportunity for no little instruction.^c It seemed highly necessary that

Prologue: Written in an elevated Greek style, the prologue to the Greek version of the book provides in three long sentences basic information about the original author and his purposes, the problems facing the translator, and the circumstances of the translation. It contains the earliest references to the threefold division of the Hebrew scriptures: the Law and the Prophets and the other books (cf. Lk 24.44). Jesus is the Greek form of the original author's Hebrew name, which was probably "Yeshua" or some other form of Joshua (50.27). In contrast to this translator, who admits that his book, as well as the Law, the Prophecies, and the rest, differ not a little from the Hebrew original, other early Jewish and Christian writers defended the accuracy of the Septuagint (LXX) in legends that have miraculous elements (Philo, Life of Moses 2.25–44). Ben Sira's grandson came to Egypt (most likely Alexandria) in the thirty-eighth year of the reign of Ptolemy VII Psychon Euergetes II, that is, in 132 BCE. He probably completed his work shortly after Ptolemy VII's death in 117 BCE. He intended his Greek translation especially for his fellow Jews living abroad, and in particular for the large Jewish community in Egypt. Thus he hoped that Diaspora Jews might profit from reading his grandfather's work in Greek just as Jews in Palestine had profited from the Hebrew original.

I should myself devote some diligence and labor to the translation of this book. During that time I have applied my skill day and night to complete and publish the book for those living abroad who wished to gain learning and are disposed to live according to the law.

1.1–10: Wisdom's origin. Wisdom, described as a feminine figure, was created by God and is given to humans as a gift. 1: From the Lord, created by and residing with God (Prov 8.22–23; Wis 7.25–26). 2–3: The rhetorical questions (cf. 1.6) indicate that true wisdom is beyond mere human understanding (Job 38–39). 4: Created before all other things, 24.3–7; Prov 8.22–26. 6–10: God, the truly wise one, created wisdom and bestows her on those who love him (Job 28.23–27).

1.11–30: Wisdom and fear of the Lord. A programmatic statement of the proper response to God's gift of wisdom: fear of the Lord—the gratitude, respect, and conduct owed to God. 12: Long life, v. 20; cf. Prov 3.16. In wisdom literature generally, the good are rewarded with a long, healthy, prosperous life. 13: Happy end, immortality for Ben Sira consists primarily in the good name or reputation that one leaves behind (41.11–13). 14: The beginning of wisdom, cf. Prov 1.7; 9.10; Ps 111.10. In the womb, a prophetic motif (49.7; Jer 1.5; Isa 44.2,24; 49.1,5; see also Ps 139.13). 15: Abide faithfully, for wisdom's dwelling place, cf. 24.10–12; Prov 8.31; Wis 1.7. 20: Root, wis-

²⁶If you desire wisdom, keep the commandments,
and the Lord will lavish her upon you.

²⁷For the fear of the Lord is wisdom and fidelity and humility are his delight.

²⁹Do not be a hypocrite before others, and keep watch over your lips.

³⁰Do not exalt yourself, or you may fall dom is the tree that gives life (24.13–17; Prov 3.18; Gen 3.22). 22–24: For the dangers of yielding to unjust anger, cf. 27.30–28.11; Prov 12.16; 29.22. 25–27: The treasuries of wisdom include proverbs and other sayings, while the commandments are laws in the Torah (cf. 24.23). Sirach is the first wisdom book to relate Torah and wisdom in this way; cf. Bar 4.1. 28: Divided mind, 2.12. 29: Hypocrite, 32.15; 33.2. 30: Honor and dishonor are major themes in Sirach (3.2–11; 4.21; 7.7; 10.19–11.6; 41.17–42.8).

2.1–18: Fear of the Lord. What it means to remain faithful to God and to the pursuit of wisdom. 1–6: Those who serve God must expect testing, remain patient, and accept suffering as a discipline. 1: My child, literally “my son,” a common way for Ben Sira the teacher to address a pupil (3.17; 4.1; 6.8; 7.3; etc.; cf. Prov 1.8,10, etc.). Testing reveals one’s true character (4.17; 6.20–21; 44.20; Prov 3.11–12). 5. Tested in the fire, cf. Prov 17.3; 27.21; Wis 3.6. 7–9: Those who fear the Lord must wait, trust, and hope during this life. Note another threefold repetition of fear of the Lord in 2.15–17. 10–11: The three questions (cf. Pss 22.4–5; 37.25) expect negative responses, though the case of Job renders dubious such easy answers. 11: The Lord is compassionate and merciful, Ex 34.6–7;

Or has anyone called upon him and been neglected?

¹¹For the Lord is compassionate and merciful;
he forgives sins and saves in time of distress.

¹²Woe to timid hearts and to slack hands, and to the sinner who walks a double path!

¹³Woe to the fainthearted who have no trust!
Therefore they will have no shelter.

¹⁴Woe to you who have lost your nerve!
What will you do when the Lord's reckoning comes?

¹⁵Those who fear the Lord do not disobey
his words,
and those who love him keep his ways.

¹⁶Those who fear the Lord seek to please
him,
and those who love him are filled with his law.

¹⁷Those who fear the Lord prepare their hearts,
and humble themselves before him.

¹⁸Let us fall into the hands of the Lord,
but not into the hands of mortals;
for equal to his majesty is his mercy, and equal to his name are his works.^a

3 Listen to me your father, O children; act accordingly, that you may be kept in safety.

²For the Lord honors a father above his
children,
and he confirms a mother's right over her children.

³Those who honor their father atone for
sins,

⁴and those who respect their mother are like those who lay up treasure.

⁵Those who honor their father will have joy in their own children, and when they pray they will be heard.

⁶Those who respect their father will have long life,

and those who honor^b their mother
obey the Lord;

⁷they will serve their parents as their masters.^c

⁸Honor your father by word and deed, that his blessing may come upon you.

⁹For a father's blessing strengthens the houses of the children, but a mother's curse uproots their foundations.

¹⁰Do not glorify yourself by dishonoring your father,
for your father's dishonor is no glory
to you.

¹¹The glory of one's father is one's own glory,
and it is a disgrace for children not to respect their mother.

¹²My child, help your father in his old age, and do not grieve him as long as he lives;

¹³even if his mind fails, be patient with him; because you have all your faculties do not despise him.

Pss 37.39–40; 103.3; 145.18–19. 12–14: The three woes (41.8) are warnings or threats to the conflicted or fainthearted. The Lord's reckoning refers to the consequences during this life rather than to the last judgment. 15–17: Those who fear the Lord observe God's commandments and approach God with proper reverence (cf. 2.7–9). 18: Fall into the hands of the Lord, 2 Sam 24.14; 1 Chr 21.13. The name of the Lord here is “the merciful one”; see 2.11n.; 50.19.

3.1–16: Parents and children. Wisdom and fear of the Lord should extend to family relationships (Ex 20.12; Deut 5.16); those addressed (O children) are adults. 1–2: The social order decreed by God places parents above their children. For the father as head of the family, see 7.23–26; 22.3–5; 26.1–27. Respect for the mother is also stressed here (cf. 3.16; Prov 1.8; 6.20; etc.). 3–7: Those who honor their parents can expect spiritual and material benefits, including atonement for their sins (3.14) and a long life (Deut 5.16).

8–11: Honoring parents brings honor to the child, while dishonoring them brings shame (1.30; 4.21; 7.7; 10.19–11.6; 41.17–42.8). 12–16: Caring for elderly parents will be rewarded by God and will provide atonement for sins (3.3), while dishonoring parents is the equivalent of blasphemy (3.1–2).

¹⁴ For kindness to a father will not be forgotten, and will be credited to you against your sins;

¹⁵ in the day of your distress it will be remembered in your favor;
like frost in fair weather, your sins will melt away.

¹⁷ My child, perform your tasks with humility;^a then you will be loved by those whom God accepts.

nor investigate what is beyond your power.

for more than you can understand has been shown you.

²⁴ For their conceit has led many astray, and wrong opinion has impaired their judgment.

without knowledge there is no wisdom.^c

²⁶ A stubborn mind will fare badly at the end, and whoever loves danger will perish in it.

²⁷ A stubborn mind will be burdened by troubles, and the sinner adds sin to sins.

³⁰ As water extinguishes a blazing fire, so almsgiving atones for sin.

³¹ Those who repay favors give thought to the future;
when they fall they will find support.

and do not keep needy eyes waiting.

² Do not grieve the hungry, or anger one in need.

³ Do not add to the troubles of the desperate, or delay giving to the needy.

⁴ Do not reject a suppliant in distress, or turn your face away from the poor.

⁵ Do not avert your eye from the needy, and give no one reason to curse you;

⁶ for if in bitterness of soul some should curse you, their Creator will hear their prayer.

⁷ Endear yourself to the congregation;
bow your head low to the great.

Humility brings favor from God, while intellectual pride is to be avoided. 17–20: Humility (or meekness) glorifies God and wins favor from those loved by God (7.16–17; 10.28). 21–29: What is too difficult may refer to Greek philosophical and Jewish apocalyptic speculations. True wisdom is found in what you have been commanded (in the Torah) and in proverbs (the teachings of the sages)—the two major sources of wisdom in Ben Sira’s school and his book.

5.1–8. Avoid presumption. Do not rely on wealth or presume on God’s mercy as excuses for putting off repentance. 4: Slow to anger, Ex 34.6. This ancient liturgical formula is frequently cited and adapted; cf. Num 14.18; Neh 9.17; Pss 86.15; 103.8; 145.8; Jon 4.2; etc. 6: Mercy and wrath, although God is merciful, God’s just demands cannot be ignored (16.11–12). 7: Wrath of the Lord, Ex 32.10; Num 16.46; Deut 29.23; etc. The notion of sudden punishment, especially of the powerful, is a common motif in wisdom literature (10.10–11; Job 34.20–25; cf. Dan 5).

5.9–6.4: The need for truthfulness and self-restraint. Here speech is treated mainly in an honor-shame context (see 4.20–31).

10: For other treatments of speech, see 19.6–17; 20.16–20; 22.27–23.15; 28.12–26. 12: Hand over your mouth, a gesture of humility and circumspection (Job 29.9; 40.4–5; Prov 30.32). 14: Double-tongued, one who is duplicitous in speech or a slanderer (cf. 5.9 in Greek; 6.1). 6.2–4: Passion, most likely sexual desire (18.30–19.3), though anger or envy is also possible. 6.3: Cf. Ps 1.3.

⁶ Let those who are friendly with you be many,
but let your advisers be one in a thousand.

⁷ When you gain friends, gain them through testing, and do not trust them hastily.

⁸ For there are friends who are such when it suits them, but they will not stand by you in time of trouble.

⁹ And there are friends who change into enemies, and tell of the quarrel to your disgrace.

¹⁰ And there are friends who sit at your table,
but they will not stand by you in time of trouble.

¹¹ When you are prosperous, they become your second self,
and lord it over your servants;

¹² but if you are brought low, they turn against you, and hide themselves from you.

¹³ Keep away from your enemies, and be on guard with your friends.

¹⁴ Faithful friends are a sturdy shelter:
whoever finds one has found a treasure.

¹⁵ Faithful friends are beyond price;
no amount can balance their worth.

¹⁶ Faithful friends are life-saving medicine;
and those who fear the Lord will find them.

¹⁷ Those who fear the Lord direct their friendship aright, for as they are, so are their neighbors also.

¹⁸ My child, from your youth choose discipline, and when you have gray hair you will still find wisdom.

¹⁹ Come to her like one who plows and sows, and wait for her good harvest.
For when you cultivate her you will toil but little,
and soon you will eat of her produce.

²⁰ She seems very harsh to the undisciplined; fools cannot remain with her.

²¹ She will be like a heavy stone to test them, and they will not delay in casting her aside.

²² For wisdom is like her name;
she is not readily perceived by many.

²³ Listen, my child, and accept my judgment;
do not reject my counsel.

²⁴ Put your feet into her fetters, and your neck into her collar.

²⁵ Bend your shoulders and carry her,
and do not fret under her bonds.

²⁶ Come to her with all your soul, and keep her ways with all your might.

²⁷ Search out and seek, and she will become known to you;
and when you get hold of her, do not let her go.

²⁸ For at last you will find the rest she gives,
and she will be changed into joy for you.

²⁹ Then her fetters will become for you a strong defense, and her collar a glorious robe.

6.5–17: Friendship. While caution is necessary in making friends, a faithful friend is a treasure (cf. 9.10–16; 19.13–17; 22.19–26; 27.16–21; 37.1–6). Although the topic of friendship occasionally appears in earlier Israelite wisdom literature (Prov 17.17; 18.24; 27.6,10), it was a particularly prominent theme in Hellenistic writings. 6–7: The difference between those who are friendly and true friends becomes clear only over time (testing). 8–13: False friends can easily turn into enemies. 14–17: Faithful friends are best sought and found among those who fear the Lord.

6.18–37: Discipline and the way to wisdom. Those who seek to become wise must accept the religious, intellectual, and moral formation (discipline) that produces wisdom and its rewards. 18–22: Those who accept wisdom's discipline are like farmers who work hard and so enjoy abundant harvests, whereas discipline is like a heavy stone to those who refuse it. 18: My child, each of the three segments begins with this address (vv.18,23,32); see 2.1n. 22: Wisdom is like her name, probably a play on the Hebrew words “musar” (discipline, v. 18) and “sar” (“turn aside,” i.e., become distant). 23–31: The process of accepting wisdom's discipline is illustrated by images of the yoke and rest (51.26) and glorious royal apparel. 26: All your soul, and . . . all your might, Deut

³⁰ Her yoke^a is a golden ornament, and put her on like a splendid crown.^b

³² If you are willing, my child, you can be disciplined,
and if you apply yourself you will become clever.

³³ If you love to listen you will gain knowledge,
and if you pay attention you will become wise.

³⁴ Stand in the company of the elders.
Who is wise? Attach yourself to such a one.

³⁵ Be ready to listen to every godly discourse,
and let no wise proverbs escape you.

³⁶ If you see an intelligent person, rise early to visit him;
let your foot wear out his doorstep.

³⁷ Reflect on the statutes of the Lord, and meditate at all times on his commandments.

It is he who will give insight to^c your mind,
and your desire for wisdom will be granted.

7 Do no evil, and evil will never overtake
you.

² Stay away from wrong, and it will turn away from you.

³ Do^d not sow in the furrows of injustice, and you will not reap a sevenfold crop.

⁴ Do not seek from the Lord high office, or the seat of honor from the king.

⁵ Do not assert your righteousness before
the Lord,
or display your wisdom before the king.

⁶ Do not seek to become a judge, or you may be unable to root out injustice;
you may be partial to the powerful,
and so mar your integrity.

⁷ Commit no offense against the public, and do not disgrace yourself among the people.

⁸ Do not commit a sin twice;
not even for one will you go unpunished.

⁹ Do not say, “He will consider the great number of my gifts, and when I make an offering to the Most High God, he will accept it.”

¹⁰ Do not grow weary when you pray;
do not neglect to give alms.

¹¹ Do not ridicule a person who is embittered in spirit, for there is One who humbles and exalts.

¹² Do not devise^e a lie against your
brother,
or do the same to a friend.

¹³ Refuse to utter any lie, for it is a habit that results in no good.

¹⁴ Do not babble in the assembly of the elders,
and do not repeat yourself when you pray.

¹⁵ Do not hate hard labor or farm work, which was created by the Most High.

6.5. 30: Purple cord; see Num 15.38–40. Although wisdom is often likened to an ornament (e.g., Prov 1.9; 3.22; 4.8–9), here the language evokes ritual garments like those of the high priest (50.11). 32–37: The prospective sage should spend time in listening to the elders, attending to godly discourse and wise proverbs, and reflecting on and carrying out God’s commandments (in the Torah).

7.1–17: Evildoing and its consequences. Most of these instructions are presented as negative admonitions (Do not . . .; cf. Prov 3.1–4; 22.22–29). 1–3: Avoiding evil, wrong, and injustice will protect one from their damaging consequences. 4–7: Ambition for high offices and public prestige can be dangerous (Prov 25.6–7). 8–9: For an earlier warning about presuming on God’s mercy and patience, see 5.6–7. 10–14: The unit begins and ends with

¹⁶ Do not enroll in the ranks of sinners; remember that retribution does not delay.

¹⁷ Humble yourself to the utmost, for the punishment of the ungodly is fire and worms.^a

¹⁸ Do not exchange a friend for money, or a real brother for the gold of Ophir.

¹⁹ Do not dismiss^b a wise and good wife, for her charm is worth more than gold.

²⁰ Do not abuse slaves who work faithfully,
or hired laborers who devote themselves to their task.

²¹ Let your soul love intelligent slaves;^c do not withhold from them their freedom.

²² Do you have cattle? Look after them; if they are profitable to you, keep them.

²³ Do you have children? Discipline them, and make them obedient^d from their
youth.

²⁴ Do you have daughters? Be concerned for their chastity,^e and do not show yourself too indulgent
with them.

²⁵ Give a daughter in marriage, and you complete a great task;
but give her to a sensible man.

²⁶ Do you have a wife who pleases you?^f Do not divorce her;
but do not trust yourself to one whom you detest.

²⁷ With all your heart honor your father, and do not forget the birth pangs of your mother.

²⁸ Remember that it was of your parents^g
you were born;
how can you repay what they have given to you?

²⁹ With all your soul fear the Lord, and revere his priests.

³⁰ With all your might love your Maker, and do not neglect his ministers.

³¹ Fear the Lord and honor the priest, and give him his portion, as you have been commanded:
the first fruits, the guilt offering, the gift of the shoulders,
the sacrifice of sanctification, and the first fruits of the holy things.

³² Stretch out your hand to the poor,
so that your blessing may be complete.

³³ Give graciously to all the living;
do not withhold kindness even from the dead.

³⁴ Do not avoid those who weep, but mourn with those who mourn.

³⁵ Do not hesitate to visit the sick, because for such deeds you will be loved.

³⁶ In all you do, remember the end of your life,
and then you will never sin.

7:18–36: Social relations. Directed to the male head of a household, these instructions pertain to his relationships with his friend or brother, wife, slaves, and hired laborers, cattle, children, daughters, wife again, father and mother, priests, the poor, the dead, and the sick. 18: Ophir in southern Arabia or east Africa was famous for its gold (1 Kings 9.28; 10.11; Job 22.24; 28.16; Ps 45.9; Isa 13.12). 19: Dismiss a . . . wife, Deut 24.1–4. 21: Freedom, Ex 21.2; Lev 25.39–43; Deut 15.12–15. 24–25: Daughters, cf. 22.3–6n.; 42.9–13. 27–28: Father . . . mother, 3.1–16; cf. Ex 20.12; Deut 5.16.

31: His portion, Ex 29.27; Lev 7.31–34; Num 18.8–20; Deut 18.3. Earlier Israelite wisdom literature does not mention priests and seldom refers to ritual obligations; Prov 3.9 is a rare exception. 32: Poor, Deut 14.28–29. 33: Dead, cf. 38.16–18; Tob 1.17. 36: The end of your life probably refers to one's good name at death (1.13; 28.6) rather than rewards in life after death.

- 8 Do not contend with the powerful, or you may fall into their hands.
- ² Do not quarrel with the rich,
in case their resources outweigh yours;
for gold has ruined many,
and has perverted the minds of kings.
- ³ Do not argue with the loud of mouth, and do not heap wood on their fire.
- ⁴ Do not make fun of one who is ill-bred, or your ancestors may be insulted.
- ⁵ Do not reproach one who is turning away from sin;
remember that we all deserve punishment.
- ⁶ Do not disdain one who is old,
for some of us are also growing old.
- ⁷ Do not rejoice over anyone's death;
remember that we must all die.
- ⁸ Do not slight the discourse of the sages, but busy yourself with their maxims;
because from them you will learn discipline
and how to serve princes.
- ⁹ Do not ignore the discourse of the aged,
for they themselves learned from their parents;^a
from them you learn how to understand and to give an answer when the need arises.
- ¹⁰ Do not kindle the coals of sinners, or you may be burned in their flaming
fire.
- ¹¹ Do not let the insolent bring you to your feet,
or they may lie in ambush against your words.
- ¹² Do not lend to one who is stronger than
you;
but if you do lend anything, count it as a loss.
- ¹³ Do not give surety beyond your means;
but if you give surety, be prepared to pay.
- ¹⁴ Do not go to law against a judge, for the decision will favor him because of his standing.
- ¹⁵ Do not go traveling with the reckless,
or they will be burdensome to you;
for they will act as they please, and through their folly you will perish
with them.
- ¹⁶ Do not pick a fight with the quick-tempered,
and do not journey with them through lonely country,
because bloodshed means nothing to
them,
and where no help is at hand, they will strike you down.
- ¹⁷ Do not consult with fools,
for they cannot keep a secret.
- ¹⁸ In the presence of strangers do nothing that is to be kept secret, for you do not know what they will divulge.^b
- ¹⁹ Do not reveal your thoughts to
anyone,
or you may drive away your happiness.^c

8.1–19: Caution in social relations. These negative admonitions (Do not . . .) are accompanied by reasons why certain persons and social situations should be avoided. The goal is to help one avoid public disgrace and shame. 1–2: The powerful and rich as social categories are more prominent in Sirach than in earlier wisdom literature and may reflect the changing socio-economic realities of the Hellenistic world. 3: The dangers of arguing with those who cannot control their speech is already a topic in ancient Egyptian wisdom literature (see, e.g., Ptahhotep). 5–7: These motive clauses are more philosophical than the mainly pragmatic reasons given elsewhere in this instruction. 8–9: The discourse of the sages and of the aged contain the wise learning of tradition, highly valued by the wisdom tradition (cf. Prov 4.1–4; Job 8.8–10). 10: Flaming fire, 8.3; 28.8–12. 12–13: Although Ben Sira was not opposed in principle to making loans and standing surety (29.1–7; cf. Prov 6.1–5; 11.15), he urges great caution. 17–19: Avoiding self-revelation to fools and strangers is a prudent way to protect one's social standing. 18: The Hebrew makes a play on words between “zar” (stranger) and “raz” (secret).

- 9 Do not be jealous of the wife of your bosom, or you will teach her an evil lesson to your own hurt.
- ² Do not give yourself to a woman and let her trample down your strength.
- ³ Do not go near a loose woman, or you will fall into her snares.
- ⁴ Do not dally with a singing girl, or you will be caught by her tricks.
- ⁵ Do not look intently at a virgin, or you may stumble and incur penalties for her.
- ⁶ Do not give yourself to prostitutes, or you may lose your inheritance.
- ⁷ Do not look around in the streets of a city, or wander about in its deserted sections.
- ⁸ Turn away your eyes from a shapely
woman,
and do not gaze at beauty belonging to another;
many have been seduced by a woman's beauty,
and by it passion is kindled like a fire.
- ⁹ Never dine with another man's wife,
or revel with her at wine;
or your heart may turn aside to her,
and in blood^a you may be plunged into destruction.
- ¹⁰ Do not abandon old friends,
for new ones cannot equal them.
A new friend is like new wine;
when it has aged, you can drink it with pleasure.
- ¹¹ Do not envy the success of sinners, for you do not know what their end will be like.
- ¹² Do not delight in what pleases the ungodly;
remember that they will not be held guiltless all their lives.
- ¹³ Keep far from those who have power to kill,
and you will not be haunted by the fear of death.
But if you approach them, make no misstep,
or they may rob you of your life.
Know that you are stepping among snares, and that you are walking on the city battlements.
- ¹⁴ As much as you can, aim to know your
neighbors,
and consult with the wise.
- ¹⁵ Let your conversation be with intelligent
people,
and let all your discussion be about the law of the Most High.
- ¹⁶ Let the righteous be your dinner companions,
and let your glory be in the fear of the Lord.
- ¹⁷ A work is praised for the skill of the artisan;
so a people's leader is proved wise by
his words.
- ¹⁸ The loud of mouth are feared in their city,
and the one who is reckless in speech is hated.

9.1–9: Caution in relations with women. These admonitions concern the various types of women who can bring public disgrace and shame upon a sage. They continue the cautious tone of the preceding passage. 3–4: Loose, literally “strange” woman (Heb. “zarah”); see Prov 2.16; 5.3,20; 7.5. The singing girl is apparently a prostitute (cf. Isa 23.15–16). 5: The penalty for seducing a virgin involved financial payments to her father and marriage (Ex 22.16–17). 7: In the streets of a city, cf. Prov 7.7–10. 9: The penalty for adultery with another man's wife was death (Lev 20.10; Deut 22.22).

9.10–16: Caution in choosing and making friends. The best friends share the same spiritual values—the law of the Most High and fear of the Lord. See 6.5–17; 19.13–17; 22.19–26; 27.16–21; 37.1–6. 10: As with wine, old friends are better than new ones.

11–13: Sinners and the ungodly pose a threat because they may entangle one in their own bad end (cf. Prov 1.10–19), but kings and rulers are dangerous because they themselves have power to kill (cf. Prov 16.14). 13: Battlements, high on the city walls where one is exposed and easy to kill.

9.17–10.5: Wise rulers. The wise ruler is the good ruler (see Prov 25.4–5; 28.2–3,16; 29.4,12,14). 17–18: Wise

10 A wise magistrate educates his people, and the rule of an intelligent person is well ordered.

as the ruler of the city is, so are all its inhabitants.

³ An undisciplined king ruins his people, but a city becomes fit to live in through the understanding of its rulers.

the heart has withdrawn from its Maker.

¹³ For the beginning of pride is sin, and the one who clings to it pours out abominations.

Therefore the Lord brings upon them unheard-of calamities, and destroys them completely.

¹⁴ The Lord overthrows the thrones of rulers, and enthrones the lowly in their place.

¹⁵ The Lord plucks up the roots of the nations,^f and plants the humble in their place.

¹⁶ The Lord lays waste the lands of the nations, and destroys them to the foundations of the earth.

and erases the memory of them from the earth.

10.6–18: Avoid arrogance and pride. Such behavior is hateful to not only to God but also to other people and has disastrous effects. Although arrogance is a traditional topic in wisdom literature, Sirach applies it specifically to rulers and nations, perhaps as a critique of the Ptolemaic and Seleucid kings of his day. 9–11: Death is the great equalizer among humans (22.11–22; 38.16–23; 41.1–13), and the best remedy for pride. 9: Dust and ashes, Gen 18.27; Job 30.19; 42.6. 12: To forsake the Lord is the root of foolish pride, and pride is not what God intended for humankind (10.18). 14–17: Overthrows the thrones of rulers, cf. 1 Sam 2.1–10; Lk 1.47–55.

10.19–11.6: Honor and shame. True honor belongs not to the wealthy and powerful but rather to those who fear the Lord and keep God's commandments (cf. 4.20–6.4; 41.14–42.8; Prov 1.7; 9.10). 19: Human offspring, giving

²⁹Do not invite everyone into your home, for many are the tricks of the crafty.

³⁰Like a decoy partridge in a cage, so is the mind of the proud,
and like spies they observe your weakness;^d

³¹for they lie in wait, turning good into evil,
and to worthy actions they attach blame.

³²From a spark many coals are kindled, and a sinner lies in wait to shed blood.

³³Beware of scoundrels, for they devise evil, and they may ruin your reputation forever.

³⁴Receive strangers into your home and they will stir up trouble for you, and will make you a stranger to your own family.

12 If you do good, know to whom you do it, and you will be thanked for your good deeds.

²Do good to the devout, and you will be repaid—

^a Other ancient authorities add as verses 15 and 16, ¹⁵*Wisdom, understanding, and knowledge of the law come from the Lord; affection and the ways of good works come from him.* ¹⁶*Error and darkness were created with sinners; evil grows old with those who take pride in malice.*

alone, often brings success to some unlikely persons. 19: A rich fool can be quickly deprived of material security by death (cf. 11.26–28; Eccl 2.21; 4.8; 5.12–14). 26–28: The reward most likely refers to the sage's good name rather than to the last judgment and eternal rewards (22.11–22; 38.16–23; 41.1–13).

11.29–12.18: Caution in social relations. Even for those who approach them innocently and with good will, social relations can be full of danger. 29–34: Scoundrels and strangers can ruin one's reputation and turn a whole household against its master. The Hebrew text makes a pun between "zar" (stranger) and "zahir" (make you a stranger). 12.1–7: Reserve almsgiving for the devout, humble, and good (cf. 18.15–18; 29.8–13). 8–18: A warning against potential enemies.

if not by them, certainly by the Most High.

³No good comes to one who persists in evil or to one who does not give alms.

⁴Give to the devout, but do not help the sinner.

⁵Do good to the humble, but do not give to the ungodly;

hold back their bread, and do not give it to them, for by means of it they might subdue you; then you will receive twice as much evil for all the good you have done to them.

⁶For the Most High also hates sinners and will inflict punishment on the ungodly.^a ⁷Give to the one who is good, but do not help the sinner.

⁸A friend is not known^b in prosperity, nor is an enemy hidden in adversity.

⁹One's enemies are friendly^c when one prospers, but in adversity even one's friend disappears.

¹⁰Never trust your enemy, for like corrosion in copper, so is his wickedness.

¹¹Even if he humbles himself and walks bowed down, take care to be on your guard against him.

Be to him like one who polishes a mirror, to be sure it does not become completely tarnished.

¹²Do not put him next to you, or he may overthrow you and take your place.

Do not let him sit at your right hand, or else he may try to take your own seat, and at last you will realize the truth of my words, and be stung by what I have said.

¹³Who pities a snake charmer when he is bitten, or all those who go near wild animals?

¹⁴So no one pities a person who associates with a sinner and becomes involved in the other's sins.

¹⁵He stands by you for a while, but if you falter, he will not be there.

¹⁶An enemy speaks sweetly with his lips, but in his heart he plans to throw you into a pit;

an enemy may have tears in his eyes, but if he finds an opportunity he will never have enough of your blood.

¹⁷If evil comes upon you, you will find him there ahead of you; pretending to help, he will trip you up.

¹⁸Then he will shake his head, and clap his hands, and whisper much, and show his true face.

13 Whoever touches pitch gets dirty, and whoever associates with a proud person becomes like him.

²Do not lift a weight too heavy for you, or associate with one mightier and richer than you.

How can the clay pot associate with the iron kettle?
The pot will strike against it and be smashed.

³A rich person does wrong, and even adds insults;
a poor person suffers wrong, and must add apologies.

⁴A rich person^d will exploit you if you can be of use to him, but if you are in need he will abandon you.

⁵If you own something, he will live with you;
he will drain your resources without a qualm.

⁶When he needs you he will deceive you, and will smile at you and encourage you;

^a Other ancient authorities add and he is keeping them for the day of their punishment

^b Other ancient authorities read punished

^c Heb: Gk grieved

^d Gk He

13.1–23: Rich and poor. Associating with rich persons poses dangers to those dedicated to wisdom and fear of the Lord. 1–7: The rich abuse and exploit the poor; they defile (like pitch) and destroy (like an iron kettle striking a clay pot) poor persons. Although a prominent citizen, Sirach speaks from the perspective of the poor

he will speak to you kindly and say, “What do you need?”
 7 He will embarrass you with his delicacies, until he has drained you two or three times,
 and finally he will laugh at you.
 Should he see you afterwards, he will pass you by
 and shake his head at you.

8 Take care not to be led astray and humiliated when you are enjoying yourself.^a

9 When an influential person invites you,
 be reserved,
 and he will invite you more insistently.

10 Do not be forward, or you may be rebuffed;
 do not stand aloof, or you will be forgotten.

11 Do not try to treat him as an equal, or trust his lengthy conversations;
 for he will test you by prolonged talk, and while he smiles he will be examining you.

12 Cruel are those who do not keep your secrets;
 they will not spare you harm or imprisonment.

13 Be on your guard and very careful, for you are walking about with your own downfall.^b

15 Every creature loves its like,
 and every person the neighbor.

16 All living beings associate with their own kind,
 and people stick close to those like
 themselves.

17 What does a wolf have in common with a lamb?
 No more has a sinner with the devout.

18 What peace is there between a hyena and a dog?
